soldiery on the European model and was practically creator of the modern Japanese army. In 1876, when a colonel, he was again sent to Germany, in company of the late Gen. Kawakami, to inspect the German military system. The two officers were at that time regarded as the most promising men in the entire Japanese army. Katsura became a major general on his return home and was vice minister of the war office under Oyama. In 1891 he was made lieutenant general. In the Chino-Japanese war he led his army through Corea to Manchuria, and later, under Gen. Nodzu, won many victories. His name became a terror throughout the invaded country.

Katsura was born in 1849 in the western part of the main island of Japan. This province has given birth to many illustrious statesmen and generals, among them Marquis Ito, Field Marshal Yamagata and Count Inoue. The viscount believes the Japanese are the best soldiers in the world and says he would not fear the result if he had to lead them against any white troops.

Nothing in Japan is too good for Katsura. He is the idol of the people.

WALTER RALEIGH'S PIPE.

Precious Historical Relic Which Is Owned and Zealously Guarded by Prince of Wales.

For the last two weeks Americans in London have been flocking to the shipping exhibition in Whitechapel to see a relic of United States history which will be interesting likewise to their countrymen at home. This is nothing less than the pipe smoked by Sir Walter Raleigh, which is also, of course, the first ever smoked in England — the famous courtier of Queen Elizabeth having introduced the "fragrant weed" into England on his return from America. The pipe belongs to the prince of Wales, who always has seen to its being guarded most carefully, and never before allowed it to be placed on exhibition.

WALTER RALEIGH'S PIPE.
(Unique Relic Now on Exhibition in Whitechapel, London.)

It is probable that Raleigh used this pipe when he demonstrated to Queen Elizabeth the weight of a given amount of smoke by weighing some tobacco, smoking it and weighing the ashes.

Even more interesting than these, however, are the associations of the pipe with the latter part of the court favorite's life. It was his constant companion when he paced the battlement outside the prison at the tower of London, while composing his history of the world. To this day the window in the White Tower is pointed out where Sir Walter smoked his pipe as he watched his rival, the earl of Essex, walk to the scaffold erected on the green just below, and there is equally trustworthy authentication for the tradition that this was the pipe that the knight carried with him to the block when it came his turn to take "the sharp medicine, but a cure for all diseases."

Monopolies in Panama.

Cigars, cigarettes, salt and ice, are government monopolies in Panama.

USES STRONG LANGUAGE.

Substance of Mississippi Governor's Message, Which Is Resented by Northern Educators.

In his inaugural address delivered before a joint session of the two houses of the Mississippi legislature, Gov. James K. Vardaman declared that the growing tendency of the negro to attack white women is nothing more or less than the manifestation of the racial desire for social equality. In strong and unmeasured terms he declared that education is the curse of the negro race, and urged the legislature to enact an amendment to the constitution that will place the distribution of the common school fund solely within power of the legislature.

This is the source of the platform on which Gov. Vardaman was elected in the state campaign last summer, and his utterances on the negro problem are even stronger than any of his views previously expressed on the subject. In part he said:

JAMES K. VARDAMAN.
(Governor of Mississippi Who Opposes Negro Education.)

"What shall we do with the negro? Certainly the education suited to the white child does not suit the negro. This has been demonstrated by 40 years of experience, and the expenditure in the southern states of nearly $200,000,000.

"As a race the negro is deteriorating morally every day. Time has demonstrated that he is more criminal as a free man than as a slave; that he is increasing in criminality with frightful rapidity, being one-third more criminal in 1890 than he was in 1880.

"The startling facts revealed by the census show that those who can read and write are more criminal than the illiterates, which is true of no other element in our population.

"In the south—Mississippi particularly—I know he is growing worse every year. You can scarcely pick up a newspaper whose pages are not blackened with the account of an unmentionable crime committed by a negro brute.

"Slavery is the only process by which he has ever been made partly civilized. God almighty created the negro for a menial. He is essentially a servant. In every age of the world's history it has been shown that his civilization will last only so long as he is under control of the superior race that inculcated it. When left to himself he has universally gone back to the barbarism of his native jungles.

"The time has come when the truth should be told about this matter. It matters not how disagreeable it may be to hear it. The first step toward changing the educational system of the state, so as to meet the demands of both races, it occurs to me, is for the legislature to submit to the people a proposition to amend the constitution so as to give the legislature unrestricted authority in dealing with the public school question."

THE GERMAN EMPRESS.

Berlin Court Circles Alarmed at Reports Concerning Her Majesty's Physical Condition.

There is great anxiety in Berlin regarding the health of Empress Augusta Victoria. Prof. von Bergmann, the famous specialist, has held several consultations of the court physicians. A couple of years ago the empress sprained her foot, while taking a cure in Bavaria. Although no bones were broken, the foot never healed. The injury was recently aggravated by the appearance of vari-

THE EMPRESS OF GERMANY.
(State of Her Health Is Causing Great Anxiety in Berlin.)

cose veins, and it is feared further complications may set in.

Empress Augusta Victoria is the spouse of the German emperor, Wilhelm II., to whom she was married February 27, 1881. She is a portly lady, affable in manner and popular with all classes. The empress is a member of the house of Schleswig-Holstein, and at the time of her marriage was considered to be one of the handsomest princesses in the empire.

THE SICK CHILD.

How to Beguile the Tedium of the Hours of Convalescence.

How to amuse the sick child is a problem to the wornout mother. The most difficult period of a child's illness is without doubt the convalescence.

Above all, a little invalid's table is a necessity. This has short legs which can be folded or spread out so that they rest on either side of the patient. On this the child's meals can be served, and it also forms an excellent resting place for toys, paper dolls, etc.

When the child is very ill its eyes will travel, like a grown person's, all over the wall paper and the pattern of the carpet until even the arrangement of the furniture haunts the tired brain. The wise mother will change things about a little now and then and place bits of color where they will be pleasing to the eye. I know of one mother who hung a brightly flowered piece of cretonne across the foot of the bed, a different color every day, and on it as the patient grew better she pinned paper dolls, butterflies and pretty pictures, which would cheer and amuse the weary baby eyes. Anything growing has a great attraction for a sick child because it can watch the changes day by day. A fern ball hung close to the bedside, two or three grains of barley stuck around a well washed turnip, a handful of cress seed sprinkled on a wet bit of flannel in a saucer—even these will amuse a child.

A GROWING PLANT.

A talent for cutting out paper dolls is a great advantage to a mother. Chains of dancers, sheep, dogs, horses, etc., delight the little ones. Punch and Judy shows improvised from a couple of pocket handkerchiefs knotted are also extremely fascinating, but the stories enacted should not be of an exciting nature, and ogres and hobgoblins should be carefully eliminated for fear of their return during the night hours.

When the child is better the little table will be found very useful to hold gayly colored picture books, games, dominos and cards. Paper dolls, too, will keep the little girls busy by the hour, and tin soldiers will do the same for the little boys.

Above all, the mother should always appear cheerful in order to drive all fear and nervousness from the child's mind. The mood of the mother reflects itself in the child and either retards or accelerates recovery.

HELEN CLIFTON.

SQUARE ENTRANCE HALL.

How to Furnish One So It Will Look Like a Room.

The hall in the illustration is in an English country house and it shows the prevailing style of furnishing the entrance hall like a living room.

The ceiling and walls are painted in Pompeiian red and the woodwork is of fumed oak. The stairway is carpeted in red and it winds to meet a balcony with three arches. The stained glass window of pale yellow allows the sun to light up the farther end of the hall.

The fireplace is of shaded red and green tiling and the settles on either side are of fumed oak. The floors are hard wood polished and the carpet is of red, blue and green. The massive furniture matches the woodwork, while the antique effect is heightened by pieces of armor and tapestry on the walls.

ANTIQUE EFFECT.

R. DE LA BAUME.

A Man Tailor's Achievement.

Rev. Anna Shaw, president of the National Woman Suffrage organization, says she has found a man tailor who is willing to put two pockets in her gowns—that, too, in such a way that they never show.

WHAT IS WORN.

Gray More Popular Than Ever—Hats Draped With Lace.

Gray will be worn more than ever this summer in hats and gowns and tailor mades.

A new fashion in millinery is the black or pale ecru straw hat draped with a veil of lace. This can be either black, blond or chantilly lace, arranged at the back into a graceful fan plaited drop quite different from the bedraggled chiffon affair with its cheap effect. Very bright flowers adorn many of these hats, and the inside of the brim is decorated with bands of velvet or silk or gauged chiffon.

SHAWL EVENING CAPE.

The newest veils have borders and hang straight from the brim in front, but these are not likely to be popular with many.

In Paris and Vienna little caps and skirt costumes made to match are worn with fancy net or chiffon separate blouses.

It is quite the latest fancy to combine many shades of white and cream in one dress. The blending requires, of course, the skill of the master's hand. A veritable chef d'œuvre, in which the harmonious intermixture was really exquisite, was carried out in dead white silk, covered with a heavy lace of a deeper tint, the chiffon and lace trimmings blending from snow white to a deep champagne, quite a study in carved ivory.

The picture shows a handsome shawl evening cape with a collar of lace and a rich fringe trimming.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

DRESS TRIMMINGS.

Fine Gold Thread Used For Embroideries—Linen Canvas For Suits.

Fine gold thread in an embroidery novelty seen on cloth gowns. It is used oftenest by itself, as it kills any other thread with which it is used.

A smart hat, designed for evening wear, was of transparent black chantilly shirred on fine wires. On the top of the hat were sewed in among the shirrings little meshes of gold colored straw. Under the brim on the left hand side were four pale yellow roses.

CHINA SILK NEGLIGEE

Another hat for evening wear was of the new rough braid, with an insertion of black lace half way down the brim. The inner brim had two ostrich feathers resting on the hair, while rosebuds formed the crown.

Linen canvas in heliotrope and pale green will be used for smart little coat and skirt costumes and shirt waist dresses. The fronts and cuffs of some of these are decorated with cross stitch embroidery, the satin stock and belt being of the shade of the embroidery. A pale green worked in white, for instance, has a white stock and a white leather belt.

The double and the triple skirts, composed of two or three ruffles, are very smart for women who are tall enough to wear them. This style also requires narrow hips on account of the extra fullness.

The picture shows a negligee of old rose china silk, trimmed with yellow lace. The body is all laid in fine tucks, which are allowed to flare into a full ruffle around the feet.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

FASHIONABLE UNDERWEAR.

It Is Becoming More Dainty and Elaborate in Design.

Lingerie is becoming more and more elaborate. Nightgowns are made low necked and short sleeved, and the yokes are no longer the square or V shaped affairs of former years, but they are marvels of irregular tucks and handmade embroidery.

Petticoats are carefully fitted down to the knees, whence they emerge in a quantity of ruffling edged with lace or fine quillings.

V shaped points both in insertion and in embroidery seem to be the fad at present, and they appear both on chemises and on petticoats.

Little kimonos reaching only to the waist are made of handkerchiefs, the edges being hemstitched together so as to form a regular pattern. Pink and pale blue border handkerchiefs make charming negligees combined in this manner.

The lingerie coffee jacket is always pretty when it is made of wide insertions and very fine white muslin. It is threaded through with pink ribbons or pale blue ones and is worn with a silk petticoat to correspond in tint.

PARISIAN NIGHTGOWN.

Lingerie hats composed of a variety of tiny lace ruffles can be made at home by the amateur milliner with clever fingers. The sole trimming consists of a wreath of tiny roses or loops of satin ribbon.

The picture shows a fancy nightgown made with an extra wide collar and sleeve ruffles trimmed with lace.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

DRESSMAKER TALK.

The New Bolero and the Old—Wide Cape and Shawl Effects.

The new bolero is loose without front gores. It is also short, in many cases equally so front and back, and what would show of the waist line is hidden under a snugly boned and beautifully fitted wide girdle. The smartest models show the long shoulder and the sleeve, which bags most at the elbow.

Wide cape and shawl effects, fringe, embroideries and plaited and shirred skirts—these are the characteristic features of the spring and summer gowns.

No gown with any pretentions to style can have a plain skirt. Some kind of elaboration is absolutely necessary.

The new taffetas are very supple, so that they will outwear two or three of the old fashioned stiff variety. They come in fancy weaves, such as checks, polka dots, irregular figurings, brocaded effects, etc. Quantities of black and white taffeta and lonsine are being sold for general utility and shirt waist costumes.

Velvet ribbon is used in Paris on the most dainty fabrics, such as tulle, mousseline, grenadine and veiling.

GRAY SILK COAT

The little silk shirt waist gowns are made smart with dainty ties and turnover collars of lace and smart girdles of embroidered silk.

Perfectly exquisite are the new hair ornaments, wheat beads being particularly effective in the form of semi-wreaths and clusters, the hop vine, with its harmonious blending of colors, being introduced among these in many cases, while Mercury's wings in gauze, brightened with paillettes, are greatly admired.

The cut shows a soft silk coat, iron gray in color. It is lined with white silk. The deep cape yoke is finely shirred.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

Keeping Boarders

Why Some Women Succeed and Others Fail

"POOR woman! She sank all her money in that house and failed."

"I wonder why it is that some women have to turn away boarders and have a waiting list while others have most of their rooms empty?"

The woman who had been in the business a long time smiled understandingly. "It isn't hard to get boarders," she began. "It's the keeping them which is difficult. Some women appear to think that the only thing necessary is to furnish a house—plus meals—and then to advertise. 'Charge them the most possible, feed them the least possible and let them look out for themselves,' is a policy which has closed up more than one boarding house. Now, in the old days, before apartment houses sprang up like mushrooms in every direction, people who couldn't afford a housekeeping flat had perforce to put up with the boarding house and thank their stars if they got decent treatment. But that is all over now. They don't go to a boarding house now because they have to, but because they will be more comfortable there for the money they wish to spend, and if the landlady doesn't make them so, why, they won't stay, that is all."

"Tell us about some of your acquaintances who have made a success of it."

"Well, there is Mrs. Jones. She was left a widow with a large house and not much money. Mrs. Jones now owns two houses and is thinking of taking a third. She lets rooms to bachelors, and men come there who want the seclusion of a private house without the expense. If I were to take you to Mrs. Jones' house you would understand why she has succeeded. The location, for instance, is extremely good.

"When you ring the highly polished brass knocker you are admitted by a respectable looking manservant in a dark blue uniform. There is a reception room, very plainly furnished with empire furniture, but this is seldom used, as the men receive their guests in their own quarters. The house is divided into two and one room suits, each having a tub and running water. A little money and a deal of careful planning brought this about before the first tenant knocked for admission. 'You can't expect gentlemen to live in a house without accommodations, and I do not choose to cater to the other class. They do not pay well enough, and they would lower the tone of my house,' this wise woman remarked in explaining her plan of action. Mrs. Jones began by having the very nicest class of men, and when these found that the house was quiet and well run and that the inmates were all of equal social standing they began to recommend it to their friends. The result is that now she has a long waiting list. She herself hardly ever sees her tenants, and the checks are sent to her monthly or weekly. Complaints are handed to the butler in writing, and she attends to them in her private office. The only women servants in the house are the chambermaids, and they are spotless in black gowns and white caps, collars, cuffs and aprons.

BREAKFAST ON A TRAY.

"Another woman I know has made a success of her house by serving breakfast on a tray to each room between 7:30 and 9 o'clock. She does this without extra charge. It does away with the lagging breakfast table and is besides most agreeable to her guests. Another woman makes a specialty of bachelor girls. Her house is prettily furnished, studio fashion, and, as she insists on a good introduction before admission, there are no stupid and insulting restrictions afterward.

"In every case the owner of the *house would rather leave her rooms un*tenanted than fill them even temporarily with the sort of people who would be distasteful to her regular guests.

"As a result, she usually does not have any rooms vacant. You can't mix people even in a boarding house, and if you want good paying, refined inmates for your place you must give them what they are used to. I believe that is the secret of success in the business."

MAUD ROBINSON.

DAINTY MODES.

Gold Braid Much Used For Trimming—Green to Be Smart.

Gold braid used in discretion is charming in champagne, ivory and pastel shaded gowns.

Accordion plaiting appears everywhere, but it is meant exclusively for the slender woman. Even strictly tailor made gowns occasionally have accordion plaited skirts.

The great authorities both here and abroad are striving to introduce soft sage greens as well as other less becoming shades of the same tint. A vivid periwinkle blue is also quite the mode in Paris.

GRAY CLOTH TAILOR MADE.

A little check morning gown is to be a summer feature, particularly in black and white and red and white.

Black taffeta, soie de chine, chiffon voile and the thin veilings are all smart made up with touches of white.

Any quantity of lace will be used this season both in white and yellowish tints.

For morning dresses embroidered linens and finely stitched batistes and even old fashioned ginghams and dimities will be made up in simple becoming styles.

A touch of color introduced on white shirts gives a decided style, particularly when the stock and belt match the predominating note of color in the embroideries.

Among the special "fads" of the dressmaker are the silk or velvet buttons which nowadays appear on a number of the gowns. The latter are elaborately embroidered in confectional or flower designs.

The picture shows a tailor made of fine gray cloth and darker gray panne. It is trimmed with gray silk tassels and yellow lace. The hat is of gray tulle trimmed with wreaths of tiny tea roses.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

FEATURES OF DRESS.

Skirts of Elaborate Gowns Are Long and Very Full.

Black lace outlined with velvet or chenille is still in favor. The daintiest trimmings for lace gowns are chiffon and taffeta roses, gold and silver leaves and quaint pompadour wreaths.

All the dressy skirts are long and very full. They are trimmed with shirrings, flat plaits, etc.

FRENCH SAILOR HAT.

For evening wear from now on the heavy silks and brocades will be supplanted by simple muslins and painted gauzes made up in quaint styles.

For street wear the full skirt, clearing the ground all around, is the thing.

The deep pointed Marie Antoinette belt will be the most striking feature of this summer's dresses.

Some quaint puffed sleeves to the elbow will be noticeable on light afternoon toilets as well as on many of those for evening wear.

Many smart costumes in white cloth are now to be seen, and quite a few of these are made with skirts that just clear the ground.

The shepherdess shape in millinery is still to the front. This is decorated with a wreath of roses and a lace veil falling at the back. The lace veil is *a graceful hat trimming and one ap*propriate to the present styles.

Panniers will be very much seen on the frocks of tomorrow, a charming example being a toilet of white chiffon, the skirt draped with lace, forming panniers, which fall in graceful cascades on each side of the train.

The picture shows a serviceable French sailor trimmed with a rosette a twist of tulle and two wings.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

SEPARATE WAISTS.

Dainty Lingerie Affairs to Be Worn Under Short Coats.

Under the new short boleros will be worn some very smart specimens of batiste shirt waists ornamented with valenciennes lace and embroideries or *quaint muslin embroideries. Hand*made French blouses, although expensive at first, are well worth the initial cost, for they clean beautifully and can be worn many times for many different occasions.

The transparent lace waist lined with chiffon and worn over an elaborate silk corset cover is another feature of the smart woman's wardrobe.

Black waists of net chantilly and crepe de chine are always smart with full veiling skirts.

The black silk coat is here with us again, only the silk is softer, and the trimming oftener than not is in the shape of wide bands of shirring.

Gray is the leading color for present wear, and the new tints range from almost white to gun metal. There are also greenish grays, and grays with quite a violet tone, so that every complexion can be suited.

GRAY SHIRT WAIST.

A blouse of black crepe de chine with a very deep yoke of ecru lace, has closely gauged sleeves falling over the elbow in wide puffs, with a deep shaped cuff of lace reaching nearly to the elbow. Small bows of narrow green velvet ribbon conceal the front fastening of the blouse and are set closely down each cuff, to reappear in a shorter line at the back of the swathed belt.

The cut shows a gray shirt waist trimmed with scarlet plaid and worn with a scarlet tie and belt.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

THE SUMMER WARDROBE.

Brown Will Be Worn a Great Deal, Cream Lace and Jet Robes.

Brown will continue to be worn all summer. It will be seen mainly in lustrous silk in the form of shirt waist suits and tailor mades. Brown in its reddish tints will also be a smart trimming for pongee dresses.

All shades of blue are very smart, from the baby tones used to trim lace gowns so effectively to the darker tones so useful for tailor mades. Green in bright emerald and in soft olive promises to be very much in vogue for summer silks.

For evening wear cream lace gowns embroidered in silver are very beautiful, and black chantilly over white is always smart as well as serviceable. Dead white lace is equally smart, but it is very trying to most women.

Heavy embroideries are quite the most up to date trimmings. Pastel cloth gowns are trimmed with combinations of pale tints. Silver and gold threads are often introduced into the more elaborate ornamentations.

Jet robes most fancifully made up are both pretty and serviceable. They have large sleeves of kilted chiffon cut so as to reveal the bare arm at its best.

VEILING DRESS.

A smart coat seen recently was made shorter at the back than in the front, and it was so slashed that it showed the dainty blouse under it. It had no collar, and the square cut fronts hung loose.

Liberty satin and liberty foulards make pretty little street dresses, with shallow yokes or pointed collars of embroidery, the same embroidery appearing also on the sleeves.

The picture shows a white veiling gown made over white taffeta and trimmed with cream lace. The cream hat is draped with similar lace.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

SPOTTING THE CULPRIT.

Passenger Who Gave Pointers to Conductor Had to Pay for the Display of His Wisdom.

Three times the conductor went through the car calling for fares. When he returned to the platform the third time, says the New York Times, he appeared to distrust his qualifications for a conductor.

"There is one woman in there," he said, "who hasn't paid her fare, but I can't for the life of me make out which one it is."

"Then you will have to use tact," said the man at the window. "There are various ways whereby you can spot a fare jumper. I'm not a conductor, but I know that much. I have seen my wife do it lots of times, and I have come to know the signs pretty well. When she is up to a trick of that kind she gets so nervous that it makes you feel creepy to watch her. She tucks her feet back under her skirts, reads the advertisements and the newspapers of her neighbors, and holds both hands over her pocketbook in a protecting way as if afraid it would get loose. My observation has been that most women act the same way. If I were you I would just take another look at them, and if you find one going through all those contortions you may feel pretty sure she is the sinner you are after."

"SAYS YOU'RE HER HUSBAND."

Being thus enlightened the conductor made another tour in search of fares. When he returned his broad face was widened still further by a triumphant grin.

"Your suggestion worked all right," he said. "I found her, and guess it is up to you to settle. She has owned up, but she refuses to pay. She says it isn't her place to pay when you are along."

The man at the window failed to appreciate the situation.

"What have I got to do with it?" he asked.

"A good deal, evidently," was the reply. "She says you're her husband. She noticed you standing here, she says, when she first came into the car. She came in, it seems, the front way."

The man at window looked cautiously into the car.

"Here," he said, "is your nickel."

SLAYS CHILD AND DOG.

In a Fit of Insanity, New Jersey Mother Uses Wood Ax and Commits Awful Crime.

Mrs. Arthur Oswald, of Oakland, N. J., in a sudden fit of insanity beheaded her eldest child and his pet dog, which had apparently defended him, with an ax. The boy was four years old. Mrs. Oswald has three other children, but she did not harm them. The woman is now a raving maniac. Mrs. Oswald completely severed the head of her son from his body and carried it into another part of the house. The head of her dog was carried to the same spot and placed beside that of the boy. The assumption is that Mrs. Oswald attempted to punish her boy for some mischief that he had done, and that the dog defended the child by springing at the mother.

RACE ACROSS THE FIELD.

The woman, probably frightened at the snarling of the dog, got a wood ax and brained him. The shock, the sight of blood spurting from the dog's head, it is believed, crazed Mrs. Oswald. The inference is that she turned on the child with a blow of the ax. Then in her insanity she hacked away in her fury until the child's head was completely severed and rolled away from his body. Then the woman turned upon the dog and hacked its neck until its head was also severed. The two heads she then picked up and placed in the center of the dining-room. Nothing was known of the tragedy until her husband, Arthur Oswald, employed as a fireman by the E. C. Potter company at Pompton Lake, reached his home at night. He is almost crazed as a result of the shock he received on entering the house. Upon going upstairs he found his wife and the other children in bed, the woman murmuring incoherently to herself.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Ed... and Proprietor

Thursday, May 5, 1904.

A despatch telling of the remarkable run of an express train from Atlantic City to Philadelphia says that "the train slowed up as it neared Philadelphia." Naturally.

Notwithstanding the fact that he desires to keep out of politics, James F. Buckle's friends are booming him for the Republican mayoralty nomination. They have got a candidate of the right sort. Mr. Buckle is a man of ripe business experience, level-headed and energetic. He has his own mind and is not the sort of a man to be controlled or intimidated

Some of Representative Charles N. Fowler's enemies are making political capital out of the fact that he was absent a good deal of the time from Congress during the session just closed. They can always tell when Fowler is in Washington for his presence is made known more through his active participation in the proceedings of the National legislature than by the frequency of dinner parties and afternoon teas.

MISS MINNIE E. WOOD WEDS A LONDONER

Plainfield Girl Becomes the Bride of Ralph K. Harvey in New York.

THEY MET IN ITALY

CEREMONY AT THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION.

Rev. Percy S. Grant Officiates—Wedding Breakfast at Waldorf-Astoria—Miss Katherine Wood Maid-of-Honor.

Miss Minnie E. Wood, daughter of Francis Wood, of Franklin place, and granddaughter of Mr. Esterbrook, of pen fame, was married to Ralph K. Harvey, of London, at the Church of the Ascension, Fifth avenue and Tenth street, New York, Saturday. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Percy Stickney Grant, rector of the church, in the presence of a large number of society people from New York, this city and distant points.

The bride was gowned in white satin, trimmed with lace and she wore orange blossoms in the coiffure. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Katharine Wood, as maid of-honor. There were no bridesmaids. Thomas Parker, of London, was the best man. Arthur King Wood, a cousin, William B. Gilbert, James P. Murray and Howard Huntington, of this city, were ushers.

After the ceremony the bride's father gave an elaborate breakfast at the Waldorf-Astoria to the bridal party and one hundred friends. The couple will soon sail for London, where they will reside in the future. The bride received many elegant and costly gifts, among them being a valuable token from her Sunday-school class at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

The bride was travelling in Italy after her mother's death, and it was there that she met and became engaged to Mr. Harvey.

Among the guests from here attending the wedding were Alexander Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen A. Ginas, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel P. Ginas, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Jr., Dr. G. W. Endicott, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Huntington and Miss Florence Huntington.

Returns From Long Trip.

Thomas A. Runyon, of East Front street, who has been in the Far West for over a year, has returned. Since leaving here Mr. Runyon has visited San Francisco, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Denver and many other smaller cities. He was also for some time in Mexico.

Dance at T. A. B. Hall.

The first dance of the Echo Social Club will be held Friday evening, in St. Mary's T. A. B. Hall. Prof. O'Reilly's full orchestra will furnish the music. The committee in charge is Thomas McInery, Thomas Carty, David Doyle, Peter Galbraith.

Dancing at 'Plains.

O'Reilly's full orchestra will furnish music at the dancing pavilion at Earl's Hotel, Scotch Plains, which opens Saturday evening, May 14.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jones, formerly of this city, but late of New York, moved to town yesterday, and have leased a house in West Fifth street near Central avenue.

AMUSEMENTS.

The extension of the engagement of Richard Carle and "The Tenderfoot" at the New York Theatre has proved a very wise move on the part of the management. This talented comedian and his novel musical comedy are packing the house at every performance and every indication points to a continuation of this remarkable patronage far into the hot weather season. "The Tenderfoot" is the musical novelty of the year and interests an audience from start to finish. There is not a dull or unentertaining moment in it.

In a year marked by the great number of its theatrical revivals, no more promising announcement is made than that of the return of DeWolf Hopper to his pristine success, "Wang." Scarcely any player's whose memory goes back a decade can fail to remember the notable impression which Mr. Hopper made when he first appeared in this work by J. Cheever Goodwin and Woolson Morse. The opera, which really deserves to be classed as an opera more than any other musical offering of its time or as present, has a wonderful following and did more than all the rest of his vehicles toward establishing the reputation of the comedian. Many other reputations indeed, were established at the same time, the names of Della Fox and Alfred Klein being familiar to the public largely because of their share in the performance of "Wang."

At Wallack's Theatre, New York, "The County Chairman" keeps as many people in paroxysmal laughter as in the first stages of its literally wonderful career. The large audience room of this playhouse is always filled and the expressions of mirth rattle along like the incessant fire of infantry, with frequent explosions which might be termed the artillery of merriment. The Wednesday matinees at reduced prices of admission, established for the special accommodation of suburban residents, will be continued until the end of the run, and now that fine spring weather is arriving these afternoon performances are additionally popular. A conspicuous example of this situation is offered by Governor Odell, who had a theatre party at Wallack's the other evening and enjoyed "The County Chairman" quite as heartily as during any one of his four previous visits.

"The Yankee Consul" has been received with great fervor in New York at the Broadway Theatre, which, although one of the very largest playhouses in America, has been crowded to its utmost capacity ever since Washington's Birthday. Raymond Hitchcock, as the festive American agent to an official country to a Western republic, where he becomes entangled in many complications, feminine and official, has scored a most emphatic success, probably exceeding the same actor's former extraordinary hit in "King Dodo." The supporting company, scenery, costumes, score and libretto are praised with the greatest unanimity.

"Hang out your banners on the outer wall, the cry is 'still they come.'" When William Shakespeare wrote those words he might have been telling of the starry bills offered week after week at Keith's, for they fit the case to a nicety. In addition "Still they come" is profoundly prophetic, for the offering for the coming week is a bill of the first magnitude, stronger, if that is possible, than any that has been seen, where nothing but the best is ever shown, in many a long day.

The Eden Musee has had many novelties but none of a more interesting or scientific character than "The Magic Kettle," which is now being exhibited there. Under this name a large number of interesting experiments are shown with liquid air. Upon the stage is an ordinary tea kettle, sitting apparently upon a gas stove. By the quantity of steam issuing from the spout, the contents of the kettle are boiling furiously. A few feats of magic follow in which liquid air plays a small part.

STREET SPRINKLING BEGUN

SEASON'S WORK STARTED BY CONTRACTOR THIS MORNING.

John E. Keely, official street sprinkler, Tuesday began the work for the season. For some days past he has been very busy getting the sprinkling carts, horses and harness in condition to start work. Six carts are now engaged in covering the city and Mr. Keely will make every effort to give entire satisfaction. His equipment is in first-class shape and he intends keeping it so.

The sprinkling is to be done in a systematic manner, that is a list of all streets to be watered have been compiled and the work to be done on each noted. During the past week Mr. Keely has been scouring the country for suitable horses and he believes that he now has the best collection of horses for this work to be found anywhere.

SCHOOL BOND BIDS TO BE OPENED JUNE 6

Common Council Arranges to Raise $60,000 to Begin Work on $125,000 High School.

ROUTINE TRANSACTIONS

WOODEN BLOCK PAVEMENT FOR WATCHUNG AVENUE.

Town Improvement Association to Care for City Park—Appropriation for Memorial Day—The Monthly Reports.

One of the most important things done at the May meeting of the Common Council, Monday, was the adoption of a resolution offered by Mr. Daniel, providing for the issuance of $60,000 worth of school bonds with which to erect Plainfield's new High School. Sealed proposals will be advertised for to be opened on Monday night, June 6. The bonds and method of proceedure in issuing them are the same as in the first instance when the McKee State school law was declared unconstitutional. It is arranged that the bonds shall be in denomination of $1,000 each and shall bear date of June 1, 1904.

By way of explanation Mr. Daniel stated that City Treasurer Arnold had suggested that bonds of smaller amount be issued, but it was believed that in issuing the entire $60,000 the city would save money. The work of preparing these bonds will be started at once.

Another matter of importance was the introduction of an ordinance by Mr. Gloak, providing for the extension of the sanitary sewers through Leland, Arlington, Hillside and Evergreen avenues. Union street and Denmark road. A public hearing was granted on this matter, and as there being no objection, the ordinance was adopted on its first and second readings and ordered advertised.

Still another matter of considerable importance was that in reference to the permanent improvement of Watchung avenue, between North avenue and Second street. Mr. Gloak introduced an ordinance providing for this improvement and it was adopted on first and second readings. The ordinance provides that the avenue shall be paved its entire width, thirty-six feet, between the streets named with wooden block treated by the creosotinate process and to a depth of ten inches. The expense of this work is to be borne by the city and the Public Service Corporation, each paying half, $1,291. This improvement has the approval of the trolley company and no doubt it will be made within the near future. As to the pavement the city has received a favorable opinion from B. T. Fendall, city engineer of Baltimore, who declares that it gave entire satisfaction in that city.

The Town Improvement Association of Plainfield and North Plainfield through its president, Mrs. Pierre Malli, agreed to take care of the city park from the present date to November 1, next, for the sum of $100, that the association will give the park such floral attention as the fund will permit. This proposition is in accordance with the custom of other years and in accordance with Mr. Daniel s resolution was accepted.

Mrs. John C. Lawrence, owning property at 1214 and 1216 North avenue, asked the Council to continue the $500 exemption from taxes which her late husband, a veteran of the Civil War, was allowed. The petition was made through her counsel, J. B. Coward, the exemption having been disallowed. The matter was referred to the corporation counsel.

Then followed the consideration of many matters of minor importance. The $1,000 bond of John E. Keely for the faithful performance of a contract to sprinkle the streets of the city, was received and filed. Residents on North avenue, between Terrill road and Frederick street, petitioned for lights, as did also Paul Taylor Brown for lights on Woodland avenue. The Babcock Estate petitioned for a four-way hydrant on Madison avenue, near the Babcock building, for the better protection of the large buildings. These petitions were all referred to the proper committees.

The Council received an invitation to attend the graduation of hospital nurses to be held in the Crescent Avenue Presbeyterian church, on May 26, and Mr. Daniel offered a motion extending thanks for the invitation and that the same be accepted.

Residents in the vicinity of Berkeley avenue and Denmark road petitioned for four lights and this was referred. The annual request of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., for $100 with which to help defray Decoration Day expenses, was received and granted.

Mayor Jenkins appointed James F. McKeon and Dennis O'Keefe as special patrolmen and the appointments were confirmed.

City Physician, Dr. G. B. Lotherrow, reported that between January 1 and April 1, he made thirty-eight visits to the Industrial Home, examined two persons for typhoid, to the police force and three officers who were ill. In all he made 201 visits to the city poor. There were four deaths in that time and three births.

Building Inspector Doane reported that twenty-six permits were granted last month and Street Commissioner Gavett reported that thirty-nine sewer permits were granted between November 27 and April 25, last. The sum of $1,500 was transferred from the general to the fire fund in accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Daniel.

On Mr. Murphy's motion one light was ordered placed on Midway avenue, opposite Hill street, in response to a request from the residents. Mr. Daniel called up the tax ordinances for third reading and final passage. Mr. Tyler reported progress on the new back ordinance and Mr. Gloak called up the ordinance relating to the removal of ice, snow and weeds. This was adopted on third reading. This concluded the business and the meeting adjourned.

OFFICERS ARE RE-ELECTED

LADIES' CHRISTIAN WORK SOCIETY OF TRINITY HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING.

The excellent officers who have served the Ladies' Christian Work Society, of Trinity Reformed church, so efficiently during the past year, were all re-elected at the annual meeting of the society held in the parlors of the church, Monday afternoon. These persons were chosen:

President, Mrs. E. A. Parse; first vice president, Mrs. Cornelius Schenck; second vice president, Mrs. A. M. Gilliem; third vice president, Mrs. O. W. Dunham; secretary, Mrs. B. D. Nowell; treasurer, Mrs. Robert Clark, Jr.

The annual reports of the secretary and treasurer and the chairmen of the various committees were read, showing the condition of the society to be most encouraging, financially and spiritually. These reports will be presented Sunday night at the twenty-ninth anniversary meeting of the society to be held in the church. Rev. James Contine, a missionary to Arabia, now home on a leave of absence, will make the anniversary address.

AMUSEMENTS.

At the Knickerbocker Theatre Monday evening, the Frank L. Pearley Opera Company produced a three act comedy opera entitled "A Venetian Romance," the book by Cornelius Osgood Tyler, and the music by Frederick Colt Wright. It is sure of a successful run. Effective and beautiful stage pictures, artistic and becoming costumes, and if not over original, lively, and now and then pretty and catching airs and more than usually good choruses, with a refinement of atmosphere brought to last night's premiere a warm reception. Mrs. Tyler has written a remarkably good book for a first attempt and provided for elaborate stage pictures. The first act, she scenes of which is laid in Venice, is the best. The opera has a motif—called the Kobber motif—a catching air, which the audience hummed on leaving and which is constantly repeated thorugh the piece. This, the choruses at the three final curtains and the opening chorus of the third act, a love duet in the first, a trio in the second and a solo and a solo and chorus. "The Cuckoo and the Willow," in the third act, are all good. There are three show girls rather inferior to the "Famous Triplets of Tripoli," who are the prettiest seen in a Broadway show in many a season, and whose gowns of crimson brocaded silk were audibly admired by the feminine portion of the audience—a sincere compliment.

Paul West and John W. Bratton launched a jaunty craft on the treacherous sea of musical comedy Monday night and after a merry voyage through a storm of applause came to a safe anchorage at the Majestic Theatre. Their splendid effort is called "The Man From China." It has the cleverest musical numbers and most neatly written lyrics that have been heard in New York in some time. Both the author and composer were aided greatly by Charles A. Bigelow, who now comes into the limelight as a full-fledged star and whose amusing eccentricities are brought to bear on the character of a "human band," a once familiar but now almost forgotten oddity in street life. He was continuously amusing, and in his antics lay much of the vim of the new piece. But he was not the only one. Aimee Angeles, a very sylph of the stage, looked charming and danced prettily, and Stella Mayhew, a newcomer in musical-comedy, romped away with the obesity honors the moment she had got fully started in her first song, "Fifty-seven Ways to Catch a Man," Although there were twenty-one of these song numbers and among them the hits were numerous. The production is bound to be a revenue getter.

IMPORTANT CHANGES IN STATE GAME LAWS

In a Number of Instances the Open Season for Fish and Game Has Been Lengthened.

DEER LAW AMENDMENT

SHORE BIRDS MAY BE KILLED BETWEEN MAY AND DECEMBER.

Bass and Perch Season Commences May 20—When Snipe May be Shot—Fishing for Pickerel.

Several important changes were made in the fish and game laws at the recent session of the Legislature. In numerous instances the open season for taking fish and game has been changed, and sportsmen should fa*miliarize themselves with the present* laws in order to avoid trouble.

The open season for water wild fowl, including ducks, geese, swan, etc., will hereafter begin on the first day of September, which is just one month earlier than heretofore. The shooting of what are generally known as shore birds, which include curlews, plover and snipe, with the exception of Wilson or English snipe, is legal from May 1 to December 31, instead of from July 15 to December 31, as formerly. A spring season is given for Wilson or English snipe, and these birds may now be lawfully shot during the months of March, April, September, October, November and December.

While the general public is prohibited from shooting English or ringnecked pheasants, except between November 10 and December 31, both dates inclusive, the Legislature graciously permits owners of game preserves to begin shooting these birds on October 1 and continue until December 31.

*That section of the law which pro*vided for having in one's possession deer during the prohibitive season, even though obtained lawfully outside the State, has been amended so as not to interfere "with deer that have been legally killed or taken in other States and brought into this State properly tagged to show where they were killed or taken."

It will be remembered that much trouble was caused last year by the enforcement of the law prohibiting the closed season for game The law as it then stood read as follows:

It shall be unlawful for any owner, lessee or custodian of any dog to permit such dog to run at large in woods or fields inhabited by rabbits or game birds, except when said dog is in the custody or charge of its owner, lessee, or custodian, during the close herein provided for bare (commonly known as rabbit), under a penalty of $20 for each offense.

This was amended so as to read:

It shall be unlawful for any owner, lessee or custodian of any dog to permit such dog to run at large in woods or fields inhabited by rabbits or game birds, except only between the first day of October and the first day of February following; provided, however, that at all times during the year such dog or dogs may be allowed to run when the owner, lessee or custodian is with such dog or dogs; but at no such time shall any dog be allowed to run rabbits at night, under $20 for each offense; and it is further provided that this act shall in no wise apply to fields or woods inhabited by deer.

The changes in the seasons for taking fish will interest many. The first day of the open season for black bass, Oswego bass, calico bass, white bass and pike perch is now May 20 instead of June 15. This change is generally depressed by anglers, and will probably be repealed at the next session. The same change is made in the open season for pike and pickerel, which now begins May 20, and besides it is made lawful to take these fishes during the entire month of January, which permits fishing through the ice. The Essex fasciatus, which is known variously as Long Island pickerel, varied pickerel and grass pike, is removed from the protection of the law, and may be taken at any time. This is a small variety of pickerel which haunts trout streams and is very destructive to young trout.

Pastor's Wife Surprised.

Mrs. Lindholm, wife of Rev. L. T. Lindholm, pastor of Swedish Pilgrim Congregation, was pleasantly surprised Friday night, the occasion being the anniversary of her birthday. She was the recipient of many handsome flowers and a substantial purse of money. During the evening there was a programme of vocal instrumental music and refreshments were served.

Mrs. Daniel Trickseton, of Central avenue, has gone to her summer home in Belmar.

Miss Eloise Santee, of Madison avenue, has been entertaining Miss Pinch, of New York.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

"The Standard Railroad of America."

PROTECTED THROUGHOUT BY THE ELECTRIC AUTOMATIC BLOCK SIGNAL SYSTEM.

On and After Feb. 14, 1904.

Trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

7 30 a m—Fast Line daily, with Pullman Vestibule Parlor Cars, for Pittsburg and Cleveland. Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.

8 00 a m—Western Express, daily, with Vestibule Sleeping Cars and Dining Car, for Pittsburg, Chicago Limited, for Toledo, connect Saturdays.

*7 57 p m—Toledo Express, daily, with Pullman Vestibule Sleeping Cars, for Pittsburg, Toledo and Chicago, daily, for Cleveland, via Shenandoah Valley Route, for Cleveland, except Saturday.

*11 50 p m—Night Express, for Pittsburg and Chicago, daily. Sleeping Cars.

*Daily. †Daily except Sunday.

FOR BALTIMORE, WASHINGTON AND THE SOUTH—12 01, 3 40, 7 30, 8 00, 10 30 a m. On Sunday at 12 01, 9 07, 10 30 a m, and 10 57 p m

FOR NEWARK AND NEW YORK—6 26, 6 57, 8 44, 9 13, 9 30, 9 56, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a m, 12 01, 1 37, 2 04, 3 04, 3 42, 4 30, 5 07, 5 15, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 7 56, 8 00, 8 07, 8 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night. On Sundays, 6 26, 6 57, 8 44, 9 13, 9 30, 9 56, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a m, 12 01, 1 37, 2 04, 3 04, 3 42, 4 30, 5 07, 5 15, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 7 56, 8 00, 8 07, 8 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night. Sundays, 6 26, 6 57, 8 44, 9 13, 9 30, 9 56, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a m, 12 01, 1 37, 2 04, 3 04, 3 42, 4 30, 5 07, 5 15, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 7 56, 8 00, 8 07, 8 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night. Sundays, 6 26, 6 57, 8 44, 9 13, 9 30, 9 56, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a m, 12 01, 1 37, 2 04, 3 04, 3 42, 4 30, 5 07, 5 15, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 7 56, 8 00, 8 07, 8 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night.

FOR PHILADELPHIA—1 01, 6 46, 8 06, 8 26, 9 07, 9 26, 10 06, 11 06 a m., 12 05, 1 37, 2 04, 3 04, 3 42, 4 30, 5 07, 5 15, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 7 56, 8 00, 8 07, 8 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night. On Sunday at 12 05, 1 37, 2 04, 3 04, 3 42, 4 30, 5 07, 5 15, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 7 56, 8 00, 8 07, 8 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night.

FOR ATLANTIC CITY—Via Delaware River Bridge, 8 01 a. m. Sundays, 9 07 a. m.

FOR CAPE MAY—Express, 1 01 night, daily, 1 37 p. m. week days.

FOR RAHWAY—1 01, 6 46, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 8 06, 9 07, 9 26, 10 06, 11 06 a m., 12 05, 1 37, 2 04, 3 04, 3 42, 4 30, 5 07, 5 15, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 7 56, 8 00, 8 07, 8 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night. On Sundays, 1 01, 6 46, 8 06, 9 07, 10 06, 11 06 a m., and 12 05, 1 37, 2 04, 3 04, 3 42, 4 30, 5 07, 5 15, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 7 56, 8 00, 8 07, 8 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night. Sundays, 6 46, 8 06, 9 07, 10 06, 11 06 a m., and 12 05, 1 37, 2 04, 3 04, 3 42, 4 30, 5 07, 5 15, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 7 56, 8 00, 8 07, 8 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night.

FOR NEW BRUNSWICK—1 01, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 8 06, 9 07, 9 26, 10 06, 11 06 a m., 12 05, 1 37, 2 04, 3 04, 3 42, 4 30, 5 07, 5 15, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 7 56, 8 00, 8 07, 8 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night. On Sundays, 1 01, 6 46, 8 06, 9 07, 10 06, 11 06 a m., 12 05, 1 37, 2 04, 3 04, 3 42, 4 30, 5 07, 5 15, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 7 56, 8 00, 8 07, 8 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night. Sundays, 6 46, 8 06, 9 07, 10 06, 11 06 a m., and 12 05, 1 37, 2 04, 3 04, 3 42, 4 30, 5 07, 5 15, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 7 56, 8 00, 8 07, 8 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night.

FOR WOODBRIDGE AND PERTH AMBOY—6 46, 8 06, 10 06, 11 06 a m., 12 05, 1 37, 4 30, 5 07, 6 00, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 8 00, 8 07, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m. On Sundays, 10 06, 11 06 a m., 5 07, 6 00, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 8 00, 8 07, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m.

FOR KEY MILLSTONE—7 10 a m., 12 40 and 4 52 p m week-days.

FOR TRENTON—1 01, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 8 06, 9 07, 9 26, 10 06, 11 06 a m., 12 05, 1 37, 2 04, 3 04, 3 42, 4 30, 5 07, 5 15, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 7 56, 8 00, 8 07, 8 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night. On Sundays, 1 01, 6 46, 8 06, 9 07, 10 06, 11 06 a m., 12 05, 1 37, 2 04, 3 04, 3 42, 4 30, 5 07, 5 15, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 7 56, 8 00, 8 07, 8 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night. Sundays, 6 46, 8 06, 9 07, 10 06, 11 06 a m., and 12 05, 1 37, 2 04, 3 04, 3 42, 4 30, 5 07, 5 15, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 7 56, 8 00, 8 07, 8 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night.

FOR BORDENTOWN—1 01, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 8 06, 9 07, 9 26, 10 06, 11 06 a m., 12 05, 1 37, 2 04, 3 04, 3 42, 4 30, 5 07, 5 15, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 7 56, 8 00, 8 07, 8 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night. On Sundays, 1 01, 6 46, 8 06, 9 07, 10 06, 11 06 a m., 12 05, 1 37, 2 04, 3 04, 3 42, 4 30, 5 07, 5 15, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 7 56, 8 00, 8 07, 8 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night. Sundays, 6 46, 8 06, 9 07, 10 06, 11 06 a m., and 12 05, 1 37, 2 04, 3 04, 3 42, 4 30, 5 07, 5 15, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 28, 7 44, 7 56, 8 00, 8 07, 8 15, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night.

FOR LAMBERTVILLE, PHILLIPSBURG, MANUNKA CHUNK AND BETHLEHEM—8 01, 9 07, 11 06 a m., 4 52 p m week-days.

FOR FLEMINGTON—10 52 a m and 3 04 p m.

FOR JAMESBURG VIA MONMOUTH JUNCTION—8 06, 11 40 a m., 4 52 p m week-days.

FOR FREEHOLD VIA MONMOUTH JUNCTION—8 06 11 40 a m, 4 52 p m week-days Sundays, 9 07 a m.

FOR LONG BRANCH, ASBURY PARK, OCEAN GROVE AND POINTS ON NEW JERSEY AND LONG BRANCH R. R., 12 01 (except Mondays) 9 26, 9 a m, 1 00 and 5 04 p m week-days. Sundays, 12 01 night, 9 a m and 5 04 p m. Stop at Interlaken for Asbury Park and Ocean Grove Sundays.

FOR BROOKLYN, N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with Cortlandt and Dey streets, or Pavonia Avenue transfer to and from Fulton street, avoiding double ferriage. Enormous saving of time to New York City.

LEAVE NEW YORK FOR ELIZABETH—From foot Twenty-third Street Ferry, North River, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a m., 12 00, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m., 12 00 night. On Sundays, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m., 12 00 night.

(*) Stops on notice to Agent or on signal.

For time tables, fares and Cortlandt streets consult local time-tables to be procured from agents.

W. W. ATTERBURY, J. E. WOOD, Gen'l M'g'r. Pass. Traffic M'g'r.

GEO. W. BOYD, General Passenger Agent.

AGENTS WANTED.

LIFE OF T. DEWITT TALMAGE, by his son, REV. FRANK DEWITT TALMAGE and associate editors of Christian Herald. Only book endorsed by Talmage family. Enormous profit for agents who act quickly. Outfit ten cents. Write immediately CLARK & CO. 228 S Fourth Street, Phila., Pa. Mention this paper. 2 18

Woolston & Buckle,

PAINTERS.

Wall Papers, Painters' Supplies

141-145 North avenue.

GEORGE W. DAY,

General Auctioneer.

Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 132, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of Constitutionalist Terms reasonable

Vegetable and Flower SEEDS

Reliable and Tested. Catalogue Mailed Free

WEEBER & DON

Seed Merchants 114 CHAMBERS STREET NEW YORK

A. WOLFF,

Manufacturer of

CIGARS.

And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from 261 West Front street, to South side of Somerset street, first door from Front street, and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

Reading System

New Jersey Central.

Stations in New York foot of L berty, and South Ferry, Whitehall Streets.

TIMETABLE IN EFFECT NOV 29, 1903.

For New York—1 15, 2 25, 3 05, 5 00, 6 20, 6 45, 7 30, 7 55, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a m, 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p m, 12 00 night. Sundays—1 15, 2 25, 3 05, 5 00, 6 20, 6 45, 7 30, 7 55, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a m, 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p m, 12 00 night.

For Newark—5 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a m, 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p m, 12 00 night. Sundays—5 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a m, 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p m, 12 00 night.

For Somerville—5 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a m, 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p m, 12 00 night. Sundays—8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a m, 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p m, 12 00 night.

For Flemington—7 22, 11 00 a m., 3 11, 4 5 6 30 p. m. Sundays—9 44 a. m., 6 30 p. m.

For Phillipsburg and Easton—7 22, 9 54 a. m., 3 11, 4 56, 6 30 p. m. Sunday—9 44 a. m., 6 30 p. m.

For Bethlehem, Allentown and Manch Chunk—7 22, 9 54 a. m., 3 11, 6 30 p. m. Sundays—9 44 a. m., 6 30 p. m.

For Mauch Chunk, Wilkes-Barre, Scranton—4 35, 9 54 a m; 3 40 p m Sundays—9 44 a m, 3 00 p m.

For Long Branch and Ocean Grove, etc.—9 11, 11 00 a m, 3 40 p m. Sunday—11 00 a m, 3 00 p m. Special Ocean Grove—8 52 a m, 12 30, 6 13 p m.

For Red Bank—9 11, 11 00 a m, 3 40, 6 13 p m. Sunday—11 00 a m, 3 00 p m. Special Ocean Grove—8 52 a m, 12 30, 6 13 p m.

For Matawan—9 11, 11 00 a m, 3 40, 6 13 p m. Sunday—11 00 a m, 3 00 p m. Special Ocean Grove—8 52 a m, 12 30, 6 13 p m.

For Keyport—9 11, 11 00 a m, 3 40, 6 13 p m. Sunday—11 00 a m, 3 00 p m. Special Ocean Grove—8 52 a m, 12 30, 6 13 p m.

For Lakewood—9 11, 11 00 a m, 3 40, 6 13 p m. Sunday—11 00 a m, 3 00 p m. Special Ocean Grove—8 52 a m, 12 30, 6 13 p m.

For Toms River and Barnegat—9 27 a m, 2 32, 6 44 p m. Sundays—6 03 p m.

For Bay Head—9 27 a m, 2 32, 6 44, 8 13, 9 44, 10 44, 11 54, 11 44 a m, 12 44, 1 44, 2 44, 3 44, 4 44, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m, 12 44 night. Sundays—8 13, 9 44, 10 44, 11 54, 11 44 a m, 12 44, 1 44, 2 44, 3 44, 4 44, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m, 12 44 night.

For Trenton—1 17, 5 25, 7 12, 7 44, 8 25, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 a m, 12 44, 1 44, 2 44, 3 44, 4 44, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m, 12 44 night. Sunday—7 12, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 a m, 12 44, 1 44, 2 44, 3 44, 4 44, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m, 12 44 night.

For Reading and Harrisburg—4 17, 5 25 5 55, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 a m, 12 44, 1 44, 2 44, 3 44, 4 44, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m, 12 44 night (through train), 1 17 night. Sundays—4 17 a m, 12 44, 1 44, 2 44, 3 44, 4 44, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m, 12 44 night.

For Pottsville, Sunbury and Williamsport 4 17, 5 25 a m, 12 44 p m. Sunday—4 17 a m, 12 44 p m.

For Baltimore and Washington—9 44, 11 44 a m, 12 44, 1 44 p m. Sunday—9 44 a m, 12 44 p m.

For Trenton—1 17, 5 25, 7 12, 7 44, 8 25, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 a m, 12 44, 1 44, 2 44, 3 44, 4 44, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m, 12 44 night. Sunday—7 12, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 a m, 12 44, 1 44, 2 44, 3 44, 4 44, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m, 12 44 night.

For Bound Brook—5 55, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 a m, 12 44, 1 44, 2 44, 3 44, 4 44, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m, 12 44 night. Sunday—9 44, 10 44, 11 44 a m, 12 44, 1 44, 2 44, 3 44, 4 44, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m, 12 44 night.

"Change cars at Bound Brook.

H. P. BALDWIN, Gen'l Manager. M. SUBT, Vice Pres. & Gen. Mgr. Gen Pass Agent

Lehigh Valley Railroad

Time Table in Effect Nov. 29, 1903

LEAVE SOUTH PLAINFIELD,

COMMON COUNCIL PURCHASES CREMATORY

By Vote of Seven to Two City Fathers Decide to Pay $2,100 for the Plant.

HAD MUCH TO CONSIDER

TO HOLD IT UNTIL EMPOWERED BY LAW TO INAUGURATE SYSTEM.

Councilmen Lee and Murphy Vote Against Proposition—Lee Voices Sentiment of His Constituents —Murphy's Reason.

Although it is impossible at present for the Common Council to adopt a municipal system of garbage collection, steps toward that improvement were taken at the May meeting, held Monday. It was decided by a vote of seven to two to purchase the crematory plant on DeKalb avenue, formerly owned by the old Plainfield Sanitary Company, and now the property of James F. Buckle. Mr. Glosk offered a resolution to that effect, the purchase price being $2,100, and Councilmen Tolles, Bullock, Daniel, Glosk, Higham, Randolph and Tyler supported the resolution, while Councilmen Lee and Murphy voted in the negative.

It required nearly two hours' time to arrive at this conclusion, the Council being in executive session that long, but when the members returned to the regular session, every one except Mr. Daniel had a few words to say in explaining his vote.

Mr. Murphy stated that he was opposed to the purchase of the plant at present, believing such action to be premature. He said that according to the law the city cannot avail itself of a system of garbage collection or disposal and until this is possible he would vote against purchasing the crematory plant.

Mr. Lee, in explaining his reasons for voting in the negative, said that he did so because the residents in the vicinity of the plant are opposed to it and don't want it operated. However, if the plant is successfully operated, he said he would vote for its continuance.

Mr. Randolph took the stand that if the plant proves objectionable he would vote to put a stop to the nuisance. Mr. Tyler said that while at present there is no way to secure Legislative enactment giving the city the right to take advantage of this plant, it is the hope of the Council that through such action later on such a thing will be possible and the city hopes to have a good method of disposing of its garbage. He considered the action of purchasing the plant Mr. Bullock expressed the opinion that the property is very cheap and for that reason he intended voting for the resolution. Mr. Glosk said he favored the purchase of the property, believing that there is no more suitable place in the city for the disposition of garbage. He had given the matter much consideration and thought it time to act.

Mr. Higham said that while a majority of the people in the vicinity of DeKalb avenue opposed the operation of the crematory he believed that their petition should have as much weight as the one presented some time ago against the location of a saloon in that vicinity. He believed that the residents in that part of the town were able to judge whether the plant would be a nuisance and they should be listened to. The garbage question he said is an important one and he realized that the property in question could be purchased at a bargain. He then advocated the resolution on the ground that if F. G. Smith, the owner of this system of garbage disposal, guarantees to make the plant work successfully, he could see no reason why he should vote against the proposition.

President Tolles referred to the fact that the property is a cheap one and he felt sure that its operation would not be objectionable to the residents.

The vote was then taken with the result as stated. According to the resolution, the city is to pay $2,100 for the property. There will be an issue of three bonds of $700 denomination each, dated May 2, 1904 and bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. The Council will advertise the bonds for sale and July 5, 1904, has been fixed as the time when sealed proposals will be opened for the same. The interest money is to be raised in the usual manner through the collection of taxes.

Mr. Daniel moved that the street committee be empowered to arrange for the proper examination of the title to the property before the city acquires it.

Mrs J. A. Powlison, of the borough, has recovered from a long and tedious illness.

James Conley, of Easton, Pa., visited Miss Annie Flynn, of West Third street, Sunday.

PARSIFAL DESCRIBED BY A LOCAL PASTOR

Rev. C. E. Herring Chooses Wagner's Opera As a Subject for a Sermon.

INTERESTINGLY TOLD

DIVERSE OPINIONS OF GREAT MEN ON THE WORK.

Large Audience Gathered in First Presbyterian Church Despite Threatening Weather—Treated In An Impartial Way.

In spite of the threatening weather a considerable congregation gathered in the First Presbyterian church Sunday, attracted by the announcement of the pastor's subject, "Parsifal."

Rev. Mr. Herring cited opinions of a number of men of letters as to the claim Parsifal has to rank as Wagner's masterpiece. Characterized by Nordau as an almost conclusive evidence of degeneracy, upheld by others as inspiring and uplifting to the highest degree, the work has been the subject of more debate than all the other operas of Wagner combined.

Wagner's original conception of the work, that of depicting in an opera the purity and self-abnegation of Christ, his steadfastness and unswerving service or the salvation of others and the repentance and devotion of the Magdalen, was, upon the advice of friends, reconsidered, a reconsideration which lasted for ten years. During those years other operas, those of the Ring and Lohengrin also were written.

Finally the varied knowledge of religious which the great composer possessed suggested the combination of certain features of the Buddhistic allegory of the conquest of self, with portions of the thirteenth century Christian legend of the Holy Grail.

The innocence of Parsifal has its parallel, said Mr. Herring, in that negative righteousness which although it does no potential wrong, does not count for anything on either side until the humanizing touch of grief has kindled the desire to be of use to our fellows.

The vision of Christ which greeted the eyes of Parsifal as he experienced his awakening, was a manifestation of the force which tends to elevate the soul, a force which only needs our personal co-operation to enable it to conquer the evil force which desires our destruction.

Mr. Herring went on to describe how Parsifal went forth in his newfound strength, and spent many years in successful conflict with evil; returning finally to heal Amfortas' wound and become his successor as custodian of the Grail. This intervening struggle was compared by the preacher to the development from innocence through righteousness to perfection, which is the lot of those who, deferring the consummation of their original designs in favor of their present opportunities for usefulness find themselves at the last stronger and more able by far than they had ever expected.

The tendency to become like one's ideals was exemplified, said Mr. Herring, in the changed appearance of Parsifal at his return. The features bore a strong resemblance to Leonardo Da Vinci's Christ; indicating the effect of long-continued contemplation of an ideal.

That Wagner never gave up entirely his original intention of representing Christ and the Magdalen is witnessed in the scene where the repentant Kundry, at the castle of the Grail kneels before Parsifal, wipes his feet upon the hair of her head. The names, to be sure, are different but the scene which is the same, forms the only jarring note in the whole wonderful story.

Stillman Building Committee.

The entire supervision of the construction of Stillman's new building on Madison avenue, has been left in charge of F. J. Hubbard, civil engineer; T. O. Doane, building inspector and E. V. French, architect. Nothing will be left undone in making the structure modern in every respect.

No better work than that done by Herman Hansen, carpenter and builder, of Regent street, is possible in his line.

TenEyck & Harris, the coal dealers, are ready to supply you with the best quality of anthracite coal at the lowest market prices.

Flowers are at their best now, and so is flower raising. Get potted plants of C. L. Stanley, of North avenue, and enjoy the pleasure of raising blooms.

What good is ice cream unless it be pure? Be sure that you are not taxing your stomach when you eat cream by eating none but John H. Tier's. It is the very best.

WESTFIELD FOUND CHATHAM NO CINCH

Denmen's Men Were Compelled to Struggle Hard to Defeat Their Opponents.

A FINE EXHIBITION

SCORE WAS THREE TO TWO IN FAVOR OF HOME TEAM.

Hot Contest Waged and Lively Scenes on the Diamond—Few Errors Made During the Game—The Lineups.

Mainly through a balloon trip, managed, conducted and enjoyed by Mr. Speir, Westfield took the decision away from Chatham Saturday afternoon. It only lasted two innings, but the Westfields found it time enough to call three full-grown runs, just one more than the Chathams could coax from the store-house.

There were other reasons besides the pitcher's wildness for the merry-go-round, an error or two and a steam-heated gabfest contributing their mite. The torpedoes were loosed in the second. Barry hit safely, and went through the open door to second. Rothfuss mishandled the ball after Hickman's hit and Barry shifted to third, Hickman landing on first. Speir hit Burke and filled the bases. Then Speir dropped an easy one from his airship and Goldberg sent it on its way. Barry came back to the old home once more, and Hickman smiled hopefully from the third perch. Then Hickman quietly folded up his smile and stole for home.

The umpire said he got there before the ball. Chatham immediately kicked the dogs of war and the bowling that ensued was a lovely mess of discord and rage. They didn't give Umpire Cullum a chance to call time, and Burke galloped home. And when the noise of battle died away and Chatham went out to try again, the three runs were stuck fast to the score.

Burke started another tempest by jollying the umpire. Something he said set the side retired angered Cullum, and the latter threw down his mask and refused to go on unless somebody was substituted for the airy Burke. But the diplomatic Denman quieted the storm, and the game went on.

And it went on in proper style. From that juncture straight through to the last throw, the contest was as pretty a one as the crowd could wish. Speir settled down and handed out trouble and perplexity to the Westfield batters in large quantities. Waller was in his regular form, and the game speedily revolved itself into a pitcher's battle in which the honors were evenly divided

Each man only allowed four hits. Waller struck out seven men, and Speir blanked five. The Selding was snappy on both sides. Chatham only made the one error in the second, and Westfield made two errors They were costly, however.

It was in the lucky seventh that Chatham dodged the whitewash brush. Adams hit through shortstop and third, and reached second on Carey's error. Rothfuss sacrificed him to third, and sent him home with a long drive to left field.

Westlake reached second on a passed ball by Burke, and another pass sent him in to third. Curley fouled out to Burke. Warren landed for a half-grown hit that was gathered in by Barry, who threw to Carey. The latter slapped the ball on the wrist that Westlake's stand still, and Westlake carried home the second run. Speir struck out, and Waller and the rest of the Westfielders ran a successful blockade for the remaining two innings.

Batting order and summary:

Westfield—Goldberg, lf; Burch, 3b; Mallen, cf; Lenord, ss; Carey, 1b; Barry, 3b. Hickman, rf; Burke, c; Waller, p. Rothfuss, 1b; Westlake, c; Curley, ss; Warren, 3b; W Speir, lf; Brophey, rf; Wagner, cf; C. Speir, f.
								R	H	E
Chatham . .	0	0	0	0	0	2	0	0	2	4
Westfield . .	0	3	0	0	0	0	0	x	3	4

First base on balls—Off Speir, 3. Left on bases—Westfield, 7; Chatham, 2. Struck out—By Waller, 7; Speir, 5. Double play—Lenord to Carey. First base on errors—Warren. Hit by Speir—Burke, Mallen, Goldberg. Umpire—Mr. Cullum.

William Cook, formerly of this city, but now of Bridgeport, Conn., is visiting relatives and friends in town.

John Carney, of Bayonne, has returned home after a visit to his grandmother, Mrs. Jacob Voehl, of Somerset street.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles French, of New York, have been guests of E. H. Clevely, of North avenue.

Miss Delia Voehl, of Somerset street, has recovered from a several days' illness with grip.

HAUL OF $1,500 AT WESTFIELD STATION

The Central Railroad's Ticket Office Robbed While Agent is Away From His Post.

SEVERAL SUSPECTS

THIEVES GAIN ENTRANCE THROUGH A WINDOW.

Detectives at Work on the Case—Carrigg, the Agent, Only on Duty at Westfield for Two Weeks.

While the agent was eating lunch in a restaurant, thieves broke into the Westfield station of the Central Railroad shortly after midnight Saturday and stole $1,500. The robbery was done cleanly, the thieves getting away without being seen or leaving the slightest clue upon which the police can work.

Saturday afternoon and evening most of the commuters bought their tickets for May, increasing the usual balance at the station by $1,200 or more. It is supposed that the thieves knew of this fact, and timed their raid accordingly.

Daniel F. Carrigg, twenty-three years old, is the agent. He left the station, he says, at 12 o'clock, to get some lunch. He thinks the chief disposed wired him permission to do so. When he returned a half hour later every drawer in the office was wide open and all the money was missing.

Entrance had been gained by the robbers through an outside window. This was unbarred and had yielded readily to force. It is supposed two or more men were in the gang, and that they had been posted near the office to watch for a favorable moment. The agent's departure gave them the chance looked for. They worked swiftly, and must have had all the money within reach inside of ten minutes.

The best detectives in the railroad service are on the case and every possible effort will be made to track the robbers down. So much familiarity was shown with the workings of the office and the habits of the agent that it is believed local men did the trick.

While the police will not acknowledge that they have anything in the way of a clue to work on, it is known that several suspects are under surveillance. Arrests are probable within a day or two.

Carrigg, the agent, has only been on duty at Westfield for two weeks. He came there from Trenton Junction, where he had been employed as agent for two years. He succeeded J. D. Duffy, who was discharged.

THE FAIR AT ST. LOUIS.

A Glorious Triumph of American Progress.

Every true American is interested in the vast Exposition which has just been opened to the public gaze at St. Louis. It is grand in conception, superb in detail and no branch of science, art or industry has been overlooked in the allotment of space for the proper exhibition of the progress which they severally have made.

Likewise amusements are a prominent feature of the Fair, and all that is best and most wholesome have been included. The buildings are beautiful in design and mammoth in proportion, while the landscape surroundings are elaborate and fully in keeping with the architectural monuments, for the buildings can be called nothing else. No other Exposition can compare from the stand-point of scope or vastness, and a visit to the St. Louis Fair is nothing short of a great educational treat.

The New Jersey Central in connection with the Royal Blue Line has an illustrated booklet which will be sent to any address upon application, and for rates and like information drop a postal to Gen'l Passenger Dep't, Division H. O. R. R. of N. J., New York city.

Permit for Nurses' Home.

Building Inspector Doane issued the formal permit for the erection of the Nurses' Home to the Board of Governors of the hospital yesterday. B. Y. Tallamy & Bro. have the mason work contract and C. M. Wilcox is the carpenter. The structure is down on the permit as 97x97x34 in measurement.

Miss Randolph Engaged.

Invitations have been issued to the wedding of Miss Bessy Fitz Randolph, daughter of Nathan Randolph, of Belleview avenue, and Hobart B. Ayers, of Allegheny, Pa., to be celebrated at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, Thursday evening, May 12, at 7:30 o'clock.

Miss Annie Flynn, of West Third street, has been entertaining Miss Florence O'Neil, of Junction.

Miss Mattie Merrill, formerly of this city, but now of Newark, has been visiting friends in town.

SCHOOL BOARD SITE IS AGAIN SUBMITTED

Borough Board of Education Arranges to Have the North Plainfielders Vote on It.

ON GROVE STREET

LOT WILL COST ONLY SIX HUNDRED DOLLARS IT IS SAID.

Cost of Building Will be $18,400—Action to be Taken on the Question on Monday, May 16.

Another opportunity to vote on the question of a new school house will be given the borough citizens. At a special executive session Saturday night the Board of Education decided to submit the question at a public meeting to be held Monday evening, May 16.

Land lying on Grove street will be submitted as the site. After careful and wholly unbiased consideration, the Board has decided that the location picked is the most desirable for the proposed school among the several that were offered.

The lot is 200 feet in extent, and lies in the middle of the west side of Grove street, beyond Walnut street. It is conveniently located for the children of the Fridayville section, Walnut street running right through the west end of the borough. Children from the other direction will not have far to go. The lot belongs to the McLaughlin heirs, of whom John McLoughlin is representative.

It is proposed to put up a four room, frame structure. The lot will cost $600 and the building will probably require $18,400. The total $14,000, is what the Board will ask of the people.

In the building proposed there is no more accommodation than the Board can use just as soon as school opens next fall after the long vacation. The structure will be filled immediately. It is not the aim of the Board to plan for future growth in the proposed building. Another new school will be needed not long after the one talked of goes into commission, and some site on the other side of Somerset street will have to be secured.

There is scarcely any doubt that the proposition will be carried. All the elements of opposition that figured in the recent defeat of the plan have said that the submission of a proper site would win their approval, and the location offered is believed to be plainly the best that can be secured.

PHILIP VOORHEES' FUNERAL

TWO MINISTERS OFFICIATE AT THE OBSEQUIES.

Phillip Voorhees was buried yesterday afternoon. The funeral was largely attended by employes of the Public Service Corporation, for which Voorhees worked as motorman.

The main service was held at the dead man's home on Randolph road, at 1 o'clock. It was conducted by Rev. Mr. Updyke, of Martinville, assisted by Rev. Robert Love. Mrs. John Mauley sang "My Name Be Written." The body was taken to Springdale for burial. A short service was held in the Springdale church, at which Mrs. Mauley sang "Some Day We'll Understand" and "Lead Kindly Light."

There was a large display of flowers. They included a trolley design from the motormen, and pillows from the Foresters and the Junior Mechanics. The bearers were two trolley men, two Foresters and two Juniors.

—Justice Mosher is suffering with a heavy cold.

MARRIED.

BROKAW—VANARSDALE—On April 30, 1904, at the residence of the Misses Elliott, 324 Madison avenue, by the Rev. Garret Milton Conover, of West Nyack, N. Y., Anna Kirkpatrick VanArsdale, daughter of the late John K. VanArsdale, to Clarence Bowne Brokaw, of New York City.

DIED.

CARNEY—In this city, April 26, 1904, John M. Carney, in his 50th year.

PENNINGTON—On Thursday, April 28, 1904, Mary L., widow of Cornelius Pennington, aged 63 years, 5 months, 12 days.

BROUWER—On Thursday, April 28, 1904, Aaron Bee, son of the late Samuel and Sarah Brouwer, aged 41 years, 3 months, 24 days.

COFFEY—In this city, Friday, April 29, 1904, Mrs. Bridget Coffey, wife of Thomas Coffey.

WARREN—At his late residence, 229 Madison avenue, Plainfield, N. J., on Friday, April 29, 1904, Lewis Warren, eldest son of the late General George A. Warren, of Saco, Maine.

CONROY—At North Plainfield, N. J., May 1, 1904, Lillian May Conroy, age 24 years, 6 months, 3 days.

VOORHEES—In this city, Sunday, May 1, 1904, Philip G. Voorhees, age 57 years, 1 month and 26 days.

HOAGLAND—At Scotch Plains, May 2, 1904, Catherine M., widow of the late Cornelius S. Hoagland, in her eighty-first year.

COLD WATER WEDDING IN TEMPERANCE HALL

Fellow Members Witness the Marriage of Couple Belonging to Sons of Temperance.

IN HOWELL DIVISION

MISS IDA MAY BAUER AND PIERRE MOORE WED.

Rev. Mr. Leggett Officiates—Healths are Drunk with Coffee and Lemonade—A Merry Time.

Hymen would have none of Bacchus at the wedding of Pierre H. Moore and Miss Ida May Bauer Monday. The marriage was a Sons of Temperance affair in every feature, and the wine cup, no matter how surcharged with joy and celebration, would not have been allowed even a peep in at the festivities.

Bride and groom are prominent workers in the temperance cause, and fellow members of Howell Division, Sons of Temperance. The ceremony was performed in Sons of Temperance Hall, on East Second street, in the presence of a large gathering of temperance workers.

All the members of Howell Division were in attendance, as special guests. Grand Worthy Patriarch Compton, of Metuchen, was there as the representative of the order in the State. Large delegations were present from Americus Division, of Metuchen; Roselle Division, of Roselle, and Lincoln Division, of Elizabeth.

The hall was elaborately decorated with flags and buntings. The festal character of the occasion was further emphasized by a long, cloth covered table, where the wedding supper was served.

At 9 o'clock the bridal party ranged themselves before the patriarch's chair, marching down the hall to the strains of the Mendelssohn wedding march, played on the organ by Miss Lydia Edgar. Rev. Lester Leggett, the retiring pastor of the Third Street chapel, performed the ceremony.

The bride was gowned in cream-colored silk, and carried a trailing bouquet of roses. She was attended by Miss Try Mattox, who was dressed in lavelle. William Penwell was best man.

After the ceremony the temperance workers crowded about the couple to shower them with congratulations. When the handshaking and kissing had ceased a wedding supper, tendered by the Division, was served. The guests were confined to Sons of Temperance members. The toasts were drunk in coffee and lemonade.

The bride is the only daughter of Mrs. Ida Bauer, of North avenue. The groom is in business for himself as a paperhanger and decorator. He is very well known around town, mainly for his trick bicycle riding on an old-fashioned high wheel.

The couple received many handsome gifts. They will reside on North avenue.

MISS GIDDIS DEAD.

Young Woman Succumbs to Pneumonia at Brother-in-Law's Home.

Miss Addie Giddis, daughter of Abram Giddis, of Harris Lane, twenty-four years old, died from pneumonia at the home of her brother-in-law, Alonzo Giddis, yesterday afternoon. The funeral will be held from her father's residence on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Another service will be held in the Bound Brook M. E. church later.

Coal for the Schools.

C. H. Rugg has been awarded the contract to supply coal to the schools of the city next year. More than 500 tons will be required, of all sizes, ranging from nut to egg. Deliveries have not been decided upon, but they will probably begin next month.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY

TO HARRIET MARTIN.

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery, of New Jersey, made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein Thomas C. Weet is complainant and you and others are defendants, you are required to file your plea, answer or demur to the bill of complaint of said complainant, on or before the 28th day of May next, or the matter of said bill will be taken as confessed against you. The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage given by William M. Stillman and Arthur A. Stryker her husband to the said complainant, dated January 15, 1900, on lands in the city of Plainfield, New Jersey, and you are made a party defendant because therein are you the said Harriet Martin; George R. Cobb and Mrs. George R. Cobb, his wife, William Stillman, your husband and Harriet Martin are made a party defendant because you are the owner of or claim some interest in the premises.

Respectfully yours,
WILLIAM M. STILLMAN,
Solicitor for complainant,
128 West Front Street, Plainfield, N. J.

Dated April 4, 1904. 4t

Notice of Copyright Renewal, Class C. XXC No. 6226. Notice is hereby given that Conover Wilson, of Plainfield, New Jersey, has deposited in this office, the title of two musical compositions, viz: Robert Lowry, the "Morning Radiant," and "The Anchored Soul." These in renewal for 14 years from February 18, 1904, and March 29, 1904. The right whereof the claims as proprietor in conformity with the laws of the United States respecting copyrights. Herbert Putnam, Librarian of Congress. By Thorwald Solberg, Register of Copyrights. 4t4 6

Sanitary Plumbing

Brick and Portable Furnace Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing, Etc., Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Plumbers Association of New York City, I employ none but first class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business, at all times and in cases.

D. W. LITTELL,

No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Handbook on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

NEW IN EVERY DETAIL!

My new barber shop at

143 NORTH AVE.

is now open ready for business. All the latest appointments in the tonsorial line.

EDWIN B. MAYNARD.

CARNEY BROS.,

MADISON AVENUE,

Between Front and Second streets.

Tinners,
Plumbers
Gas Fitters,

Grates and bricks for all kinds of stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your tinware mending to us. The best tinners, the best plumbers, and the best gas-fitters in this section to use now but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction. Keys of all kinds are made here. Tinware made to order. Ranges, brick and portable furnaces. Sanitary plumbing.

DIME

Savings Institution,

Of Plainfield, N. J.,

Is now receiving deposits with interest, allowed on all sums from $5 to $3,000.

J. Frank Hubbard, President.
Wm. F. Arnold, } Vice-Pres
Jeremiah Manning, }
J. C. Pope, Sec'y and Treas.

Money deposited on or before January tenth will draw interest from the first.

Guaranteed Salary $900 YEARLY.

Men and women of good address to represent us, some to travel, appointing agents, others for local work looking after our interests. $900 salary guaranteed yearly; extra commissions and expenses, rapid advancement, old established house. Grand chance for earnest man or woman to secure pleasant, permanent position, liberal income and success. Never, brilliant line. Write at once,

STAFFORD PRESS,
23 Church St., New Haven, Conn.

W. B. CODINGTON,

Counsellor-at-Law

Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery, Notary Public. Offices Corner of Park avenue and Second street.

ALBERT HEDDEN

Livery & Boarding Stables

FOURTH ST.,

between Watchung and Park avenues. First-class Livery. Horses boarded by week or month. Telephone call No. 114.

Wm. A. Woodruff

Fire and Life

INSURANCE AGENT,

OFFICE,

corner Front St. and Park Avenue,

Plainfield, N. J.

BABY CAMP NEEDS SOME IMPROVEMENTS

Institution Conducted by City Union of K. D., Can Spend $2,000 to Advantage.

SEASON APPROACHES

TO BE OPENED DURING EARLY PART OF JUNE.

Estimated Cost of Running the Camp — Mrs. DeLany, the Matron, to be in Charge Again.

The baby camp on the mountain-side, under the auspices of the City Union of King's Daughters, will be opened during the early part of June. Many improvements have been made in the camp for the coming season. The institution will be run on the same plan during the coming season as in former years and it is estimated that more than 125 children will be cared for during the summer months.

It is stated that it will be necessary to erect a laundry, separate from the main building, early this spring. Roughly estimating it is thought that about $2,000 will be required to put the camp in full working order for the coming season. Mrs. DeLany and her daughter will again be placed in charge.

The camp last year was ready for occupancy early in June, but because of the prevailing cold weather it was not formally opened until June 6, and on July 10 a public inspection was invited. It was in charge of Mrs. DeLany, who acted in the capacity of matron, and her daughter, Miss Olive DeLany, the city nurse. The work done last season was considered encouraging and the children, receiving the best of personal care and attention, in most cases improved wonderfully, both physically and mentally. Several cases of this improvement are sighted by local promoters of the institution, one of which is that of three little children who, before making a visit to the camp, were physical wrecks as the result of ill health, but during the past winter, under Miss DeLany's personal supervision, have been entirely free from sickness. Many more instances have come to the notice of the directors, who are doing their utmost to improve the condition of the poor little ones of the city.

This season two partitions to the old building have been erected: on one side of the house a new kitchen has been built and the old kitchen converted into a dining room; a room for the matron has also been added, the porch enlarged and an additional dormitory, also eighteen by eighteen, erected. The total cost for these improvements amounts to $584.52.

The total cost of running the camp last season, including salaries, dry groceries, transportation, etc., amounted to $630.80. The expenses were greatly lessened last year as the tradespeople of the city, being deeply interested in the movement, furnished supplies at a large discount and in many instances provided them free of charge. The various circles of the King's Daughters supplied vegetables, etc. The larger circles supplying them for two weeks at a time, and the smaller ones for one week.

PILGRIMAGE TO CALIFORNIA

PLAINFIELDERS WHO WILL JOURNEY TO KNIGHTS TEMPLAR CONCLAVE.

Among those from this city who anticipate the proposed grand pilgrimage of the Knights Templar of New Jersey to the Pacific Coast and the Yosemite Valley, August 22 to September 19, on the occasion of the triennial conclave of the Grand Encampment of Knights Templar of the United States, are Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Kirkner, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Woolston and Dr. and Mrs. D. C. Adams. Undoubtedly others from Plainfield will arrange to go on the trip which will be under the direction of the personally conducted tourist system of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

P. S. C. Orders Survey.

H. C. VanEmburgh, civil engineer, yesterday received instructions from the Public Service Corporation to proceed with the survey of a route along Woodland avenue, being the extension of the Arlington avenue line, to Oak Tree and then on private right of way to connect with the Metuchen line. This would indicate that the new line will be constructed in the near future

An Old Nurse of Forty Years Experience.

Talking about use of wine in sickness said she never used a wine that had such a pleasing and beneficial effect on her patients as that made by Mr. Alfred Speer, of Passaic, N. J.

2D REGIMENT'S FIELD DAY

THE DATE PROPOSED FOR MANEUVERS IS SATURDAY, MAY 26.

Although no official orders have been issued, the Second Regiment, to which Co. K, of this city, belongs, will probably have a field day in Trenton on Saturday, May 26. The matter is now under the consideration of the officers of the regiment, but no definite arrangements have been made as yet.

The field day will in all probability be held in one of the large vacant lots on Greenwood avenue near the fair grounds, where the regiment formed for military maneuvers several years ago.

It is likely that close and extended order drill will be taken up and the guardsmen put through strict and difficult maneuvers, practically in the latter formation, so as to prepare the men for the annual encampment at Sea Girt this summer.

The new khaki uniforms will have arrived by the proposed date of formation.

REALTY CONVEYANCES.

Transfers of Plainfield Real Estate as Recorded in the County Clerk's Office at Elizabeth.

These real estate transfers have been recorded in the County Clerk's office, Elizabeth:

Mary Meehan to John A. Lefferts, westerly side Johnston avenue, 75 feet northerly of Midway avenue, $1; John A. Lefferts to Mary Meehan, westerly side Johnston avenue, 170 feet southerly of East Second street, $300; Charles T. Bingham to Rosie S. Park, northwesterly side of East Sixth street, 250 feet northeasterly of Monroe avenue, $5,500; James B. Totten et ux. to Julia A. Harding, John street, 302 feet southeasterly of West Fourth street, $1; William Birrell to Richard B. VanArsdale, lot 7, block 1, "Map of C. Elmer Gulick," $500; same to Jesse T. Burdick, northerly side Woodbine avenue, 538 feet westerly of Park avenue, $1; Charles H. Hand to Andrew C. Krog, northerly side East Sixth street, 40 feet northeasterly of Berkman street, $2,400; Plainfield Real Estate Co., to Israel Goodu, lot 16, block 1, "Map of Plainfield Real Estate Co.," $400; George N. Fenno et al, to Mary E. Sutton, easterly side Tenth street, 200 feet southerly of Putnam avenue, $1; same to same, same as above, $1; Emma L. Cooley, et al, to Alice S. Brown et al., southeasterly side Ninth street, corner Arlington avenue, $100; Alice S. Brown et al, to Elizabeth W. Janke, same as above, $1; Charles A. Reed et ux. to William R. Codington, road to Samptown, corner John Grants, $435; Frederick H. Wallace et ux. to Frank Hanlenbeck, northerly side Midway avenue, 227 feet of Johnson avenue, $82; Charles T. Bingham to Rosie S. Park, northwesterly side Sixth street, 250 feet northeasterly of Monroe avenue, $1; Eliza T. Brown to John Cathcart, easterly side Belvidere avenue, corner Berkley avenue, $10,500.

Ed Harding, boss painter at the Pond Machine Tool Company's plant, is still confined to his home by illness.

Nick Nickerson, of the Potter plant, is on the sick list.

SPEER'S
PORT GRAPE WINE
ALSO
OLD BURGUNDY WINE
And ★★★ Climax Brandy.

SPEER'S PORT GRAPE WINE
NINE YEARS OLD.

THIS CELEBRATED WINE is the pure juice of the Grape, ripened by the sun in our own vineyards, and left hanging until they shrink and partly raisin before gathering. It is invaluable

As a Tonic and Strengthener.

Our properties are unsurpassed by any other wines in the world, being produced under Mr. Speer's personal supervision, and his pure wines and brandies of family medicinal purposes are guaranteed by the Federal Government and Board of Health, who have examined it. It is particularly beneficial to the aged, debilitated and convalescent. In every respect it is A WINE TO BE RELIED ON.

Be sure that the signature of Alfred Speer, Passaic, N. J., is over the cork of each bottle.)

Speer's (Socialite) Claret

Is held in high estimation for its richness as a Dry Table Wine. Highly recommended for dinner use.

Speer's P. J. Sherry

Is a wine of Superior Character and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is made.

Speer's ★★★ Climax Brandy

IS A PURE distillation of the grape, and stands unsurpassed in this country for richness, flavor, and age, and equal in every respect to the high price Old Cognac Brandies of France, from which it cannot be distinguished.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS AND GROCERS WHO KEEP FIRST CLASS WINES.

OWNED BY THE NAVY,

Wireless Telegraph Station at North Truro, Mass.

Situated on a High, Bleak Bluff Which Rises in a Sheer Ascent of 160 Feet from the Storm-Tossed Beach.

On the outer sea coast line where stretches the bended arm of Massachusetts barrier into the broad Atlantic, at Highland light, Cape Cod, has just been established a wireless telegraph plant by the United States navy department.

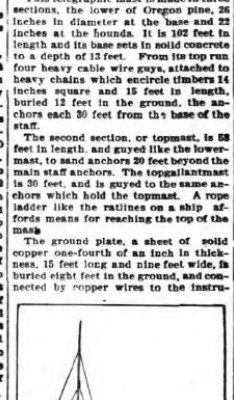
The station at this point is located on the northern extremity of the lighthouse reservation and within less than 100 feet of the marine signal station of the Boston chamber of commerce. The blue clay bluff here rises in sheer and almost perpendicular ascent from the beach 160 feet and the waves thunder at its base when the gale lashes them into fury.

The Boston Globe says that on this storm-swept cliff rises, 190 feet from the ground, a huge staff, and at its utmost top, from a small projecting arm, pointing heaven-ward, swings the wire which is to catch the electric spark sent out from some passing ship and transmit it to the instruments in the office of the operator. A man standing at the top of this high staff looks down on the sea washing the sandy shore 320 feet below.

This telegraphic mast is made in three sections, the lower of Oregon pine, 25 inches in diameter at the base and 22 inches at the bounds. It is 102 feet in length and its base rests in solid concrete to a depth of 12 feet. From its top run four heavy cable wire guys, attached to heavy chains which encircle timbers 14 inches square and 15 feet in length, buried 12 feet in the ground, the anchors each 30 feet from the base of the staff.

The second section, or topmast, is 58 feet in length and guyed like the lowermast, to sand anchors 20 feet beyond the mast staff anchors. The topgallantmast is 30 feet, and is guyed to the same anchors which hold the topmast. A rope ladder like the rattlines on a ship affords means for reaching the top of the mast.

The ground plate, a sheet of solid copper one-fourth of an inch in thickness, 15 feet long and nine feet wide, is buried eight feet in the ground, and connected by copper wires to the instruments in the operating room of the electricians' dwelling, a story and a half wooden structure, sheathed throughout the interior with pine, and a substantial, warm and comfortable building. Everything is now ready except the installation of the instruments, dynamos and batteries, and their arrival is expected in a few days.



TRURO WIRELESS STATION.
(Located on Rocky, High Bluff Off Massachusetts Coast.)

Chief Electrician J. D. Donnell is in charge of the station, and, with his wife, is finding the place comfortable as could be expected in these unusually severe days of wind and cold.

The system to be used, and the one adopted by the government for all its stations, is the Slaby-Arco, the invention of a German, and materially different from the Marconi method in many respects. Mr. Donnell, who was for a time at the Charlestown navy yard, was able to pick up the cruiser Topeka by the wireless on her visit to Boston some weeks ago, and opened successful communication with her when she was 36 miles out. It is claimed that 75 miles have been easily covered, and that when the station and ships get fully tuned up more than double that distance can be covered.

It is anticipated that eventually it will be possible to reach from one station to another around the entire chain of coastwise statigns, and to reach ships at sea anywhere within a radius of 200 miles. It is proposed by the government to establish a chain of stations extending from the coast of Maine to the Gulf of Mexico, to Porto Rico, and along the entire coast line of the Pacific to Alaska.

These stations in most instances would not be over 200 miles apart, and it is thought it will be possible to reach from one station to the other along the entire Atlantic coast across the isthmus of Panama and up the Pacific line to the northern boundaries of this country.

Although several severe gales have prevailed since the staff here was erected last October, it stands firm and secure. The grounds upon which both the lighthouse and wireless station stand was originally a plot of ten acres, but now less than five acres remain, the balance having washed into the sea. The average wasting away of the cliffs at this point is nearly two feet yearly, and in 25 years the station's plant, and 35 years the lighthouse will be in danger of falling into the sea.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

Public Library Notes.
Items of Library News.

The Reading Room. The new periodicals added this year by subscriptions are The London Graphic, Musical Times and Punch, these added by gift are The Spirit of Missions, from Miss Mary and Miss Florence Tweedy, Living Church from the Rev. T. Logan Murphy and Over Sea and Land from Miss F. B. Clark. The library is now receiving over 140 periodicals, as many as space will permit are displayed in the open racks, others may be had at the desk.

W. D. W. Miller has lent to the library an old paper of very great interest. It is a copy of the Virginia Herald, published at Fredericksburg in 1815, which Major Miller found in an old house at Culpeper, Va., during the Civil War. It will be recalled that this was at the time of Napoleon's return from Elba, and the head lines proclaim the fact as follows: "Late from France. Astonishing Revolution. Louis XVIII Dethroned, Bonaparte's Return to Paris and, in Quiet Possession of France." There is also a vivid description of Napoleon reviewing the Paris troops. Of great interest is the announcement from New York that "The first squadron destined for the Mediterranean to act against Algiers, is now assembled in this port, and only awaits a favorable wind to put to sea. It is commanded by Com. Decatur, who has hoisted his broad pendant on board the frigate "Guerriere." This paper has been placed under glass and bags in the reading room.

The Library. Recent gifts have been as follows: From A. V. D. Honeyman, The Yearbook of the Holland Society for the years 1901-1903, and his own valuable work on Justice of the peace, From Mason W. Tyler, the Report of the National conference of charities, 1903, a mine of information for all charity workers. Mrs. R. W. Ware, of Second place, has presented 10 volumes. From J. Evarts Tracy, The American patent system, Proceedings and addresses at Centennial celebration, 1891. From E. C. Pearson, Clement's Modern Japan, Ewell's Essentials of the law, 12 volumes of the Central Reporter, six of the New England Reporter, and 14 of the Western Reporter. R. B. Swackhamer has presented the Manual of the 138th Legislature of New Jersey. and F. W. Runyon the News' history of Passaic, 1899.

Figures show that the work of the Library, in all lines, is steadily increasing. In the year past 2,641 books have been added, an average of 220 a month, the total number now being 26,978. The circulation shows steady increase, more books having been circulated in March of this year than ever before in one month, and it is significant that the class of books circulated is averaging considerably higher than formerly. The record for the fiscal year showed a circulation of 45,683, with a fiction percentage of 49. Figures point to a very considerable increase for the library year ending with May, 1904.

The World's work has been added to the circulating periodicals, the gift of E. C. Pearson. The Library now circulates the Atlantic, Century, Harper's, Ladies' Home Journal, McClure's, St. Nicholas, Scribner's and World's work.

Through the courtesy of the proprietors of the following factories, the Aluminum Press Co., Campbell Printing Press Co., The Pedrick-Ayer Co., Potter Printing Press Co., and the Scott Press Co., the Library is enabled to place Library bulletins where they will be seen by the operatives. An American series has been begun. The plan of this series is to list only the books on the subject best for the general reader. The first deals with general books in United States history, others are to follow on The Colonial period, Revolution, Political institutions, etc. A few words are given as to the scope, merits, etc., of each book. Anyone reading one or two books from each number in this series cannot fail to obtain a clear idea of both the history and institutions of this country.

A few copies of a list made by request of books on practical Carpentry remain, and will be given to anyone interested.

From the Library of the late Andrew D. Mellick, valuable books on New Jersey and early American history have been added, among others the first volume of the periodical entitled "Our Home," edited by A. V. D. Honeyman, published at Somerville in 1873, Ramsey's History of the American Revolution with the imprint 1811, Murray's Notes concerning Elizabethtown, 1844, Rush's Names of the German inhabitants of Pennsylvania, written in 1789, Wharton's Revolutionary diplomatic correspondence and others of equal interest.

Art Gallery. A. J. Gavett's collection of local birds lent to the Public Library, has been used to advantage by Prof. Scott, in his lecture to the Public School teachers on Nature Study. The teachers have met Mr. Scott at the Art Gallery and special interest has been added to the talk by this carefully arranged collection.

LITERARY.

Among the articles published in the May issue of The Popular Science Monthly are: "The Development of a New Method of Research," by Professor George E. Hale, director of the Yerkes Observatory; "The College of the West," by President David Starr Jordan, Stanford University; "A Question of Preference in English Spelling," by Edwin W. Bowen; "Alumna's Children," by An Alumna; "The Study of Physics," by Professor Frederick E. Beach; "English Herbals," by Agnes Robertson; "The Geology and Geo-botany of Asia," by Prince P. Kropotkin; "The Royal Prussian Academy of Science and the Fine Arts," by Edward F. Williams.

The June Red Book promises to be note-worthy in the fiction it offers to its large circle of readers. Eden Phillpotts contributes one of his dainties stories under the name of "Sad Daisy." The cover design is near Algiers and the illustrations have been made by William Schmedtgen who has brought a wealth of valuable art material out of his travel in Northern Africa. Broughton Brandenberg has written a stirring story of Memorial Day entitled "The Ascendancy of Lafayette Sinks," and Gustavus C Widney illustrates it appreciatively.

The opening chapters of the May Atlantic are made brilliant and entertaining by the first installment of Professor Norton's series of Letter of John Ruskin, illuminated by his own delightful and illustrative comments and explanations. Colonel Higginson continues his recollections with a paper entitled Intensely Human, which contains many salient and pathetic reminiscences of the characteristics of the negro race, more especially of the days before and during the War of the Rebellion.

"Yes," said Gaur, the Bison, "Panther and all his tribe are sneaks. They murdered a Calf of mine. To be sure it was the Wife's Calf, for had it been there at the time I'd have fixed him. She had just lain down to rest for the night, and the Calf was a little to one side, and this evil-spotted thing, Panther of the Red Kind, came sneaking up the wind like a proper Jungle Cat. He knew I was away, for he has the cunning of Cobra, and how was the mother to know that any danger threatened? He stole like a shadow close to the poor little Calf, and with a rush jumped on his back and bit his neck, breaking it, and cutting it so the red blood ran his life all out in a little while."—W. A. Fraser, in the Metropolitan Magazine for May.

McClure's Magazine for May prints a most interesting excerpt from a letter written by President Roosevelt to Rev. Samuel Baker, commenting on his discussion of "Great Labor Conflicts," in that magazine, in which the President defines his attitude toward capital and labor as follows: "I believe in corporations. I believe in trade unions. Both have come to stay and are necessities in our present industrial system. But where in either one or the other there develops corruption or more brutal indifference to the rights of others, and short-sighted refusal to look beyond the moment's gain, then the offender, whether union or corporation, must be fought, and if the public sentiment is callousod to the iniquity of either, by just so much the whole public is managed."

FIRST BAPTIST Y.P.S. ELECTS

N. DOUGLAS DRAKE IS CHOSEN PRESIDENT OF ORGANIZATION.

The re-organized Young People's Society, of the First Baptist church, met last night and elected these officers: President, N. Douglas Drake; vice president, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss; secretary, Miss Ella Mackey; treasurer, Harry Woodland; chairman prayer-meeting committee, Miss Elisabeth Wilson; invitation, Dr. Norman H. Probasco; music, Miss Florence I. Marsh; flower, Miss Florence I. Marsh; social, Miss Velma F. Oakley.

After the election the new constitution was read and adopted and all the members signed their names. There was no other business and a short devotional service was held. The meetings will be held as usual every Friday night and the prayer-meeting committee will soon arrange a series of topics.

Vice President's Name on Notes.

The bank notes now issued by the First National Bank bear the signature of J. A. Smith, vice president, instead of A. J. Brunson, president. This is due to the fact that owing to Mr. Brunson's loss of sight he is unble to affix his name to the legal paper.

HAS QUIT THE DRAMA

Carrie Nation Gives Up the "Legitimate" for Vaudeville.

Entertains Eastern Audiences with a Sketch Called "A Few Moments of Excitement"—"Ten Nights in a Barroom" a Failure.

Carrie Nation is in vaudeville. With her name at the top of a flaring three-sheet poster and a line declaring her to be the "only original Kansas saloon smasher," Mrs. Nation was delighting thousands of people a short time ago in Bridgeport, Conn., where she was the whole company in a sketch entitled "A Few Moments of Excitement."

Mrs. Nation has not, so far as known, arranged to appear in this sketch west of Chicago. It is not even known definitely that she will favor the people of the windy city with a week of her sort of excitement, a bit of managerial astuteness which is giving a novel entertainment, the eastern critics declare, to the patrons of the "ten-cent-third" houses of Connecticut, Rhode Island and New Hampshire. Mrs. Nation's theatrical performances have not been taken seriously by the critics in the east. They have been respectful in their comments, and brief, some said because she had been misled into becoming the "lead" in that old standby of the temperance element, "Ten Nights in a Barroom." This venture was sufficient to bring Mrs. Nation back into public notice at the time when it seemed, at least in the west, that her particular brand of sensationalism and her erratic method of dealing with the liquor question was not to continue in favor, even with that class which most consistently advocated prohibition at all times and at all places. Mrs. Nation came to a realization of the fact that the destruction of personal property, sometimes at her own personal risk, was not the most approved way to wipe out the traffic in whisky in Kansas, where "joints" were numerous, or in Kansas City, where she was fined $500 once upon a time.

So Mrs. Nation journeyed to the east and in the barroom play she was not a startling success. She played to a few good houses, it is said, but they did not contain theatergoers. The critics, as their writings show, were just a little moved to compassion by the bent old woman, in the faded dress, who carried a Bible in one hand to justify what she might do with the hatchet in the other. Mrs. Nation never had very much of a "part" in the temperance play that once moved thousands, especially at the matinees, to use their handkerchiefs. She entered at the right moment, her favorite weapon held ready, and she smashed a few bottles and a chair or two in the barroom scene. That was all.

MRS. CARRIE NATION.
(From Lithograph Poster, Advertising the Saloon Smasher.)

And now it is vaudeville. At Poli's theater, in Bridgeport, Conn., Mrs. Nation is doubtless showing the curious just how much excitement she can stir up in "a few moments," a bit of information already thoroughly disseminated in the west. The "Only Original" never failed of keeping something doing when she traveled in Kansas. The one thing that has caused any special comment, among those who know her well, was her action in making her stage debut in the east instead of in the west, which nourished her ambitions, cheering her at the trains, followed her through the streets and bore with her eccentricities as long as patience was a virtue.

Victims of Their Names.

Many people go through life the victims of their parents' lack of judgment in naming them; but few are afflicted as was an individual who lived some years ago in Augusta, Me., and whose tombstone in the cemetery attests the burden that he bore. The tombstone says: "Here lies Ansel O'Gansel Anselo Ganselo Chandler White Huntoon Watson. Weep not for me." Scarcely less burdened was Mrs. Henrietta Tinsertta Tingtong Terio Thompson, of Wisconsin, nee Henrietta Terio, which was the actual name of a resident of Oshkosh a decade ago, and Sarah Ann Gridley Hatch Holmes Panken Raymond Watson, Wemp and Hughes, whose relatives were all remembered at her christening. To have escaped such a fate as that any plain John Smith should bless his stars!

Water Used in Battleships.

As nearly as possible 8,000 gallons of fresh water are used in a large battleship daily. About two-thirds of this is taken up by the boilers and the remainder is used for drinking, washing, cooking, etc. When the ships which she has taken out with her from port has been used up, a vessel has to depend upon her evaporators for further supplies. Every modern warship is fitted with evaporating machinery to distill the salt sea water.

CARL E. DRANGE WEDS MISS MABEL DUBOIS

Marriage of Young Couple Takes Place at Home of the Bride's Mother.

MANY FRIENDS PRESENT

CHARLES M. DOLLIVER ACTS AS THE BEST MAN.

Mrs. R. W. Davis, Sister of the Bride, as Matron of Honor—Rev. Cornelius Schenck Officiates—Off on Wedding Tour.

In the presence of many friends and relatives, Miss Mabel Clare Dubois was married to Carl E. Drange April 27. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride on Park avenue.

Flowers were used in profusion to transform the parlor, where the ceremony was performed. The room was prettily decorated in pink, white and green, with carnations, smilax and palms. A heavy bank of palms bowered a wide bay window.

The bridal party formed in the library and marched slowly to the parlor to the strains of the Lohengrin march, played by Miss Jessie Utter, the organist of the First M. E. and Seventh-Day Baptist churches. Miss Dubois was attended by her sister, Mrs. R. W. Davis, as matron-of-honor, and the groomsman was Charles M. Dolliver, a close friend of Mr. Drange. Thomas McDonald and Robert W. Davis were the ushers.

Preceding the bridal party came Gladys Swackhamer, a young cousin of the bride, as flower girl. Dressed in a girlish affair of white, with a big basket of blooms on which the ring reposed, she gave a very pretty touch to the processioin picture.

The ceremony was performed in the recess of the bay window. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of Trinity church, spoke the words that united the couple. The bride was given away by her uncle, A. H. Swackhamer, of Woodbury.

Gowned in a pretty creation of white satin crepe de chine, over taffeta, trimmed with lace, her veil caught up with a spray of fresh orange blossoms, the bride presented a charming picture. She carried a trailing bouquet of bride roses. The matron-of-honor wore a very pretty white crepe de chine gown, and carried pink roses.

Warm and hearty congratulations were showered on the young couple at the reception after the ceremony. A catered supper was served.

More than 100 guests witnessed the ceremony. Besides friends and relatives from this city and the borough, there were guests from Woodbury, Elizabeth, New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City and Whitehouse.

While the reception was on the bride and groom slipped away to the station, keeping their destination a profound secret. It was learned this morning that they left for Niagara Falls. They will spend ten days between the Falls, Buffalo, and the Thousand Islands. Upon their return they will make their residence at 515 Park avenue.

Both the bride and groom are popular in wide circles of friends. They belong to Trinity Reformed church, and are well-known among the members of the congregation. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Emma Dubois. The groom's parents are not living. He was born in Germany but came to this country at an early age, and received his education here. He holds a responsible position on the sales force of the Walter Scott Press Company.

Many handsome gifts were received by the bride. Among them are valuable articles of silver, cut glass, furniture and bric-a-brac.

MISS GERTRUDE RUNYON WEDS

MARRIAGE OF STELTON COUPLE ATTENDED BY LOCAL PEOPLE.

Miss Gertrude Runyon, daughter of Mefford Runyon, and Firman Walker, both of Stelton, were married April 27, at the home of the bride in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends, including Mrs. Isaac Giles, Judson Giles, the Misses Giles and Mrs. Thomas Corning, of Grove street, North Plainfield. Rev. W. Terhune Derwood, pastor of the Stelton Baptist church, of which the groom is a deacon and the bride a member, performed the ceremony.

The couple was unattended. A reception followed, during which supper was served. The gifts were numerous and very valuable. The couple will continue to live at Stelton, where the groom is engaged as a farmer.

Jack Entwistle, of the Potter Press Company's works, is quarantined at his home on Rockview Heights.

SIXTEENTH YEAR, CAUSE OF REJOICING

Monday Afternoon Club Celebrates Anniversary in An Enjoyable Fashion.

PLEASING PROGRAMME

A MATINEE IN CASINO WELL ATTENDED BY CLUB WOMEN.

Mrs. Harry Johnson, Miss Karr and Willard Wadsworth Take a Prominent Part—Refreshments are Served.

The Casino presented a scene of much beauty last Thursday when the Monday Afternoon Club met to celebrate its sixteenth anniversary. The stage setting with an artistic arrangement of plants and flowers made an effective back-ground for the all, which looked like a salon.

The guests were received by the president of the club, Mrs. Robert Lowry, assisted by three vice presidents, Mrs. Josiah Browne, Mrs. Benjamin J. Shreve, Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, and the chairman of the entertainment committee, Mrs. William H. Murray.

The entertainment of the evening was opened with the rendering by Mrs. Harry Johnson of one of Grigg's admirable compositions: "Sonate Op. 1," with its changes, Allegro, Andante, Minuetto and Finale. Miss Karr, of New York, then gave two monologues that were full of happy hits. "In the Millinery Department," written especially for Miss Karr by Mary E. Wilkins, was a graphic sketch. This was followed by a kindergarten exercise on the word "Apple," taking off in an exaggerated way the artificial methods of some intellectual processes of training the youthful mind.

Songs by Willard Wadsworth, of West Eighth street, were received by the audience with enthusiastic delights. Miss Wadsworth accompanied her brother with taste and skill.

In Miss Karr's second appearance "Afternoon Whist" was given, in which a room full of whist players was portrayed and four women playing at a whist table were skillfully shown by Miss Karr's one pair of hands, easy chat and light gossip mingling with pretensions to great skill, forgetting trumps and the inevitable post-mortem.

The last monologue, "The Village Censor," gave Miss Karr an opportunity to show the typical gossip indulging in wild suspicions and severe judgment.

The part of the programme ended with another number by Mrs. Harry Johnson, "Concert Etude, D Flat," the skillful playing of which elicited as enthusiastic encore, brilliantly executed.

Refreshments and a general mingling of guests, many of whom came from out of town, concluded an evening full of charm and pleasure.

AN 18TH CENTURY PRESS

OLD PRINTING MACHINE BEING PREPARED FOR EXHIBITION.

One of the oldest printing presses in existence, in this country, at least, is being prepared by the Campbell Printing Press Company for exhibition at the St. Louis Fair.

It was manufactured by one Thomas Draper, in Boston, in 1742, and took its place as the first press used in New Hampshire. Daniel Fowle bought it in 1756. Afterwards it was owned by John Melcher, the first State printer of New Hampshire, and later one F. W. Miller, of Portsmouth, N. H., owned it.

The Campbell people have owned it for a good many years. It was exhibited at the Centennial Exposition, at the Chicago World's Fair and at various art exhibitions in New York. The company has had it unpacked at its repair shop in the East End to be cleaned for exhibition at the St. Louis show alongside one of the big autoplate machines, the most remarkable machine that the Campbell plant is turning out. The auto-plate casts curved stereotype plates automatically at the rate of five a minute. Big papers like the Herald and World are using them, and the contrast between that contrivance and the ancient clumsy, wooden press will be great enough to challenge the attention of all the visitors to the Machinery Building.

Warren to Parade.

Warren Engine Company, of the North Plainfield Exempt Association, has been invited to take part in a parade to be held by the Flemington fire department next October. The invitation has not been accepted yet, but almost certainly will be at the next meeting of the company. Flemington was prominent in the parade held by the borough department in 1901.

MRS. E. E. COLE IS DIVORCED

PLAINFIELD WOMEN GETS DECREE AND CUSTODY OF CHILD.

A decree of absolute divorce has been granted in favor of Mrs. Elsea E. Cole, of this city, against George Cole, of Staten Island. Mrs. Cole was married in 1879 and took up her residence in Staten Island, living with her husband until early in 1897. In her petition she stated that his continued bad conduct and abuse had grown unbearable and she was forced to separate from him and moved to this city where she has resided ever since, supporting herself entirely by her own efforts.

Action in the matter was started in 1899 by the late William Daly, of Jersey City and after dragging along for several years, William N. Sayers, Esq., of this city, was substituted, and upon ascertaining facts of the old case commenced a new one. The matter was referred to Hon. Joseph Cross as special master, and after hearing the testimony of the witnesses, on March 1, last, filed his report, advising that a decree of absolute divorce be granted.

The papers, under the rule of the court, remained on file for thirty days and were then referred to Vice Chancellor Gray, who adopted the special master's report. The court ordered that the custody of the daughter be given to the mother.

TRINITY MEN'S ASSOCIATION

THREE MUSICIANS ENTERTAIN MEMBERS AT REGULAR MEETING.

Selections on the violin and piano by Kenneth Stuart and Charles Suhr and vocal solos by William Jeffery, was the entertainment provided for the Men's Association at the regular meeting held in the parlors of Trinity Reformed church, Thursday. It was originally planned to have one of the officials of the Prudential Insurance Company, of Newark, give a talk on insurance, but through a misunderstanding he failed to appear and a musical programme was presented instead.

Mr. Jeffery sang "You Sais a Baby," "On a Starry Night," "Mona," and "Don't You Cry Ma' Honey," and he was heartily applauded. Interspersing these selections, Mr. Stuart and Mr. Suhr rendered some of the latest popular compositions.

At the next meeting, Thursday night, May 26, Rev. Dr. W. S. Hubbell, of this city, will give a patriotic talk, basing his remarks on the Battle of Cold Harbor. There will also be a musical programme by an orchestra.

A FIELD FOR CEDARCROFT

BOYS SCHOOL TO GO IN STRONGLY FOR ATHLETICS.

Cedarcroft School will be represented by teams in all departments of outdoor sports. Principal Huse is a strong believer in athletics for schoolboys, and has planned to encourage his scholars in them in every way.

Arrangements have been completed for the laying out of a fine field on the east side of Hillside avenue at the intersection of Martine avenue. Included in the features of the field will be a diamond, a gridiron and a running track.

The school is growing steadily and promises to take high rank among the preparatory institutions of the State.

There is good material for field and track teams and the boys have determined to make the school a factor in athletics in the metropolitan district. They are concentrating now on a baseball team.

Rev. Mr. Whiteside in Brooklyn.

Rev. F. E. Whiteside, of this city, who was recently appointed to the Evangelistic Commission of the Methodist church in the New York East District, with headquarters at the Willett Street, New York, M. E. church, has taken up his residence in Brooklyn.

To Reside at the Waldorf.

Frank Wood, who has been a resident of this city for many years, has recently moved to New York, where he will live at the Waldorf-Astoria. In consequence Mr. Wood has resigned his position as a member of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital.

Old Plainfield Paper.

Walter Taster a few days ago picked up a copy of the Plainfield Union, dated April 22, 1863. Among other matters is an account of the death of Hon. Theodore Frelinghuysen, which occurred at New Brunswick ten days before. Theodore Frelinghuysen was born at Millstone in March, 1787, and was at one time Attorney General for the State. His father was a distinguished lawyer of New Jersey and took part in the battles of Monmouth and Trenton, receiving the credit of having shot the Hessian commander, Rahl, whose coat is one of the relics at the Wallace House, Somerville.—Boona Brook Chronicle.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

May 9: "Crowns Trodden Underfoot." Isa. xxviii, 1-7; Rev. iii, 11.

Military success, rapid and great increase in wealth from the spoil of conquered nations, alliances with corrupt and idolatrous people, had brought in a period of luxury and moral laxity in the kingdom of Israel which proved to be finally ruinous, morally and politically.

Isaiah was a religious teacher of the guild of Jehovah prophets in the southern kingdom of Judah. He was gifted with a broader and more statesmanlike mind than any of his predecessors or contemporaries. A man of wondrously comprehensive insight and foresight into the springs and dominant principles of national life, he for the first time discovered and announced the universal scope and power of righteousness in government and the fact that one Jehovah, God, overruled all nations and made them eventually work His will.

At the time of this outburst of inspired invective he had lived through three reigns in his own land and was in the second year of the fourth reign, that of Hezekiah. He had witnessed great vicissitudes in political affairs. He had seen Judah conquered by Israel, immense multitudes of her choicest manhood left dead on battlefields, other multitudes carried captive and all her treasure from palace and temple carried as spoil of war to Samaria or paid as tribute to Damascus and Assyria.

He now sees an outbreak of extravagantly luxurious living deluging the northern capital of Israel. Drunkenness and debauchery run riot. Unrestrained licentiousness of every sort has made the people insane. Virtue is almost nonexistent.

This man is not a gloomy, pessimistic ascetic, but a clear eyed, practical man of affairs. He sees what must be the inevitable outcome of the present course of events, the unvarying result of such things whenever and wherever practiced. Principle and application are both plain to his view.

The kingdom of Israel is intoxicated with success. In his message of warning he used the poetical name of that people. Just as we speak of the United States as Columbia so he speaks of Ephraim. The curse of drunkenness was overwhelming. In all their feasts and revels they garlanded the banqueters and festooned the necks of the revelers. Their religious rites were debased by drunken and licentious feasts until worship was one long festival of vicious indulgence of lust. Samaria, the capital, on a beautiful hill overlooking a most fertile valley, was itself a wreath on the head of a drunken nation.

Isaiah's words soon came true. In two years' time Samaria and all her revelers were captured and transported by the king of Assyria. Foreigners of many different races replaced them. Jerusalem became the center for all Jehovah worshipers and Jehovah Himself "the crown of beauty and diadem of glory to the residue of His people." Jerusalem alone of all great cities of the world was never captured by the Assyrians. Isaiah was most influential of all in proclaiming and procuring this immunity from capture.

Our application to Jehovah. If we make Him our crown He will preserve us. Prosperous iniquity is the most unprofitable condition possible.

What He Does For Us.

The same promptings come to those who have a sense of the goodness of God. To say nothing of the daily blessings which minister to our physical necessities, the thought of the divine grace so abundantly given us should awaken in us the sweetest joy and the liveliest gratitude. What has He not done for us to save us from ruin? Blinded by sin, our tendency is to rush on to destruction. One offense leads to another, and our perverted nature hurries us on in our way of escape. Here the ministrations of the Holy Spirit come in, and we are shown how to get back into the path of holiness. We have lost our way, and God restores us. We have abandoned Him, but He refuses to abandon us. We put Him out of our lives, but He persuades us to let Him come back. He bestows upon us love and sympathy and graciously pardons our iniquities. He gives us what by nature we could not have, pure hearts and a regenerated spirit. All this He does out of His grace. It comes to us as the divine favor, given to those who could not command it, given freely and without upbraiding to those who merited it not.—Independent.

True Beauty.

Beauty should be yours, that subtle beauty which eludes description, the sweet shining of the soul in the flesh. Winning manners that come from lack of self consciousness, coupled with a genuine kindness of heart, leading you to treat every human being with never failing courtesy, beside which the rest pales into insignificance. This is the real Open Sesame to the heart, the cast of Vere de Vere is as soulless as it is artificial.—Catholic Universe.

Hope.

I praised the earth, in beauty seen,
With garlands gay of various green;
I praised the seas, whose ample field
Shone glorious as a silver shield;
And earth and ocean seemed to say,
"Our beauties are but for a day."

I praised the sun, whose chariot rolled
On wheels of amber and of gold;
I praised the moon, whose pensive eye
Gleamed sweetly through the summer sky;
And moon and sun in answer said,
"Our days of light are numbered."

O God! O Good beyond compare!
If thus Thy meaner works are fair,
If thus Thy bounties gild the span
Of ruined earth and sinful man,
How glorious must the mansion be Where Thy redeemed shall dwell with Thee!

—Reginald Heber.

GREAT PATENT CASE.

Powerful Corporation Defeated by Bright Woman Lawyer.

Case That Had Been Retained by Eminent Members of the Bar Carried to a Successful Issue by Indefatigable Girl.

Fifteen years ago a shy young country girl was summoned from her log cabin home to serve as a witness in a neighbor's lawsuit. It was her first glimpse of the great world that lay beyond the hamlet where she was born. The sleepy town was more imposing than the walled cities of her dreams, the little courthouse was a stately hall of justice, and the cabalistic signs of the shorthand reporter filled her soul with awe.

Very recently this girl won the most brilliant legal battle ever fought by a woman. Other women have assisted senior counsel in famous suits. But Miss Florence H. King, only woman patent lawyer in this country, fought her fight, single-handed and alone, before Judge Kohlsaat in the United States circuit court of Chicago, and on her oral argument won a verdict against a $5,000,000 company and secured an injunction so binding that no human being but Mrs. Myrtle M. Rogers can manufacture, sell or use the Rogers patents.

In May, 1900, the inventor of the noted Rogers' "receptacle" and "packing," known among railroad men as the "Rogers goods," died, leaving his rights and patents to his wife, Mrs. Myrtle M. Rogers. The packing is cotton waste and steel wool, the latter made of steel turnings, cut spirally from steel rods, expressly manufactured for this purpose. The receptacle was a clever device for holding the packing against the axle in the journal box. The demand for packing is enormous, for the United States railroads alone use $4,000,000 pounds annually, 20 cents a pound, affording a royal revenue to the manufacturers.

Mrs. Rogers was unfamiliar with business tactics and finally accepted the proposition of the newly-organized Federal Supply company, which was incorporated for $5,000,000, to transfer her patents on a license, the company contracting to pay her a minimum royalty of three cents a pound for the packing, or $2,000 every quarter.

After enjoying the princely profits for several years the company suddenly canceled her license February 1, 1903,

FLORENCE H. KING.
(Woman Patent Lawyer Who Has Just Won a Famous Suit.)

and also attacked Mrs. Rogers' title to the patents, defying her to assert her rights. Mrs. Rogers immediately organized a company and began manufacturing her husband's goods on a small scale.

The Federal Supply company's act raised up a host of business friends for her, and she quickly built up a thriving business. When it came to the notice of the Federal Supply company the price was cut to the actual cost of production, and her limited capital forbade competition at these ruinous rates.

In vain she tried to get an injunction, but lawyers laughed at her and absolutely refused to touch the case on the ground of priority of suit, as the most celebrated patent lawyers and patent experts insisted that springy metal wire and steel shavings were equivalent to the steel turnings employed in the Rogers patents.

Almost crazed at the certainty of losing the entire fortune and enriching others through her husband's ingenuity, she appealed to Miss King, who instantly realized that the suit pivoted on a question of equivalents. She made exhaustive experiments with the shavings which she tried with the grain of the metal, and discovered that under tremendous pressure and friction, the shavings were ground to dust and were therefore valueless. Spiral wires scratched when placed perpendicularly to the journal box and if laid horizontally, the cotton waste slipped out, leaving the coils of wire lying useless in the bottom of the journal box, thus quickly proving their inadequacy.

But the steel turnings, cut transversely from the end of a rod, held the cotton waste with a thousand teeth of steel, nor could it be torn or plucked out by hand or machinery. And the cut against the grain gave the finest power of resistance, for it withstands pressure and friction and produces the ideal conditions that have made the Rogers goods famous.

The Chicago Tribune says Miss King's final argument lasted half a day, for, womanlike, she had the last word, and a most convincive word it proved to be. She marshaled her arguments as a general does an army, and her line of defense, built up in the many months of careful study, was impregnable, and she won the biggest legal woman's victory yet chronicled in the United States, if not in the world.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning May 8.

Topic.—Crowns trodden under foot.—Isa. xxviii, 1-7; Rev. iii, 11.

The crown is a symbol of royalty and is worn by kings and queens. It is an ancient and universal sentiment and "probably originated from the fillets used to prevent the hair from being disheveled by the wind. Such fillets are still common. They gradually developed into turbans, which, by the addition of ornamental or precious materials, assumed the dignity of mitres or crowns." In the Bible the thorns that were placed upon the Saviour's brow are called a "crown of thorns," and Paul calls the wreath of laurel given to the victor in the Grecian games a crown. The expression crown is used in Scripture also to set forth the supreme blessings that God will bestow upon His people in such expressions as "a crown of righteousness," "a crown of glory" and "a crown of life."

In the topical references three crowns are spoken of—(1) a crown of pride; (2) a crown of glory; (3) a crown of service.

1. The crown of pride. That He may warn the people of Judah against the sins of pride and drunkenness the Lord, through the prophet, calls their attention to the fate of Ephraim or the ten tribes for the same offenses. The Lord is to destroy the glorious beauty of Samaria because of its sins, and He warns Judah against a similar condition and consequently a similar fate. This is His denunciation: "Woe to the crown of pride of the drunkards of Ephraim and to the fading flowers of his glorious beauty, which is on the head of the fat valley of them that are overcome with wine." Though drunken and rebellious against God, pride, like a crown, sat upon the heads of the people of Samaria, but God humbled that pride. He trod under foot that crown, and this will be the experience of all who break the laws of God and are yet filled with a spirit of self complacent pride.

2. The crown of glory. The unfaithful were to be uncrowned, while God himself was to become the crown of the few who remained faithful. "In that day will the Lord of Hosts become a crown of glory and a diadem of beauty unto the residue of His people." We have a strong contrast that should make a deep impression upon us. If living in sin we still crown ourselves with pride and boastfulness, God will humble and uncrown us; but if we are faithful to His laws and commandments He will become "a crown of glory" to us. It should not take us long to decide which of these two conditions we prefer.

3. The crown of service. "Hold fast that thou hast, that no man take thy crown." This must be the crown or reward for service. It cannot refer to the crown of life, for no man can take that from us if we have it. But if God has a work for us to do, and we neglect it, and some one else performs it, he will receive the crown of reward which we will therefore lose. "Let us therefore not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." We are saved to serve. Let us serve, therefore, that we may have in time to come both the crown of life and the crown of service.

BIBLE READINGS.

Prov. xi, 12; xx, 1; xxiii, 19-21, 29-32; I Cor. xv, 58; Gal. v, 16-26; vi, 9; II Tim. iv, 7, 8; Jas. i, 12; I Pet. v, 1-4; Rev. ii, 10.

From Turkey and India.

In Sofia, Turkey, there is a society that is practically Christian Endeavor, having committees, meetings and topics identical with Christian Endeavor and members of both sexes, though organized as a Y. M. C. A.

A model Christian Endeavor meeting was a feature of the annual Missionary Association of the United Presbyterian Church at Sialkot, Punjab, India. The subject was "Fellowship," and greetings were sent to the all India convention, then in session at Lahore, and an offering of $16 made for the Punjab district union, that day organized at Lahore.

Hawaiian Christian Endeavor Song.

On Dr. Clark's recent visit to Hawaii the Hawaiian Endeavorers sang their Christian Endeavor song, which is as follows:

Hawaii's land is fair;
Rich are the gifts we share
This is our earnest prayer,
O Lord of Hosts,
That as a noble band
We may join heart and hand
Till all Hawaii stand
Stands for the right.

Convention History.

Christian Endeavor has made wonderful convention history. At Boston in 1895 more than 56,000 registered delegates came together in the largest religious assemblage of all time. To the San Francisco convention 15,000 persons crossed the Rockies, and the London convention amazed the world's metropolis by its great size and vigor. —Christian Endeavor World.

Secretary Vogt's Work.

General Secretary Von Ogden Vogt covered eighteen convention appointments in Illinois in March. He spent January in New York state and February in Pennsylvania.

Christian Endeavor.

Not dreaming, but endeavor.
Must meet the world's great need;
Not languorous aspiring,
But swift, outreaching deed.

Not languorous aspiring,
But climbing, day by day;
Not sympathetic moaning,
But kindness by the way.

Not prayer alone of longing,
But prayer in action wrought;
Not dreaming, but endeavor,
With blessed fruit in fraught.

—Edith H. Kinney in Christian Endeavor World.

FELLOW TROLLEYMEN PAY TRIBUTE TO DEAD

Great Crowd Attends Funeral of Motorman William Brown at His Late Home.

BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS

WINFIELD SCOTT POST, NO. 73, G. A. R., AT OBSEQUIES.

Remains Are Taken to Newark To-Today for Burial in Mt. Pleasant Cemetery—Taps Are Sounded—Rev. Mr. Leggett in Charge.

More than three score trolley men attended the funeral service over Motorman William Brown, who was killed in Elizabeth Tuesday morning. The service was held at his late home on East Third street, Thursday.

Besides the trolley employes there were many G. A. R. men and a large number of friends in attendance. The house was taxed to its utmost to accommodate the crowd, so great was the crush that Chief Deane, of the fire department, who was present as a G. A. R. man, feared for the safety of the mourners. The first and second floors, including the stairs, were filled completely, and the porch was crowded with the overflow of people who could find no room inside.

"Taps," the solemn bugle call, concluded the services. The obsequies were simple in character, but the number of people, the character of the dead man and the shocking death he suffered, made the effect most impressive. After a brief religious service by the Rev. Lester G. Leggett, a detail from Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., to which Brown belonged, held their regular funeral service. Brown served through the Civil War in the Eighth New Jersey Volunteers.

Floral tributes in profusion testified to the esteem in which the dead man had been held. Chief among the set pieces was a floral car, bearing his badge and car numbers, sent by the P. S. C. employes. There were more than a dozen other designs of handsome and costly character.

FIVE GENERATIONS LIVING

CLIFTON R. SHERMAN SEES HIS GREAT GREAT GRANDMOTHER.

If it be given to little babies less than six weeks old to feel puffed with pride over unique distinction in the way of relatives, then Clifton Robert Sherman, the son of Wilson J. Sherman, of Washington street, is outgrowing his normal chest measure rapidly. When he arrived from Stockland Easter Sunday he found a great-great-grandmother waiting for him.

The number of little boys who have grandmothers that possess grandmothers of their own is very limited. Statisticians only know of one or two more in this section of the world.

The great-great grandmother is Mrs. A. Montgomery, who lives in Cranford. She is only eighty-nine years old, which seems foolishly young for a great-great grandmother. She is hale and hearty, and travelled the way from Cranford all alone to see her descendant of the fifth generation. Mrs. Sherman is such a well-preserved old woman that it looks very much as if she would be on hand to welcome her great-great-great grandchild. Mrs. Montgomery is Mr. Sherman's great-grandmother.

She comes of a long-lived family. Her brother is living in Scotland at the age of ninety-three.

GEORGE WARREN IS DEAD

LINEAL DESCENDANT OF FAMOUS GENERAL SUCCUMBS TO LONG ILLNESS.

The death of George Warren occurred Friday a. m. at his home, 533 Madison avenue, since coming to this city thirteen years ago. Mr. Warren has been an invalid and for a long time has been confined to his home.

Mr. Warren was born in Saco, Maine, and was the son of the late General George A. Warren, of that place. For thirty-five years he was engaged in the diamond and jewelry business in New York and at the time of his retirement from business was associated with the firm of Randell, Baremore & Billings, of Maiden Lane. Mr. Warren was a lineal descendant of Gen. Joseph Warren, of Bunker Hill fame, and was a member of Republic Lodge, F. and A. M., of New York. He is survived by a wife and one daughter, Mrs. Nellie Warren-Kerr, who made her home with him.

Reorganization of Board.

The Union County Board of Freeholders will meet on Wednesday, May 18, for re-organization. It is confidently expected that Capt. J. Frank Hubbard, of this city, will be re-elected director.

SEEK RIGHT OF WAY FOR NEW TROLLEY LINE

Public Service Corporation Obtaining Consents to Lay Tracks to Metuchen.

AND TO PERTH AMBOY

THE RAILS MUST BE DOWN WITHIN ONEYEAR.

Branch Line to South Plainfield—Time of Trip Between Plainfield and Perth Amboy One Hour and Five Minutes.

Consents for the right of way over the proposed extension to Metuchen are being secured by the Public Service Corporation. The way in which the company is going about this work indicates that it is in earnest regarding the improvement and purposes to make it an actuality just as soon as possible. Harry C. Runyon has been put in charge of the matter with instructions to get the consents with all possible speed.

He has been at the work for a week or more and a straight right of way over the ground desired is assured. All the property holders with whom the company will have to deal have given positive assurance that no opposition will be thrown in the way of extension. At a meeting of the owners in conference with the trolley officials, in Mr. Runyon's office, two weeks ago, a cordial agreement regarding the consents was entered into.

The company wants a strip of land twenty feet wide, to run along the westerly side of Woodland avenue. The men from whom the principal consents near here are to be secured are G. P. Mellick, J. W. Johnson, Michael Quinn and Judge Steel.

The wording of the right of way agreement is of the simplest and most straightforward character. It binds the company to keep the track as level of the grade, and to run it straight alongside the roadway. These provisions will result in the perfection of a fine road to Oak Tree. The benefit of such trackway construction is seen in the present Woodland avenue road, where the trolley built over private rights of way is thus manner.

An important provision of the agreement is to the effect that if the tracks are not down within one year after the papers are signed the right of way is abrogated.

When the extension has been completed a through service from this city to Perth Amboy will be established. It is the purpose of the company to run cars of the big, main-line type from the North avenue depot to the port every half-hour. From the end of the extension at Oak Tree the cars will be run over new tracking on private right of way that has already been secured to Metuchen, where connection will be made with the New Brunswick Traction Co. tracks.

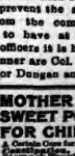
While the expected extension will afford the South Plainfielders easy access to the cars, they will not be directly on the line. It is understood that the company, a short while after the new line is established, will run a half-mile spur from Mellick's Corner to South Plainfield. When that is done cars will run out to South Plainfield over that spur at half-hourly intervals—that is, through cars for Perth Amboy and short-line cars for South Plainfield will leave alternately at fifteen-minute intervals from North avenue. It is estimated that the time between here and Perth Amboy will be an hour and five minutes.

Borough Real Estate Transfers.

These transfers of real estate in Somerset county, were recorded in the county clerk's office between March 19 and 23: Calvin D. McMurry, sheriff, to J. C. M. Blume Gliebehouse, $5,036; Union County Investment Co. to John C. Smith, $1,500; Ida Gaston Runyon et al to Sarah R. Runyon, $1; Darell L. Runyon to Sarah R. Runyon, $1; Sarah R. Runyon to Cormick McDonagh, $1; Samuel K. Bowers to Isaiah B. Bowers, $1; Newton B. Smalley et ux to Sarah H. Benner, $1; George M. VanOrden to Daniel B. VanOrden, $1.

Co. K's Dinner Postponed.

Company K has postponed its annual dinner from May 9 to May 16. The change was made because the annual inspection of the regimental staff officers is to be held on the sixth, which will prevent the attendance of officers whom the company desires very much to have at its function. Among the officers it is hoped will attend the dinner are Col. Collins, Col. Kline, Major Dungan and Capt. Bell.



MOTHER GRAY'S SWEET POWDERS FOR CHILDREN,
A Certain Cure for Feverishness, Headache, Worms, Stomach Troubles, Teething Disorders, Move-ments, Constipation and Stomach Troubles. They Break Up Colds in 24 Hours. Used by Mothers for 25 Years. Sold by all Druggists, 25c. Sample FREE. Address, A. S. OLMSTED, Le Roy, N. Y.

POTATOES SELLING AT $1.75 A BUSHEL

High Price Likely to Continue Until New Potatoes Are Put on the Market.

PEACHES EXPENSIVE

CROP TO BE AN UNUSUALLY SMALL ONE THIS YEAR.

San Jose Scale Causes a Blight—Fruit Growers Want the State to Take Action in the Matter.

The price of potatoes has recently taken a decided jump, the dealers asking $1.75 a bushel. It is believed that this price will continue until the first part of June. At that time the new potatoes will be in the market. During the past season the retail price has been between $1 and $1.25 a bushel and in some instances the quality has been poor.

One well posted on the raising of fruit says that peaches will be very scarce this summer, owing to the prevalence of the San Jose scale. This farmer declares that within a few years peaches in this section of the country will be as valuable as bens' teeth, unless radical measures are taken to kill the scale. Last year the fruit was of poor quality and very high in price. It is even said that in old Hunterdon county, where the finest peaches are raised, the crop will be a small one this year.

Persons interested in raising fruit have been much exercised during the past few years regarding the San Jose scale and they believe the matter calls for united action on the part of State officials. Individually little can be done, but by concerted action it is thought the pest can be killed.

320 HEIRS TO THE ESTATE

MRS. JOSEPHINE MANNING AMONG THOSE WHO WILL BE BENEFITTED.

Judge Louis Schenck, in the Somerset Orphan's Court at Somerville Saturday, signed an order of distribution by which the $8,000 estate of the late Richard H. VanCleef, of Millstone, will be divided among 320 heirs, among whom are Mrs. Josephine Manning, of this city; Mrs. Abner Coriel, Jr., and Peter Dumont, of Dunellen.

Richard H. VanCleef died as Millstone on April 16, 1909, leaving no father or mother, or children, or brothers or sisters. His nearest relatives were first cousins. Howard M. VanCleef was named as administrator and then the work of getting information of the heirs began. Senator Van Cleef spent two years following up the heirs and has unearthed them in various parts of the country, from ocean to ocean and from Maine to Mexico. The task was a gigantic one. In all 320 heirs were located, but there may be others at present unknown and if so they have forfeited their right to a part of the estate.

The shares of these heirs range from $800 or $400 for the first cousin to $1 for the most distant relatives.

MRS. PENNINGTON BURIED.

Funeral Services Held at Daughter's Home in Arlington Avenue.

Funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Mary L. Pennington took place Saturday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. M. Odam, 1088 Arlington avenue. The Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass officiated and spoke of the fine character and Christian life which was led by Mrs. Pennington. The Rev. A. E. Finn also spoke and drew attention to the great patience shown by Mrs. Pennington in the last years of her life. Elmer Runyon sang "Abide With Me." The services were attended by a large number of relatives and friends from Newark, New Durham, Somerville, Jersey City, Brooklyn and New York. The remains were interred in the Hillside Cemetery.

Miss Smalley Bridesmaid.

Miss Edith S.nalley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Palmer Smith, of Netherwood, was one of four bridesmaids at the fashionable wedding on Saturday, at the residence of Miss Esther P. Hoppin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Warner Hoppin to Dr. Eugene Hillhouse Pool, all of New York. The ceremony took place in the Brick church, Fifth avenue and Thirty-seventh street and was performed by Rev. Dr. William R. Richards.

A Doll Factory.

Mrs. Mary C. W. Foote, of Franklin place, who is engaged in the manufacture of dolls, has leased a portion of J. Fred MacDonald's business property on East Front street, near Watchung avenue, which was formerly occupied as a grocery store.

HOLZWASSER & CO

SPECIAL DISCOUNT THIS MONTH OF 10% ALLOWED ON ALL CASH PURCHASES.

These rooms are on exhibition in our warerooms.

The goods show exactly as they would appear in your home.

PARLOR—Velvet Carpet; Parlor Suite, 3 pieces; Velvet Couch; Parlor Table; Lamp and Under; 9x12 Linoleum; Piano; Upright Piano; Piano Bench; Piano Lamp; Piano Cover; Rug; 2 Rockers; 2 Chairs; 10x12 Rug; 2 pairs Curtains.

BEDROOM—Golden Oak Dressing Case and Washstand; elegant bevel mirror; massive Bed; woven wire Bed Spring; soft top Mattress; pair Feather Pillows; Chair; 12 yards Matting; 2 pairs Curtains.

We Also Furnish a Flat at $65.00.

Write for Our New Catalogue. Mailed Upon Application.

$1.00 a Week Opens an Account.

We Also Carry a Complete Line of CLOTHING For Men, Women and Children.

DINING-ROOM—Oak Sideboard; bevel mirror; or elegant Sideboard; Dining Table; 6 Chairs; Leather Couch; oak case and Chairs; oak Dining Table; 6 Chairs; Leather Couch; Rug; Linoleum; Pictures; Lamp; Clock.

KITCHEN—Oak Kitchen Clock; glass doors; Kitchen Range or Refrigerator; 3 Kitchen Chairs; 2 Kitchen Tables; 10 yards Oilcloth.

Freight and R. E. Fare Allowed on All Out-of-Town Orders.

1417 TO 1423 3D AVE BETWEEN 80 & 81 ST

Open Evenings until 9 o'clock. NEW YORK, N. Y.

Great Clearing Sale

At The Boston Cloak and Fur Company,

245 West Front Street, opposite Postoffice.

Our entire stock of Cloaks and Suits must be sold at once to make room for our new and extensive line of Ladies and Children's ready-to-wear Millinery, Ladies' Furnishings and Ribbons. A selection, the like of which was never attempted by any house in this city for the price. A call is solicited and see what we have to show you.

Let us help fill your books with BLUE STAMPS.

FOWLER IS A CANDIDATE

ALTHOUGH THE CONGRESSMAN REFUSES TO ANNOUNCE HIMSELF.

A despatch from Washington says that when representative Charles N. Fowler was asked if he would be a candidate for renomination he stated that he had never been in the habit of announcing himself as a candidate. It is understood, however, from close friends of the congressman that he will undoubtedly stand for a renomination and it is believed there will be no opposition to his selection.

Mr. Fowler's friends feel that some of the criticism that he has been subjected to recently is unmerited. He worked for five or six months last year after adjournment on financial matters, and it was evident from the beginning of the present Congress that no financial legislation would be enacted. Hence, if Mr. Fowler was absent occasionally he was in no sense neglecting his duties, and his constituents were well taken care of at all times.

JUMPED TO SAVE HERSELF

SERIOUS MISHAP TO MISS TRUST AVERTED BY PRESENCE OF MIND.

As a result of her quick presence of mind which led her to jump from a buggy phaeton in which she was riding, Miss Trust, of Greenbrook, had a narrow escape from serious injury Thursday afternoon while driving along West Front street on her way home. Henry Haurand's beer wagon to which was attached a team of spirited horses, ran down the long hill west of Grant avenue and collided with the rig belonging to Miss Trust. Only a minute before the collision the young woman jumped from her phaeton.

The team almost completely wrecked the light wagon, but the horse that Miss Trust was driving was so gentle that further damage was prevented. The wrecked wagon was taken to Samuel Tayner's repair shop at the corner of West Front street and Grant avenue, near the point of the accident, for repairs.

The accident was due to the fact that the pole of the beer wagon accidently snapped off, allowing the team to run away. The driver, although dragged from the wagon was not injured. It is understood that a suit for damages will be started soon.

Wedding Date Set.

Miss Lottie Chamberlain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Chamberlain, and Maurice J. Anson, of East Third street, will be married at the home of the bride's parents, Wednesday night, June 8.

Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. Langworthy and Mr. and Mrs. Mayer, of Park avenue, leave today for Weehawkenague, Va., where Mr. Wheeler has a house boat and power launch on which they will cruise down the Broad Water Bay for snipe shooting and for the fishing.

Miss Lillian Kirsting, of Morristown, who has been the guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Leifke, of West Front street, during the past few weeks, will return home this week.

CITY MUST RAISE $68,341 FOR SCHOOLS

This Amount Does Not Include Appropriation Made by the State.

CAUSE OF INCREASE

REPAIRS NEEDED AT LINCOLN AND IRVING BUILDINGS.

Bids for Coal Supply Are Received —The High School's Annual Musical to be Held on May 26.

More money than last year will be required to run the city schools during the fiscal twelve month approaching. According to the estimate submitted to the Board of Education by the Finance Committee Monday the city will have to raise $68,341 62, aside from the State monies apportioned, for school purposes.

This estimate will be laid before the Board of School Estimate, for submission to the Common Council. The advance is explained by the comparatively heavy expense to be borne in repairs to the Lincoln and Irving Schools, and by the increase in salaries in accordance with the established rate. The fiscal year closes on July 1.

Bids for the coal supply were received. Seven different dealers submitted figures, which ranged from $5.70 to $6 for larger sizes and from $4.39 to $4.85 for pea coal. The bids were turned over to the Fuel Committee.

Propositions for the re-roofing of the Lincoln School and the repair of the mason work on the Irving School. These bids were also turned over to committee for consideration.

Superintendent Maxson reported that the High School pupils have arranged for their annual musical. It will be held on May 26. The place has not yet been fixed upon definitely, but it will probably be the Seventh-Day Baptist church, as usual.

Checks for the dealers were turned over to the Board by Superintendent Maxson from the pupils of the Franklin and Bryant Schools, representing contributions to the library fund.

Motorman Knocked Unconscious.

An exciting incident marked a trip taken by Mrs. Leader, of this city, on a Somerville trolley car last week. Near Somerville the feed wire broke and the motorman stepped off the car to lift it from the road. As his hand touched the wire, he was thrown unconscious to the ground, despite the protection of a rubber glove. He was at first thought to be dead, and great excitement ensued among the passengers. He escaped, however, with severe burns.

William D. Trickstun, of Central avenue, is sojourning at Belmar for a time.

Mrs. Norman Carrie, of Central avenue, is visiting friends out of town.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Putnam, of East Second street, have been entertaining Mrs. Putnam's sister, Miss Prents, of Scotch Plains.

IOWA FOR HEARST

Democratic Convention at Des Moines Will So Instruct.

HIS MEN SEEM TO HAVE FIRM CONTROL

Unless the Unexpected Happens—Congressman Wade Said, "Conservatives Will Not Bolt, but Fight It Out to a Finish."

DES MOINES, Ia., May 4.—The indications are that the Iowa Democrats will send a delegation to the St. Louis convention instructed for William Randolph Hearst for president by their action today. The opponents of Mr. Hearst have played their last card and lost, and unless the unexpected happens the followers of Hearst have firm control of the state convention.

Chairman Jackson of the state central committee, who had been counted with the opposition, has come out for Hearst, voting with other members of the Hearst committee, and this defeated a plan of the antis to determine the regular delegations in the state central committee instead of in the credentials committee of the convention.

The anti-Hearst leaders believed they had a majority in the convention and hoped to seat their delegates from several contested counties in this manner. The fight over the contested delegations is being fought in the convention, and even many of Hearst's opponents admit that he is strong enough in numbers to win.

Chairman Jackson's action was important for the further reason that he voted to give Charles A. Walsh, secretary of the Democratic national committee, a seat and vote in the state committee. Mr. Walsh has been one of the Hearst managers from the start.

Although it is believed by many that there will be a bolt of the anti-Hearst men if they find themselves unable to stop the Hearst sentiment, the party leaders say that this is improbable. Congressman M. J. Wade, who has been a leader of the opponents of Mr. Hearst, said: "The conservatives will not bolt. In my judgment they will fight to the finish, but will see the convention through regardless of its color."

QUARANTINE AT BORDER.

Mexican Government Refuses to Permit Trains to Cross.

LAREDO, Tex., May 4.—The quarantine situation causes much annoyance. The Mexican government refuses absolutely to permit trains to run through Monterey and other points infected by yellow fever last year without stopping. These trains must stop at all stations just as they did before the quarantine became effective, and this prevents travel across the border.

Trainmen arriving from Mexican points were refused permission to cross the border, and the cars, even, including the Pullman employees, were turned back. The state health authorities here are not permitted to accept immune certificates issued by themselves and the United States public health and marine hospital service physicians.

Many of the railroad men who have had the fever and who hold certificates of immunity are prevented from crossing the border.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

Closing Stock Quotations.

Money on call firmer at 1½@1¾ per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 3½@4½ per cent. Sterling exchange, $4.87.60@4.88 for sixty days; $4.87.85@4.88 for demand. Bar silver, 51½c. Mexican dollars, 41½c. Government bonds, unchanged. Railroad bonds, irregular.

Closing prices:

Am. Copper	46⅞	N. Y. Central	115½
Atchison	73½	Norf. & West	86⅞
B. & O.	79¼	Penn. R. R.	117⅜
Brooklyn R. T.	69½	Reading	162
Ches. & Ohio	30⅝	Rock Island	23¼
D. & H.	157	St. Paul	148⅞
Erie	34⅜	Southern Pac.	97⅛
Gen. Electric	157½	Southern Ry.	29¼
Ill. Central	136⅛	South. Ry. pf.	64
Louis. & Nasb.	140	Texas	136⅜
Louis. & Nash.	107¼	Union Pacific	164½
Manhattan	142¾	U. S. Steel	59¼
Metropolitan	30	U. S. Steel pf.	86¼
Missouri Pac.	41⅝

New York Markets.

FLOUR—Barely steady, with poor demand; Minnesota patents, $5.40@5.60; winter straights, $4.80@4.90; winter extras, $3.85@4; winter patents, $5@5.20.

WHEAT—Easy all morning on the cables, fine weather west and bullishness in corn; spot, No. 2 red, 97½c, nominal; No. 1 northern Duluth, 2 white, 98½c, nominal; No. 2 hard winter, 97½c, nominal.

CORN—Steady; May, 69@69½c; July, 69½@69¾c.

OATS—Dull and 1@1c lower; No. 2 white, 42½@42¾c; No. 3 white, 42c; natural, 40½@42c; clipped, 42@42½c.

BUTTER—Steady; extra western creamery, 27@27½c; do. firsts, 26½@26¾c; do. seconds, 25½@26c; do. held, 28@28½c; state dairy, 25½@26½c; do. creamery, 26@27½c.

EGGS—Steady; fair demand; fresh nearby, 17½c, at mark; fresh western, 16c, at mark; fresh southwestern, 17½c, at mark; fresh southern, 16c, at mark.

CHEESE—Quiet, but steady; New York full cream, fancy, small, 15@15½c; do. large, 14½@14¾c; New York full creams, fair to good, 14@14½c.

POTATOES—Steady; new Florida, $4.50@5.25; Long Island, $2.50@4.25; state and western, $1.75@2.25; Jersey sweets, $3.50@4.

CABBAGES—Quiet; southern, per bbl. crate, $1@1.50.

HAY—Quiet; shipping, 65@70c; good to choice, 80@90c.

HOPS—Steady; state, common to choice, 1909, 26@32c; 1908, 12@20c; olds, 9@14c. Pacific coast, 1909, 24@30c; 1908, 12@20c; olds, 9@14c.

WOOL—Firm; domestic fleece, 26@32c.

HIDES—Steady; Bogota, $24@24.50; Orinoco, $23@23.50; beef hides, $20@21.50; packer, $8.50@9.50.

PORK—Easy; family, $14.50; short clear, $14@15; mess, $13@13.50.

LIVE POULTRY—Dull; fowls lower; fowls, 12c; old roosters, 10c; spring chickens, 20@24c; broilers, 17½@18c.

DRESSED POULTRY—Steady, but quiet; fowls, 13@18c; old roosters, 10c; fair to good, 13@13½c; old roosters, 12c; roasting chickens, 20@24c; broilers, 18@22c; western dcs., fancy, 18c; choice, 16@17c; do. fair to good, 13@15c.

DRESSED MEATS—Mutton steady at 8@10c; lambs, 10@12c; veals, 10@12c; city dressed spring lambs at $20@30 per carcase; city dressed veals in fair demand and steady at 12@14c per pound; country dressed veals at 10@12c.

Live Stock Markets.

CATTLE—Supply light; market steady; choice, $5.75@6.25; prime, $5.50@5.70; fair, $4@4.30; veal calves, $4.75@6.

HOGS—Supply light; market active; prime heavy, $8@8.10; mediums, $8.05@8.10; heavy Yorkers, $8@8.05; light Yorkers, $8.10@8.15; pigs, $8@8.15; roughs, $6.75@7.25.

SHEEP AND LAMBS—Supply light; market steady; prime wethers, $5.75@6; common sheep, $2.50@3.50; choice lambs $8.10@8.25.

ODELL SIGNS BILLS

Rapid Transit and Automobile Measures Made Law.

ELSBERG BILL WAS THROWN OUT

Speed of Motor Cars Has Been Regulated to No Greater Rate Than Is Reasonable and Proper.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 4.—Governor Odell has signed the two rapid transit bills affecting New York city only introduced by Senator White. The third bill in the rapid transit series, the so called Elsberg bill, was killed by the rules committee of the assembly. One of the bills signed removes the $50,000,000 limitation upon subway bond issues and substitutes therefor such amount as may be prescribed by the board of estimate.

Governor Odell also signed the three bills of Senator Hill suppianting the automobile law of last year. The important provision affecting present holders of certificates is that they must return them, with $1, to the secretary of state for the issue of a new certificate with the old number. First registry will hereafter cost $2. Chauffeurs also must be registered with a like fee.

With reference to speed, the old detail regulations are replaced by a new provision fixing the limit at "no greater rate than is reasonable and proper" on a public highway nor so as to endanger the life or limb of any person or the safety of any property. Where the territory contiguous to the public highway is closely built up the maximum is a mile in six minutes, in city or village a mile in four minutes, elsewhere outside of a city or village a mile in three minutes.

The law takes effect at once, and thirty days are allowed for compliance.

Altogether the most important and most drastic labor law passed by the last legislature has been signed by Governor Odell.

It amends the labor law, transferring from the factory inspector to the commissioner of labor jurisdiction over tenement house manufacture. It provides that no license for such manufacture may be issued while there exists in the tenement in question any contagious, infectious or communicable disease or any connection with order or violation of the local health authorities indicating any insanitary condition. An affirmative certificate of the local health authorities must be required before the place may be licensed.

The commissioner may require any filthy or insanitary condition to be abated, and if the place habitually offends in this respect he may "cause to be affixed to the entrance door of such apartment a placard calling attention to such facts and prohibiting the manufacture, alteration, repair or finishing of said articles therein."

A Seven-year-old Hero.

BOSTON, May 4.—In spite of the heroism of her seven-year-old brother, Grace D., the infant daughter of Samuel C. Hunter, has been fatally burned here. Frank, the brother, also was seriously burned while trying to extinguish the flames, which had caught his sister's clothing while the children were playing near the kitchen stove. Unable himself to put out the fire, in spite of many burns he lifted the blazing form and carried it to another room, where his mother was, and then fell unconscious. Physicians who were called said that the girl could not recover. The boy will live.

Cannon Not a Candidate.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—"Even at the risk of being accused of declining that which I probably could not get if I desired it I answer most unequivocally that if the nomination were tendered me I would not accept it under any circumstances whatever." Thus strongly did Speaker Cannon in an authorized interview emphasize his determination with reference to the vice presidency. As he concluded dictating the statement the speaker added, "If there is any language which can be more decisive write it in."

Judge Goodwin's Appointment.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Judge Goodwin of Aurora, Ill., has been selected by Postmaster General Payne for the position of assistant attorney general for the postoffice department. The duties of this office for some time past have been filled by the Hon. Charles H. Robb, who has been appointed solicitor general for the department of justice and who took a prominent part in assisting in the investigation of the postal frauds.

Six Missing Since Storm.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 4.—The storm that swept the southern California coast last Sunday, doing much property damage and imperiling life in many instances, may have caused the death of six men who left Avalon bay, Catalina island, in a forty foot yawl during the height of the storm and who have not since been heard from. Aboard the craft was Joseph Fellows, a Terminal island boat builder, with a party of friends.

Darrach Renominated.

CLARE, Mich., May 4. — Congressman A. S. Darrach of St. Louis was renominated by acclamation here by the Republican convention of the Eleventh district. Theodore Schmidt of Reed City and Andrew B. Dougherty of Elk Rapids were selected as delegates to the national convention. The resolutions indorse President Roosevelt.

Weather Probabilities.

Partly cloudy; light winds.

ALIS CLUB SIGNS STRONG AGGREGATION

Manager Johnston Announces the Players to Represent Organization on Diamond.

SEASON OPENS MAY 7

LAUDER AND CREAGEN ARE ON THE TEAM.

Davis and Farmer the Battery—Good Support—Acellano, of Garwood, the Opponents in Opening Game.

Manager George Johnston, of the Alis baseball team, today announces his team for the season and he says that there will be no further changes, unless for reasons of accident or illness. He believes that he has got together one of the strongest teams to be found in the State and one that will be able to put up gilt-edge ball that will delight the fans.

This is the lineup:

Farmer, c; Davis, p; Mehlen, 1b; Creagen, 2b; Roberts, ss; Lauder, 3b; Barry, lf; Griffin, rf. and p; McGooey, cf.

Every one of these players have a fine record. Farmer, the catcher, comes from the Ingersoll-Sergeant team of Phillipsburg, and is considered one of the strongest backstops in that section of the State. "Lefty" Davis, who will occupy the box, made a good record at Scotch Plains for two years and was a puzzle to all teams in this vicinity. Mehlen, who will play the initial bag, comes from the Columbia College team, having played that position successfully last season. One of the star men signed is Creagen for second base. He played with the Cincinnati National League team last season and is playing Sunday games this season with the crack Hoboken team. Robert, who will cover short-stop, comes from the North Ends, of Phillipsburg, as does McGoey, who will look after centre garden. Both men are considered very fast players. Still another star for the team is "Billy" Lauder, of last year's New York National League team. He will play his old position at third base. Every one who follows the National game is acquainted with Lauder's ability.

Barry, of the Murray Hills, has been signed to play left field and Griffin will cover right field and be a change pitcher. With this combination, Manager Johnston is sure he will give the baseball loving public an article of ball second to none in this vicinity. The team is not only strong in the batting department, but in their respective positions are rated as top-notchers.

The season will open Saturday, May 7, with the Acellan team, of Garwood. This team has been playing great ball this season, not having lost a game. Every Alis man ought to be at Crescent Oval and witness the start of the baseball season and see the result of Manager Johnston's efforts.

C. B. BROKAW WEDS.

Miss Anna Kirkpatrick VanArsdale the Bride at Nuptial Event on Saturday Afternoon.

By a pretty ceremony on Saturday afternoon, in the presence of the immediate relatives, Miss Anna Kirkpatrick VanArsdale, daughter of Mrs. John K. VanArsdale, was married to Clarence Bowne Brokaw, of New York city. The wedding took place at the home of the bride's aunts, the Misses Elliott, of 521 Madison avenue. The ceremony was performed at 5 o'clock by the Rev. Garrett Millon Conover, of West Nyack, N. Y., a brother-in-law of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Brokaw will reside in New York city.

DELEGATES' SEATS.

New Arrangements to be Made at Republican State Convention.

An innovation will be made in the seating of delegates at the coming State Republican convention at Trenton, May 10.

Each delegate will be given a coupon entitling him to a numbered seat and two ushers acquainted with the opera house seats will be in attendance and seat the visitors.

The convention will be composed of 920 delegates. For their seating the entire lower floor and two-thirds of the balcony will be required.

Horse Show Committee.

This is the complete executive committee in charge of the horse show to be held at the Plainfield Driving Park on Friday and Saturday, June 17 and 18: Lewis E. Waring, chairman; Dr. M. O'M. Knott, secretary; assistant secretary, William S. Blitz; treasurer, J. Herbert Case; Charles J. Fisk, Francis DeLacy Hyde, Daniel F. Gimus, J. Wesley Johnson, William J. Battfield, George P. Mellick, Robert A. Fairbairn, Henry A. Talmadge, Jr., George A. Beston, Orville T. Wartig.

PRIEST LECTURES ON AN IRISH POET

Father Clifford Tells of the Life and Works of Thomas Osborn Davis.

INTERESTING SKETCH

ADDRESS IN ST. MARY'S SCHOOL HALL WELL ATTENDED.

Father Egan Introduces Speaker—Miss Daley and Joseph O'Keefe Sing—Two Hundred and Fifty People Present.

Father Egan's promise of an intellectual treat, made in the course of his introduction of Father Clifford, Thursday, was amply fulfilled by the latter's lecture on "Thomas Osborn Davis, the Irish poet," delivered in St. Mary's School hall last night. An audience numbering more than two hundred and fifty, listened with deep and appreciative attention to Father Clifford's remarks. He spoke substantially as follows:

"Among the more prominent because more politically active figures of the time of O'Connell and his colleagues, the life and work of Thomas Osborn Davis have been all but forgotten by the great majority of Irishmen. This man, a Protestant Irish banister, who, during his short three years of activity, proved a greater potential force in forming and guiding the ideas and aims of the reading public of Ireland, has left behind him a greater testimonial to his true worth in the ineffaceble results of his work, than in the fame which makes a man's name a familiar sound on the lips of the publib.

"Born in 1813, in Munster, of a Buckinghamshire family, the second in point of consideration, in Wales, his mother being the granddaughter of the Earl of Carlisle, Davis was of a rather solitary disposition throughout his boyhood.

"So much so in fact that by his own family he was considered rather dull and backward. Later, although he secured his degree at Trinity College, Dublin he took no honors, being held in about the same estimation by his companions as fomerly by his relatives.

"While practising law in Dublin after his graduation from Trinity college, Davis became interested with Charles Gavin Duffy, who later became prime minister of Victoria, and others in the publishing of a paper, the Dublin Nation, which by opening new avenues of thoughts, so stirred the general public of Ireland that the efforts of even the mighty O'Connell, that giant among agitators, appeared tame by comparison.

"For three years the wonderful flow of inspired verse from Davis' pen continued to feed the fire it had kindled. Then after an illness with pneumonia, lasting but two days the singer died in the full prime of his powers, deeply mourned by the whole Celtic race. But his work did not die with him, for the futile struggle of 1848 was a protest against insufferable condition by men whose souls the longing for liberty had been fostered by his writings.

"The present day efforts looking to a fuller measure of national existence for Ireland are in no small measure the outcome of Davis' scheme of reform, which by its logical superiority, has outlived the plans of those who appealed more to men's passions than their reason.

The lecture which was given under the auspices of the Holy Name Society, was preceded by a solo by Miss Anna Daley. Following Father Clifford's remarks, Joseph O'Keefe sang, accompanied on the piano by William O'Keefe. Miss Smith accompanied Miss Daley.

TROLLEY SERVICE.

Public Service Corporation's Arrangements for the Through Line.

Colonel E. W. Hine, assistant to President T. N. McCarter, of the Public Service Corporation, says that the trolley company will have through cars running between Trenton and Jersey City before the end of June.

Traffic Superintendent Ackerman and Auditor Mat Rovlan passed through this city on Tuesday in a special car, on a trip over the route for the purpose of securing data to form the basis for the arrangement of a schedule and the issue of tickets. They left Jersey City about 9 o'clock, and reached Trenton in about four hours.

There were many delays on this trip. When these are removed it is expected to cover the distance between Jersey City and the State Capital in about five hours. The present arrangements provide for four cars running each way between Trenton and Jersey City.

Edward A. Laing, of East Front street, has recovered from an attack of the grip.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, MAY 19, 1904. NO. 20.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

SIXTEEN MUSICIANS FOR CONCERT BAND

First of the Open Air Musical Feasts Scheduled for Latter Part of June.

ALREADY $400 RAISED

BANDMASTER LA VERE ENGAGES SOME NEW YORK SOLOISTS.

Emil Weber to Play the Bass Horn—Albert Zimmerman, of the Metropolitan Opera House, Engaged As a French Horn Player.

Benjamin LaVere is gradually completing his plans for the series of summer band concerts to be given in the borough. He has decided to cross the brook because the greatest amount of money toward the enterprise has been contributed by boroughites and he feels that it is only right that they should profit by the concerts. As yet Mr. LaVere has not decided on the exact spot where the concerts will be given. He has under consideration the corner of Fairview and Watchung avenues, the place selected last year, while he is also considering the vacant lot near Tier's pond, a proposition having been made for that place.

The first concert will be given either on Thursday night, June 23 or 30. It is proposed to hold all of the concerts on Thursday night and there will be one each week. At present there is $400 in the treasury toward the expense of the concerts and an additional sum will be needed to carry out the plan of giving a certain number of entertainments. The people of Plainfield and the borough were not very generous in their patronage of the minstrel show given to raise funds for the concerts. It is estimated that $800 was realized as profit. There were only 474 admission tickets sold at fifty cents each and in addition there were thirty-four complimentary tickets. This does not discourage Mr. LaVere, however, for he intends to give the two towns one of the best series of concerts in their history.

At every concert there will be some vocal soloist of prominence, including William Redmond and William Murray, of New York. Other soloists from Whitmark & Son and J. J. Nestor, New York, will also appear and it is likely that there will be at least one soprano soloist.

There will be also some changes in the band of sixteen pieces. Emil Weber, who has been playing the bass horn with Victor Herbert's orchestra, will be among the new members, as will also William Tuson, the celebrated clarinet player. Another new face will be Albert Zimmerman, French horn player, who has been at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, for several seasons. William Zimmerman, trombone player of the 71st Regiment N. G. N. Y., will also be a new member. Louis Otte, the famous piccolo and flute player, of Newark, and Charles Agney, the celebrated trap drummer, of the Newark Theatre, will be added to the band. Luther LaVere, brother of Benjamin LaVere, who is playing the trombone and baritone horn at Blaney's, Newark, will return, while the old favorites, Al. Sweet and Louis Anderson, cornetists, will again be heard here.

Mr. LaVere intends giving a programme of popular music at every concert, opening with some standard overture. He says that if the proper support is given he will entertain the public to the "queen's taste," and it is to be hoped that liberal support will be accorded him in his undertaking.

Mr. Millar's Vacation.

Alexander Millar, secretary of the Union Pacific Railroad, left last Thursday for Europe, intending to take a quiet little vacation for two months, most of which he expects to spend in Germany. Mr. Millar has been connected with the Union Pacific for the past thirty-two years and is regarded as one of the hardest working officials of that system.—N. Y. Times.

Fountain in Service.

The public drinking trough recently ordered by the city has been located on West Front street, near Grant avenue, and is now in use. It will undoubtedly be a great benefit to horses during the summer months as there is much constant travel at that point.

—Pure olive oil is one of the specialties Neuman Bros. offer. It ought to interest housewives, because pure olive oil is not easy to get in this country. Neuman Bros. sell their own importation, by the gallon, half-gallon, quart and pint.

CHILDREN HONOR PRIEST

FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF ORDINATION OF FATHER SMYTH OBSERVED.

After the mass yesterday morning in celebration of the fortieth anniversary of the Very Rev. F. E. Smyth's ordination to the priesthood was over at St. Joseph's R. C. church, Jersey City, the rector was given a reception in Pavonia Hall by the parochial school children.

They presented their pastor with a handsome desk and revolving chair of golden oak, a basket of roses and a beautifully engraved scroll containing forty prayers, each one offered forty times by the sisters and the children of the school. The scroll was handsomely framed.

Tableaux, recitations and songs by the junior boys and girls were pleasant features of the occasion. Father Smyth was formerly pastor of St. Mary's church here.

FILMORE BAPTISTS IN TROUBLE

FINANCIAL EMBARRASSMENT PREVENTS CONGREGTION PAYING FOR CHURCH.

Financial embarrassment and the loss of their house of worship have been added to the other troubles of the Fillmore Avenue Baptist church, colored. Yesterday the church was taken from the possession of the congregation by the owners, in default of payments of money due.

About a year ago the church, which is owned by the heirs of the late Salome Schenkecker, was turned over to the congregation under an agreement calling for monthly payments from the latter. These payments have lapsed, and yesterday William G. De-Mess, Esq., the representative of the heirs, acting under instructions from his clients, took possession of the property. It is valued at about $1,500.

The lawyer did not know just what the owners intended to do with the property, but he said he did not believe it would be turned over to the congregation again.

It is only about four months ago that the congregation was torn in two by sensational charges of misconduct against its pastor, Rev. E. J. Crudup. He was indicted on one of two accusations and brought to trial. The jury disagreed. It is said that the church, through the various troubles brought on it, is on the verge of dissolution.

New Fast Freight Line.

A new fast freight line, to be known as the Jersey Central Dispatch Line, is to go into operation on June 1. This line will include the Central Railroad of New Jersey and its connections and the Lake Shore and the Michigan Central, with their connections. The tracks of the New York Central's new north and south line will be used from the junction of that line with the Central of New Jersey. The Vanderbilt system, through the Lake Shore road, is heavily interested in the Reading, which owns a controlling interest in the Central Railroad of New Jersey.

To Extend Sanitary Sewers.

For the purpose of making it possible for the officers of the Mary Morgan Fresh Air Home to connect the institution with the sanitary system of sewers, the Common Council will meet tomorrow night and take the proper action. Last year this Home was dependent upon cesspools, but owing to their condition, this cannot be done this year. Before the Home can be opened the sewer connection must be made and the Council will meet to give the necessary permission. It is being planned to open the Home July 1.

Mrs. Hazard Buried.

Very simple were the funeral services of Mrs. Russell Hazard, of Vine street, North Plainfield, yesterday. Rev. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, preached the funeral discourse which was followed by singing by the Heavenly Rest Quartette. The pall-bearers were Frank Krewson, Mr. Taylor, C. B. Pope and R. R. VanArsdale. Interment was in the North Plainfield Cemetery.

A May Tea.

Invitations have been sent out by Mrs. Edward Lee Suffern and her daughter, Miss Suffern, of Sycamore avenue, for a tea to be given in honor of Mrs. Ernest Salisbury Suffern, of Elizabeth on Thursday, May 26, from 4 to 8 o'clock.

Intruders Warned Off.

The managers of the Grossman School on the fountains were obliged to ask for police protection on Sunday. On account of the many children at the school the management is obliged to keep curious persons off the ground.

MAYOR BILL SMITH, GIVES A BLOW-OUT

New Market's Magnate Entertains the Village Band and Some Personal Friends.

NOT A BIT STUCK UP

CHAMPAGNE IS SERVED TO GUESTS IN BEER GLASSES.

Feasting at Dent's Hotel—Band Plays "O Paradise" When the Good Things Are Placed on the Table.

Mayor Bill Smith unloosed some more of the Fair millions at New Market last night. The New Market Band, which the village magnate has taken under his monied wing, and a number of friends and adherents of all sorts and conditions were his guests at what the natives speak of as a real swell dinner.

The function was held in Dent's Hotel, the dining room of which was given entirely over to the Mayor for the evening. Mayor Bill has planned to start on a long automobile tour today, and the dinner was in the nature of a farewell.

A long table was set with a lavish display of oblanware, silver and linen. Everything that is supposed to appear at a millionaire's table was out in a way that dazzled the guests.

Mayor Bill set out to do the honors in the proper way, and nothing was lacking for the complete enjoyment of the village bon vivants. Mayor Bill ordered that all speechmaking be cut out, and there was nothing to interfere with the free and rapid discussion of the "swell" menu.

The chief glory of the table was real champagne. Not the American imitation, but the actual, imported fizzy wine, sign and symbol of unlimited wealth and high life. Most of the diners were somewhat in awe of the sizzling refreshment and the consumption of it was attended with a certain degree of restraint. When a native tackled the champagne—it was served in "short" beer glasses—he drank it with a gravity of countenance that suggested a rare and sacred ceremony.

The band members had their instruments with them and discoursed sweet and fitting music at intervals. When the dinner was announced the players drew mighty breaths and played "O Paradise."

Mayor Bill was busy in consultation with his New York lawyers at his home early in the evening, and did not arrive at the hotel until 9 o'clock. When he entered the dining room the band played "Hail the Conquering Hero Comes." The Mayor shoved his hat back on his head and bowed. He was not in evening dress.

After the dinner, and when the last of the real champagne had gone the way of all good wines, the Mayor leaned back in his chair with a benign and satisfied expression on his face. "This is something like," he said. "I'm not a bit stuck up about it, either. I'm going to get all that's coming to me, but I'm Bill Smith all the time and my friends can come in on it right along." The band played "I Love You as I Never Did Before."

If the Mayor's plans are carried out he will begin his tour this afternoon. He aims to travel to San Francisco, stopping at the St. Louis Fair on the way out. He will be accompanied by a machinist who will keep the big touring car in trim.

J. Bevitt Steele Engaged.

An engagement of interest to a number of Plainfielders is that of J. Nevin Steele, son of Rev. J. Nevin Steele, vicar of old Trinity church, New York, to Miss Elizabeth Condon, of Providence, R. I. Mr. Steele is a brother of Mrs. Theodore Morris, of Myrtle avenue and Mrs. Leon Morse, of Grove street, and he is also a relative of Thomas U. Dudley, of Park place.

Second Paralytic Stroke.

P. J. McAndrews, of 140 North avenue, suffered another partial stroke of paralysis on Monday and is now confined to his bed. Less than a week ago he was feeling much better than ever and had strong hopes of complete recovery. It will probably be some time before he can leave the house again.

Concert Postponed.

Owing to serious illness in the family of one of the members of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church choir the concert to have been given in Grace M. E. church tomorrow night, is unavoidably postponed.

EXPLAINED PRINTING METHOD

A. B. LUCE TOLD CAMERA CLUB MEMBERS HOW TO DO GUM PRINTING.

A. B. Luce gave a lecture on gum printing at the rooms of the Plainfield Camera Club, last night. There was a large attendance of amateur photographers and the demonstration of the style of printing was of special interest to them. One advantage about gum printing is that it can be done in the light and under general conditions, whereas with other kinds of printing the conditions are restrictive.

TO PRACTICE ON NEW RANGE

CO. K PLANS TO AVOID UNNECESSARY NOISE AT ARMORY.

Rifle practice will be systematically inaugurated shortly by Co. K on the seventy-five foot armory range which has been installed for that purpose. In order to obviate excessive noise and unnecessary expense the sub-caliber system is to be employed. This consists of using in the regulation Krag-Jorgensen rifle, a cartridge powerful enough to do the short range work called for and yet smaller and consequently cheaper than the service cartridge.

The cartridge used is the well known Smith & Wesson, caliber .32. A steel tube chambered for this cartridge is fitted into the chamber of the rifle, practically rechambering it to suit the smaller shell. The size of the ball, which is of soft lead so nearly approximates that of the regulation steel-jacketed ball that very accurate work can be done on a range where the other load would prove unsatisfactory, if not dangerous.

HAD A NARROW ESCAPE

JOHN HUBBARD TUMBLED INTO SOUTH PLAINFIELD POND WHILE FISHING.

Struggling to land a big catfish, John Hubbard, of Central avenue, overturned the boat in which he and John Welsh were fishing in South Plainfield pond yesterday afternoon. Hubbard had a narrow escape from drowning.

Hubbard and Welsh were angling near the upper end of the pond when the former got a heavy bite. The fish was an unusually big one, and developed a surprising amount of gameness. He held back and struggled so hard for a few seconds that Hubbard began to play him. The catfish lost his gameness suddenly, and the taut line slackened so unexpectedly that Hubbard lost his balance. He fell against the side of the boat and turned it, dumping Welsh and himself into the water. All their traps, including two guns and some ammunition tumbled in with them.

Hubbard cannot swim, and would have drowned but for the assistance of his companion. They were taken home, drenched and shivering, in a carriage. The guns were recovered with the aid of rakes fastened to long poles. As usual, the big fish got away.

MANY CHANGES IN TIMETABLE

NEW SCHEDULE OF B. AND O. AND THE READING AS EFFECTING PLAINFIELD.

The new time tables of the Baltimore and Ohio and the Reading systems, which use the Jersey Central's tracks between Bound Brook and New York, show many important changes which affect this city, a number of trains stopping here as usual.

The eastbound Royal Blue train, which formerly stopped on signal at 12:58 in the afternoon, now stops at Elizabeth only. The 9:59 for New York on night, has been changed one minute and now comes in at 9:58.

Changes among the westbound trains are more numerous, including the following: The Royal Blue train at 9:12 in the morning, for Washington, is changed to 8:51 and the 10:44, although by an error set down on the time table as making Plainfield a regular stop, will stop on signal only. The 11:14, in the morning, another Royal Blue liner, has been changed to 10:51 and the 1:39 in the afternoon has been changed to 1:25.

The Philadelphia and Reading road has put on a new train at 1:39 in the afternoon, so the B. and O. change to 2:45 will not be accompanied by any inconvenience to Plainfielders. The 4:18 in the afternoon will no longer make Plainfield a stop but a new Sunday train, the 5:37, has been put on. A new Sunday train is the 6:45 in the evening.

JAPANESE COMMAND THE SITUATION NOW

Mikado's Forces Now Block 100,000 Russian Troops From Retreating.

RUSSIANS AT MUKDEN

KUROPATKIN'S MOVE PLACES HIM BETWEEN OPPOSING FORCES.

Japs are Entrenched Above Mukden in Great Numbers—Newchwang Said to be Evacuated.

London, May 18—The Japanese army is in full possession of the Liaotung Peninsula, with the exception of Port Arthur, and despatches received here say that 100,000 Russians are hemmed in by an army of 180,000 Japanese.

The Russians have evacuated Newchwang, where the Japanese have landed. The Japanese, the despatches say, also have landed at Kaiping.

A tremendous battle between the main body of the Russians and the Japanese was imminent, until Gen. Kuropatkin, in command of the Czar's troops withdrew to Mukden.

The Japanese are reported to be entrenched above Mukden in great numbers and this move of Kuropatkin's is believed to have placed him between opposing forces.

MISS RANSOM WEDS.

Becomes the Wife of Hamdon T. Allis Down, An English Ranch Owner.

Hamdon T. Allis Down, an English ranch owner from Wyoming, and Miss Katherine Ransom, of New York, a former resident of this city, were married here very quietly Tuesday by Rev. W. Montgomery Downey. Only the necessary witnesses were present.

The groom is well-to-do and owns a large cattle farm. He and his bride will take a trip to his old home in England, and upon their return will take up their residence on the ranch. They expect to be back in this country by the end of next month.

Would Enjoin Jr. O. U. A. M.

The State Council of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics obtained an order from Vice Chancellor Pitney at Trenton yesterday, requiring the national council to show cause at Newark on May 30 why it should not be enjoined from instituting or pretending to institute any subordinate lodges of the order in this State and from acting or pretending to act as a council of the order in New Jersey. The State Council also says that the national body be enjoined from using the name of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics of the State of New Jersey or any abbreviation thereof. The national council has already four subordinate councils in the State and has declared its intentions of organizing a State council as soon as a fifth has been formed.

Charity Production Netted $300.

Although the production entailed heavy expense, the net receipts from the "Taming of the Shrew" presentation at the Casino will net about $300. This money will be divided among local charity organizations. The friends of the latter are pleased that the more or less general report that the production had been practically a financial failure is wholly untrue.

To Tell of India.

Mrs. Abby Barnell, dressed in the costume of a high class Hindu woman, will speak at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, tonight, on the life and customs of India. She will speak from the position of a native woman. The talk will occupy the time usually devoted to weekly prayer-meeting.

Memorial Day in Schools.

The North Plainfield schools will celebrate Decoration Day on May 27 with special exercises. A detail of G. A. R. men will visit the schools and *talk to the children on the mean*ing of the day. Music Instructor Edmund V. Shiff is preparing a special programme for the occasion.

Picnic Ground in Borough.

Union Cove, in North Plainfield, is being prepared for picnic use. A lot of new tables are being put around the grounds, and a large dancing platform will be erected.

SENATOR CROSS TO DECLINE

IT IS RUMORED THAT HE WILL REFUSE THE APPOINTMENT.

It was said at Trenton on good authority yesterday that Senator Cross, of Union County, will decline the appointment as judge of the United States District Court for the district of New Jersey to succeed the late Andrew Kirkpatrick.

Senator Cross was given to understand last week that he could have the appointment if he desired it, and he has had the matter under consideration since then. He has concluded, it was said yesterday, to inform those from whom the offer came that while he greatly appreciated the honor which the appointment would confer upon him, he would be obliged to decline it for purely personal reasons.

ANTIETAM COMMAND'S AFFAIR

DEPARTMENT STAFF OFFICERS VISIT LOCAL ORGANIZATION OF VETERANS.

Gen. Garrison, commanding the department of New York and New Jersey, accompanied by Col. West, Past Gen. H. Seward and Officer of the Day Isaac Carver, visited Antietam Command, No. 8, Union Veterans' Union, last night, as the guests of the Women's Veterans' Relief Union.

The orders of the evening included speeches from all of the visitors and the following members of the command: Gen. J. R. Naylor, Colorbearer Henry O. Frazee and C. M. Rayhers.

Several other numbers, including piano selections by Mrs. Hattie Gibbons, recitation by Mrs. Cox and a song by Samuel Frazee, to his own accompaniment on the violin. At 11 o'clock refreshments were served and the gathering broke up, some of them seeing the visitors off on the 11:28 train for New York. Antietam Command, together with the Relief Union, was invited by Department Commander Garrison to attend the New York and New Jersey encampment at Waterloo, N. Y., June 13 and 14.

State Exempts' Meeting.

The North Plainfield Firemen's Exempt Association has five representatives at the meeting of the State Exempt Association in Englewood today. The delegation is made up of George Fairchild, William Debele, Charles Keller, James Walker. Chief Woolston *is entitled to a seat at the meeting ex*officio.

Application for affiliation with the State organization will be made in behalf of the borough exempts. No doubt that they will be admitted is entertained.

Abe Naar in Trouble.

Abraham de A. Naar, of Trenton, a former sergeant-at-arms of the New Jersey Democratic State committee, was arrested late Monday afternoon at Newark and locked up at police headquarters on a charge of passing a worthless check for $55 on Mrs. Eva Johnson, wife of E. R. Johnson, proprietor of the Washington Hotel at Morristown, in payment for board for himself and a young woman companion, whom he claims is his wife.

Express Trolley Accident.

The first accident of the new Trenton through line occurred yesterday morning in Bound Brook. The front of the car, due here shortly after 11 o'clock, was damaged by a hay wagon. The wagon ran over the front of the fender, smashing the glass of the vestibule and breaking the fender. There were no casualties although the passengers were badly scared for a few seconds. The accident delayed the car for some time.

Association Juniors Won.

The Y. M. C. A. Juniors defeated the Leal's Seconds on the Myrtle avenue grounds yesterday afternoon by the score of 14 to 10. Rowland, the Leal's left fielder, made a star catch in the fifth inning on which he made a double play. Browne and Hinchwitz both pitched good ball.

Bishop at Holy Cross.

Bishop Scarborough will visit the Holy Cross church Sunday evening at 8 o'clock to administer confirmation. The offering will be given to the Bishop for the Discretionary Fund in behalf of the missionary work of the diocese.

Terrill Road C. K.

The street work on Terrill road has been completed by the city. The Fanwood section of the road-way is in what the borough authorities call first class shape, so that the whole street is now in condition for summer traffic.

A Chinese Social.

The Standard Bearers, of Monroe Avenue church, will hold a Chinese social in Epworth House Friday night.

WHITTIER BASEBALL TEAM ENTERTAINMENT

Large Audience Enjoys a Lengthy Programme Replete With Good Numbers.

TEACHERS INTERESTED

FLOWER DRILL BY SIXTEEN GIRLS CLAD IN WHITE.

Six Boys Sing the Tinker's Chorus From Robin Hood—A One-Act Farce Well Received—Those Taking Part.

Marked success attended the entertainment for the benefit of the Whittier School baseball team, in Franklin School hall Tuesday. The programme was a delightful one, delightfully rendered. An audience that taxed the capacity of the hall to its limit was present.

Music, recitations, a flower drill and amateur theatricals were included in the varied bill. All the numbers were rendered with a degree of cleverness that merited the hearty applause which punctuated the entertainment at frequent intervals.

Chief among the special features of the programme was the flower drill, in which sixteen girls, clad in white and carrying big garlands of roses, took part. Under the direction of Miss Addie Parker Jackson, the physical culture instructor of the schools, they went through a drill that was almost a dazzling spectacle. Miss Louise Davis played the musical accompaniment to the drill. The girls who took part were Ethel Rogers, Helen Rogers, Katherine Gray, Cora Gray, Eva Kelly, Florence Dicken, Fanny Carr, Caroline Lambert, Mabel Cook, Marion VanHorn, Lillian Cummings, Marion Praed, Florence Phillips, Florence Johnston and Carrie Oruiokshank.

The musical feature of the bill was the singing of the Tinker's Chorus from Robin Hood by six boys. The singers were in costume, and made the usual pretense of mending brand new tins as they caroled. Mrs. Charles L. Lewis was the accompanist. The "sinners" were Elmer Bobeu, Frederick Gray, Herbert Grant, Stanley Foster, John Morrison and Roy Whitehall.

"The Shakespeare Club," a one act farce, produced a lot of laughter. The seven girls in the cast enacted their parts with a high degree of skill, and deserved the warm applause that rewarded them. The cast included Irene Dunham, Elizabeth Pound, Louise Davis, Catherine Knox, Helen Timpson, Caroline Lambert and Grace Weeks.

Other numbers on the bill included a mandolin solo by Chester Briggs, vocal solos by Miss Marie Newman, trios by the Misses Shupp and O. K. Shupp. They were as warmly applauded as the rest of the performers. Miss M. Stephanie Krom charmed the audience with a recitation.

To Miss Day and her corps of teachers, who worked hard in arranging the affair, the young baseball players owe a big debt for the success of their money-making venture. Miss Jackson contributed largely to the results by most effective drilling of the flower girls and the cast of the farce, and Music Instructor C. L. Lewis helped materially by training the boys in the Tinker Chorus.

Birthday Party.

The Little Missionary Day Nursery, 93 St. Marks place, New York, held its eighth annual birthday party at the Seventh Street M. E. church on Monday. Many of the children have been with Miss Curry since she started the work, and show under what careful training they have been. They were all dressed in white. The receipts from the entertainment were $290. Miss Curry leaves for Atlantic City for a much needed rest after a very hard winter's work.

Ready for Church Concert.

The concert at the Congregation church tomorrow night for the benefit of the Swedish Pilgrim church, promises to be one of the best of the season. This church is very much in need of funds and an opportunity is now offered the public to enjoy a fine concert and at the same time aid a worthy cause.

Epworth League Social.

The last social of the season will be held by the First M. E. Epworth League Friday night. The affair will be a "picture sociable," and much enjoyment of novel nature is expected from it. The social committee is in charge.

DAINTY DINNER MENU

APPETIZING DISHES THAT WILL PLEASE AN EPICURE.

How to Cook, Prepare and Serve It to Best Advantage—Practical Recipes for Practical People.

—DINNER—
Chiffonade.
Soles a la Duchesse.
Fillets of Beef a la Rothschild.
Mousse of Ham.
Boudin de Maintes.
Roast Pheasants.
Chestnut Cream.
Fruit and Coffee.

Soles a la Duchesse.—Ingredients: One pair soles filleted, butter, two eggs. Cream, milk, seasoning, chopped parsley.

Brush the fillets over with warm butter, season them with salt and pepper, and put them into an enamelled dish which has been buttered, then pour in sufficient milk to cover the fish, place a piece of buttered paper over them and cook in a moderately hot oven for 20 minutes. Take the fillets very carefully from the baking dish and arrange them so that they just overlap down the middle of a silver dish, and keep them hot. Pour the milk in which the fish was cooked into a saucepan, and stir in a teaspoonful of creve de riz which has been mixed with a tablespoonful of cream, and when the sauce has boiled add a few drops of anchovy vinegar and the yolks of two eggs beaten up with a tablespoonful of cream. Stir the sauce quickly for a few seconds, taking care to remove the pan the instant it thickens, then mask the fillets with it, and after arranging a little line of finely chopped parsley along the top of each fillet, pour the remainder of the sauce round the dish and serve.

FILLETS OF BEEF A LA ROTHSCHILD.

Fillets of Beef a la Rothschild.—Ingredients: Two pounds fillet of beef, 18 oysters, one-half gill cream, three ounces of butter, one ounce of flour, one yolk of a raw egg. Seasoning, glaze, chopped parsley, mashed potato, thick tomato sauce flavored with wine.

Cut the beef into neat rounds, rather less than an inch in thickness, and place in a pickle composed of four tablespoonfuls of salad oil, one tablespoonful of vinegar, two shallots, minced, a bay leaf, a flour of black pepper and nutmeg. When the meat has been in the pickle for three or four hours, take out the fillets, wipe them, and fry them quickly in hot butter over a very quick fire; as soon as they are done brush them over with warm glaze, arrange each on a little circle of mashed potato, and place an oyster quenelle in the middle, and surround the fillets with thick tomato sauce. For the quenelles, melt one ounce of butter in a small saucepan and add into it the flour, then add the cream, and continue to stir until the mixture is very thick and perfectly smooth; season it with salt, pepper, and nutmeg, and spread it on a plate to cool. Scald the oysters in their own liquor, and when they are cool pound them in a mortar, gradually adding the prepared panada, and finally the yolk of an egg. Rub the farce through a fine wire sieve and form it into little quenelles; poach them in some veal broth, and after draining them roll them in chopped parsley and use as directed.

Mousse of Ham.—Ingredients: Eight ounces of lean cooked ham, three-fourths pint cream, one-half pint aspic jelly. Wine, seasoning and coloring.

CREAM OF CHESTNUTS.

Pound the ham in a mortar, using a little cream to soften it, until it is reduced to a smooth paste, then rub it through a sieve, and mix it with half a pint of stiffly whipped cream; season the mixture with salt, pepper and nutmeg; color it with sufficient carmine to make it a clear red, and then pour in (while it is in the impressionable all the time) the aspic jelly, which should be cool but still liquid, and a tablespoonful of chablis. Fill an ice mold with the mousse and freeze it in the ordinary way.

Chestnut Cream.—Ingredients One pound chestnuts, syrup, liqueur, one pint of cream. Crystallized violets, marrows, glaces.

Boil the chestnuts until they are quite tender but not soft enough to break; remove the outer and inner skins and stew them in a thick colorless syrup flavored with curacoa or any other suitable liqueur, until they are quite soft and clear. Pass them through a sieve into a basin and stir in gradually the cream, which must be stiffly whisked, slightly sweetened and flavored with vanilla. Arrange the cream in a deep silver dish, piling it up well, then decorate it with preserved violets, and round the base with marrow, glaces, and put the stand on ice for an hour before it is required.

MAKES GOOD CITIZEN

Russian Grand Duke Would Rule Country School.

Banished Prince Seeks Place on Rural Committee in England—Exiled by Czar Because He Was True to His Love.

One can hardly imagine a more unusual proceeding than that of a Russian nobleman, and a grand duke, too, supervising the destinies of a country school district in one of the quietest corners of England, but, despite the incongruity, this is just what a cousin of Czar Nicholas II. is prepared to do. This is the Grand Duke Michael, who, until quite recently, lived under the strictest degree of banishment from Russia because his marriage displeased the father of the present czar. Since his banishment his serene highness has lived in England, and now he has come forward as candidate for a seat on the school committee of the local council of Staffordshire county, in which he has his home.

No one in London who knew society in 1890 and 1891 has forgotten the romance which surrounds this prince of the royal blood. When first he met the beautiful Sophie Merenburg, Countess Torby, Grand Duke Michael was an important officer in the Russian army, a close friend of his cousin, the czar, and an acknowledged leader in Russian society. As soon as he married, however, he was deprived of his rank and two-thirds of his estates, stripped of his military uniform, and banished from his country, apparently for life.

The bride for whom Duke Michael sacrificed so much is the eldest of two daughters of the German prince, Nicholas of Nassau. She was born countess of Merenburg, but upon her marriage with the grand duke was granted her present title by the head of her father's house—the grand duke of Luxembourg.

Apart from the difference in rank between the two there could hardly have been a more admirable match. Both the grand duke and countess were favorites in European society. They were, indeed, among Queen Victoria's personal friends, just as they are among those of King Edward to-day.

GRAND DUKE MICHAEL.
(Banished Russian Prince Who Seeks Humble English Office.)

Nothing of this, however, served to appease Czar Alexander III. when this ruler heard of his engagement. He declared that if the duke married the countess Russia's court and Russian society would be closed to him. And when the grand duke persisted the czar carried out his threat.

It became thoroughly evident that the intercession promptly made by Queen Victoria and other friends of the exiled duke could not persuade Alexander III. to rescind his decree, the banished nobleman settled down to spend the rest of his days in England. He took Keele hall, seat of the ancient Sneyd family since the reign of Edward III., and most of the summers of his happy married life have been spent here. The present house, although quite modern, is built on the lines of the Tudor pile, constructed by Ralph Sneyd in the sixteenth century, and contains many treasures.

Both the duke and his wife are enthusiastic golfers, and at Cannes, where they usually spend their winters, they are the chief spirits of the local club. The duke's chief recreations, aside from golf, are music, motoring and photography, the former being heartily shared by his wife. Beside being an excellent performer, he is something of a composer.

While the duke felt his ostracism keenly during the years of banishment from Russia, he mingled freely with English society and seldom failed to appear with his wife at the smartest London functions. It is understood that King Edward made a personal request that the grand duke be restored to his former position. At the coronation Duke Michael and his wife were among the personal guests of King Edward, and his majesty has frequently been seen "at home" in the shadow of the great holly hedge at Keele hall.

Auto Story from Florida.

In Florida recently, so the story goes, an alligator was chasing a "pick aninny" across a road, when suddenly a 20 horse-power automobile struck the reptile, breaking its neck. The only damage to the car was the puncture, caused by one of the alligator's teeth. The reptile is to be stuffed and presented by the driver of the car to the Automobile Club of America.

Radium Earth in Texas.

Valuable radium bearing earth has been discovered in the Llano gold and coal fields, 115 miles north of Austin, Tex. News of the discovery was brought by a party of scientists who had visit ed the mines.

CARING FOR WOUNDED

HOSPITAL ARRANGEMENTS OF RUSSIANS AND JAPANESE.

Both Are Striving to Alleviate the Sufferings of the Soldiers at the Front—Interest of Royalty.

Even those who most lament "the good old times" are bound to admit that as regards sanitary science, and especially all that concerns surgery and the ambulance service generally, an amazing change for the better has taken place even during the last 30 years.

Thanks in a measure to the admirably organized international Red Cross societies, both the Japanese and Russian wounded may look to be splendidly cared for, and the fortunate Japs will have the highly trained aid of a large contingent of American nurses and doctors; while Admiral Sir S. Cyprian Bridges has offered the use of the British naval hospital at Yokohama to the Japanese minister of marine.

The Japanese people are showing extraordinary interest in this humane side of war. Enormous sums are being freely subscribed to the various ambulance funds, and "the Empress of the Spring" is busying herself with the preparations which are still being actively carried forward in connection with the base hospitals. Her Japanese majesty, Harru Ko, long before there was any thought of war, used to visit regularly the Women and Children's hospital in Tokio, and from time to time the other houses of healing.

Japanese doctors are noted for their skill in surgery, and many of those who are now at the front studied in the great American medical schools, as well as in Paris and Berlin. It is a curious and rather deplorable fact that of the two great French Red Cross societies, both admirably equipped with every kind of ambulance requisite only one has consented to distribute its favors impartially between the Russians and the Japs; the other will place its self only at the disposal of France's great ally.

RUSSIAN AMBULANCE AT WORK IN WINTER.

The prime mover in all Russia's ambulance work and Red Cross societies is the Grand Duchess Vladimir, who in her own expense is organizing and equipping a hospital train. Her imperial highness is an excellent organizer, and the state rooms of her palace are now daily filled with members of Russian society, who work hard from one p. m. till 11 o'clock. There, in these splendid apartments, where little more than a year ago the wedding reception of the only daughter of the house took place, the making of garments, the repairing of lint, and the writing and answering of letters to volunteer nurses, go on at huge wooden tables, set up on trestles placed between the great pillars and the long windows, which are a feature of many of the rooms of the Vladimir palace.

Thanks perhaps to their terrible experience in the Russo-Turkish war the Russian military authorities are in this one matter of the ambulance work ready for emergencies, and that this is so is also owing to the Grand Duchess Constantine.

The whole ambulance service is under a man who is known as "President of the Central Medical Military Staff." There is also an "Inspector of Hospitals" when a campaign is actually in progress. He has vast powers, for under him are all the surgeon-majors and regimental doctors. Each of these, when on active service, disposes of 32 assistants, who are at the present moment being drawn from the medical students at the Kieff university, 128 bearers, as many nurses as he asks for, one medicine chest for each battalion, and four ambulance carriages. Every military train carries some 2,000 dressings, and each Moujik has a small quantity of wadding, antiseptic gauze and bandages in his knapsack.

In addition the Russian army will have the invaluable assistance afforded by the French Red Cross society, which provides both the Russian and the Japanese with two field hospitals, each containing 50 beds; and that of Les Dames de France.

The amateur nurse is held in high honor at St. Petersburg. Many women of rank have started for the front, and the czar's youngest sister, the Grand Duchess Olga, is said to be going at once.

Removing Scorch Marks.

To remove scorch marks bake an onion, then squeeze out the juice and mix it with an ounce of fuller's earth, a wineglass of vinegar and a small quantity of shredded soap. Heat together till the soap has melted, leave till cold and then apply to the scorched linen. Let it dry on and then wash in the usual way.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

Alonzo A. Stagg, athletic director of the University of Chicago, has been made a member of the football rules committee which heretofore has been composed of representatives of eastern colleges only. The appointment comes as a recognition on the part of the eastern authorities of the importance of western football and college men in over the west, and especially those interested in athletics for pastime as a result. Eastern colleges have practically barred the western institutions in the past in football matters, but for this there has been a good explanation in the fact that games between the two sections so far apart are impracticable and interfering with more important college duties. Eastern college men at the same time have never seriously entertained the idea that western football has been advanced to the stage it has reached in the west, where it gets its start, and, after the turning out of such star teams as that of Michigan and Minnesota last year, many western college men have longed for some chance to measure the latest western football development with the latest of the east. Being denied this they were disposed to resent an apparent clannishness on the part of the eastern representatives. Now that the latter, however, have assigned this section recognition in the making of football rules there will be less sectional criticism. At the first meeting of the committee five changes were made. The drop kick was reduced from five to four points. It was also decided that with four men back, besides the quarter stand behind the line, one must stand outside the end. All penalties are for either 5 or 15 yards. Another new ruling is that the team which is losing can have the choice of kick off or the wind, but it cannot have both together; the last is that the quarter-back can run from any place on the field. The committee is made up as follows: Paul J. Dashiel, United States Naval academy, Chairman; Walter Camp, Yale, secretary; John C. Bell, University of Pennsylvania; L. M. Dennis, Cornell; R. N. Corbin, Harvard; J. B. Fine, Princeton; A. A. Stagg, University of Chicago.

A. A. STAGG.

The race for the championship of the National league is once more on and for the next six months the baseball "fans" will be in their glory. The New York team is off with a flying start and the pennant winners will have more than likely have to beat McGraw's giants for the honor. Devlin and McCormick, the two youngsters that McGraw has signed, are two valuable men for his hitting department and are starting the season in a manner to prove that they have been judged rightly as to their work in minor leagues. Mike Purtell is nearly the same team as last year, but weaker in the pitching department even than last year, but it is thought they will finish well up in the first division. The Chicago clubs have been figured on as well up at the top, but they have kicked to the tune of third by nearly all the "dope" figurers. St. Louis and the Cincinnati clubs will fight it out for a place in the first division from the present showing of the clubs. The Cardinals are a much stronger team than they were last summer and will be no easy picking for any of the teams this year. The Reds, while much the same as they were last year in pitching and fielding, will not be able to climb much higher in the race, as they will have much work to contend with and that they had last year, it is thought. President Harry Pulliam has been talking a swing around the circuit to observe the working of the new balk rule. At first it was thought this rule would work a hardship on the pitcher, but the majority have accustomed themselves to it.

Harry Pulliam.

One world's record and three Pacific coast records were broken at San Francisco in the coast championship field day recently. Norman Dole, of Stanford, set a new world's mark for the pole vault, clearing the bar at 12 feet 1.32 inches. Dole is a senior at the university and is a member of a family of famous athletes. A. D. Plaw, of the University of Chicago, eclipsed his former record in the hammer throw, tossing the ball 170 feet 1.3-10 inches. Steckle, of Nevada, threw the discus 126 feet 8 inches.

Lucien Lyne has been offered a season contract to ride for Ed Corrigan. It is stated that Corrigan made inducements by an $8,000 purse to Lyne from medical on his service. J. W. Schorr has engaged Lyne to ride Moharib in the Kansas City derby.

The Boston American league baseball club has been sold to John I. Taylor, of Boston, by Henry J. Killilea, of Milwaukee. Mr. Taylor is a brother-in-law of Gen. Charles H. Taylor, proprietor of the Boston Globe.

James C. Kennedy, the well known sporting man and promoter of prize fights and six-day bicycle races, is both the east and west, is dead.

Champion James J. Jeffries has been married to Miss Frieda Myers, of New York.

The Best Way.

Judge—Did you ever raise your voice against your wife?

Defendant—Yes, your honah, but it done no good, an' I had to take a broom.—"Next."

A VIXEN'S CHILDREN

PARENTAL CARE OF A MOTHER FOX FOR HER CUBS.

Born in Captivity, They Were Studied by a Naturalist — Change Brought by Family Cares.

Readers of my stories may remember the story of "The Sprite," the little red fox which a year ago I took from its home in a burrow at Topsfield, Mass., and those who attended some of my lectures during the past winter will scarcely have forgotten the bright-eyed, sharp-nosed, bushy-tailed little rascal which appeared with me on the platform, and whose silky head they patted at the close of the evening. It may also be remembered that, after his mate was killed by the dogs in the fall, another mate was bought for him, and that both foxes were housed in a large wire cage in the garden.

Before the cold weather came, I had erected, on the north and east sides of the cage, high wind breaks, which sheltered the foxes from the bitterest of the storms. In the lee of these, a wooden pen was placed, with two compartments, one near the ground and the other above it. The den they used chiefly as a playhouse. After chasing one another round the cage, seemingly in a game of tag, one of them would dart into the den, as though that were "home," and the other would seldom pursue him into the upper compartment, and, coming to the door, would paw her mate playfully as he passed underneath. At other times they would wrestle together in fun, and the one which was thrown down would be gently chewed, until it changed the subject by leaping to his feet, and reversed the order of things. In short, they lived happy, care-free lives, until a few days ago, when family cares began to occupy them both.

On the 2d of March, the vixen became very restless, jumping in and out of both compartments of the den, attempting to burrow out of the cage, and often howling piteously. Some times she would run up to "The Sprite" and throw herself on her back in front of him, just as some dogs will do when they meet any one they are pleased to see, or when they wish to be petted. When any of us went near, she dashed around the cage, stopping now and then to wag her tail, and expressing great delight. At times the vixen would leap into the upper compartment of the den, and scratch in the bedding of leaves. Once, while she was there, a piece of cloth was held out to her. She took it in her mouth and drew it in and then smoothed it out by poking and patting it with her nose to take out the lumps. Then she covered the cloth over with the leaves which were in the box, but for some reason the arrangement did not suit her, and she took the cloth in her mouth and flung out of the den.

THE SPRITE.

At half-past six the next morning, when we went out to see her, she jumped out of the den, yawning and stretching as usual, but when she recognizing us in the usual way. Then she growled, and from the upper compartment of the den, and soon appeared with a newly-born cub in her mouth. She dropped it on the ground, pushed it with her nose, and then picked it up again, and in great agitation carried it to different parts of the cage, as though looking for a safe place to deposit it. When we went away, she carried it back into the den, where she eventually discovered the whole family of five baby foxes. And since then, whenever disturbed, she would pick up one of the little ones and carry it to a new place. Finally, she made a hollow in the leaves at one corner of the cage, and put all the babies into it. I spread an awning over that part of the cage, and they have been there ever since. "The Sprite" showed great interest in the proceedings from the first, and would undoubtedly have taken part in them had the vixen allowed him to do so. But whenever he poked his nose into the den to have a look at the children, the mother snapped at him, and drove him away. But he seemed to take it all in good part, and when another chance offered tried it again. Once, when one of the cubs had been left on the ground and the vixen had gone for another one, "The Sprite" saw his opportunity and made the most of it. He walked up to the baby, sniffed it, pushed it gently with his nose, all the while wagging his tail, and then he began to play playfully over it, each time landing close to it, but never up on it. How long he would have amused himself in this way we shall never know, for in the midst of the sport the vixen flew at him and drove him off in a hurry. Then she picked up the baby and carried it away.

PROFITS FROM CEMETERY.

Sum of $300,000 Received by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society Since 1831.

So much curiosity was awakened by the statement made at the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural society that the society had received more than $300,000 from the Mount Auburn cemetery corporation that it was decided to give out an explanation of why the money was paid.

It appears that in 1829 there was not an ornamental cemetery in the world, and several Boston men, including Daniel Webster and Edward Everett, felt the need of a beautifully laid out burial place. By 1831 the idea had taken shape in the form of an association, to the Horticultural society, to which all the men belonged.

Seventy-two acres of land, which now forms about the central part of Mount Auburn, was bought and was consecrated on September 24 of the same year. Friction arose, however, between the cemetery committee and the Horticultural society proper, so that in 1834 the two had to separate.

The terms of the separation provided that the proceeds of the sale of any lots in the 72 acres should be divided between the society and the cemetery committee, one-quarter to the society and three-quarters to the Mount Auburn corporation.

It was thus that the $300,000 has been turned over to the Horticultural society by the Mount Auburn committee.

ROYAL MARRIAGES.

Courtships of England's Scions Are Governed by the King—Veto Power Seldom Used.

King Edward VII. has given his consent to the marriage of his niece, Princess Alice of Albany, to Prince Alexander of Teck.

It seems odd to Americans that an uncle, not a guardian, should have the power to forbid the marriage of his niece. But the king of England has such a power by act of parliament.

This act provides that all descendants of George II., except the issue of princesses married into foreign houses, are incapable of contracting a marriage without the consent of the reigning sovereign.

So King Edward may forbid the marriage of his sisters and his cousins and his aunts and all degrees. Uncles and nephews, no matter how remote, may marry whom they like, if the king coincides, but not otherwise.

What an unspeakable bore it must be to be a king. And what slavery for the kinfolk who cannot bestow their love upon the objects loved. But it is admitted that the law creates no practical inconvenience, since the sovereign is good-natured and doesn't exercise the veto power except in the case of children, or, perhaps, to prevent a politically inexpedient marriage of an heir presumptive.

ENGLAND'S WORST COLONY.

British Honduras, in Central America, Is Away Behind the Times—Ancient History Is News There.

England's worst colony is undoubtedly British Honduras, situated at American Bay, according to the Boston Advertiser. It is a slice of Central America, with a fine seaboard, fringing a large and wealthy country. It is not utilized by Great Britain, and has no regular communication with the mother country. Its only connection with the outside world is by an occasional banana steamer from New Orleans, or a leaky logwood schooner infested with cockroaches. The colonists are a community of hermits, so far as the great world is concerned. They have no cable communication with any part of the globe, and they generally hear of a great event about six months after it has happened.

They celebrated King Edward's coronation on the day originally appointed for it, and did not hear of his illness until weeks later. When at last the king was crowned, his royal subjects in British Honduras were holding intercession services to pray for his recovery. Probably they are now rejoicing over the close of the Boer war, and in a month or two they will pay them selves over the Venezuelan blockade.

WHY THE PIANO WAS THERE.

Presence of the Instrument in a Desert Scene Puzzled a London Audience.

A stage heroine who happened at the same time to be an able executant on the piano had to play night after night the same part at a popular theater. She anxiously longed to give the audience a specimen of her musical abilities, but her part in the performance afforded no opportunity for such a display of her powers. But her inventive genius came nobly to the rescue, says London Tit-Bits, and she discovered a place in the action where the pianist and heroine might go hand in hand.

When the curtain rose revealing the desert of the Black mountains the spectators beheld, to their amazement, a splendid piano placed at the foot of the rocks. The heroine, in the haste of one pursued, climbed down the rocky path, stopped enraptured at the sight of the piano and exclaimed: "The savages have burned down our cottage, murdered my father and mother and driven away our cattle, but, heaven be praised—they have left me my piano. Music shall comfort me in my distress and, if the ladies and gentlemen permit, I will play them a short selection."

Electric Power.

Less than seven per cent. of the power used in manufacturing plants in the United States is electric.

WHAT THE JAP EATS

THE STAPLE ARTICLES OF DIET ARE RICE AND FISH.

How Food Is Served and Eaten by People of Flowery Kingdom—A Glimpse Into Kitchen of a Japanese Home.

Some sage has declared that "tell me what you eat, and I will tell you what you are," and doubtless to a very great extent it is true that what goes into the stomach later comes out in the physical, mental and moral man. But however that may be, when we propose to have a little chat about the food question of Japan, it is not with the purpose or desire to discuss the character of the people of the little island kingdom. Anywhere one may go in Japan he will find the rice bowl and the cooked or raw fish in evidence on the little lacquered table with raised edge which serves as individual dining table, for in Japan the family table is unknown, and generally two persons at most sit down to one table. No, not "sit" down but squat down. The Jap does everything almost with his feet curled up out of the way under him on the mat on the floor.

JAPANESE FAMILY AT A MEAL.

When one sits down to dinner in Japan it is not to a well-arranged and elaborately served table. There is no cloth, it might but the bare floor and the waiting servant. As soon as you become seated upon the floor, however, your table makes its appearance, upon which the servant has placed a small bowl of soup, one of fish and one of rice. Some kind of beans or vegetables; also an empty bowl, with a cover, and a tiny flat saucer containing a few small cubes of "Daikon," (a kind of turnip which is served raw and it eaten at the close of the meal as much as cheese is served at the close of the meal in America). And besides the eatables there are the chop-sticks, without which the meal could not be partaken of.

While you are wondering what the empty bowl can be for the "nesan" (servant) brings in a tub of rice, and sits down before you. You take off the cover from the empty bowl and with a bow hand it over to her. She receives it on a tray, digs out some rice with a wooden spatula, shaped very much like a battledore, and fills the bowl, replacing it on the tray and handing it back to you with another bow. You put the bowl of rice upon your table, and first drink your soup. Then with the chop-sticks in the left hand and the chop sticks in the right, you take a mouthful of fish, then of rice, and so on of whatever viands may be set before you. So goes the meal, and you may pass your rice bowl up to the waiting servant as often as you please to have it replenished, but it is seldom that the other articles of diet are replenished.

Rice is the staff of life of the Japanese, and if is a chief part of the menu in every meal—breakfast, dinner and supper. In an ordinary household rice is boiled early in the morning for the breakfast and midday meal, and a fresh quantity cooked for the evening repast. It has been said that in Japan is the only place where they know how to cook rice. It is exquisitely prepared there, and spoiled most everywhere else in the world. The Japanese cook knows exactly how much water to put in so that by the time the rice is done enough water has boiled away to make it ready to serve. And when you have finished your meal you pour some tea into your rice bowl and drink it. You may leave as much as is necessary in the other bowls or dishes, but it is considered very bad manners to leave any rice. And at the end of the meal comes the raw chunk of daikon already mentioned.

CUTTING SASHIMI.

With rice and fish which the numerous rivers and lakes of Japan supply bountifully and in infinite variety, there are numerous vegetables prepared in various ways. The shalottes and scarlet runner beans, without their shells, are the favorites. One peculiar dish in the vegetable line is the lily bulb boiled in sugar. And there is "nori" (seaweed) which is kept in store dry and prepared by the addition of hot water. Meat other than fish is eaten to a very limited extent, as it is forbidden by Buddhism. However, in some places meat is dubbed "whale," or "mountain whale," and then the religious stricture is removed.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

COST OF THE HOMES OF THE WEALTHY LEADERS.

THE ELABORATE INTERIORS

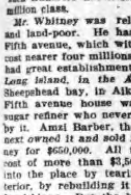
Extravagant Magnificence Hid Behind Plain Walls—A Roosevelt Wedding and an Interesting Roosevelt—Other Gossip.

NEW YORK.—Often in this city of building mania does a good "society item" come out of the dull column of real estate transfers. This happened the other day when the announcement came that James Henry Smith, the "Silent Man of Wall Street," had bought for more than $2,000,000 the home on Fifth avenue of the late William C. Whitney.

This is the largest price ever paid in America for a "second-hand" house. As a rule, if a man has $2,000,000 to pay for a house with, he prefers to have one made to suit his own ideas. Often a man in a hurry comes out of the west who has made his pile, and cannot afford to wait a year before settling down to enjoy it. Such a man can sometimes be fitted with a cast-off house, but no one has ever paid $2,000,000 for one until Mr. Smith. As a rule, such transfers are limited to the half-million class.

Mr. Whitney was relatively house-and land-poor. He has his place on Fifth avenue, which with the contents cost nearer four millions than two. He had great establishments in Lenox, on Long Island, in the Adirondacks, at Sheepshead bay, in Aiken, S. C. The Fifth avenue house was built for a sugar refiner who never lived to occupy it. Amzi Barber, the asphalt man, next owned it and sold it to Mr. Whitney for $650,000. All the rest of its cost of more than $3,500,000 was put into the place by tearing out the interior, by rebuilding it and by lavish furnishings. But the house remained out of the mode as to its exterior; it was and is a brown-stone affair which the subservient pass unnoticed. Its great size, 55 feet by 200, does not seem remarkable in a street of palaces. It is only when one enters that he sees what a fairyland the architects made of the sugar man's home. And this contrasted exterior and interior instance the growing readiness of the rich to hide unsuspected riches of interior decoration behind a plain exterior. This is an oriental trait not unnatural in an age of oriental luxury.

The Great Houses of New York.



THOUGH Mr. Smith, who as the possessor of a very solidly invested fortune of $50,000,000 can afford the house he has bought, has paid for it the record purchase price, he has not the record house in cost. Mr. Carnegie's house has cost more than Whitney expended; Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt lives in a "dower house" that has cost with its treasures twice as much; Mr. Schwab's will have cost more if he ever gets it finished. There are at least three others which have cost as much, though some of them give little exterior hint of it.

The great cold Italian palace of C. P. Huntington, the artistic French renaissance home of W. K. Vanderbilt, the often remodeled brown-stone packing box of Frederick Vanderbilt, are cases in point.

But Smith—when an old bachelor of 50 years buys a $2,000,000 house, people begin to ask just what people ask when a bachelor buys a house anywhere in the country for his own use. What is she?

Mr. Smith is the greatest catch in the country. Many a New York heiress well past her 20 years would willingly forego the customary baron or duke to write "Smith" on her visiting cards. There would be incidental advantages, too. Mr. Smith would not beat his wife as continental "noblemen" have more than once been known to do to their American purchases.

Smith is more than half English, anyhow. His uncle, old George Smith, who lived in his London club for about $4,000 a year and whose death paid $4,570,000 in taxes to the British crown, was English born and lived but a few profitable years in this country. So "it would not be just like marrying an American, do you see? High society is nothing if not consistent in its un-Americanism.

The Weddings of the Roosevelts.

PERHAPS I should take that back. Hasn't the president's nephew and namesake, young Theodore Roosevelt Douglas Robinson, just become engaged to Miss Helen Roosevelt-Roosevelt? You will observe that "Roosevelt" occurs three times in their seven names and they are both strenuous Americans. Young Robinson is a football player and his inamorata is the granddaughter of Mrs. Astor. The engagement illustrates again the tendency in wealthy families to which these letters have referred of marrying off the young folks at an early age. Mr. Robinson only celebrated his coming of age a fortnight ago, by a party at which all his young friends appeared as dolls and as characters out of nursery rhymes.

To me the senior Robinson is the most interesting member of the family in spite of young Teddy's football muscles. For Robinson senior is just simply a hustling real estate agent on a large scale. When the Pennsylvania railroad wanted several blocks of land on the West side to build an enormous new station, it was necessary to have a very confidential man to undertake the work. If the news of the purpose were to get abroad too soon prices would go way up; and condemnation proceedings in the present disgraceful glut of work in the courts would mean intolerable delay. Robinson was the man selected to do the work. Most of the property was rather run down and covered by cheap houses and the owners were willing enough to sell. Only at the last did a few speculators suspect that something was up. Of course they got a few "key pieces" and, of course, the company paid blackmail rather than have to wait in the courts five years before being able to use the land they already had.

Young Robinson will take a trip around the world with his bride. It will take him a year. Better that than the old-fashioned way of sending off a young fellow or with other young fellows to take his travels alone with unlimited money. They always got into trouble.

The End of Weber-Fields.

THE end of this theatrical season the Weber & Field music hall goes the way of all things theatrical.

It has been a wonderful money maker. Opening night at the little music hall has for several years been as distinct a society event as the opening of the opera. Boxes were sold at auction as high as $350. Everyone was there. Throughout the season people of wealth paid high prices to see what was after all only a variety show. Charles Belmont Davis, brother of Richard Harding Davis and son of Rebecca Harding Davis, was the business manager. He never appeared at the box office except in dress suit and was hail fellow with young men about town.

Weber & Fields are funny. Fields is tall and lank, Weber a little fellow plainly doomed by unkindly fate to wear a pillow in his waistcoat. His was the luckless lot to sputter bad German dialect while Fields parodied the stars in burlesque and got compliments upon his acting. Jealousy did the rest. Fields keeps the house. He is a good business man and may make money with it. He may not. Fashion may move as suddenly and irrationally as it has done before and leave it stranded.

But what a galaxy of stars the little house has boasted while it was drawing real money at every performance! Besides the actor managers themselves there were Lillian Russell, Dave Warfield, Pete Daly, Fay Templeton, Willie Collier and others only less known. The very chorus girls had their little local fame. Not to know Frankie Bailey was worse than to confess ignorance of the philosophy of Nietzsche.

The Man from Somewhere.

EX-SPEAKER DAVID B. HENDERSON has got enough of New York. He says he's going back to "Iowa" in the fall.

Now this is an interesting item. For the city is full of ex-governors from somewhere and would be full of ex-speakers if there were enough of them. The singular fact is that Mr. Henderson should tire of the city. Mostly they do not.

Mr. Henderson gives reasons, the reasons, curiously enough, nearly amount to good, old-fashioned homesickness. The landlords rob you, the streets threaten you with sudden death, the car conductors are insolent to you, your faces are lined and seamed with anxiety—and all the rest of it. And it is both true and untrue. New York is big enough so that a certain set of facts can be true of a man's entire acquaintance and yet untrue of another man's set. There is plenty of leisure here, there are plenty of men who live cheaply in their own little houses and are not robbed by landlords, there are even intellectual people who do not worship wealth. But you may have to look for them.

And it's true, it is how famous men disappear in the multitude. One of Mayor McClellan's neighbors is John C. Carlisle; on the streets he is to most men unknown. "Tom" Reed was a marked man for the fat girls and his playfellows, but most like John S. Wise, Gov. Campbell and Hoadly, of Ohio; Senator Lindsay, of Kentucky; Governor Gage, of Chicago, simply attract no attention. They are not formulated statesmen. They are simply New Yorkers.

Mr. Henderson must have had unusually hearty backing for the people he "met up with" who statesmen do not usually go home with when they have once moved to the metropolis.

OWEN LANGDON.

CHILDREN IN APARTMENTS.

How They Beguile the Time in Their Awfully Cramped Quarters.

"Hello! Oh, hello! Oh, I say, I didn't know it was you, Tom! It isn't Tom? You will do just as well? Oh, what do you think us telephone girls are like anyway? What was I going to say to Tom? Well, if you want to be so smart, I was going to hint it was about time he took me to the theater again. Why can't you? Oh, well, the idea! I don't care if I have a sweet voice. Ring off! Ring off! Well, then, call me up in another hour. Perhaps I'll tell you what I think."

This airy persiflage and much more of the same variety of coy flirtation your little Mary hears as she hangs around the telephone operator's booth, watching with fascinated eyes that pert young person as she chews gum and answers the impatient rings of the people in the hotel—when she gets ready, and not before.

TEASING THE ELEVATOR MAN.

And why should little Mary be hanging around the said booth, absorbing knowledge before her time like a thirsty little sponge? Oh, because poor little Mary is an apartment house child and must romp and play where she can and not where it is best for her. Upstairs in the tiny two room and bath luxury of a suit father and mother are entertaining a couple of callers, and they have told little Mary to run along and play.

And where is little James? I'm afraid James will have trouble later on. At present he is luxuriating in a smutty face, not to speak of incrusted hands and clothes, and he is learning to run the furnace from his dear friend the engineer downstairs.

And what about Tom? Oh, Tom and Jack—Jack is the angel faced son of the angel faced little widow on the tenth floor—are running or trying to run the elevator in spite of the frantic efforts of the elevator man, who puts them off at every floor only to have them spring back again before he can close the doors.

And that's about child life in one of the big apartment hotels, varied by pink sashes and blue bows for the little girls in the evening and ridiculous stiff juvenile evening dress for the small men. And they go parading sedately through the parlors, a very good take-off of their elders.

But by day the chambermaid, the elevator man, the telephone girl, the engineer and even the ashman are their boon companions in the long intervals when nurse is doing lady's maid's work for mother and mother herself is far too busy (?) to attend to them.

MABEL CREIGHTON.

THE SUMMER COTTAGE.

How to Furnish Its Living Room In an Attractive Manner.

The summer cottage often has but one large ground floor room, which serves the general purpose of "living room."

It contains a desk, easy chairs, a big fireplace and a table on which if desired the meals can be served.

The illustration gives a very fair idea of a room of this sort. The walls are plastered in a greenish gray tone, and the woodwork is of pine stained and varnished. The fireplace is of brick, with brass andirons. Over the fireplace there is a wide shelf, which contains odds and ends of china.

IN AN ADIRONDACK COTTAGE.

The desk is of oak, and so are the tables and chairs. A note of color is brought in by the framed prints on the walls and also by the carpet, which is a deep red.

R. DE LA BAUME.

The Woman Bluffer

She Is as Expert as Her Brother

"BUT I thought bluffing was man's forte."

"You wouldn't think so if you once saw a woman at it," chuckled the man.

"For instance"—

"Well, at the seashore. There the woman bluffer is at her best, and she has every advantage too. What do you know of her private life? She may be really a Mrs. Herlembeke, subject to the janitor and the push button, or Miss Stenographer on her two weeks' vacation, with her finger ends still blunted by the typewriter, but at the seashore she is that rich Mrs. Blank or Miss Blank, whose father left her half a million, you know, and she strolls around languidly, leading her French bull pup by its chain and digging holes in the ground with her chiffon parasol as if she had nothing more arduous to do in her whole life. She shivers at the carelessness of the chambermaid—she does her own work at home—and she bewails the poorness of the laundry as she extracts from her sleeve a dainty but much yellowed handkerchief which in reality she has washed in her own room and rough dried by sticking it on the window pane. But it is during the afternoon that the woman bluffer usually shines. Two or three times a week her carriage drives up, and she goes out for an airing, chiffon parasol unfurled, dog sitting erect by her side and furbelows carefully spread out where they will show the most. She has all the women acquaintances she wants by merely inviting them in a languid way to 'take a little turn in the carriage with me.'"

"And the reality?"

"Why, the whole outfit is hired, of course. During the dull summer months one can get, if one goes to the right stable, a magnificent turnout, coachman, drab cushions and all, for $125 a month. In the winter it would cost twice or three times as much, but in the summer the swell livery stableman is only too delighted to have his horses in the country and not idle. So just think of the splurge Mrs. Harlemflat makes on the money she has saved during the winter by not hiring a servant!"

"MY CARRIAGE!"

"Well, we are all in greater or lesser ways striving to seem better than we are."

"Yes, and some of the bluffs are rather pitiful too. Take the case of Miss Jones, who comes of awfully good stock, poor girl, but of late has had to scramble for a living. She works in Wiltman's, in the cloak department. Well, one of her old time friends invites her to an evening at home, and there, if you please, she meets a very stunning young man, who, in his turn, is evidently impressed by the very stunning Vere de Vere girl he sees. He asks to be permitted to call some afternoon, and what is there to answer? Of course she has to say yes. He calls three times between half after 4 and 5, and each time she is out. The fourth time the rather shabby landlady of what he supposed to find is a boarding house informs him with unnecessary shrillness that 'Miss Jones she works in Wiltman's, and it ain't no use calling on her afternoons.'"

"And the other who bluffs about her social engagements?"—

"Yes, and they are mostly pay affairs, and then, too, she is always at Sherry's or the Waldorf-Astoria. But the truth is she simply sits in the palm room and watches the people who really eat and drink and make merry."

"And the women who hire ladies' maids for special occasions, not to speak of actresses who take their cooks to the theater in the capacity of expensive ladies' maids. Cookie likes the excitement and the glitter, and it gives the actress prestige."

"And the women who bluff about their husbands' ability and prospects?"

"Ah, but that often arises from something else than mere bluffing. More often than not the supposed bluffer really proudly believes in the extraordinary ability and brilliant future of dear Tom or Dick, who is perhaps in reality quite ordinary. And just let me tell you a secret—I'm mighty anxious to have just that kind of a sweet little bluffer for my wife!"

MAUD ROBINSON.

FASHION HINTS.

Much Purple and Lavender Are Worn—Yolles Checked and Plain.

A great deal of purple and of lavender are being used for street wear.

The fashions of the moment are not a little trying to the woman of generous proportions, but still she may have this consolation—the fullness beginning below instead of at the waist line rather takes away from the width of her hips and that allows the plain front panel gives her a flat, straight front effect.

Plaid effects in voile are among the latest. Small pin checks are being imported in voile as well satin taffeta, and these are trimmed with rows of trimming in plain silk to match. A black and white checked voile seen recently was trimmed with chantilly lace and made up over apple green silk.

The favorite sleeve of the moment is the half sleeve made in one piece with the shoulder. This is worn with or without a tight fitting undersleeve, and the inside is filled in with a lace ruffle.

TAILOR MADE COSTUME.

The little loose gathered bolero of ample width, which has loose sleeves, is the smartest model for all thin silk or mohair costumes. It is short enough to allow a wide belt to be seen. This is usually of a darker shade than the costume.

The cut shows a tailor made dress of lavender mohair trimmed with tiny black buttons and a white chemisette.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

NOVELTIES OF THE SEASON.

The Baby Hat—Long Shouldered Effects In Everything.

The baby hat made of lace ruffles has been so much used in cheap materials that it will not be worn this summer by really smart women. In its place are semi-French sailor hats of shirred tulle lace and net combined with bands of tiny roses and French satin straw. These come with an accentuated roll, which is greater on one side to allow for a feather, which is fastened under the brim. In some cases this feather passes over the crown and is then run through a slit in the brim, so that the tip rests on the hair.

The long shouldered effect is more conspicuous than ever and is seen even on shirt waist costumes. A recent ex- ample in checked silk had the upper part of the sleeve run into a broad strap, which was then extended into the collar.

CREPE DE CHINE WAIST.

The cape effect has practically gone out of fashion, although a few modified forms are seen on imported gowns principally, though in the designs of yokes stitched down to within an inch or two of the edge.

The Dutch lace cap for night wear is quite the latest fashionable fad, which must not be confounded with the nightcap of our grandparents. It is composed of silk brocade finished round the face with a ruching of ribbon, while the lower part has a frill of old lace, *one of its special features being that it gives to the hair the sub*tlest fragrance imaginable, merely a suggestion of a perfume. The scent comes from a special oil, the preparation of which is a secret, and is laid on a specially treated thin material, which is placed between the two layers of silk of which this cap is composed.

The picture shows a waist made of frish lace and bias bands of crepe de chine.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

FOR STREET WEAR.

Fashions in Motor Coats—Shirt Waist Suits as Popular as Ever.

For automobile and outing wear coats of mohair and shantung are the favorite materials. They are admirably suited for shedding dust. The mohairs have never before been manufactured in such silky materials as this year. The shantungs are heavier than last, and the favorite shades are ash gray, damson blue and willow green. The coat of natural colored silk, however, trimmed with black gold and cream braid, has a very smart appearance.

A CARRIAGE HAT.

Both black and brown taffeta coats are also being turned out for the same purpose.

The latest development of the sleeve frill is the employment of fine lace frills dyed to the exact shade of the gown. Chiffon is also largely used for sleeve frills.

*Shirt waist suits will be more popu*lar than ever, and these little one color costumes are infinitely more becoming than the light waist and dark skirt to the woman who is at all inclined to stoutness.

The boat shape turban is again with us and is sure to have many admirers, as it lends itself so admirably to the shaded petal trimming. Rose petals *of silk or velvet are particularly ef*fective.

In the picture we have a dainty hat most suitable for carriage wear. It is of horsehair straw, draped with lace and a bunch of pink roses.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

HINTS ON ECONOMY.

Last Year's Dresses Can Be Renovated—The Season's Tailor Made.

There is quite a pronounced fancy for simple gauze and muslin frocks for evening wear.

Renovations this season are not hard to make. The principal difficulty comes in the skirts, which require more fullness, and often this may be obtained by the addition of a front panel of embroidery, the same material being used to make the sleeves fuller. Sleeves are often plain to the elbow, where they blossom out into many long frills of lace or accordion plaited chiffon. Wide collars of lace and embroidery cover a multitude of sins, not to speak of the ever present fichu. Skirts may be freshened up by the addition of ribbon ruching put on in a conventional design.

CREAM VEILING GOWN.

The tailor made frock is likely to prove the most expensive of the entire wardrobe, for it cannot even be partially made at home. The woman who cannot afford to invest much money in ifers had better buy it ready made in some good shop.

It is no wonder the best tailor mades are expensive; *they show such perfec*tion of cut and such dainty touches in the way of handmade trimmings.

Lace stoles are mounted on chiffon and taffeta and make dainty neck pieces with which to replace the old fashioned boa. Chiffon, crepe de chine and mousseline are made up in dainty fashion with ganged centers of contrasting material. Ribbon is shirred and combined with chiffon and lace to form chic cape effects.

Pongee this season comes dyed in a variety of shades, including gray, a royal blue and a rich brown. It makes pretty coat and skirt costumes and shirt waist costume dresses, and it wears well.

The picture represents a gown of cream veiling trimmed with flat tucks and circles formed of galloon.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

SHADES AND FABRICS.

Printed Muslins For Summer—Colors For Blonds and Brunettes.

Printed muslins in the most delightful designs make pretty summer gowns over taffeta silk matching the flower design. They are trimmed with narrow laces or chiffon.

The blond girl should avoid blue unless her eyes are very deep and her eyebrows well marked. It makes her wishy washy. Pale yellow is very becoming to her; so also are brown, black and a certain shade of green. White is her best color. Turquoise blue looks particularly well on a dark haired woman, and so do the shades of old rose and deeper pink. The pale pinks belong to blonds. Deep mauves and purples are becoming to both blonds and brunettes, and this is true also of certain shades of scarlet.

The fashionable decolletage line is somewhat higher this season, for, although the corsage is cut lower, it is finished with a dainty tucker of mousseline de soie, chiffon or net.

BLUE LIBERTY SATIN GOWN.

Challie is to be revived, so leaders of fashion say, and this is pretty for young girls when made up softly with a bit of good lace.

A good effect was produced by deep lace and ribbon ruches, arranged in a scroll design, on the skirt of a rich purple crepe de chine gown. The corsage had the long shoulder line, the full sleeves being shirred to the elbow and terminating in deep cuffs of lace.

The picture shows an evening gown of blue liberty satin trimmed with guipure lace.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Lace Is Lavishly Used on Gowns. The Wide Belt a Necessity.

So far all the waists and dress bodices are made with high collar bands, and, although some are unlined, yet the bare effect of the collarless bodice is missing.

Where lace is lavishly employed on a gown the sleeves are partially composed of the lace, and this gives a very smart and light effect, even on dark foulard or black gowns. In fact, the black toilet is often the smartest of all, so often is it trimmed with tinted laces.

Belts are quite a feature of the new fashions, and they are invariably wide. Tucked belts of leather are used with many of the tailor made costumes. Some of them are studded with silver or steel nails and are finished with buckles to correspond. Very deep belts of corded silk or taffeta are also worn, and the straight belts of colored shiny leather are designed to wear with soft, full blouses under cloth and linen boleros.

MORNING COSTUME.

Lace squares and figures are used more than ever to outline yokes, sleeves and flounces.

Perfectly charming is the new silk linen, which possesses the substance of pongee and the softness of crepe de chine. At present this exquisite material is only to be seen in the india silk color, but later in the season it will be obtainable in all the fashionable shades.

Velvet or taffeta silk boleros are now much in evidence—another old fashion revived—and are made sleeveless or with elbow sleeves, the bolero matching the trimming of the dress and not the material in which it is carried out.

The picture shows a morning costume of white canvas piped with scarlet and white foulard with knotted scarf of same.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, May 19, 1904.

The colored Republicans thought Rev. Mr. Boundtree, of Trenton, would be pretty good timber for a delegate-at-large to the National convention, but the State committee quartered him.

Inventor Edison, who has himself profited by advertising, is quoted thus: "To let the world know through type who and what you are and what you have that this great world wants is the secret of success, and the printing press is its mightiest machine to that end."—Philadelphia Record.

Another daily newspaper has been launched in New Jersey, the Dover Daily, published at Dover, as its name implies, it starts with the very best wishes of the fraternity throughout the State. Whether it will continue will depend partly upon the people of Dover, and partly upon itself.—New Brunswick Daily Times.

Wonderful brains in that Brunswick man's head.

When a business man without an intimate knowledge of advertising takes space in papers or magazines and conducts his own campaign, he sometimes develops an entirely original style of advertising, eminently suited to his business. If he is a good business man his advertising will seldom be weak. It may be crude. It may lack originality. But it will be strong and sound, giving plain, blunt facts of interest to readers who want his goods. —Printers' Ink.

A proposition to reproduce the famous Passion Play at Asbury Park has been submitted to the Board of Trade of that city. It is to be expected that some strong opposition to the scheme will be made for the idea is repugnant to many Christian people, especially to those who do not approve of theatrical performances. Many a powerful sermon is preached from the stage nowadays and the moral taught is impressed upon the spectator as deeply as that emanating from the pulpit in many instances. Besides, the drama attracts a large number of people who do not go to church and in this way it is doing a good work. The principal objection to the play is that some one impersonates Christ, which is naturally viewed as sacrilegious. Those who have taken the part in the Oberammergau production have been saintly men and it is argued that they are not guilty of any profanity.

The Camden-Post Telegram's explanation of the reason why W. W. Howland, on behalf of the North Plainfield delegates objected to the selection of "Davy" Baird, of Camden, as a delegate-at-large to the Republican National convention is amusing. It says incidentally:

"The real reason for this division in the Somerset delegation can be found in a local factional fight, something entirely foreign to Mr. Baird's candidacy, an outcropping of political differences which resulted in Republican disaster at the last two elections in that county."

As a matter of fact, this reason, which is no doubt the product of an editor's political ignorance, is sheer nonsense. Mr. Howland's views are and have been entirely free from political fights in Somerset County in perfect harmony with the policy of his party. The only difference existing between the North Plainfield delegates and the others from Somerset County was that Mr. Howland and his colleagues of the borough had the courage to protest against the selection of a man who is obnoxious to the better element of the Republican party, not only in Somerset County but in the State at large. The Post-Telegram is wrong in its conclusion when it says: "The fact that not a single delegate outside of Somerset joined in the opposition to Mr. Baird, and that he received all but six votes out of 930 in the convention, is conclusive evidence that the Somerset fluke in no wise represented any general opposition or is to be taken seriously as an indication of disapproval of his candidacy."

The fact that "Davy" Baird received all but six of the votes cast is conclusive evidence in this case that the delegates generally had not the courage to express their convictions.

AMUSEMENTS.

"The Other Girl," which holds the record for success of all of Augustus Thomas' plays ever presented in New York, is now moving along triumphantly as the New Empire Theatre, New York city, towards the 150th performance. It is drawing capacity audiences and it will probably reach the end of its season at this house with this record of big business still the same. The acting of the piece is of a very high standard as Charles Frohman has put into it a remarkable cast which includes the great comedy soubrette, Lionel Barrymore, Joseph Wheelock, Jr., Richard Bennett, Frank Worthing, and Elsie and Drina De Wolfe. This big six has the most delightful presentation of them. Besides the humor of the comedy there is a delightful love story which appeals strongly to women and which is effective in its appeal for the Wednesday and Saturday matinees at the Empire are always crowded.

Undoubtedly the most stupendous and costly amusement resort ever pro*moted in this country* is "Dreamland," at Coney Island, New York. In its plan, scope, and the magnitude of its amusements "Dreamland" has been constructed at a cost of over $2,500,000. The opening date is set for today, when the spacious park with its massive structures and myriad attractions will be completed. "Dreamland" is the conception of ex-Senator William H. Reynolds, a millionaire and a large real estate holder in the borough of Brooklyn, New York. Illuminated at night by 1,000,000 brilliant electric lights on buildings, the tower and avenues, "Dreamland," will present a striking scene of fairyland. The massive tower rises far into the heavens. It is the most conspicuous structure for miles around, and can be seen at a distance of fifty miles. It rises to a height of 375 feet and at night will be brilliantly illuminated by 100,000 powerful electric lights. It is said that the towers at the World's Fair, Chicago, and at the Buffalo Exposition, do not compare with it in architectural beauty.

An unprecedented novelty in the vaudeville field and one of the biggest moves that has yet been made by F. F. Proctor is the engagement, for the appearance at both of his theatres, Proctor's 23d St., and Proctor's 5th Ave., of Charles Hawtrey, the famous English comedian, who has recently played so successfully in "The Man from Blankley's." Mr. Hawtrey some time ago had arranged to sail for England in time to reappear at the London St. James Theatre with his own company and under his own management in a brilliant revival of "A Message from Mars," but having all next week open he was induced by Mr. Proctor to accept an engagement, which will probably be the most unique ever played in New York vaudeville. Mr. Hawtrey will appear in a one-act comedietta running about thirty minutes, entitled "Time is Money."

Another of Sullivan, Harris & Woods' famous thrillers in the line of good melodrama is announced as the attraction at the Grand, this week. The offering this time is the much discussed play, "Wedded and Parted," which was written by Theodore Kremer, and which has achieved instantaneous success, playing to S. R. O. wherever presented. Sullivan, Harris & Woods are the largest producers of melodrama in the world, and they seem to have the happy faculty of almost invariably selecting dramas for production which meet with the hearty approval of the amusement loving public. It is promised that in this new production they will fully sustain their enviable reputation in this respect.

Raymond Hitchcock in the new comic opera, "The Yankee Consul" at the Broadway Theatre, New York, is the one big musical hit of the year in that city. This attraction will enter upon its tenth week on Monday evening, April 25, and every night the Broadway is filled to its utmost capacity and this theatre is one of the largest on Manhattan Island. There seems to be no question in the minds of the play-going public as to the merits of the attraction, and New York's approval of this musical play has been more pronounced than in the case of any other offering in the line of comic opera in a long time.

An Improved Turn-Table.

The old turn-table at the Dunellen round-house of the Jersey Central will be transferred to the terminus of the Rockaway Valley Railroad at Morristown, and in its place the Central will install a heavier table which will be operated by electric motors. Heavier locomotives necessitate this change.

Ready for Memorial Day.

All arrangements were completed for the observance of Decoration Day here at the meeting of the G. A. R. Detail, Saturday night. The hall, music and speaker have been engaged and the children are rehearsing patriotic selections for the afternoon exercises. This week a schedule will be prepared for the customary visits to the various public schools on Friday before Decoration Day.

ALIS WRESTS VICTORY FROM THE XAVIER A. C.

In Sixth Inning, Home Team Starts a Merry-Go-Round, Bringing in Eleven Runs.

DAVIS' GREAT WORK

PLAINFIELD'S PITCHER STRIKES OUT THIRTEEN MEN.

Lauder, Cregan and Farmer Do Some Heavy Hitting—Final Score Being Seventeen to Three.

What at first looked like defeat for the Alis team was turned into a decisive victory in the game with the Xavier A. C., of New York, at Cregan's Oval on Saturday. It was expected that Alis would have a walkover, but up to the sixth inning "Billy" Lauder's colts were only able to score two runs, while their opponents made one more. The Alis batteries opened in Fourth of July style in the sixth inning and pounded out a total of eleven runs. During that time fifteen men faced Steibeck, who up to the inning held Alis for three insignificant hits.

While Alis was working hard to get the three hits, Davis was touched for six safeties. After that he only allowed one hit. He pitched a great game, fanning out thirteen men, in spite of rather poor support given him. Between Roberts, Cregan and McGeoy, a total of eight errors were made. McGeoy was sent from centre to the initial bag, because Mehler was detained at Columbia College taking examination, and he was not used to the position. Devins, a new man, took care of centre in good style. For six innings Davis and Farmer played the game. After that it was all pie and runs made runs whenever they wanted to.

Steibeck was hammered for nine singles, including a home run by Lauder, and the best he could do had no effect in stopping the merry-go-round.

Alis made seventeen hits for a total of as many runs, while the Xavier boys only secured three runs, with a total of seven hits. After the game, which was hurriedly brought to a close on account of the cold weather, the visiting team looked like a portion of the Russian army following an engagement with the Japs.

This is a detailed score of the game:

Alis.	R	1B	PO	A	E
Roberts, ss	2	2	1	0	3
Lauder, 3b	2	3	0	1	0
Cregan, 2b	2	3	1	0	2
McGeoy, 1b	1	1	8	0	3
Hollywood, lf	2	1	1	0	0
Devins, cf	2	2	1	0	0
Farmer, c	2	3	14	1	0
Griffin, rf	1	0	0	0	0
Davis, p	2	2	1	4	0
	17	17	27	6	8

Xavier.	R	1B	PO	A	E
O'Grady, 3b	0	0	2	2	0
Moulter, lf	1	0	1	1	1
Parrish, ss	1	2	1	4	1
Oreis, cf	0	2	2	0	0
Renten, 1b	0	2	15	0	1
Bloom, c	1	0	0	2	1
Steibeck, p	0	0	0	3	1
Costigan, 2b	0	1	2	3	1
Leonard, rf	0	0	1	0	1
	3	7	24	14	7

Score by innings:

Alis..... 0 2 0 0 0 1 1 2 x—17
Xavier.. 2 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0—3

Earned runs—Lauder, Hollywood, Davis, Parrish. Two-base hits—Davis, Parrish. Home runs—Lauder. Stolen bases—Roberts, Hollywood, 2; Farmer, 5; Davis, 2. First base on balls —Off Davis, 1; off Steibeck, 2. Struck out—By Davis, 13. Left on bases—Alis, 4; Xavier, 13. Double plays—Parrish to Moulter to Renten. Wild pitches—Steibeck. Passed balls—Bloom, 2. First base on errors—Xavier, 5; Alis, 2. Hit by pitcher—Moulter, Costigan. Time of game—Two hours. Umpire—Meriy.

DUNELLEN, 13; BRADLEY C., 7

NEW YORK TEAM TROUNCED BY THE MIDDLESEX BOYS.

Captain Smith and his men had a great deal of sport at the expense of the Bradley A. C. nine, of New York, on Saturday afternoon when they won by a score of 13 to 7. "Ike" Estlinger never let himself out and if he had it is probable that the New Yorkers would have had a large goose-egg at the end of the game. The feature was the all round good work of Giles, Craig and Brown.

The following is the score by innings:

Dunellen..... 8 1 0 2 0 1 0 1 x—13
Bradley ..... 1 1 4 0 0 0 1 0 0—7

Batteries — Estlinger and Brown; Cook and Alexander.

PARK GOLF CLUB BEGINS ITS SEASON

Arthur Peck Wins First Honors in the Opening Play for the Presicent's Cup.

RESULT AT HILLSIDE

LOW SCORES IN CONTEST FOR GOLF COMMITTEE CUP.

Miss Maude VanBoskerck Wins First Leg for Women's Cup—Play at Westfield and Cranford.

The opening of the Park Golf Club on Saturday was marked by the first play for the President's cup and Park Golf Club cups, weekly competition. There was a goodly number of entries and much interest shown in the competitions. The course was pronounced to be in excellent condition and the opening was in every way pleasing to the popular club.

Arthur Peck, with an 81 net, won first honors for the President's cup, handicap event, while the remaining honors were divided between Rev. J. O. McKelvey and Joseph H. Howell, each returning a net score of 86. Peck also won first honors for the other cup, scratch event, returning a gross score of 98, and Rev. J. O. McKelvey won second honors with a 99 net and Charles Reed third honors with a 97 net. The scores for the two cups:

Arthur Peck, 98, 15—81; Rev. J. O. McKelvey, 99, 13—86; Joseph H. Howell, 103, 17—86; T. U. Dudley, Jr., 107, 20—87; Samuel Townsend, 103, 15—88; Herbert S. Rogers, 105, 13—92; Charles A. Reed, 97, 3—94; T. W. Morris, Jr., 108, 7—101.

There was golfing aplenty at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Saturday and the course throughout the day was crowded with players. The recent fine weather put the course in fine condition and a trip over it was a pleasure. In the morning there was the first play for the women's handicap cup, Miss Maude VanBoskerck, with a net score of 99, won the first leg on the cup.

The event of the day was the weekly competition for the golf committee cup, there being an unusually large number of contestants. As a rule the scores were low and as will be seen by the list several contestants had their handicaps clipped since their last play by the golf committee. Others are likely to fare likewise if they continue to improve in their game.

G. F. Earl won first honors for the cup with a net score of 78, while R. S. Rowland and J. A. Tompkins finished second and third with net scores of 79 and 80. The scores:

G. F. Earl, 105, 27—78; R. S. Rowland, 83, 4—79; J. A. Tompkins, 95, 15—80; Leighton Calkins, 87, 4—83; Roger F. Murray, 90, 6—84; C. S. Halsted, 90, 6—84; E. R. Ireneager, 103, 16—86; Julius E. Erickson, 96, 11 —87; Walter Peterson, 94, 6—88; C. B. Morgan, 97, 98—8; Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, 95, 6—89; S. D. Lounsbery, 95, 6—89; E. B. Shoemaker, 105, 15— 90.

An event of the past week was the playoff for the Fourth of July cup of last season, postponed. First Arthur Murphy beat L. L. Tweedy, 6 up and 4 to go, and then Dr. B. VanD. Hedges won the cup by beating Murphy, 8 up and 7 to go.

The active season at the Westfield Golf Club was begun on Saturday with a scratch event, the winners facing sixty, thirty and ten per cent. in golf supplies. The winners were M. Whitlatch, R. A. Townley and A. D. Tuttle. The scores:

M. Whitlatch, 98; R. I. Townley, 99; A. D. Tuttle, 101; J. A. Woodward, 104; E. R. Perkins, 104; S. A. Tervash, 105; C. M. Tremaine, 113; E. B. Simpson, 114.

In a team match Saturday at the links of the Cranford Golf Club between the home team and a team from the Elizabeth Town and Country Club, the Cranford players were defeated by a score of 16 to 6.

More Westbound Trains.

Two more express trains are at the disposal of the homeward bound Plainfielders in the afternoons now. Two B. and O. flyers, leaving New York at 2 and at 5, stop here. The latter beats the 5:45 express in here by four minutes.

Tennis Club's Opening.

No play was had on the Cedar Brook Tennis Club's courts Saturday as the work on them is not quite completed. The club hopes to open the season next Saturday if the weather proves favorable.

Reappointed Engineer.

H. G. VanEmburgh has been appointed town engineer of Westfield for the seventh consecutive year. The officials showed by their action that *his services have been quite satisfac*tory.

BISHOP IS RETIRED FROM ACTIVE WORK

John H. Vincent is Relieved by General Conference of the M. E. Church.

HIS NOTABLE CAREER

A FOUNDER OF THE CHAUTAUQUA MOVEMENT.

One of the Originators of the Epworth League—Vincent Chapel Named in His Honor—For Sixteen Years a Bishop.

Bishop John H. Vincent, of Zarich, Switzerland, was one of five venerable bishops retired from all active participation in church work by the Methodist General Conference on Saturday in Los Angeles.

Bishop Vincent is well-known to Plainfielders, having been a resident of this city for many years. Vincent chapel, adjoining the First M. E. church, is named for him. For many years he has been a power in Methodism. He inaugurated the Chautauqua movement and was largely instrumental in founding the Epworth League.

The venerable man was born in Tuscaloosa, Ala., February 23, 1832. He was licensed to preach at the age of eighteen years and two years later was made a local preacher. From 1866 to 1888 he was secretary of the Sunday-school work of the church and during his term the circulation of the Sunday-school Journal increased from 16,000 to 180,000.

In 1888 Dr. Vincent was elected a bishop. Since then his work has carried him over a large part of the world. He recently returned from Zarich after a four years' residence there.

CLINTON AVE., 5; REFORMERS, 4

FIFTH INNING BRINGS THE GOODS TO WEST END NINE.

One lucky inning did it all for the Clinton Avenue team in its game against Reform Club Saturday afternoon. The West End players made five runs in the fifth, just one more than the Reformers got in two successful onslaughts.

The Reformers landed for two runs in the fourth and two more in the seventh. Clinton Avenue loosed a volley of drives in the fifth, and nailed five marks before the agony ended.

Bolmer, the Clinton Avenue twistmeister, gave the rassle-dazzle to twelve men, and only six hits were chopped from his delivery. Scott struck out eight men, and ten slambangers bumped his curves.

Batting order and summary:

Clinton Avenue — Mathews, c; Smalley, as; Boekman, 3b; Ayers, lf; Gordon, cf; Oonels, 1b; VanArsdale, 2b; Manning, rf; Bolmer, p.

Reform Club—McGinley, 3b; Taylor, 2b; Smith, lf; S. Scott, p; D Scott, 1b; O'Loughlin, c; J. Scott, ss; Lawlor, cf; Plesent, rf.

	R	H	E
Clinton Ave.	0 0 0 0 5 0 0 0 0—5	10	4
Reform Club	0 0 0 2 0 0 2 0 0—4	6	6

POSTMASTER IN THE ASYLUM

NORMAN DUNN, OF SCOTCH PLAINS, A VICTIM OF PARESIS.

Postmaster Norman Dunn, of Scotch Plains, has been committed to Morris Plains as a paretic. His health has been failing for two years, and the hopelessness of a cure was seen a short time ago. Drs. Westcott, of Fanwood, and Harrison, of Westfield, *made out the commitment papers Sat*urday.

Mr. Dunn has been postmaster at Scotch Plains during every Republican administration since Grant's time. A year ago his wife was sworn in as assistant postmaster and assumed the duties of the office in the hope of benefitting him by taking the cares of the position from his shoulders. She will continue to fill the place.

Overheard [on the Pike.

*Mr. Easy—"Why should people vis*iting the Exposition at night, use more Allen's Foot-Ease than in daytime?"

Miss Foote—"Because under the brilliant illumination of the grounds, every foot becomes an acre!"

Mr. Easy—"Fair, Only fair! Pray, conduct me to the nearest drug store and I promise never to accept a substitute for you or for Allen's Foot-Ease." * * * *

To Preach to First Baptists.

Rev. John W. Musson, of Crozer Theological Seminary, who preached at the East Third Street chapel recently, will occupy the pulpit of the First Baptist church on Sunday in the absence of Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Standard Railroad of America.

PROTECTED THROUGHOUT BY THE ELECTRIC AUTOMATIC BLOCK SIGNAL SYSTEM.

On and After May 16, 1904.

Trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

† 2 30 a. m.—Fast Line daily, with Pullman Woodlawn Parlor Cars, for Pittsburg and Cleveland, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.

† 4 40 a. m.—Western Express daily, with Vestibule Sleeping Cars and Dining Car, for Pittsburg and Chicago, for Toledo, except Saturday.

† 7 00 a. m.—Florida Express, daily, with Pullman Vestibule Sleeping Cars, for Pittsburg, Toledo and Chicago, daily, for Knoxville, Tenn., Jacksonville, Tampa, for Cincinnati, except Saturday.

For Board Air Line Express, † 12 08 a. m. 1 07 p. m. daily. Seaboard Florida Limited, † 1 50 p. m. daily.

For Baltimore, Washington and the South—‡1 a. m., † 2 30, 10 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, † 1 50, ‡ 3 30, † 4 40, 7 00, 10 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Newark and New York—‡ 2 30, 4 07, 4 44, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 7 45, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m., Sundays, 2 30, 4 07, 4 44, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m. and 12 07 a. m. Express for New York only, 7 45 a. m. and 4 07 p. m. daily.

For Philadelphia—‡1 00, 2 30, 4 07, 4 44, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00, 1 07, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m., Sundays, 2 30, 4 07, 4 44, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Trenton—‡ 1 00, 2 30, 4 07, 4 44, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Bordentown—‡1 00, 2 30, 4 07, 4 44, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Bristol—‡1 00, 2 30, 4 07, 4 44, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Morrisville—‡ 1 00, 2 30, 4 07, 4 44, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Florence—‡ 1 00, 2 30, 4 07, 4 44, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Riverside—‡1 00, 2 30, 4 07, 4 44, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Delanco—‡1 00, 2 30, 4 07, 4 44, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Riverton—‡ 1 00, 2 30, 4 07, 4 44, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Palmyra—‡1 00, 2 30, 4 07, 4 44, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Fieldsboro—‡ 1 00, 2 30, 4 07, 4 44, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Burlington—‡1 00, 2 30, 4 07, 4 44, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Mount Holly—‡1 00, 2 30, 4 07, 4 44, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Pemberton—‡1 00, 2 30, 4 07, 4 44, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 a. m., 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Atlantic City—Via Delaware River Bridge, ‡ 35 p m week days; ‡ 51 a. m. Sundays.

For Cape May—Express, 9 38 a m (Saturdays only), 4 44 night, daily.

For Ocean City—‡ 1 00, 4 44, 6 45, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m. Sundays, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Sea Isle City—‡ 1 00, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m. Sundays, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Wildwood—‡1 00, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m. Sundays, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Cape May Court House—‡1 00, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m. Sundays, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Millville—‡1 00, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m. Sundays, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Vineland—‡1 00, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m. Sundays, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Bridgeton—‡1 00, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m. Sundays, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Salem—‡1 00, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m. Sundays, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Woodbury—‡1 00, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m. Sundays, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Glassboro—‡1 00, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m. Sundays, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Mullica Hill—‡1 00, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m. Sundays, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Swedesboro—‡1 00, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m. Sundays, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m.

For Penns Grove—‡1 00, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p. m. and 12 07 a. m. Sundays, 4 44, 7 15, 8 05, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a. m., 12 00 noon, 1 05, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00,

BOROUGHITES VETO SCHOOL BUILDING SITE

Proposition to Erect School-house on Grove Street is Overwhelmingly Defeated.

IT IS NOT SUITABLE

MR. OVERTON PREFERS CORNER OF SOMERSET STREET AND PARK PLACE.

Mayor Smalley Makes an Offer—Protests Against Grove Street Site Are Made by Many Citizens.

Disapproval of the School Board's choice of site for the proposed new school was again registered by the borough voters Monday. At the special public meeting called to consider the matter, the location on upper Grove street, beyond Walnut street, criticism of which was reported in last Friday's Daily Press, was voted down by a majority of three to one.

Condemnation of the place selected was almost general, and the only defenders among the speakers who discussed the matter were two members of the Board. Before the vote was taken the site was thoroughly talked over.

Criticism hinged upon the treacherous character of the brook, and the impossibility of keeping sidewalks and roadway in condition for travel, and in a great measure, upon the great distance of the site from the center of the borough.

Before offering the formal resolu*tion upon the site, Chairman Cooley,* of the Board buildings committee, made a carefully worded explanation of the reasons leading to the selection of the site. He pointed out that the main thing to regard was the necessity of putting the school in a locality that will accommodate the greatest number of children among the 180 who are overcrowding the present schools. Citing figures on the number of primary scholars in the various sections of the borough, Mr. Cooley maintained that the site offered presented the best accommodations as far as location was concerned. It seemed far from the center of the borough, but 100 children of primary age were in that locality, and it could easily be filled by drawing pupils from about Greenbrook road and down Grove street as far as Linden avenue. Dr. Cooley said that the Grove street freeholders had been considered, but it was found to be under the size demanded by the school law, and would have required the building of a basement, the raising of the building and enlargement on every side before it could be made suitable for the purpose. There were no good approaches to the site offered, he acknowledged, but these disadvantages he confidently believed would be removed speedily.

Mayor Smalley attacked the site vigorously. He said he was immeasurably surprised that such a locality had been considered. He aroused a storm of handclaps and cheers by stating that if the Board was determined to build a school there he would give them a lot and stone enough to build a house only a few hundred feet from the site offered. So far as the ground itself went, he said, it was good, but the conditions surrounding it made it out of the question as the location for a school. The brook could not be controlled, and would inevitably and regularly overflow, as it had done in the past, and wash away sidewalks—if any were put down—and roadway away. Unless the brook was deepened and widened the site was out of the question entirely, and what assurance of such action had been given by the Board of Freeholders? He considered the proposition very unjust to the people.

John Valiant, of the Board, made a brief defense of the site in response to the Mayor's remarks. He had faith in the borough's progressiveness and believed that the objections brought against the site would all be removed if the school were placed there. Mayor Smalley had questioned the wisdom of erecting a frame structure, and to this Mr. Valiant replied that a frame building of the sort the Board had in mind would be durable and require but few repairs.

Councilman Arnold, former Mayor R. A. Hegeman, John Goodwin, Charles Lyman, Col. Perry, L. B. Woolston, W. C. Smith all spoke against the site in strong terms, supporting the contensions of the Mayor. Mr. Needham, of the Board, made a very short defence of the selection.

One hundred and forty-eight votes were cast. Of these, 117 were against the site and only 31 for it.

*After the balloting President Over*ton asked the voters to remain and give the Board some expression of choice regarding the location and style of building favored. He particularly wanted to know whether the people wished a four-room building at this time, with the promise of another similar structure in the future, or one eight-room house.

Mayor Smalley said he believed a school was needed in the outskirts, because such a structure was a strong factor in the upbuilding of any section. President Overton stated that he himself favored one building, and preferred the lot on the corner of Somerset street and Park place for the location.

L. B. Woolston declared that the great trouble with the school board on the lot question was the inability of the members to agree. He spoke in favor of converting the old West End Hose Company house on Harrison street, and brought a hornet's nest about his ears by insisting that the Borough High School was not as good as that of the city.

While the indignant boroughites were boiling to unloose the storm that was to drop on the detractor of the high school, Dr. Cooley drew some lightning his way by declaring that *the Grove street site formerly sub*mitted, which had been mentioned by a couple of the speakers, could not be used before a $6,000 foundation had been built. That statement was too much for William Pangborn, the mason. He jumped to his feet and made an uncomplimentary reference to lunatic asylums, and before the surprised Doctor could respond he declared that he would put down a strong and satisfactory foundation for $1,500. Mayor Smalley followed him swiftly with an offer to put one down for $1,000. Dr. Cooley allowed the foundation to drop and confined himself to the character of the ground.

Then F. W. Bailey, who had been quiescent up to that point, asked the question that stirred up the highest excitement of the evening. He wanted to know if what Mr. Woolston had said about the comparative merits of the two high schools was true.

President Overton, W. C. Smith, J. W. A. Bauerschs and Mr. Needham forcefully told him that the borough school was as good as the city's and as good as any similar school in any city in the State. All the statements were received with cheers, which were particularly enthusiastic when Mr. Smith declared that Mr. Woolston was moved to speak as he did because he paid more taxes in the city. "We don't need consolidation of the schools and we don't want annexation," declared Mr. Smith vigorously, and the voters cheered tumultuously.

Mr. Bailey arose again. "Mr. Chairman," he said, with a grim little smile, "I asked the question I did, because I wanted to find out if what I was told several years ago was true. I was informed that certificate from the North Plainfield High School is as acceptable in every collegiate institution as a certificate from any other high school." Then the crowd went mad for a time. The cheering lasted the better part of a minute.

J. W. A. Bauerschs brought the meeting to a close by offering a resolution calling upon the Board to submit a proposition for an eight-room building, in a central location. It was overwhelmingly carried, the noes being very faint. A resolution that the Board submit at least three sites at the next public meeting, offered by Mr. Woolston, was passed unanimously.

These resolutions were, of course, of a wholly informal nature, but it is not likely that the Board, after calling for such expressions of choice, will disregard them. In speaking of the corner lot, President Overton said, that the new school could be run more economically, because of its nearness to the present school, than in any other location, and the mention of that lot in the course of the discussion called out a strong outburst of applause. This is taken to indicate that the Board will submit this lot among the three asked for, and that it is more than likely to be the choice of the voters.

REDUCED RATES TO ATLANTIC CITY.

Via Pennsylvania Railroad, Account Meetings American Medical Association and American Academy of Medicine.

For the benefit of those desiring to attend the meeting of the American Medical Association at Atlantic City, June 7 to 10, and the session of the American Academy of Medicine at the same place, June 4 and 6, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell excursion tickets to Atlantic City from all stations on its lines west of Downingtown and Avondale, north of Parker Ford, south of Newark and Porter, Del., and north and east of Trenton, Windsor, and Toms River, Inc., exclusive, at rate of single fare plus $1 for the round trip. Tickets will be sold June 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, good returning leaving Atlantic City June 4 to 13, inclusive. Tickets will be good to stop over at Philadelphia, and Baltimore, on return trip within the final limit on deposit at stop-over point. All tickets must be deposited immediately on arrival at Morris Guards' Armory, 13 South New York avenue, Atlantic City. Regular excursion tickets at usual rates will be sold from the points named above and from all intermediate points to Atlantic City.

EPWORTH LEAGUE HOLDS ANNIVERSARY

Fifteenth Year of Organization is Observed at a Special Service at Monroe Ave.

ITS HISTORY IS TOLD

REV. GEORGE MOONEY GIVES AN INTERESTING SKETCH OF ITS STRENGTH.

The League a Union of Independent Societies — Plainfielder Largely Instrumental in Organizing It —Some Statistics.

Fifteen years of steady growth and development of the Epworth League were celebrated at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church Sunday. The talk by Rev. George Mooney, the pastor, was full of interest and inspiration.

The Epworth League, as described by Mr. Mooney, was the result of an amalgamation of numberless independent societies, which, while working along practically the same lines, lacked the strength of a united organization.

Speaking of the organization of the League by delegates of the Young People's Methodist Alliance the Oxford League and other kindred organizations in the denomination, he said that the final result of that convention had a special interest for the people of Plainfield who knew Bishop J. H. Vincent. The characteristics of the Oxford League, which the present organization resembles more than any other of its forerunners, were followed as his insistent recommendation.

The act of organizing the League, said Mr. Mooney, created a giant fell-grown almost at the outset, as the chief task was to centralize and amalgamate an already existent, if inchoate force.

Some figures were also given in illustration of the strength of the League. The present number of senior chapters is over 21,000; and there are between 8,000 and 9,000 chapters in the junior organization. The total membership is 1,500,000 in round numbers, and of these 19,500 are in India alone. This is an indication of the wide field occupied by the League.

In the departments of Bible study and evangelization the showing is correspondingly good. There are 1,000 classes for Bible study, and the Morning Watch, an organization the members of which are pledged to prayer and Scripture-reading at the beginning of each day, numbers 5,000 young men and women.

The home mission features and the work of the department of mercy and help were also touched on. The study of missions, said Mr. Mooney, is profitable if for no other reason than the information thus gained about international relations and affairs. Many people who are puzzled to follow understandingly the progress of the present campaign in the Far East would have a good grasp of the situation had they followed the work of the missionaries.

In closing, the pastor mentioned this anniversary occasion as the best possible time for reconsecration in the work, especially as that work is one worthy of the very best that lies in those engaged in it.

On the programme, in addition to the address by the pastor, was announced another address to be given by Clarence A. Titus, president of the Elizabeth District Epworth League. Mr. Titus was ill and could not keep the engagement.

A "fifteen minutes' praise service, led by Walter M. McGee, preceded the exercises which included a welcoming speech by William N. Sorter and two anthems by the Heavenly Rest quartette.

KEAN FAVORS CROSS, BUT—

SENATOR WANTS UNION COUNTY MAN FOR BENCH, BUT FEARS A CHANGE.

United States Senator John Kean said on Saturday to a reporter that State Senator Joseph Cross was his personal choice for appointment as judge of the United States District Court, made vacant by the death of Andrew Kirkpatrick, but that the exigencies of Union County politics were such that he was not yet ready to join with Senator Dryden in recommending the appointment of Mr. Cross to President Roosevelt.

Westfield Club Officers.

These officers have been elected by the Westfield Club: President, E. D. Floyd; vice president, C. E. Halstead, treasurer, F. S. Smith; secretary, H. M. Forster; trustees, H. C. Bergeant, W. E. Tuttle, Jr., R. I. Townley, C. K. Darrow and J. A. Woodward.

Dr. Lawrence Doyle, of this city, who is doing duty in St. Mary's Hospital, Hoboken, has been spending a week at his home.

MINSTREL TROUP HOLDS CELEBRATION

Band Concert Show Amateurs Enjoy a Banquet at Timbo's Cafe.

SONGS AND SPEECHES

BANDMASTER BENJ. LA VERE PRAISES MAYOR SMALLEY.

Five Free Concerts Are Now Assured—Much Fun at the Gathering of "Artists"—The Bill-of-Fare.

The members of the band concert minstrel troupe, together with their friends in the Hope Y. M. A. minstrels, who acted as ushers at the performances last week, enjoyed a dinner Monday at Timbo's restaurant.

Of course the chief topic during the dinner was the minstrel show, and numerous jokes at each other's expense were passed good-naturedly from one to another along with the roast meats, vegetables, salads, olives and other edibles which quickly disappeared.

Although parts of several songs were sung during the progress of the feast, it was not until the advent of the *coffee and cigars that the real fun be*gan. One after another, Jack Hall, Horace Martin, John Todd, Tom DeMass, Will Doud, Harry Bilmes, Tom Muir, Wm. "Doc" Greenwood and in fact every one of the "artists" of the troupe did "a turn."

Elias Southard and Joseph Martin sang their duet, "Larboard Watch," and the Hope singers who seated the *audiences at the Casino so satisfac*torily, rendered a few of their songs, including "Blue Bells" by Alex. Muir; "My California Poppy" by George Coss, and "Trouble" by Mat*thew Sweeney.*

V. W. Nash, Jr., though absent, had placed a box of good cigars at the disposal of the diners.

Bandmaster Ben LaVere was also called upon to contribute to the general entertainment and responded with a side-splitting story. Ben also made a few remarks upon the results of the show in respect to the amount of money taken in. After stating that because of the attendance not coming up to expectations, he said the sum realized would fall far short of assuring the number of concerts planned for. He called attention to the larger proportion of North Plainfield talent on the troupe and said that through the subscriptions of a number of borough officials, chief among whom is Mayor N. B. Smalley, five of the ten concerts proposed to be given, have been assured. N. B. Smalley, said he, has been his best friend and staunchest supporter, even in the borough.

He also said that two years ago when the fund was very low Mayor Smalley had, by contributing liberally from his private purse, pulled it out of a hole which threatened to swallow it.

MANDOLIN AND BANJO MUSIC

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL BOYS ENTERTAIN A LARGE AUDIENCE.

The Plainfield High School Mandolin and Banjo Club gave a charming entertainment in Franklin Hall, Saturday evening. The affair was well attended by members of the school and their friends and every selection on the programme was well received. The first selection by the Mandolin and Banjo Club was "Navajo," which was well rendered and merited the applause which was bestowed.

Leonard Gavett in "ten minutes' of magic" gave a clever exhibition of sleight-of-hand tricks. The "humor*ist stories" by Walter Waters were* very cleverly given. Mr. Waters responding to an encore by giving "A Dutchman's Description of his Last Dog." A duet entitled "Napoleon March" by Theodore Gavett and Garth Williams was particularly good. Chester Briggs rendered a mandolin solo "Tommy." Mr. Briggs deserved the storm of applause which he received. Mr. Waters' "Natural History by a Dutchman" caused a great deal of laughter. The "American Club," by the Mandolin and Banjo Club Quartette was also good.

Dancing was enjoyed by a large number at the close of the entertainment. The Mandolin and Banjo Club is composed of Chester Briggs, Theodore Gavett and Monroe Long; mandolins; Garth Williams and William Briggs, banjos; Herbert Smith, violin, and Irving Martin, piano.

Fifty-Six Chicks Roasted.

An overheated lamp set fire to an incubator at the home of George Giebelhouse, 625 West Front street, during Sunday night and fifty-six chicks owned by Mrs. Auerbach were killed. The incubator was destroyed.

MILITARY OFFICER SCORES LEGISLATURE

Lieut.-Col. J. F. Clime Makes Charges Against Lawmakers in Speech at Co. K Banquet.

ATTACKS SWACKHAMER

CAPT. WILLIAM B. MARTIN TELLS OF COMPANY'S HISTORY.

Rev. Dr. Glazebrook Speaks on True Principles — President of Council Ralph I. Tolles and Others Make Remarks.

Amid the plaudits of officers, honorary members and invited guests, including representatives of the city government, Co. K held its third annual banquet, Monday. The militia's new armory for this city was given another boom and prominent citizens renewed their pledge to do all in their power to help the movement along. Prior to the banquet the members met in their armory on West Front street and held a short drill. There was a full representation and the boys did creditable work.

Captain W. B. Martin, of Co. K, presided at the banquet and acted as toastmaster. He gave a brief history of the organization from its birth on February 27, 1901, with Captain Browning in command. On April 30, 1902, Lieut. J. F. Mosher resigned and on October 6, the same year the captain resigned. At that time the company had 71.9 per cent. in figure of merit, the best in the regiment being 79. The company now has sixty-five members, eight new recruits *being received last night. The aver*age attendance at drills during April was 52. In 1903 the company stood first in rifle practice. On November 5, 1902, the present commandant was chosen and despite the increased qualifications, the company qualified twenty-seven men on the State range. In 1903 five per cent. was gained in figure of merit and an average of 76 5 secured.

The captain then spoke of the organization being chased about from one place to another, owing to the want of a regular drill hall. He said the present quarters are quite satisfactory although the company would like an armory. At the fair held during the winter, Captain Martin said the members made enough to pay their rent for a year, but how much more he would not say.

In 1902-3 the Company qualified at rifle practice in the Newark armory range. Now the company has its own range for practice.

Lieut.-Col. J. F. Clime, of Burlington, was then introduced and he gave one of the most interesting talks of the evening, taking occasion to criticise the New Jersey Legislators for their action in defeating the Dick bill. After paying a compliment to Former Captain Browning, in which he said that he had only one fault, that of wanting to learn all there is to be known about military affairs in one hour, he turned his attention to the Legislators.

He characterized the National Guard as a misnomer and not recognized by the Government. He spoke of the effort being made to secure this recognition and have the Government assume control, but when the National Board bumps up against the New Jersey Legislature it always suffers. He said that while wearing a uniform his utterances might be considered treason, but he claimed to have a right to an opinion. He declared that the legislators had crippled the Government through his militia in trying to secure votes for themselves and he believed the time had come to retire such men; men who would sacrifice the Government's interest for their own.

Indirectly Col. Clime then referred to the Assemblyman from North Plainfield and said that after his actions at Trenton regarding the militia, he ought not to belong to New Jersey. He condemned his patriotism which led him to fear that the Dick bill would turn every male citizen of the State, 18 years and over into a soldier.

The speaker said that while the Dick bill was defeated, the Assemblyman from Somerset does not know enough to know that his efforts amounted to naught. He said the Na*tional Guard is here to stay. "If* necessary the officers can buy their own uniforms," declared Col. Clime. "They can go down in their pockets the same as before. Let some of these Legislators who are as narrow as a three-cent piece stay at home until they widen out." Those present gave endorsement to what the speaker said through almost continuous applause.

Ralph I. Tolles, president of the Common Council, responded with a few pleasant words, after which Col. Collins, of Elizabeth, who claims to be the father of Co. K, complimented his child and the commandant of the organization. He also referred to the fact that it was his pleasure to have on his staff, Kempton W. Browning as assistant surgeon.

In referring to Col. Clime's remarks, Col. Collins said that he was inclined to be more charitable toward his fellow-citizens, believing that their actions were due to ignorance or a play to the galleries. He added that they were now a thing of "has-beens," and the sooner the better.

Former Assemblyman William Newcorn, who, while in the Legislature, worked hard for an armory for Co. K, was the next speaker. He said that while in the Assembly, he did not feel like a three-cent Legislator referred to by Col. Clime, for he voted in favor of every military measure. He renewed his promise to do all he could to secure an armory here.

At this time Captain Martin referred to the regimental prize won by Co. K in qualifying the most number of men.

Probably one of the best addresses of the evening was given by Rev. Dr. Otis A. Glazebrook, of Elizabeth, chaplain of the Second Regiment. In an eloquent manner, the veteran stirred the hearts of everyone in his earnest plea that they be loyal, and that fidelity be the watch-word; that the members be regular in their attendance at weekly drills and thus make the organization a success. "To be rather than to seem," were the words he impressed on the assembly. He referred to the "yellow peril," adding that the American soldier has a rival in the Far East in the solider of the Mikado.

The other speakers of the evening were Freeholder William A. Westphal, Councilmen Robert S. Lee, J. S. Higham and William S. Bullock, Dr. Kempton Browning, Former Lieut. J. F. Mosher, of this city; Captain John H. Wheeley, of Co. M. Somerville; Maj. Nelson Y. Dungan, of Somerville; Captain Parker, of Co. C, of Elizabeth. They all complimented the local organization. During the evening H. I. Tolles, W. A. Westphal, R. S. Lee and J. S. Higham were accepted as honorary members. It was about 2 o'clock this morning when the affair terminated and three rousing cheers were given to the officers and guests.

Moody on the Trusts.

To the thinking man who desires to master the subject without being handicapped and confused by the partisanship usually exhibited by the writers on such topics, the new book by John Moody, "The Truth About the Trusts," will appeal most keenly. No other work on the subject contains so much detailed information so readily accessible and so well arranged. In a review of the work, the New York Sun says: "This is no polemical tract, but a book of reference, replete with valuable information put in an intelligible and attractive manner." Mr. Moody, who is a resident of Cranford, is the editor of "Moody's Manual of Corporation Securities."

Bankrupt Brokers.

A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against T. H. Leary, New York stockbrokers, who formerly had a branch office in the Babcock building.

Miss Anna T. Sweitzer, of Somer*ville, and Mrs. C. T. Case, of Rae*ville, are the guests of Mrs. Charles Greer, of Putnam avenue.

DIED.

COE—Suddenly, April 14, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. W. H. Van de Carr, at Stockport, N. Y., Mrs. Mary Cleveland Coe, widow of the late Rev. James Roger Coe.

STETSON—On Sunday, May 15, 1904, Clara E., wife of Theodore E. Stetson and daughter of John and the late Phobe Gildersleeve, aged 47 years.

BUSHNELL—At Pittsburg, Pa., May 16, Edith Tober Johnson, wife of Henry D. Bushnell.

CUFF—On Monday, May 16, 1904, Albert E., son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Cuff, aged 20 years and 5 months.

OTTO—At New Market, N. J., May 15, 1904, Marie, wife of John Otto, age 76 years, 1 month, 15 days.

BOVEY—On Monday, May 16, 1904, Jules B. Bovey, in his 66th year.

DUNHAM—At New Market, N. J., May 16, 1904, William V. Dunham, age 69 years, 1 month, 21 days.

HOW TO OBTAIN
Summer Boarders!

There is in New York City one daily newspaper which has a circulation greater than is enjoyed by any other during the past five years. Its net cash paid circulation is over 100,000 copies daily (including Brooklyn), larger than that of any other newspaper in the world. Those who are readers are among the wealthy, and well-to-do, who usually leave New York City (including Brooklyn), larger than that of any other newspaper in the world. Those who are readers are among the wealthy, and well-to-do, who usually leave New York City (including Brooklyn) for extended vacations in the country during the Summer. It carries more resort advertising than any other newspaper, so the public naturally look to it for information as to where to go.

An advertisement in its columns is, therefore, extremely valuable and sure to produce results. This paper is

The New York Times

"All the News That's Fit to Print."

Write the Classified Advertising Department for rate cards, sample copy and suggestions as to the best manner of running an advertisement.

3 1 jan 1t-n-c nm

Notice of Copyright Renewal, Class C., XXC No. 7,—Be it remembered that on January 4, 1904, Mary Runyon Lowry, of Plainfield, New Jersey, hath deposited in this office, the titles of two (2) musical compositions, Robert Lowry, viz: "Morning Beautiful," and "The Anchor of Soul." These in renewal for 14 years from February 12, 1904, and March 19, 1904. The right whereof she claims as proprietor in conformity with the laws of the United States respecting copyrights. Herbert Putnam, Librarian of Congress, by Thorvald Solberg, Register of Copyrights. 4 2 4

Sanitary Plumbing

Brick and Portable Furnaces
Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing,
Etc., Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Plumbers Association of New York City, I employ none but first class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business, at all times and in cases.

D. W. LITTELL,

No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Handbook on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

NEW IN EVERY DETAIL

My new barber shop at

143 NORTH AVE.

is now open ready for business. All the latest appointments in the toncria line.

EDWIN B. MAYNARD.

CARNEY BROS.,

MADISON AVENUE,

Between Front and Second streets.

Tinners,
Plumbers
Gas Fitters,

Grates and bricks for all kinds of stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your tinware mending to us. The best tinners, the best plumbers, and the best gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction. Keys of all kinds are made here. Tinware made to order. Ranges, brick and portable furnaces. Sanitary plumbing.

DIME

Savings Institution,

Of Plainfield, N. J.,

Is now receiving deposits with interest, allowed on all sums from $5 to $3,000.

J. Frank Hubbard, President.
Wm. F. Arnold, } Vice-Pres
Jeremiah Manning, }
J. C. Pope, Sec'y and Treas.

Money deposited on or before January tenth will draw interest from the first.

Guaranteed Salary $900 YEARLY.

Men and women of good address to represent us, home or travel appointing agents; others for local work looking after our interests. $900 salary guaranteed yearly or extra commissions and expenses, rapid advancement, old established house. Grand chance for earnest man or woman to secure pleasant permanent position, liberal income and future. Write at once.

STAFFORD PRESS,
23 Church St., New Haven, Conn.

W. B. CODINGTON,

Counsellor-at-Law

Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery, Notary Public. Office—Corner of Park avenue and Second street.

ALBERT HEDDEN
Livery & Boarding Stables

FOURTH ST.,

between Watchung and Park avenues. First-class Livery. Horses boarded by week or month. Telephone call No. 114.

Wm. A. Woodruff

Fire and Life

INSURANCE AGENT,

OFFICE,

corner Front St. and Park Avenue, Plainfield, N. J.

OBJECTION MADE TO NEW SCHOOL SITE

Reasons Given by Boroughites for Opposing Board's Proposition.

CONTRARY OPINION

MEMBERS OF BOARD OF EDUCATION UNANIMOUSLY FAVOR IT.

West End Hose Company's House Suggested As a Suitable Building—Would Allow a Much Smaller Expenditure.

Strong objection to the second site chosen by the Board of Education for the proposed new borough schoolhouse has developed. In several quarters the location is condemned in unmeasured terms, and opposition to it is spreading. The objections hinge on the absence of street improvements.

The lot chosen is located in the middle of the block above Walnut street. Walnut street is an unimproved thoroughfare lying some distance above Greenbrook road. Beyond Green brook Grove street is a rocky hill, without sidewalks, given over largely to loose stones and knotted grass. The roadway is full of ruts. Walnut street is only used for foot traffic; it is badly in need of grading, and has no improvements at all.

These are the objections filed to the erection of a schoolhouse on that particular site. It is suggested that the old West End Hose Company house, which the borough has offered for sale, presents a chance for a school in an ideal location. The house is only about two blocks away from the proposed lot, and in a well-paved, well-lighted neighborhood. The addition of another story, the advocates of this plan say, the house could be converted into as satisfactory a schoolhouse as any to be secured. The property could be bought cheaply from the borough, it is maintained, and the $14,000 appropriation asked for by the Board would not be necessary.

A. V. D. Honeyman, a member of the school board, was asked this morning to state the advantages of the lot. He said it was the unanimous choice of the board for a four-room house, principally because it is equally distant from the Prideville section and the district to the other side of Grove street from which the present overflow of school attendance comes. It is on high ground, he said and street improvements are sure to come. There is an ordinance ordering sidewalks on Grove street, and property owners have assured the board that they will meet the law if the new school is erected. The roadway on Grove street has been laid with the first macadam stone, and according to Mr. Honeyman only a rolling and the application of the top dressing is needed to put it into first class shape.

DANCE AT THE PARK CLUB

LAST OF SERIES OF THREE BACHELOR AFFAIRS PROVES ENJOYABLE.

The last of the series of three bachelor dances during the season by Reeve Stockton, Harry McGee and Harry Hall, was given at the Park Club, last night, there being between fifty and sixty guests present. Like the other two dances this one was replete with pleasant features and it was early this morning when the merry dancers wended their way homeward.

During the evening the german was led by Miss Helen Buchnell and Harry McGee. These were the patronesses for the affair: Mrs. Theodore D. Wilson, Mrs. Arthur L. Otterson, Mrs. George S. Ring, Mrs. Joseph M. Shellabarger, Mrs. Edward M. Van-Buren and Mrs. Clifford McGee.

The music for the dances was furnished by VanEps' banjo trio and piano and it was one of the features of the evening.

SECRETLY WED.

Patrolman's Daughter Has Been a Wife for Many Months—Was Married in October.

The friends of Miss Myers, daughter of A.r. and Mrs Nicholas Myers, of 1251 North avenue, and William Perrie, of Grandview avenue, learned with surprise today of their marriage. The young couple announce that the event was celebrated in New York last October and despite their best efforts were unable to keep the affair a secret any longer. The parents were informed of the fact and while no objections was made to the marriag they would have much preferred to have the couple wait until they were a little older. Mr. and Mrs. Perrie will reside here. The groom has a position in New York and formerly carried a Daily Press route.

LOTUS GLEE CLUB HEARTILY APPLAUDED

Encores Aplenty for the Superb Quartette at the First M. E. Church.

MISS SMITH'S RENDITION

RECITATIONS WIN THE APPRECIATION OF THE AUDIENCE.

Ovation to Charles L. Lewis—Great Solo Work—Good Profit is Made—The Programme.

Before a large and appreciative audience that nearly filled the First M. E. church, the Lotus Glee Club, assisted by Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith, gave a concert of unusual excellence, Thursday. The work of the quartette, as well as that of Mrs. Smith was of the first order and the selections were such as to call forth the heartiest of applause. Nearly every number received as encore and the artists were generous in their responses.

Perhaps her best effort of the evening was Mrs. Smith's presentation of "Berglet," by Bjornson, accompanied with music composed by Edward Grieg. In this selection Mrs. Smith's exceptional ability was displayed and her reputation as a dramatic reciter strengthened. "A Midnight Courtship," containing many amusing situations, won approbation, as did also other selections in a lighter vein given as encores.

In presenting the musical numbers there was not a rough spot. The quartette sang in perfect harmony, while the solo work was enjoyed to the full. Charles L. Lewis received a flattering ovation in his rendition of "The Grenadiers," while George Seymour Lenox, first tenor; G. Morgan Strickleif, second tenor and W. Stanley Grinsted, as second base, generously shared in the unstinted praise accorded. Each member was in fine voice and the work of Frank J. Smith, as director and accompanist, was all to be desired. The reception given to the club and Mrs. Smith was most gratifying to them and a substantial sum was realized from the affair.

PYTHIAN OBSERVANCE.

Memorial Day of Fraternal Order Takes Place on Sunday, June 19.

Final arrangements for the Pythian Decoration Day will be made at a special meeting to be held Sunday, May 29. The graves will be decorated on Sunday, June 19.

There will be a parade of all the Pythian organizations in the city, headed by the Uniformed Rank, in uniform. On Sunday, June 5, the Rank will go to Perkasieen, N. Y., to decorate the grave of Harvey L. Patterson, a member who was killed in the Westfield wreck.

C. A. Sturtevant's Patent.

Charles A. Sturtevant, of this city, has been granted a patent on a delivery mechanism for sheet folding machines.

SPEER'S

PORT GRAPE WINE

ALSO

OLD BURGUNDY WINE

And ★★★ Climax Brandy.

SPEER'S PORT GRAPE WINE

NINE YEARS OLD.

THIS CELEBRATED WINE is the pure juice of the Uporte Grape, raised in Speer's vineyards, and left hanging until they shrink and partly raisin before gathering. It is invaluable as unsurpassed by any other wines in the world. Being prescribed by the leading physicians and nurses, as his own vineyards, the past forty years, in hospitals and private families, and for the principal Hospitals and Boards of Health who have purchased it. It is particularly beneficial to the aged, debilitated and invalid, and in every respect it is A WINE TO BE RELIED ON.

Tonic and Strengthening Properties

Be sure that the signature of Autograph Speer, Passaic, N. J., is over the cork of each bottle.

Speer's (Socialite) Claret

Is held in high estimation for its richness as a Dry Table Wine, specially suited for delicate stomachs.

Speer's P. J. Sherry

Is a wine of Superior Character and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is made.

Speer's ★★★ Climax Brandy

IS A PURE BRANDY of the grape, and stands unrivaled in this country for its delicacy, purity and aroma in every respect to the high price Old Cognac Brandy of France, from which it cannot be distinguished.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS AND GROCERS WHO KEEP FIRST CLASS WINES.

Excellent for aged and weakly persons.

GRADE HIGHEST AGE OVER NINE YEARS.

ADOPTED IN HOSPITALS AS THE BEST

FOR RESTORING INVALIDS TO HEALTH

QUEEN OF THE REDS

LOUISE MICHEL, HEROINE OF FRENCH COMMUNE, DYING.

A Woman of Strong Passions and Many Virtues Who Has Helped to Keep France in a Turmoil.

Louise Michel is dying. Louise Michel, called by many names: Queen of Anarchy, the Red Virgin; Joan of Arc of the Commune; Charlotte Corday; Sister of Mercy; Defender of the Oppressed, An advocate of bloodshed, and angel of mercy.

As one stylistic writer says, and with justice, Louise Michel is a woman in whom the passion of pity has transformed her effort to gall. She has stolen the oppression and miseries of the poor that it became a frenzy passion to reform existing conditions at any cost, by any means—fire, sword, plunder and carnage. But through all her eventful, warring life there stood out boldly virtues as strong as her revolutionary crimes. Devotion to her mother was with her a religion; an ascetic life her habit, no thought for self; the acts of violence were ever in the interests of others; hers was unfaltering courage; surviving imprisonment and her long exile.

She was born in an old castle in France in 1839, of parents that were not legally married. She received a good education, knew her Greek and Latin; and prior to the Commune was a devout Roman Catholic. At an early age she began work as a school teacher, and in her teaching early showed herself an ardent republican, twice being brought before the authorities for revolutionary utterances. In 1855 she came to Paris, and there her hatred for the empire increased and she became alienated from the church. She hated the empire, she hated Napoleon, was one that drew lots as to who should kill the emperor. When the Germans laid siege to Paris, Louise donned the uniform a national guard, shouldered a rifle, and on the fortifications fought side by side with the men soldiers. In the siege she became notorious as one of the most fiery advocates of the use of petroleum.

LOUISE MICHEL.

As a member of the radical group lifting its hand against the empire she showed resourcefulness and daring. In the Commune was very conspicuous; displayed a frantic energy, is said to have been more or less responsible for all the deeds of violence that marked that movement. When the horror of the Commune came to an end, the hopeless struggle was over, Louise was placed under arrest and marched to Versailles. Three of her comrades were given the death penalty; and, though she entreated that a like punishment fall upon her, she was banished to New Caledonia. As an exile convict her heart and hand were kept busy in the work of nursing the sick and in teaching the natives, of whom she became very fond; but when she was released, in 1880, she again appeared a "Sybil of Wrath."

On her return to Paris she took up anarchy as once she had espoused republicanism; and spent her time, when out of prison, in stirring up the inflammable French people. She was sent to prison upon different charges, now as a dangerous maniac, now as a criminal. She was leader in the affair of the bakeries in 1883, when bread was taken for the starving, and this time was sentenced to six years imprisonment. After serving four years she was released by President Grevy. She then went to London and became associated with Prince Kraptokin in aranchistic propoganda, and engaged in literary and historical work. Her poems often give evidence of exalted feeling, but her novel, "The Microbes of Society," is, to put it very mildly, decidedly "strong." Only recently has she been permitted to return to France.

She has not married, and is not known ever to have had a lover, though undoubtedly she held a very strong affection for Ferre, one of the leaders of the French Commune, executed near Paris in 1871. She seems to have been altogether absorbed in altruism. When a French statesman asked her what she would do if the president of France were offered her, she replied thus: "I would accept if for 24 hours. Then I would open the banks and the prisons, and the world would be rejuvenated immediately."

Mr. W. T. Stead speaks of Louise Michel as one of the most pathetic and tragic figures of our time, and it must seem to those that know the story of her life that Mr. Stead also speaks well when he refers to this tireless laborer for the lowly as the "supreme type of the passion for compassion."

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of literary news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

Public Library Notes.

Works in the Public Library for the Municipal Worker.

General Works.

Coler, Bird, S., ex-Comptroller of New York city, municipal government as illustrated by the charter, finances and public charities of New York, 1900; Conkling, A. R., City government in the United States, 1894; Eaton, D. B., Government of municipalities, 1899, "It must have a decided influence upon future legislation affecting the structure of city governments in this country;" Fairlie, J. A., Municipal administration, 1901, "As a handbook for the use of the growing number of persons, who wish to inform themselves upon the problems and principles of municipal government, the treatise is so far without a rival is American literature;" Goodhue, W. F., Municipal improvements: a manual of the methods, utility and cost of public improvements for the municipal officer, 1900: Hollander, J. H., Financial history of Baltimore, 1899, "In many respects the financial history of Baltimore is typical of that of the ordinary American municipality;" Robinson, C. M., The improvement of towns and cities, or the practical basis of civic aesthetics, 1901, "Among other topics treated are smoke nuisance, street paving and cleaning, advertisements, parks, etc.;" Shaw, Albert, Municipal government in continental Europe, 1900; Shaw, Albert, Municipal government in Great Britain, 1898, "Dr. Shaw's two books are of great value to the municipal officer who wishes to avail himself of the experience of older communities in dealing with municipal problems;" Whinery, Samuel, Municipal public works, their inception, construction and management, 1903; Wilcox, D. F., Study of city government: an outline of the problems of municipal functions, control and organization, 1897, "Primarily an outline of problems, but also contains some discussion and many illustrations;" Zueblin, Charles, American municipal progress, chapters in municipal sociology, 1902, "A careful and unusually direct statement of the present condition of American cities, as regards several branches of municipal service, mass transportation, streets and public works, sanitation, schools, libraries and parks."

The subject of "wood pavements" is touched upon in most of the above-named. It is quite fully treated in the following:

Aitken, Thomas, Road making and maintenance: a practical treatise, 1900, "Based for the most part on practical experience and collected from recognized authorities;" Delano, W. H., Street pavements and pavements in France, 1896, "Deals with materials, construction, maintenance, cost, etc.;" Shaler, N. S., American highways, a popular account of their conditions and of the means by which they may be bettered, 1896; Spalding, F. P., Text-book on roads and pavements, 1898, "A valuable little work on the principles of road making, outlining the more important system of constructing brick, wood, asphalt, etc.;" Wheeler, H. A., Vitrified paving brick, a review of present practice, 1895.

This subject is also fully treated in the late volumes of the "Municipal Engineer."

FORESTERS' THIRTIETH YEAR

ANNIVERSARY TO BE MARKED BY THE INITIATION OF 150 CANDIDATES.

A meeting commemorative of the thirtieth anniversary of the institution of the Independent Order Foresters, will be held at the Casino, on Tuesday night, May 24. It is being planned to initiate 150 candidates and the speaker of the evening will be Dr. W. H. Montague, former secretary of State and minister of agriculture of the Dominion of Canada, who was also a former member of the House of Commons. He is a gifted and eloquent orator and it is hoped that every Forester in this vicinity may hear him.

A number of tickets have been provided for each Court in this city and neighboring towns for the friends of the members. A fine programme, in charge of Prof. Throop, of New York, will be presented. High Chief Ranger J. O'Reilly, of Jersey City, will preside and other prominent Foresters will be present.

Leap Year Social.

Under the auspices of Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, a leap-year social will be held Monday night, May 23.

CONQUEST OF LASSA.

It Is Now Being Attempted by Strong British Force.

China, Which Exercises Suzerainty Over Thibet, Has Offered No Protest—Country Ruled by Corrupt Priests.

England's so-called "peaceful" advance into Thibet with a force from 2,000 to 3,000 strong, led by Col. Younghusband and Col. MacDonald, is the subject of much discussion by European statesmen. Russia is suspicious of the movement. From the English government's standpoint the expedition is to support and protect the commission sent to more rigidly enforce the treaty between Great Britain and Thibet; also to gain new concessions and, more than all, to enlarge the channels of commerce and see that Russia gets no more favors than England.

Before the expedition started the Chinese government published in the Peking Gazette an official memorial from the amban reporting a conference with the Thibetan state councillors, at which he urged them to abandon the policy of obstruction and to be reasonable and discuss in a friendly manner trade questions with the British commissioners who would cross the frontier. The memorial was an indication that China herself would place no serious obstacle in the way of negotiations. Since the expedition started the Chinese government has made no protest or remonstrance of any kind; on the contrary, it has given evidence that it regards the expedition with approval.

Several Europeans have entered Lassa since the expulsion of the French priests Huc and Gabet in 1846. Instead of being sent away they were cared for and given much good food—poisoned. Once two foreigners and a foreign woman came within a day's journey of Lassa. They were permitted to send for food and were not poisoned, but they were not allowed to enter the sacred city.

MAP OF THIBET.
(Showing its Position in relation to British and Russian Spheres.)

A class of priests, ecclesiastical roughs, constituting one-third of the clerical population, are noted for their fighting tendencies. Their occupation consists in training themselves in athletics—stone throwing, high jumping, tests of bodily strength, wrestling and singing wild songs. Their daily religious duties are reading the Scriptures, but they have no scholarly attainments.

The 6,000,000 of Thibetans are expected to support 433,242 priests of the new school of Buddhists. Among these are 1,020 reincarnated lamas, who receive a special education and are treated with great reverence. The government employs 165 official priests by royal appointment and the same number of lay officials. The departments of the royal household, religious affairs and treasury, all have their own [illegible]

The population of Lassa (11,500 feet altitude) is between 70,000 and 100,000. The Brebun temple contains 7,700 priests and students, the great temple of Lassa 3,500, and the great Goden temple, 3,300. Thibetans are unusually filthy in their habits, and for this reason they consider the Chinese extremely clean. Many of the men have only one wife apiece, while as many as a dozen or more men have a common wife for the lot. There is no trouble about the children, for each recognizes the numerous fathers as first, second and third father, and so on through the list.

The New York Herald says the people are extravagantly fond of dazzling jewelry of all kinds. Human bodies are fed to bald-headed eagles and dogs. Some are thrown into the river or burned, but as a rule cremation is rare. Smallpox, which flourishes in all countries, regardless of race, language or custom, has played havoc in Thibet. More than 6,000 fatal cases are on record, but the population continues to increase just the same.

City people are great meat eaters, chiefly of the yak; for the second choice mutton, goat and beef. Country people who raise meat to sell eat very little of their flesh products.

Deplorable Lack of Humor.

Only few brides kick in the bridal traces when the promise to "obey" is required of them at the marriage service, and they are chiefly of the untractable class. On this subject the Baltimore American pleasantly says: "If woman had more sense of humor, brides could get a good deal more fun out of life by promising to obey, and then watching the efforts of their husbands to collect the goods."

American Apples in Berlin.

American apples are seen on every fruit stand and are peddled through every street in Berlin, the price being five cents a pound. Germany consumed about 7,000 tons of our apples during last year.

GERMAN MEASLES EPIDEMIC

HOW THE CASES ARE TREATED BY LOCAL PHYSICIANS.

During the past few months there has been an epidemic of measles in the city and borough, and the physicians have been kept busy. In a majority of cases the disease has been of the German variety and not attended by any troublesome features. Physicians have usually prescribed no medicines, simply giving the ordinary advice, "keep the patient warm and out of draughts." The disease has attacked young people and children chiefly, although in a few cases old persons have not escaped.

With the German variety it is not necessary for the physicians to make a report of the case to the Board of Health, as in many instances the patient would recover before the report could be filed and any legal action taken. It lasts but two or three days and if the patient is properly cared for leaves no bad effect.

Where a person has a genuine case of measles great caution is necessary. If cold is contracted pneumonia is likely to develops and cause serious trouble. There are a few of these cases now in the city and the patients are quite ill. The physicians are unable to account for the prevalance of measles, except that at certain times in the year, especially during the latter part of the winter and early spring, it is more common than at other times. Young mothers are unusually quite anxious about their children in case of measles and they summon the physician with all possible haste. One city physician has been troubled a great deal this season with young mothers, frequently being called up on the telephone at midnight to inform the physician that this or that symptom was noted and advice was wanted. This is part of the physicians' many duties and like the good and patient man that he is he never finds fault.

IRVINGTON - MILBURN RACE

ANNUAL CYCLING EVENT FOR DECORATION DAY MORNING.

Plans are complete for the famous twenty-five mile road race which will have its sixteenth running over the Irvington-Milburn course on Decoration Day. The race, as usual, will be held under the auspices of the Bay View Wheelmen, and "Happy Days," Will R. Pitman will be the referee. Ever since its initial year, this race has been the blue-ribbon event in cycling in this country, and year after year the best riders have been attracted to the fine course where low records have been made.

The course, so well known to cyclists, is through some of the prettiest New Jersey country and is always in good shape for road racing.

It is expected that several former winners will start on Decoration Day, but as rule this race goes to some dark horse. For weeks past numberless riders have been in training for the event in the hope of winning one of the prizes.

The race will be started at a point about one mile southwest of the Hilton Hotel, at 10:30 o'clock sharp. The men will report to the clerk of the course at the starting point and will be arranged according to handicap. Riders will be limited to one hour and thirty minutes to finish in. The prizes are two gold medals, and a gold watch for the prizes, and eight up-to-date bicycles for positions. There are many other gifts to be awarded, including racing suits, sweaters, tires, lamps, saddles and several other articles. In addition a banner will be presented to the club having the largest number of entries. To the club having the greatest number of men to finish a silver cup will be presented. Entries close with William Cavanaugh, secretary, No. 380 South Sixth street, Newark, on May 24.

GOLF HANDICAP.

The Official List Includes Names of Many Prominent Plainfielders.

An advance copy of the official handicap list of the New Jersey State Golf Association shows many local players among the lowest handicaps. The committee has handicapped 597 men at 17 and under. Frank O. Reinhart leads with a handicap of 4. There are no Plainfielders in the handicap of five but J. Whitney Baker is given six. He formerly had eight. The other local golfers are rated as follows: J. H. P. Wharton, seven; Hobret Abbott, W. L. Glenney, M. Pendleton Rogers, Jr., Howard deP. Wright, Dudley Barrows, Frank C. Talmadge, A. R. Fisk, eight; C. W. Abbott and R. M. Sandford, nine; C. W. Fisk and Willard Wadsworth, ten.

Sell Dunellen Turntable.

The Rockaway Valley Railroad Company has purchased the turntable owned by the New Jersey Central and located at Dunellen. It will be removed to the terminal at Morristown.

FAIR LITIGANTS REACH SETTLEMENT

Big Sum of Money Reported to Have Been Paid to the Nelsons.

EXACT TERMS SECRET

$1,500,000 IS UNDERSTOOD TO BE THE AMOUNT.

Reasons for the Settlement, After Referee Decides Against Contestants, Made Public by the Lawyers.

Ending many months of litigation and negotiation, the contest over the big estate left by Charles L. Fair, who was killed with his wife in an automobile accident in France in August, 1903, was settled last week. The estate is valued at something like $7,000,000. Of this, Mrs. Hannah Nelson, and William B. Smith and Abram Nelson, her sons, are said to have received $1,500,000 to divide among them. The exact terms of settlement were not made public, but it is announced that the Nelsons are quite satisfied with the amounts.

The referee who took testimony in the case found that Mrs. Fair died before her husband. He recommended judgment for the defendants, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, the sisters of Mr. Fair. When the attorneys on both sides got together and consented to waive the filing of the referee's report for the customary eight days, and yesterday they went before Justice Bishop in the Supreme Court and consented to sign the judgment as recommended by the referee.

The reasons for the settlement as set forth in a statement issued by the lawyers were many. In the first place, the technical obligation of fraud in the complaint was extremely distasteful to both Mrs. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Oelrichs. It was charged that they withheld the information that the estate was valued at $7,000,000, and that they led Mrs. Nelson and her relatives to believe they were getting a big share of it when the California settlement provided the paying over of $185,000 to Mrs. Nelson and her sons on condition that they would release all further claims to the estate. The fact of the matter was that neither Mrs. Oelrichs nor Mrs. Vanderbilt knew just what the estate was valued at, as merely did what they were told to do in the matter—signed papers. Besides, the courts might finally decide that Mr. Fair died before Mrs. Fair, and this would give all the estate to the Nelsons as next of kin to Mrs. Fair, inasmuch as Fair had made a will in his wife's favor.

The plaintiffs, on the other hand, were moved to make a settlement because they were satisfied with the new terms offered. In addition to this the conviction of their witnesses Lucien Mas and Alfred J. Moranne in France for perjury, if affirmed, would weaken the plaintiffs' contention that Fair died before Mrs. Fair. And should the Hourdesses persist in refusing to testify, it would be difficult for Mrs. Fair's relatives to prove survivorship by eye witnesses.

In a formal statement issued last night, the lawyers said:

"Mrs. Nelson and her family, in consideration of a substantial sum to be paid to her for herself, her family, her counsel fees and disbursements, by Mrs. Oelrichs and Mrs. Vanderbilt, agreed to make no further opposition to the settlement of Mr. and Mrs. Fair's estates, but to permit the same to be distributed to Mrs. Oelrichs and Mrs. Vanderbilt. They also further agreed, as soon as these estates had been distributed, to permit the defendants to file a supplemental answer in the New York action and consented to the entry of a judgment therein in favor of the defendants and establishing the survival of Mr. Fair.

"In pursuance of this arrangement, on April 16, 1904, a decree was entered at San Francisco settling Mr. Fair's estate and distributing the same to Mrs. Oelrichs and Mrs. Vanderbilt. On May 7, 1904, a similar decree was entered there respecting Mrs. Fair's estate.

"Upon the settlement of these two estates, the supplemental answer was filed in the New York action, and on May 11, 1904, Justice Bischoff entered final judgment therein in favor of the defendants and decreeing that Mr. Fair survived his wife.

"By common consent of all persons interested in the matter, the sum paid in final settlement of this case will not be made public."

Friends of the Nelson family at New Market said today that the story is greatly exaggerated and that it is "but air" originated by "Mayor Bill" Smith.

Strawberry Festival Arranged.

Under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Missionary Society, of the First Baptist church, a strawberry festival will be held on the lawn adjoining the church Tuesday afternoon and night, May 31.

HORSE SHOW EVENTS INCLUDE 30 CLASSES

Executive Committee Meets and Arranges for the First Annual Exhibition.

HORSEMEN INTERESTED

VALUABLE PRIZES TO BE OFFERED BY THE COMMITTEE.

Discussion as to Seating Accommodations—As to Caring for the Stock—Those at the Meeting.

Further progress was made in preparation for the coming horse show to be held June 17 and 18, at a meeting of the executive committee held last night. It was announced that there would be nearly thirty classes, including harness, saddle, pony and four in-hand. About twenty classes will be reserved for open events and the remainder for local horsemen from Union, Somerset and Middlesex Counties. Already the committee has received assurances that the entry lists will be filled up and there is now no question about the affair being a great success.

Owners of fine horses throughout Northern Jersey, as well as other parts of the State, have already sought information, indicating their desire to enter the several classes. There was an informal discussion regarding prizes to be offered, and it was decided to secure a valuable collection.

Other matters discussed were the seating capacity at the Plainfield Driving Park, where the show will be held, and arrangements for taking care of the thoroughbred stock during the two days of the show."

These members of the executive committee were present: Newton B. Smalley, J. Wesley Johnson, Robert A. Fairbairn, Dr. Knott, George H. Beeson, O. T. Waring, L. E. Waring, C. J. Fisk, Charles Blitz and E. H. Ladd, Jr.

WESTFIELD SUSPECTS HELD

JUSTICE TOUCEY DEMANDS $1,500 FROM MEN ACCUSED OF ROBBERY.

John McGilvray and Timothy McCarthy, accused of robbing the Westfield station on April 23, were held to answer the charge before the Grand Jury yesterday. Judge Toucey, of Westfield, before whom the prisoners were arraigned for preliminary hearing, held the pair under $1,500 bail. McCarthy secured a bondsman, but McGilvray failed to get bail and was remanded.

In a statesman at a Newark outfitting store, the police produced a new witness against the men. This salesman, John Apora, testified positively that the accused men purchased suits and general clothing outfits the day after the robbery. C. L. Roane, the Westfield freight agent, and D. F. Carigg, the night operator and agent, and J. P. Q Goltra, the carpenter from whom the chisel found on the station floor was taken, also testified against the men.

McCarthy's father went on his bond. McGilvray is locked up in the county jail in default of bail.

FOR CHARITY'S SAKE.

Plainfield Relief Association to Hold a Cake Sale.

Owing to the fact that so many men have been employed during the past season cutting wood at the headquarters of the Plainfield Relief Association, it has been found necessary to build a shed to provide additional room. The present quarters are inadequate. To meet the expense of this work it is proposed to hold a cake and candy sale at the Relief rooms, 544 West Front street, on Thursday afternoon, June 2, from 3 to 6 o'clock.

Co-Operation a Failure.

It is said that the Co-Operative Paint Store on West Second street has quit business, the ladders, brushes and some of the supplies having been purchased by Woolston & Buckle and some of the other materials were purchased by other local dealers, while the remainder was shipped back to New York. For a time the business paid, it is said, but upon the termination of the strike, trade fell off.

Approaching Marriage.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Miss Mabel Symons, daughter of Paul Symons, of East Third street, and Walter Roll, of the borough. The affair will be celebrated Wednesday, June 1, at the home of the bride.

Building in Westfield.

William H. Abbott, North avenue real estate broker, has broken ground, corner of Broad and Prospect street, Westfield, for the erection of a three-story brick building. There will be stores on the first floor and flats above.

MARK TWO DECADES OF FAITHFUL SERVICE

Surprise for Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, Pastor of the Congregational Church.

ENJOYABLE EVENING

MUSICAL PROGRAMME AND SOME ADDRESSES.

Address of Welcome by Rev. M. E. Dwight—A. C. LaBoyteaux's Remarks—The Features of the Affair.

Twenty years ago Thursday Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, of the Congregational church, assumed the pastoral duties of his first charge, in which he has ever since continued, and to mark the event the members of his congregation arranged to surprise him at a reception last night.

Seating themselves in the main part of the church edifice, which had been tastefully decorated with flags and flowers, the gathering was treated to the following programme: Organ voluntary, Mrs. B. T. Barnes; address of welcome, Rev. M. E. Dwight; woodbird song, choir quartette, Miss Cornelia Miller, Mrs. R. K. Miner, F. S. Cutter and J. W. Sanford, accompanied by the organist, Mrs. B. T. Barnes. A. C. LaBoyteaux followed the quartette with a few words of congratulation on behalf of the Sunday-school and Miss Weeks and Miss Fisher presented some flowers.

A letter from Madame Whiton, the mother of J. M. Whiton, was read by Miss Whiton. Madame Whiton is still confined at home, suffering from the results of an attack of pneumonia. After another selection, "Hush thee my Baby," by the quartette, Miss F. F. Clark gave a reading entitled "Queries."

J. M. Whiton in a few well-chosen words, presented the pastor with a purse of gold. When Mr. Goodrich had responded to this surprise, which affected him deeply, all joined in singing "Auld Lang Syne." Refreshments were served and a social period enjoyed by all. The committee in charge of the arrangements included Mr. and Mrs. William VanAlstyne, Mr. and Mrs. J. Kirkner, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Wadsworth, Mr and Mrs. J. E. Morse, Mr. and Mrs. A. Weseman, Capt. and Mrs. William Hand, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Fuller, Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Raynolds, Miss Beads, Mr. and Mrs. J. M Whiton, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Sufferu, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Updike, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Weeks, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Gray, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Powlison and Mrs. J. V. Beekman. Mrs. E. L. Suffren was chairman and Mrs. L. B. Morgan vice chairman.

ENTERTAINED FREEHOLDERS

ENTIRE BOARD AND COUNTY OFFICIALS GUESTS OF OFFICERS.

On the invitation of the re-elected clerk, S. Rushing Ryno, and County Attorney William H. Coddington, the Board of Freeholders dined at the Barkaly Hotel, Elizabeth, Wednesday, May 11. Director J. Frank Hubbard, of this city, who was elected for the seventeenth time as director, presided at the head of the table.

Nearly all the county officials were present. County Collector Edward M. Wood occupied a seat on the right of the director. Others there were Sheriff B. Frank Coriell, of this city; County Surveyor Jacob L. Baer; City Attorney C. Addison Swift, Nathan B. Leavitt, James C. Calvert, secretary of the Republican county committee.

Several congratulatory remarks were made by Director Hubbard, Mr. Coddington, Mr. Ryno, Jacob Brucklacher, Benjamin King and others.

MISS MABEL LEFLER ENGAGED

GEORGE WHITLEY, OF THIS CITY, IS PROSPECTIVE GROOM.

Abram G. Nelson, of New Market, announces the engagement of his niece, Miss Mabel Lefler, to George Whitley, of this city. The wedding will take place in the fall. Miss Lefler is a niece of the late Mrs. Charles L. Fair, and since the death of her mother, she has made her home with her uncle at New Market.

The bride elect is an accomplished young woman and very popular. Mr. Whitley is well-known here and at New Market as a ball player. Last season he pitched for the New Market team. This year he will probably wear a Y. M. C. A. uniform. At present Miss Lefler is visiting her brother, Edward L. Lefler, of Boston.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning May 22.

Topic.—False and true ambition.—Matt. xx, 20-28.

In the incident before us Salome, the mother of James and John and probably the sister of Mary, the mother of Jesus, asks the Master that her sons might sit "one on Thy right hand and one on Thy left hand in Thy kingdom." The request was suggested by the sons (Mark x, 35). Believing that Christ was about to establish a temporal kingdom, where there would be no differences in rank and power, James and John solicit the aid of their mother, probably because of her near relationship to Christ, to secure for them the highest places of honor, which would give them special authority. This desire and request were from a human standpoint very natural, and yet the request was based upon ignorance and prompted by ambition. But it once pointed out its falsity and impossibility. These places meant what they did not understand. They were not similar in character to ranks in civil and political life and were not bestowed in the same fashion. "To sit on My right hand and on My left hand is not Mine to give, but it is for them for whom it hath been prepared of My Father." On earth one place was given to a dying, unrepentant thief and the other to a repentant thief dying also by capital punishment. In the Judgment day the saved will stand on Christ's right hand and the lost upon His left. How little the apostle's mother knew of what she was asking! Would she have had her sons crucified on earth and one of them lost in eternity?

In this incident, however, we have very clearly and strikingly pointed out what constitutes a false and what a true Christian ambition.

1. In the kingdom of Christ the ambition to have rank or power superior to the other members of the kingdom is a false ambition. Christ teaches us this very clearly in this incident. Such was the ambition of James and John, and Christ plainly rebuked it. Moreover, He declared that His kingdom was unlike worldly kingdoms in this particular. "Ye know," he said, "that the rulers of the gentiles lord it over them, and their great ones exercise authority over them. Not so shall it be among you." Distinctions of rank, of power, are out of place in the kingdom of God, for in it all are brethren, and one is the Lord of all, even Christ Himself. Certain Christian denominations have ignored this teaching of Christ and have set up ecclesiastical distinctions as to rank and power, but it is no less true that the ambition for such positions is a false one. Therefore, "in honor preferring one another," is a guard against false desires for place and power in the church of Christ.

2. In the kingdom of Christ the ambition to be of the greatest service is the true ambition. "Whosoever would become great among you shall be your minister, and whosoever would be first among you shall be your servant, even as the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many." Christian greatness is greatness of service." It is therefore a closed door to none, for all can serve.

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. xl, 1-9; xxvii, 15-27, 41; Num. xii, 1-15; II Sam. xv, 1-6; Prov. xvii, 19; Isa. xiv, 12-20; Matt. x, 42; xviii, 1-4; xxiii, 1-12; Rom. xii, 10.

An Evangelist Endeavorer.

No speaker in all the many who addressed the Denver international convention was more attentively listened to than Rev. Dr. John F. Carson of Brooklyn. Dr. Carson is a warm friend of Christian Endeavor and has served one term as vice president of the New York state union. He is beloved as a minister and pastor, and he enjoys a large reputation as an evangelist.

REV. J. F. CARSON, D.D.

A Sturdy Reality.

Any unperverted mind will conceive of the Scriptural idea of prayer as that of one of the most downright, sturdy realities in the universe. Right in the heart of God's plan of government it is lodged as a power. Amid the conflicts which are going on in the evolution of that plan it stands as a power. Into all the intricacies of divine working and the mysteries of divine decree it reaches out silently as a power. In the mind of God, we may be assured, the conception of prayer is no fiction, whatever man may think of it. "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of."—Austin Phelps.

For Every Young Person.

A true society of Christian Endeavor should reach every young person in the community, either through its active membership or its associate membership.—Dr. Clark.

The Largest Union.

The largest Christian Endeavor union in the world is that of London, with more than 700 societies. Philadelphia is second with 625 societies.

Two Briefs.

The Presbyterian Endeavor societies of Winnipeg, Manitoba, five in number, recently gave $800 for missions in India.

India has a new Christian Endeavor paper. Its name is Masihi Karigar, which is the nearest equivalent for Christian Endeavor.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

"My crouch has had much to do with my prize-ring success," said James Britt, who recently defeated young Corbett for the featherweight championship of the world, in an interview the other day. "It is natural for me and is the only way I can fight. I can't fight standing up, as the others do, and no one can imitate my position. If a boxing instructor were to attempt to teach his pupils the crouch he would turn out a lot of poor fighters. Jeffries is the only champion who ever used the crouch, and he only uses it under certain conditions and then occasionally. Terry McGovern crouches forward, but my position is the only one that gives length of reach and affords protection. I carry the fight to my opponent from the crouch. I think I am the only fighter who can lead from this position. This was what bothered Corbett. I was on top of him all the time, and he always backed away from a mixup."

James Britt.

"A lot of people think the crouch is a defense thought out to protect a short-reach man or a man unable to stand punishment round the belt line," was suggested.

"That wasn't it with me," he replied. "It struck me as a natural defense when I was a kid, and why isn't it the right thing? Show me where they can get you. You have your sides protected, and the gloves can easily cover the chin and neck. It is a long way to your body, and an opponent is forced to batter the top of your hard skull and that hurts his hands. If a man can hit out of the crouch as I can, why make it the right thing?

"Don't it cramp a man's lungs and narrow them up so that he is weakened from the exertion in a long fight?"

"Well, if you had seen me go the limit with Corbett and be much stronger than he was at the end you wouldn't have shut off the wind any. The crouch is taken the same way a man bends over to a desk, from the hips. The arms are brought in so that it seems to crowd them. My method of fighting is just the same as was practiced in an amateur in the Olympic Athletic club, and, by the way, I am the only boxer who has ever been retained as a member of this club after becoming a professional. Of course I have developed a great deal, but I never took a lesson in my life. I have studied the whole matter out by myself. I propose to do something that no champion has ever done before. Before I fight any one else I will give Young Corbett an opportunity to win back the championship, and I will tell you why. To me Mr. Corbett looks the easiest of them all. I don't know why he came back here and raised such a howl, he certainly didn't need to do it to get a second fight."

A prominent baseball "fan," who spent some time in Hot Springs before the opening of the season during the sojourn there of Cy Young, Billy Dineen, Lou Criger, and Buck Freeman, of the Boston Americans, makes the astonishing assertion that this year Cy Young will spring a new style of delivery upon the batsmen of the American league. Some years ago it was announced that Young was about ready for retirement. He has been using his fast ball so much that there was a general impression that he had about worked himself out. The following season the big twirler from Ohio made his appearances on the diamond with a new slow ball that allowed him to give his speedy delivery a rest, and he continued to pitch winning ball. Last year Young performed better on the rubber than ever before in his career. All the while, however, he was studying some new method by which he might remain in the game a few years longer, and he confesses that he has solved the problem, and this year will use something added to his stock in trade that will make him quite as valuable to the Bostons as he was last season.

Cy Young.

Arthur Devlin, playing third base for the Giants, and who is regarded as the find of the season on his showing to date, has played in each of the ten games McGraw's team has been in this season. In that time he has been to bat 40 times, scored ten runs, made 13 base hits, stolen two bases, and batted out a double and a home run, for a total of fifteen bases. Devlin played with the Newark team of the Eastern league last season, and was known to fans in that city as "Stonewall" Devlin. He learned the game while attending college at Georgetown, and was a member of the championship team of Hal Harry White, of the White Sox, was the star twirler.

A team of athletes will be brought from Ireland to compete in the Olympian games at the St. Louis exposition. They will make the trip under the auspices of the Greater New York Irish Athletic club. Among the men expected to compose the team are Dennis Horgan, shot-putter, with a record of 48 feet 2 inches, who won the championship at Manhattan field in 1900, with a put of 46 feet 1¼ inches; Peter O'Connor, Irish broad jump record holder, who cleared 24 feet 11½ inches from a board take-off, and the Leahy brothers, also jumpers; Dennis Murray, who defeated Arthur Duffy in a handicap sprint on his tour, the present 100 and 220 yard Irish champion; J. J. Daly, cross-country champion, and J. J. Holloway, a pole vaulter and all-around athlete.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

May 22: "False and True Ambitions." Matt. xx, 20-28.

Desire for prominence, for approval by others, for unusual power, for wealth, luxury, for much of anything more than is of need, for pre-eminence over other persons, how natural all this seems, and how common among men! Who is entirely free from the canker of some of these ambitions? Disguised it may perhaps be under the various cloaks of business necessity, political expediency, religious excellence, scientific attainment and literary genius, but however cloaked it is the same old body of selfishness. At heart it is making others work for our good. It is making others act the slave while we play the role of master. It is exaltation of our will, desire and notions, with little or no regard to those of other persons. It rests on the assumption that we are superior to others, and our claims should take precedence of theirs. The scene in Matthew does not differ from the other apostles in their ambitions. They were only more persistent and less modest in pressing their application. The mother of these men was not more given to intrigue than other women of Israel, but simply on more intimate terms with the Master.

All were seeking the best things they knew, seeking to get all possible of them and of course for themselves. No one blamed them for this except those to whom they told the same things themselves and saw these others getting ahead of them. The ten were indignant only because they felt the two had been keener than they and were gaining an advantage not due. Did this struggle for place have any influence on the mind of that strange man Judas Iscariot? Was he made fearful of displacement from his post as treasurer of the company? May not this episode have had much to do with creating distrust in the mind of Judas toward regarding each other? If James and John, who have been ever so intimate with Jesus, are seeking to monopolize the best places and highest power, what hope that the others can successfully compete with them? What a breeding for enmity, heart burning and endless jealousy, strife and intrigue? What hope more for companionship and peace? The disruption of the band is already in sight.

There is but one path out. This Jesus opens. To serve is the only worthy ambition. The symbol by which His disciples will be distinguished is a cross. Servitude is the most exalted nobility. He demonstrates the proposition in His own person. He is Master of all and was among them as the one who served others and was never served by them in the older sense. He was giver, not getter. He was benefactor, not the benefited.

Will they ever be able to learn this lesson? It reverses all the wheels of life. It changes good to evil and evil to good. It heaves the world from its course into a new orbit. In the readjustment will it not hurl all into chaos? "Can ye drink My cup?" they say. "We can," they say. But Judas is silent. He holds to the old course and with the old momentum; that is all. It looks as if he leaped the track to plunge on a tangent into darkness, but this is only seeming. The others slowly turned from the old and followed Jesus in His new "way," while Judas changed not.

If you would know how wide apart these courses are note this incident, then turn to the place where, after Pentecost, Peter and John gain the prayed for boldness of speech and all the company share their goods in common. Then indeed they had the cup and baptism of Christ.

God Hears.

Prayer must be addressed to the Father. As soon as we utter that sacred name the divine nature responds and, in proof of it, God is not deaf to what we desire. A little child cannot utter a sigh however slight, a sob however smothered, without awakening the quick attention of its mother, and at the first whisper of our Father's name He is at hand to hear and bless. Alas, we have too often grieved His Holy Spirit by a string of selfish petitions or a number of formal platitudes! To the wonderment of angels we thus fritter away the most precious and sacred opportunities. Be still, then, before you pray to consider what to ask. Order your prayers for presentation and be sure to begin the blessed interview with words of sincere and loving appreciation and devotion.—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

Basted Lives.

Character is not determined by a single act, but by habitual conduct. It is fabric made up of thousands of threads and put together by uncounted stitches. Some characters are stoutly sewed; others are only basted. A Christian ought not only to have his spiritual garments well sewed, but kept clean. In fact, as a representative of Jesus Christ, he ought to present such an attractive apparel before the world that others should say to him: "Where did you get this? I want one just like it."—Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.

Little Things.

God has no end of material
For poets, orators and kings;
But what He needs is volunteers
To do the little things.

There are many men who are ready
To lead a battle and strife,
But very few are willing to do
The little things of life.

The widow's mite was a little thing
From a money point of view,
But He who reads our inmost hearts
Sees more than mortals do.

Great deeds receive reward below,
And earth's applause is given;
But little things are seen by God
From His watchtower high in heaven.

—Sam's Horn.

CROSS' RESIGNATION WOULD CAUSE TROUBLE

Another Fight If Union's State Senator Should be Elevated to the Bench.

THE PRESENT SITUATION

ACKERMAN, RUNYON AND COYNE AS CANDIDATES.

Two Plainfield Men, Followers of Different Leaders, Would be Boomed for Vacant Senatorial Office—Condition in County.

Ever since County Chairman Hamilton Kean sat down to dinner with the Plainfield bolters, there has been harmony in the Republican ranks of Union County but harmony in this instance is spelled with a small "h," and in some quarters it is believed that there is apt to be a fresh outbreak in the camp if Joseph Cross, of Elizabeth resigns the State senatorship to accept an appointment as the successor of the late U. S. Judge Kirkpatrick. The vacancy would cause a scramble among aspirants for the position, and it is not improbable that the Kean and Fowler forces would be quickly engaged in a mix-up again.

Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, will be boomed for the position if the vacancy occurs and he will naturally pull support from the friends of Senator Kean here as well as throughout the county. He is generally considered in every way qualified to fill the office and the fact that he was defeated for the nomination some years ago by Mr. Cross himself is taken as adding strength to his candidacy. Whether Mr. Ackerman's boom would meet with the opposition of the regular Republican administration here is not known, but the fact that Judge William N. Runyon was backed for the place as against Mr. Cross at the last convention leaves room for doubt.

Now comes the word from Elizabeth that the friends of former Assemblyman Edward Coyne are backing him for the place. He is strong throughout the county, but both he and Mr. Ackerman are on the same footing so far as regularity is concerned. Mr. Ackerman has worked hard for his party's success and the only crime he has committed is loyalty to the party ticket when it was under fire of the bolters.

It is stated on good authority that Judge William N. Runyon would be a candidate for Senator Cross's place provided the latter resigns. If this be so, he will naturally receive the support of the local administration, for which he has made many sacrifices. When seen by a reporter for this paper, Judge Runyon was reticent about committing himself, but admitted that his friends are urging him to come out in case a vacancy occurs.

The situation will be somewhat complicated because there would probably be two other Plainfielders on the Republican ticket at the regular election in the fall. Collector Frank H. Smith has every assurance that he will be the party candidate for registrar of deeds. There is no opposition to him as yet nor is there likely to be any. It is hardly possible that the two principal offices will be given to Plainfield, especially since this city went Democratic at the last election for the first time in many years. Wm. T. West, of Roselle, is also mentioned for the senatorship and he is popular here as well as in Elizabeth and throughout the county.

James O. Calvert, of Elizabeth, is a candidate for the county clerkship and Mr. Coyne hails from the same place. Here again is a complication for it is extremely improbable that two nominations will be given Elizabeth. On the whole, the proposed succession of Senator Cross to the vacant judgeship is a serious matter and is apt to keep the politicians awake between now and the time when the appointment of an United States district judge is made.

Additions to Ball Schedule.

Manager George Johnston, of the Alis Club, has about closed two games with the Hobokens to be played on Crescent Oval within a few weeks. In place of the game with Madison on May 21, Johnston is promising a game with the Everett College team, which has not lost a game this season.

Lodge Dance.

A social dance will be held Tuesday night, May 23, under the auspices of Friendship Lodge, Daughters of Rebecca.

USE ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE,

A powder to be shaken into the shoes. For fast feet sweating, swollen and tired, easy feet. If you have aching feet, try Allen's Foot-Ease. It cures the feet and makes new or tight shoes easy. Cures aching, swollen, sweating feet, blisters and callous spots. Relieves chilblains, corns and bunions of all pain and gives rest and comfort. Try it today. Sold by all druggists, 25c. Don't accept any substitute. Trial package FREE. Address Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N. Y.

BOULEVARD THROUGH AN ATTRACTIVE SECTION

Myrtle Avenue Extension Completes a Thoroughfare of Much Beauty.

BRIDGE OVER BROOK

AVENUE TO BE BUILT IN MODERN FASHION.

Common Council Performs Its Duty—To be Open as Far as Compton Avenue—To Begin Work Soon.

The benefits to be derived from the opening of Myrtle avenue into the city, where a boulevard will be opened as far as Compton avenue, are not to be estimated at present. The Common Council has taken such action as will make this improvement in the city through a strip of land now idle and yet believed to be one of the best in the city. By the laying out of Myrtle avenue, for that will be the name of the avenue, when completed, there will be an almost straight and continuous thoroughfare *into North Plainfield, through an at*tractive section of the city and borough.

One thing that was largely instrumental in bringing about this improvement was the desire of many for a thoroughfare away from the trolley, making it possible for persons to drive their spirited horses without fear of accident. With the constant and ever-increasing travel along West Front street, there is today little opportunity for the lover of horses to enjoy a drive. The automobile is not afraid of the trolley, in fact the auto and the trolley are considered to be in the same class, but with horses it is different.

In opening up this avenue in the city it will be necessary to cross Green brook at an angle and this will necessitate a bridge, which there seems to be no doubt but what the Freeholders of both counties will be willing and ready to vote for at the proper time. According to the plans the avenue will be amply wide and will be built in a modern manner. The Council some weeks ago appointed commissioners to adjust the matter of benefits and damages to be allowed the few owners of property affected in this work. This work has been completed and little now remains before the actual work of laying out and opening the avenue is started.

Following this improvement will come the building of residences and it is understood that already plans are under contemplation for the erection of fine dwellings in that now uninhabited section. This is sure to provide homes for many families desirous of living in a quiet section of the city and borough, yet being close to the railroad station and the trolley and not even too far off to walk to the business section of either municipality.

PAINTINGS AT A SACRIFICE

WORKS IN OIL OWNED BY C. SCHEPFLIN BRING ONE-THIRD THEIR VALUE.

One of the many valuable paintings sold at the home of the late Christian Schepflin at Dunellen, last week, it is said, cost Mr. Schepflin $5,000, and yet the entire collection only brought $1,750. Owing to the fact that Mrs. Schepflin signed her rights away, she was not entitled to her legal share. However, a valuable cabinet, presented to her husband by the Middlesex Bowling Green Club, was presented to her. She expressed a wish for this. All of the effects were sold for considerable less than their true value, and it is doubtful if a sufficient sum will be realized to cover the mortgage.

Hope Common Destroyed.

Hope Common, once the scene of many great baseball games, is now a thing of the past. Owing to the noises that were made by the baseball fans in their enthusiasm the residents near the Common complained to O. B. Leonard, the owner, and he has put a stop to all ball playing there. The Common has been ploughed up.

Max Munger Engaged.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Bue S. Weber, of Cumberland, Md., and Max Munger, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Munger, of Washington avenue. The wedding will take place early next month. Miss Weber is a sister of Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman, of West Eighth street, and has been making her home here.

A Fourteen Inning Game.

The North Plainfield Juniors defeated the Watchung Athletic Club on the Mountain avenue grounds Thursday afternoon in a fourteen inning game by a score of 6 to 5.

C. M. RILEY WEDS A BELLE OF SUMMIT

North Plainfielder the Groom at An Elaborate Ceremony Saturday Afternoon.

LARGE ATTENDANCE

REV. A. C. NICKERSON, OF THIS CITY, OFFICIATES.

Howard W. Riley, Brother of the Groom as Best Man—Jonas Lie An Usher—A Reception Follows.

Champlain L. Riley, of North Plainfield, was married last Saturday to Miss Ida E. Holt, of Summit. The ceremony was performed at the bride's home.

The groom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Riley, of Myrtle avenue. The bride is the daughter of Robert S. Holt, the partner of C. W. McCutchen in the firm of Holt & Co.

For a home wedding, the nuptials were held on an elaborate scale. Special cars carried guests to Summit from New York, and the house was lavishly decorated. There was a large gathering of relatives and friends, mostly from the metropolis. Few of the guests were from this city. A reception followed the ceremony.

Rev. A. C. Nickerson, of All Souls' Unitarian church, pastor of the groom, performed the ceremony. The bridal party was large. Miss Constance B. Holt, a sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Howard W. Riley, brother of the groom, was best man. There were four bridesmaids: Miss Grace L. MacMullen, of New York; Miss Marie Libby, of Summit; Miss Ethel Miller, of West Nyack, N. Y.; Miss Ethel Mason, of Washington, D. C. The ushers were Jonas Lie, of North Plainfield; Robert B. Holt, Jr., of Summit; James H. Morse, Jr., of New York, and Charles W. MacMullen, of New York.

Miss Ann K. Colton, a young niece of the bride, was train bearer, and the Misses Evelyn Holt and Beatrice Miles, of Summit, were flower girls.

Many handsome and costly gifts were received by the bride.

Upon their return from the honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Riley will make their residence in Summit. Mr. Riley holds a high position on the staff of Clark & MacMullen, of New York, a prominent firm of consulting engineers.

EXEMPT CITIZENS MUST PAY

DEDUCTION HERETOFORE MADE IN THIS CITY AMOUNTS TO $103,175.

In accordance with the new tax law all firemen, militiamen, veterans and other persons hitherto partly exempt from taxes will soon receive postals informing them that they will have to pay their taxes the same as other persons or have their property sold. The notices are as follows:

"You are hereby notified that all the exemption statutes under the laws of the State of New Jersey have been decided to be unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the State, and by order of the State Board of Taxation no exemptions will hereafter be allowed."

The deductions heretofore allowed from the assessed valuation in this city amounts to $103,175. In Fanwood it is $12,500 and Fanwood borough, $24,000.

Plainfielders Met Abroad.

Dr. Edward Rushmore, of Park avenue, who has just returned from a trip abroad, met Charles W. McCutchen and his family while in Naples. They had come from Egypt and were gradually travelling toward England. They expected to reach home early in June, but owing to the fact that Mr. McCutchen's son had been taken ill with measles, were delayed. According to the changed plans the family expect to sail from England about July. They are all much improved in health by the trip.

Not a Candidate for Alis Team.

Manager George Johnston, of Alis, has received a letter from Edward Mahane, pitcher for the Fordham College baseball team, in which he insists that the use of his name as a possible pitcher for Alis be stopped. The report is due to statements made that one McLean would pitch for Alis. The man referred to was plying in the Hudson River League and has no connection with the Fordham College man.

To Liquidate Rectory Debt.

The Woman's Guild, of the Holy Cross church, has appointed Mrs. Browne, Mrs. W. M. Downey, Mrs. Murray, Mrs. J. O. Stevens, Miss Ida Davis and Mrs. Hannigan as a committee to organize a branch of the St. James Co-operative Sales, which carries on a systematized rummage sale. The object is to raise money to reduce the debt on the rectory.

HOLZWASSER & CO

SPECIAL DISCOUNT THIS MONTH OF 10% ALLOWED ON ALL CASH PURCHASES.

PARLOR.—Five Pieces Solid Oak Suit, 3 pieces; Parlor Table; Rocker; Lamp and Globe; pair of Lace Curtains; large Oriental Rug, 9x12 ft.; pair Portieres.

BEDROOM.—Golden Oak Dresser and Washstand; Bedstead; Mattress; Woven Wire Bed Spring; Bureau; Chair; 12 yards Matting; Rocker; Lamp; Shade; 10 pieces Crockery.

DINING-ROOM.—Oak Sideboard, large mirror; or elegant Leather Rocker, with 5 years' guarantee; Leather Couch; oak Extension Table; 6 Leather Seat Chairs; Linoleum; Lamp; Shade; 15 pieces Crockery.

KITCHEN.—Oak Kitchen Closet, glass doors; Kitchen Range with Reservoir; Refrigerator; Kitchen Table; 10 pieces Crockery.

We Also Furnish a Flat at $65.00.

Write for Our New Catalogue. Mailed Upon Application.

$1.00 a Week Opens an Account.

We Also Carry a Complete Line of CLOTHING For Men, Women and Children.

Freight and R. R. Fare Allowed on All Out-of-Town Orders.

1417 TO 1423 3D AVE BETWEEN 80 & 81 ST NEW YORK, N. Y.

Open Evenings until 9 o'clock.

Y. M. C. A., 7; A. O. U. W., 4

PITCHER WINS GAME FOR LOCAL AGGREGATION OF BALL TOSSERS.

Bunched hits and the good work done by Pitcher Whitley gave the victory to the Y. M. C. A. nine over the A. O. U. W. combination from Westfield, on the Myrtle avenue grounds Saturday afternoon. The score was 7 to 4.

Whitley unclung a fine chew-show of twists. He mixed his balls so effectively that eleven batters made the short-cut to the bench. He was especially careful in delivering the goods when men perched on the bases, and his coolness blocked tallies at several stages of the game. Westfield did all her scoring in the second, third and fourth innings.

By the end of the fourth the score was tied, and it was anybody's game until the eighth. Then the Y. M. C. A. men fell on Ortlieb en masse and pulled in three more runs.

Batting order and summary:

Y. M. C. A.—Herman, c; Conover, ss; Marsh, 3b; Delner, 2b; Jackson, cf and 1b; Jacot, 1b; Overton, cf; Hand, lf; Armstrong, rf; Whitley, p.

Westfield—Irwin, 2b; Flagg, 1b; Miller, ss; Carey, c; Kelly, 3b; Tobin, lf; Ortlieb, p; Allegar, cf; Post, rf.

Struck out—By Whitley, 11; by Ortlieb, 8. Bases on balls—Off Whitley, 1; Ortlieb, 2. Two base hits—Armstrong, 2; Whitley, Miller and Post. Umpire—George McComb.

	R	H	E
Y. M. C. A.	0 1 1 2 0 0 0 3 x	7	8
Westfield	0 2 1 1 0 0 0 0 0	4	7

DEATH OF MATTHIAS EAGENY

DUNELLEN PLUMBER DIES FROM PLEURO-PNEUMONIA.

Matthias Eageny, for many years a prosperous business man of Dunellen, died suddenly at his home in Lincoln Saturday afternoon. He was taken ill on Friday with pleuro-pneumonia. He was born in Ireland forty-four years ago and came here when eighteen years old. He lived in this city until 1888. He then moved to Dunellen and commenced business as a plumber. For many years he was employed by A. M. Griffen. Later he started for himself at Dunellen. In April of this year the family moved to Lincoln.

Mr. Eageny is survived by a wife and eight children, Mrs. Fred Lights, of New York; Mrs. Benny Stein, of Bound Brook; the Misses Kate and Mary Eageny and James, Joseph, John and Michael Eageny.

NEW MARKET, 18; O. F. C., 2

PLAINFIELD NINE'S PITCHER TOO WEAK TO HOLD THE SLUGGERS.

The New Market Y. M. A. boys proved, on Saturday afternoon, that they have a fast team by defeating the Orange Field Club team, of this city, by a score of 18 to 2. The game was played at New Market. The feature was the heavy batting of L. Churchill. He made a three-bagger, two two-baggers and a single. Tommy Mack played a good game at short.

Following is the score by innings:

New Market	3	2	1	1	0	1	0	1	x	—18
O. F. C.	0	0	1	0	0	0	0	0	1	—2

Batteries—Squires and Nelson; Sherwin and Hillyer.

Everett College Next.

The Everett College team will probably play Alis on Crescent Oval on Saturday. This team played the Elizabeth Y. M. C. A. team on Saturday, winning by a score of 5 to 2. It is said that the college boys have won every game this year.

Miss Carrie Bechtel, of West Front street, who has been ill with appendicitis, has about recovered.

OBJECT TO TRANSFER RULE

PASSENGERS KICK AGAINST CHANGING CARS AT RAHWAY JUNCTION.

Persons living in the vicinity of Westfield, Cranford and nearby points, who have occasion to use the cars of the Public Service Corporation late in the evening are objecting strenuously to a new rule which forces them to change cars at Rahway Junction and wait fifteen minutes for another car. The contention is that after the company accepts the fare of a passenger they should be carried to their destination without change, except in case of transfer to another line.

This new rule is similar to the "car ahead" long ago tabooed in New York, and it is claimed that the corporation loses considerable money by it and has been defeated in the courts where suits have been instituted. It is believed that a test case will be made of this rule on the Elizabeth-Plainfield line by residents from Elizabeth, Roselle, Cranford and Garwood of what they contend to be an unjust rule.

WESTFIELD, 9; TO 'PLAINS, 3

IN TWO INNINGS DENMAN'S MEN DO THEIR ONLY SCORING.

Scotch Plains went down to defeat before the crack Westfield team at Recreation Park Saturday afternoon, but not until they had nearly given the Westfield rooters heart failure by piling up three runs in the first inning before Waller settled down. The clean base hit assisted by an error of Barry brought three men across the rubber before the mist cleared away.

In the second and third half of the home team innings Manager Hand's men went to pieces and the home team brought four runs across the plate. This awakened Scotch Plains to action once more and they settled down and played league ball, not another man came across the rubber for Westfield, but the game was lost as Scotch Plains was unable to score, although several times a base hit would have brought one or two runs in but it was not to be.

Outside of the two disastrous innings, "Smiling Jimmy" Montross pitched great ball and had the support been given him at this time Westfield would have been held down. Waller was not at his best and at times was batted freely, but his support at critical stages of the game was bracing to him and helped him out of several holes.

The line-up:

Scotch Plains—	Poole, 1b;	Williams, 3b;	Allen, c;	Flannery, cf;	Alberts, lf;	Cruisse, ss;	Enright, 2b;	Taylor, rf;	Montross, p.

Westfield—Goldberg, lf; Mallis, cf; Conley, 1b; Hickman, ss; Grom, rf; Barry, 3b; Cox, 2b; Burke, c; Waller, p.

The score by innings:

Scotch Plains	3	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	—3
Westfield	0	4	5	0	0	0	0	0	x	—9

Base on balls—Montross, 3; Waller, 4. Struck out—Montross, 4; Waller, 13. Umpire—Cullum.

BALDWIN IN TROUBLE.

After Girl Gets Heavy Judgment Against Him Capias is Issued.

George Baldwin, of this city, who was arrested upon a charge several months ago upon complaint of Bertha Guise, a New Brunswick girl, is under judgment to pay $30,000 as a result of two actions brought out of the trouble. He was arrested in capias proceedings here Saturday, and is under $3,500 bail to appear before Supreme Court Commissioner Allen Strong, in New Brunswick, May 21.

Annual May Walk.

The May walk of the Sauggerbund will take place next Sunday if the weather does not interfere.

AT SIUNGYUECHENG

Japanese Land While Covered by Fire of Their Ships.

ZASSALITCH RELIEVED OF COMMAND

Re Disobeyed Orders at the Yalu, Kuroki Now Master of Peninsula Except the Port Arthur Stronghold.

LONDON, May 18.—Advices from St. Petersburg say the following telegram from General Kuropatkin to the emperor has been given out:

"Toward noon seventeen steamers approached Siungyuecheng and opened fire upon the town, while five vessels approached the shore.

"At 1:30 p. m. three large steamers appeared off the cape, and at 3:20 p. m. the enemy landed at Huangtsiatung and commenced a march in the direction of Kaiping."

It was announced last night at St. Petersburg that Lieutenant General Zassalitch had been relieved of the command of the Second Siberian army division and that Lieutenant General Count Keller, former governor of Ekaterinoslav, had been appointed to succeed him.

Since the battle of the Yalu it has been predicted that General Zassalitch would not long retain his command, but there has been no disposition to act hastily. The emperor's advisers could not forget that, while Zassalitch did not carry out the plan of operations which had been previously determined upon, he had displayed a stubborn resistance which showed to the enemy and to the world that the Russians had not lost the courageous spirit of past generations.

The only question now is, whether he will remain in the far east or be assigned to a less important region, cannot be learned, but it is emphatically stated that there is no intention to disgrace him and that if he returns from the far east he will be on the front. He is a far abler soldier than an administrator and is younger than General Zassalitch.

Advices received by the Russian general staff this morning show that the Japanese are practically masters of all the southern end of the Liaotung peninsula save Port Arthur and the territory commanded by its guns. This result, so promptly brought about, is due to the failure of the Russians to make opposition of any consequence to the Japanese advance.

A member of the general staff said that the removal of the guns from the fortifications erected at Kinchau and the destruction of Port Dalny were primarily for the purpose of concentrating the entire Russian force at Port Arthur. If the men and guns were scattered the effect would have been to distribute the means of defense of the fortress over a number of points equally weak. The destruction of Dalny was the result of no sudden determination, but was due to the probability that a force attempting to hold this place could be separated from Port Arthur and captured. To defend the whole of the southern end of the Liaotung peninsula it would have been necessary to have an army equal to that which the Japanese could have landed.

The weakness of the Manchurian army, said this officer, left only one course to pursue—namely, that of mobilizing sufficient troops at Port Arthur to hold it until relief came, abandoning every point outside which did not contribute to the strategic defense of the fortress. It is further learned that the ground over which the Japanese must charge to capture the fortress is heavily mined. If they do capture it, the officer said, they will pay a frightful price.

The destruction of Dalny is complete, the breakwater and the buildings as well as the piers and docks having been blown up.

A Aukden dispatch says it is announced there that the main body of the Japanese forces is advancing on Haicheng, about ten miles southeast of Newchwang, and Kaiping (Kaichou), about thirty-five miles south of Newchwang, and that a smaller force is marching in the direction of Liaoyang. Important developments are probable.

A Newchwang report says in confirmation of recent dispatches the Russian evacuation of this city was completed last night. Nothing remains but the destruction of the gunboat Sivouch.

The Russian troops marched out in perfect order, General Krondratsvitch leaving with the last regiment. Information from the highest Russian authority is that the Japanese advance will be resisted at Haicheng, whence the Russian forces will fall back upon Liaoyang, where they will make a determined stand, with a fighting strength there of 70,000 men.

If defeated no stop will be made at Mukden, but the retirement will be continued to Thieling, a town at the head of navigation for native craft on the Liao river.

Our Officers in the Far East.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 18.—Major Montgomery M. Macomb of the United States artillery corps left here on a special military train for Mukden, where he will report to Lieutenant Colonel Schuyler. It is expected that a conference of the United States military attaches with the Russian army will be held at Mukden, at which a general plan of observation will be decided upon. Lieutenant Colonel Schuyler will report on the cavalry in general, Captain Carl Reichmann of the Seventeenth infantry on the conduct and equipment of the infantry, Captain William V. Judson of the engineer corps on the work of the engineers and of the railroad and Major Macomb on the value of the artillery, commissary and transportation.

Edward Asked Czar to End War.

ST. LOUIS, May 18.—Sir Hugh Gilzean-Reid, president of the world's press parliament and a prominent figure in English official circles, in an interview said that King Edward is seeking to end hostilities in the far east. He said: "King Edward is for peace. He did not like to see the war between Russia and Japan begin and wishes to see it brought to an end as soon as possible. When the new British ambassador went to St. Petersburg he carried a message from the king to the czar suggesting that peace be brought about. His was the first suggestion of peace made. This message from the king has greatly increased his popularity with the masses in England. England at large sympathizes with Japan."

IOWA REPUBLICANS.

The State Convention Controlled by "Stand Pat" Element.

DES MOINES, Ia., May 18.—With the "stand pat" element of the party firmly in the saddle, the only problem which arises before the Republican state convention, which has opened here, is the nature of the platform which will be adopted. This has been the subject of anxious discussion among the party leaders assembled. It is certain that the platform will contain a plank strongly indorsing the protective principle. Just what the attitude on reciprocity will be is still a debatable question. It now seems probable that the platform will be declared declaration referring all matters of tariff revision to the national convention in Chicago.

Particular interest is taken in the attitude of the party at this time on account of the fact that Iowa is the home of Governor Cummins, the chief advocate of the Iowa idea, and because the "stand patters" are now in complete control of the state for the first time in several years. There now seems little likelihood that the compromise legislation of the past two years will be adopted again.

It is generally conceded that Senators Allison and Dolliver, Governor Cummins and J. W. Blythe will be named as delegates at large to the national convention.

Aside from the framing of a platform the chief interest in the convention at the present time is over the strife for district delegates, especially in the Second, Fourth and Ninth districts, which will be decided at the caucuses.

Good Chance For Settlers.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., May 18.—The Rosebud Indian reservation, in the southern part of South Dakota, in the great corn belt of the Mississippi valley, has been turned over by the Indians to the government for public allotment under the United States homestead laws. The reservation is easily reached from Chicago, Omaha, St. Paul, Minneapolis and other western centers. About 400,000 acres are in the reservation, and the only requirement for entering a claim is more than twenty-one years of age and the payment of $1 per acre at the time of entry, with deferred payments of 75 cents each at the end of two, three, four and five years.

Subpoenaed In Gambling Case.

ST. LOUIS, May 18.—The April grand jury has issued subpoenas for Governor Dockery and Excise Commissioner Seibert. Circuit Attorney Hadley decided not to serve the subpoenas on Governor Dockery, but had a lengthy conversation with him by telephone. The governor, it is said, was asked to stop the gambling in St. Louis entirely and in reply promised to do all in his power.

Both Deny Guilt.

BOSTON, May 18.—The two men charged with the murder of Sergeant James Wilson of the Salvation Army canal in a south end saloon have been held without bail for the grand jury in the municipal court. One of the men, who first called himself Harry R. Holmes, said that he was Harold Ralph Willard of Whitby, Ont. The second defendant is William Mooray, twenty-eight, having no home. Both men deny all knowledge of the crime.

Miners' Strike Unsettled.

CLEVELAND, O., May 18.—Representatives of the miners and operators of the Eighth Ohio district, where 8,000 men are on strike, were again in conference here endeavoring to reach a settlement on the wage scale. It is said that some progress has been made toward an adjustment.

Murray to Succeed Bishop Dudley.

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky., May 18.—Rev. J. G. Murray, rector of St. Michael's church, Baltimore, has been chosen bishop of the Kentucky diocese, Episcopal church, to succeed the late Bishop Thomas Underwood Dudley.

Silver Lake Bank Failed.

SILVER LAKE, Ind., May 18.—The Commercial bank, owned by Adam Stout & Sons, has closed its doors here. Depositors say all depositors will be paid in full. The bank is capitalized at $7,500, and its deposits are said to exceed $25,000.

Earthquake in Ecuador.

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, May 18.—A slight earthquake shock has been felt here. The Colombian [illegible] Logotz has returned here. [illegible]

KING'S DAUGHTERS IN ANNUAL MEETING

Mrs. Charles A. Reed is Chosen President of the City Union.

THE WORK IS REVIEWED

TREASURER'S REPORT FOR LAST YEAR OF THE CAMP.

Mrs. Dorsey Hyde, First Vice President—Mrs. S. A. Krom Tells What Has Been Accomplished by the Union.

The annual meeting of the City Union of King's Daughters was held Friday afternoon in the lecture room of the First Baptist church. After a hymn was sung, Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey opened with prayer followed by a short talk on the work and aims of the order.

The various circles reported through their own secretary. Mrs. S. A. Krom told of the financial condition of the union. The total receipts for the year, exclusive of the special funds collected for the baby camp, amounted to $1,190.39. The welcome assistance of S. St. John McCutchen, who raised above $1,000 for the camp last year, was again accepted in the matter of securing funds to make some necessary alteration and additions to the buildings.

The baby camp will probably open for the season about June 1. Miss Olive Delaney will be in charge as nurse and Mrs. Delaney will act as matron. Miss Delaney's report as public nurse showed a total of 919 calls during last year.

The latter part of the meeting was given up to the election of officers. These were selected: President, Mrs. Charles A. Reed; first vice president, Mrs. Dorsey Hyde; recording secretary, Mrs. Frank W. French; corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. M. Most, and treasurer, Miss H. Helen Philips. Miss Philips noted as custodian of the baby camp funds last year and her re-election puts her in charge of all the funds of the union.

The meeting closed with a hymn and the benediction by Rev. Mr. McKelvey.

LEMON SOCIAL AT GRACE M. E.

YOUNG PEOPLE HAVE A JOLLY GOOD TIME IN THE CHURCH EDIFICE.

A "lemon social" was held at Grace M. E. church last Friday under the auspices of the Epworth League.

One lemon was the fee for admission.

The programme opened with a piano solo by Miss Weston. This was followed by an "conversation game" in which cards were used, each one being inscribed with five topics of conversation such as The War in the East, Lemons, My Summer Vacation, My Favorite Amusement, Things Good to Eat. These were filled out the same as orders of dance, five minutes being allotted to each subject.

While this game was in progress, the lemons which had been taken at the door were transformed into lemonade, the seeds being counted carefully. The prize for the largest number from one lemon went to Miss Charlotte Haff, who turned in one containing twenty-one seeds and the booby-prize was awarded to Andrew Wilson for a specimen without any seeds at all.

The refreshments being ready, the floor was strewn with the letters l-e-m-o-n cut from white bristol board. Anyone succeeding in getting one specimen of each of these five letters was entitled to a glass of the lemonade which was very good and a piece of cake which was better still.

STREET WORK.

Terrill Road Being Put in Proper Shape by the Street Commissioner's Men.

Continuing the work begun last autumn, the street men are repairing the roadway on Terrill road from South avenue southward. The work takes in that section of Terrill road, which is the dividing line between this city and Fanwood, that an agreement between the two municipalities puts under the charge of the city. The agreement was made last year, after the plan of working the road repairs on each side of the road, along the boundary line, had proved a failure.

The roadway on the Fanwood side is supposed to be in perfect shape. When the city men get through the thoroughfare on their side will be as good as a new stretch of roadway. The road has been rounded, the gutters have been deepened, cinders have been used to fill in hollows, and field stones have been laid in boggy places. Last year cracked stone was used liberally on the street.

Miss Belle Santee, of Hornellsville, is visiting Mrs. George L. Homan, of the Stillman building.

MISS B. M. F. RANDOLPH NOW MRS. H. B. AYERS

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Fitz Randolph the Bride at Church Wedding.

RECEPTION FOLLOWS

REV. DR. A. H. LEWIS AND REV. G. S. SHAW OFFICIATE.

Miss Evaline DuBois Miller Maid-of-Honor—Description of the Bride's Gown—To Reside in Pennsylvania.

Miss Bessy Mae Fitz Randolph, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Fitz Randolph, of Belleview avenue, and Hebart Bentley Ayers, of Allegany, Pa., were married Thursday in the Seventh-Day Baptist church at 7:30, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends from this city and distant points. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, former pastor of the church, assisted by Rev. George B. Shaw, the present pastor.

The edifice was decorated with palms and apple blossoms, there being a pleasing arrangement about the pulpit platform.

Miss Jessie M. Utter, as organist, rendered a select programme from well-known composers. As the bridal party entered the church she played the wedding march from Lohengrin.

The bride was attended by Miss Evaline DuBois Benson, of this city, as maid-of-honor, and these bridesmaids: Miss Louise Ayers, of Westerly, R. I., sister of the groom; Miss Alberta Irvin, of Brooklyn; Miss Clara Elizabeth Babcock, of Springfield, Mass.; Miss Katharine VanZandt, of Blawenburg, N. J. Asa Fitz Randolph, brother of the bride, was best man and the ushers were Henry W. Parker, of Manchester, N. H.; Irin Fitz, of Columbus, Ohio; Frederick C. Clarke, of Schenectady, N. Y., and J. Oakley Hobby, Jr., of New York city.

The bride's gown was of white crepe de chine over white taffeta, trimmed with point de'Venice. She wore a veil of white tulle and carried a shower bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley. A brooch of diamonds and pearls, the gift of the groom and designed by him, was the only adornment. The maid-of-honor's gown was of white crystalline monsalin with chiffon and lace trimmings. She carried pink and white sweet peas in shower bouquet. The bridesmaids were gowned in white silk mull with mechlin lace and white ribbon girdles and they carried shower bouquets of apple blossoms.

The bridal party, on entering the church was preceded by the ushers, followed by the bridesmaids, maid-of-honor and the bride, accompanied by her father, who gave her away in marriage. At the altar they met the groom and best man, where the ceremony was performed. In leaving the church the Mendelssohn wedding march was rendered.

A reception for the bridal party followed at the home of the bride's parents, where the best wishes of all were extended to the popular couple. The house was decorated chiefly with apple blossoms.

The bridal party's table,

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, MAY 26, 1904. NO. 21.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Corner the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT ON HILLSIDE COURTS

Contests to be Held Here Under Auspices of the East N. J. Lawn Tennis Association.

SATURDAY AND MONDAY

HANDSOME PRIZES ARE OFFERED INDIVIDUAL PLAYERS AND TEAMS.

Programme of Events—G. H. Miller as Referee, T. M. Day, Jr., Chairman of Committee—Music at Clubhouse.

Preparations are being made by the tennis committee of the East Jersey Lawn Tennis Association for the championship tournament of the association for mixed doubles to be held on the courts of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, on Saturday and Monday, Memorial Day. There is every promise of a large entry list. This will be the only championship tournament on the local courts during the season under the auspices of this association.

Entries should be received by T. M. Day, Jr., 740 Carlton avenue, on or before 6 o'clock Friday night, at which time and place the drawing will be made.

Play will begin on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock and will be continued Memorial Day, both morning and afternoon, beginning at 10 o'clock in the morning. All matches will be the best two sets out of three. No charge will be made for admission to the grounds. Individual prizes will be awarded to the winning team and the runners-up in the tournament.

The Hillside Tennis and Golf Club extends to all the members of the association a cordial invitation to make use of the facilities of the club throughout the day and evening of May 28 and 30. During this time the golf course will be open to such members, and the tennis courts will also be open, except while tournament play is in progress. On both days the steward will provide a cold lunch and a course dinner in the evening. There will be music both afternoon and evening. It has been arranged to have Gardiner H. Miller act as referee and this committee will be in charge: T. M. Day, Jr., chairman; R. N. Black, Sydney L. Smith, Charles Dupee and Frederick W. Goddard.

In addition to the mixed doubles championship, these championship tournaments will be held during the season under the auspices of the association, open only to members of clubs composing it.

Men's singles, at Jersey City Golf Club, Saturday afternoons, June 18 and 25; men's doubles, at the Roselle Casino, July 4, all day, and afternoon of Saturday, July 9; women's singles, at the Westfield Club, September 15, 16 and 17.

Detailed information regarding these tournaments will be issued later on. Gardiner H. Miller, president of the association, has offered a silver loving cup for the club championship, to be awarded to the club winning the greatest number of points in the four association championship tournaments. The first place in each event records five points and the second place two points, the cup to be held for one year by the winning club and to become the permanent property of the club winning the same three times, not necessarily in succession.

Besides the association championship tournaments, the open tournament of the East Jersey Lawn Tennis Association, under the auspices of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, will be held at the Elizabeth Town and Country Club, August 31 to September 5.

There are several members of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club who have been playing tennis this season, getting in condition for the tournaments and they give promise of being among the leaders.

PARTITION PROCEEDINGS.

The Testimony Complete in Suit Brought Over Scribner Estate.

Special Master in Chancery William V. Steele finished taking testimony in the action brought by Mrs. Helen Randolph against her brother, Sylvester Scribner, to compel the partition of their father's estate. Mr. Steele will report to the Chancellor in favor of the complainant.

A number of new witnesses were examined. W. S. Anglaman, Esq., appeared for the complainant. The property involved is all in North Plainfield. Under the expected order of the Chancellor it will be sold.

APPOINTED VICE CHANCELLOR

LINDLEY M. GARRISON, BROTHER OF THE JUSTICE, GETS A PLUM.

Lindley M. Garrison, of Jersey City, was appointed a vice chancellor by Chancellor Magie yesterday. He will succeed Vice Chancellor Alfred Reed, of Trenton, who recently resigned to accept an appointment as an associate justice of the Supreme Court.

Mr. Garrison is a brother of Supreme Court Justice Charles G. Garrison, of Camden. He will be the youngest member of the Court of Chancery, having been admitted to the New Jersey bar in 1888. He is a Democrat. Mr. Garrison will sit at Chancery Chambers, in Jersey City, and on the retirement of Vice Chancellor Reed, on June 15, Vice Chancellor J. J. Bergen will sit at the State House in Trenton. It is also understood that Vice Chancellor Bergen will succeed Vice Chancellor Reed as vice-ordinary of the Prerogative Court.

FIRE DESTROYS LANDMARK

THE COTTRELL HOUSE IN WASHINGTON VALLEY REDUCED TO ASHES.

The old Cottrell house, one of the landmarks of Washington Valley, was totally destroyed by fire last night. For the past ten years the place has been unoccupied, the owner, Mrs. Charles Cottrell, refusing, it is said, to either rent or sell the property.

Time had changed the place until it has been practically a ruin for several years. Tramps have been using it as a haven of rest, and it is no doubt due to their carelessness that the fire originated. Flames were discovered in the old wash house about 9 o'clock. Shortly afterwards the house caught and by the time the Scotch Plains fire department arrived on the scene the roof had fallen in.

All that could be done was the saving of the barn. The fire was a spectacular one, situated as the house was, on the highest point of the mountain, the blaze could be seen for miles and drew many to the scene. It is said that no insurance was carried on the property as the insurance companies cancelled the policies when the owner removed to Bayonne nearly fifteen years ago.

DENMAN HOPES FOR VICTORY

WESTFIELD TO STRENGTHEN ITS TEAM FOR BATTLE WITH ALIS.

Word has reached here from Mt. Aarrat, the home of Manager Denman's baseball camp that there will be something doing before he makes his first visit to Crescent Oval on Saturday to meet Alis. The result of Saturday's game with the Aeolians has cast a shadow across the genial manager's countenance and the baseball town is in deep gloom. A follower of the Westfield team remarked yesterday that not more than two faces would be recognized when the team comes to Plainfield—possibly Waller and Burks, the battery. Denman cannot hope to win the first game with Alis if his team puts up the article exhibited with the organ grinders and it is said that there will be a general shakeup this week.

But it makes no difference what Westfield changes are made, Manager Johnson and Captain Lauder have decided to win Saturday's game and the fast bunch that sports on Crescent Oval will do all in its power to administer defeat good and proper. "Lefty" Davis is taking unusual care of his southpaw this week and when he faces the colts from down the line he will be prepared to hold them down. Besides Farmer will be there to prevent any base-stealing, if Captain Malion's team is fortunate enough to reach a base. Alis will be trained to the hour and from the sound of the gong to the end of the game it will be fast ball.

Change in Operators.

Miss Fleasy M. Johnson, lately an operator at the Western Union headquarters in New York, has been made assistant operator to Manager C. H. Schermerhorn of the local office. Miss Johnson takes the place of Frank Spivy, who has been transferred to the East 40th Street station, Bayonne.

—Really good butter is worth more than is charged for it. It is a rare commodity in most groceries. Neuman Bros. have it in their Rockdale Prints, Rockdale Creamery and Fancy Elgin Creamery. Cheaper than formerly—Prints, 27 cents; Rockdale Creamery, 26 cents; Elgin, 24 cents.

CENTRAL RAILROAD TO IMPROVE STATIONS

Umbrella Sheds and Iron Fences Are to be Placed at Grant and Clinton Avenues.

NEW SWITCH TOWERS

INNOVATION TO BE MADE AT PLAINFIELD, DUNELLEN AND ELSEWHERE.

Arrangements at Grant Avenue to be Somewhat Similar to Those at North Avenue—No Tunnels to be Constructed.

With a view to protecting the interests of their patrons, as well as those of the company and providing additional safe-guards, the officials of the New Jersey Central have decided to make extensive improvements to their property at the Grant and Clinton Avenue stations. At each of these stations an iron fence will be erected, separating the east and westbound tracks. What are called umbrella sheds will be erected on the westbound side at Grant avenue and the eastbound side at Clinton avenue, similar to those at other stations along the road. These improvements will call for an expenditure of several thousand dollars.

In addition to erecting the fences and sheds stone steps will be built leading from the street to the stations. It has been the custom for patrons of the road, as well as others, to take short cuts across the tracks at the stations named. The practice has become so general that the improvements were decided upon.

At the Grant Avenue Station the commuters will find the greatest change. Instead of being permitted to cut across the station park, on the west side, in the morning to catch their trains they will have to walk through Grant avenue and approach the station on the eastside, the same as at the North Avenue Station. There will be no great inconvenience for those going west, except that they must purchase their tickets on the east side. No tunnels will be built at these stations.

Another improvement to be made is the placing of interlocking switch towers, one in this city, one at Dunellen and one at Bound Brook. Plans for these have been underway for some time past. The erection of these towers will greatly facilitate the operation of trains and reduce to a minimum the possibility of accidents, as they will take the place of the small hand switches now in use here and at Dunellen and Bound Brook. Work on these improvements will be started within a short time and hastened toward completion.

SUMMERS BUYS PROPERTY.

Mrs. Sarah Vermeule's Place on Watchung Avenue is Sold.

A. B. Summers, the expressman, of Watchung avenue, today purchased Mrs. Sarah Vermeule's residential property adjoining his at 111 113-115 Watchung avenue. The purchase price was $6,100. Mrs. Vermeule, as soon as she can arrange matters, will leave for San Francisco to join her daughter, Mrs. Pearson, wife of Lieut. Samuel B. Pearson. Lieut. Pearson is now on duty in the Yosemite and he is likely to remain there some time.

"This property, one of the oldest in the city, will be greatly improved by Mr. Summers. He may occupy it when completed. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vermeule, who have been making their home there, have not yet decided where they will live.

To Avoid Railroad Fatality.

Employes at the North Avenue Station yesterday received a new order requiring them in the future to allow no outsiders to pass through the gates in the fence which separates the east and westbound tracks. Each employe must have a key to the lock on the gate and he is required to unlock and lock the gate every time he passes through. It has been customary for others to take a short cut through this gate and the fact having come to the knowledge of the officials, it was decided to put a stop to the practice before a fatality occurred at that point.

Mr. Meeker to Return to Fair.

State Supervisor of Roads R. A. Meeker, who came home from St. Louis on Monday, will return to the World's Fair City within a week's time.

Trial of Criminal Cases.

The criminal cases left over from the April term of the Somerville court will be taken up by Judge Schenck for trial next Tuesday.

MR. WIGHTMAN FAVORS SOMERSET STREET SITE

Reasons Advanced by North Plainfield Superintendent for Centralized Schools.

RESULTS ARE BETTER

CONGESTED SECTIONS NEAR THE SOMERSET STREET LOCATION.

Grading and Grouping to be More Easily Done—Desire of Parents to Send Their Children to the "Big" School.

Superintendent Wightman, of the borough schools, is one of those who thinks the establishment of the new school on the Somerset street corner lot would be wise. Coming from the most practical educator among those interested in the matter, his views on the desirability of the lot are valuable.

"The chief reason in favor of the lot," he said yesterday in the course of a conversation with a Daily Press reporter, "and one which I do not think has been advanced yet, is that with centralized schools the work of grading the pupils can be done better and more satisfactorily. In a school on the outskirts we will have to give a teacher to whatever number of pupils there may be in a group. If there are only thirty children in one particular group, say, we would be compelled to assign a teacher to that group. With the schools centralized we could group and grade so as to give teachers full sized groups — forty pupils, or more, if she could handle them. Centralization, you see, means economy in teaching and effort.

"Another thing: Figures show that the congested sections are Harmony and Grove streets. These streets are within easy distance of Somerset street. Moreover the people do not really mind sending their children from the outskirts to the Somerset street school. It is a proved and indubitable fact that the majority of them prefer to send their children to 'the big school,' and will register pupils here from beyond Watchung avenue, rather than at the Watchung school, whenever possible."

It is known that the school board, in considering the site question, took cognizance of this sentiment. Some of the board members felt that as long as it existed it furnished a strong point in favor of the corner lot.

SMITH STARTS TOMORROW

NEW MARKET'S "MAGNATE" TO LEAVE FOR ST. LOUIS.

Mayor Bill Smith, of New Market, will leave for Detroit, Mich., tomorrow to take possession of his specially designed automobile touring car. He will be accompanied by his wife.

The completion of the machine has been delayed by the necessity of putting on special devices stipulated by the New Market magnate.

The auto firm is paying his expenses to Detroit.

From Detroit the Smiths will go to the St. Louis Fair in the big machine.

MISS SCHMIDT HURT.

Confined to Hospital, Her Right Arm Broken in An Accident.

As a result of colliding with a buck, driven by Moses Carey, Miss Kathleen Schmidt will be confined to Muhlenberg Hospital for a few days with a broken right arm. The accident happened at 10 o'clock last night near the corner of East Third and Richmond streets.

Miss Schmidt, who was riding a bicycle, was thrown to the roadway and sustained a simple fracture of the arm just above the wrist. She was taken to the office of Dr. J. B. Probasco where the fracture was reduced. Afterward she was removed to the hospital.

Miss Loomis Married.

News of the marriage of Miss Edith Loomis, the daughter of Ezra Loomis, who lived in this city until four years ago, has been received by her friends here. She married J. G. Wilcox, of Brooklyn. Rev. Dr. Houghton performed the ceremony at the Little Church Around the Corner.

A Summer Trip.

Many people are now planning to go away from home. A good arrangement, and one that will relieve them from all care is to send the silverware and jewelry to the City National Bank for storage. The vaults in this bank are large and secure.

FORESTERS HOLD A BIG CELEBRATION

Members of the Order in This City, Dunellen, Westfield, and Bound Brook Gather.

EIGHTY NEW MEMBERS

A CANADIAN FORMER SECRETARY OF STATE MAKES AN ADDRESS.

History of the Order—Originated in Newark—Four Hundred Members in This City—Held in the Casino.

Forester lodges of this city, Dunellen, Westfield, South Plainfield and Bound Brook, joined in a big celebration of the thirtieth anniversary of the order at the Casino last night. The observance was held by Courts Plainfield and Watchung, of this city; Dunellen, of Dunellen; Bound Brook, of Bound Brook; Providence, of Westfield, and South Plainfield, of South Plainfield. Ninety-two of the 100 courts in the State are celebrating the anniversary during this week.

Members of the order and their friends of both sexes, from all the places named, filled the Casino to overflowing. Prominent members of the order were present to emphasize the notable character of the occasion. There was a programme of entertainment and speaking, besides impressive anniversary services, which included the presentation of a big class of candidates.

The officers of the anniversary, who faced the audience from the platform, were as follows: Chief Ranger, Past High Chief Ranger H. H. Lowrie, of this city; orator, Henry O. Buckly, of Westfield; vice chief ranger, L. T. Titsworth, of Dunellen; past chief ranger, H. B. Wyckoff, of Dunellen. Among the distinguished visitors were Deputy Supreme Chief Ranger Frank Hand, of New York; Deputy Supreme Chief Ranger W. T. Bingham, of Elizabeth, and Past High Chief Ranger J. C. Calvert, of Elizabeth.

For the speaker of the evening the courts had a distinguished Canadian publicist, Hon. Dr. W. H. Montague, Ex-Secretary of State of the Dominion. He delivered a scholarly and eloquent address upon the birth and growth of the order, and spoke in high terms of "the magnificent work" the celebrating courts had done.

The address was the feature of the anniversary services. These included readings from the ritual and a proclamation by Oronhyatekha, M. D., the famous Indian head of the order. At the close of the services eighty new members of the order, all of whom had been brought in during the past six weeks by the allied courts, were presented to Dr. Montague for reception. He addressed them on the meaning of the order, and welcomed them to the ranks of Forestry. More than forty of the candidates were presented by the Plainfield courts.

All the entertainment numbers of the programme were furnished by New York professionals, and the bill was an unusually excellent one. George Botsford, Little West Sisters, Add. W. Hoyt, Charles H. Sheck, Miss Lillian Bender, Young and Chantrell and Schuyler were the entertainers.

It is peculiarly fitting that the New Jersey courts celebrated the anniversary, because the order was born in this State. The first court was organized in Newark in 1874. Since then the order has made wonderful strides.

On May 1, this year, it had a balance of $7,630,000 in the treasury, and the membership numbers 225,000. Last year the order paid out in sick and death claims in New Jersey $115,000. An extra assessment has been called by the order since the establishment of the "stipulated payment system" in 1881. Dr. Oronhyatekha has been at the head of the order for twenty-three years.

The Foresters are strong in this city. They have over 400 members here, and the lodges represented at the celebration last night have a combined membership of 800 or more.

Last night's affair was arranged by the following committee: L. T. Titsworth, of Dunellen, chairman; Dr. H. H. Lowrie, James M. Smith, A. F. Randolph, John Knight, Jr., Lewis Randolph, of this city; H. S. Buckley, of Westfield; H. B. Wyckoff, of Dunellen, and R. J. Shapley, of Bound Brook.

It is announced that Rev. George F. Bockle, pastor of the Greystone Presbyterian church, Elizabeth, has decided to resign from the pastorate, the resignation to take effect July 1.

SOCIAL AT FIRST BAPTIST

JOLLY TIME AFFORDED BY YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY.

Enjoyment almost juvenile in its hilarity marked the social held at the First Baptist church last night by the Young People's Society. The exciting "March to Jerusalem," in which nearly every one present took part was won by Guyon Fountain amid unanimous applause.

"Spin the platter," charades and several other amusements were tried in turn; the most comical of the number being a leap year auction in which the men were put up for sale by N. Douglas Drake and knocked down to the highest bidder among the girls. As the currency consisted of beans, some exceptionally reckless bidding was done.

Mrs. J. B. Probasco is chairman of the social committee which is formed of the following young people: Velma F. Oakley, Ella Mackey, Elizabeth Wilson, Harriet Mattison and Fred Armstrong.

TWO FALSE ALARMS OF FIRE

BOROUGH FIRE DEPARTMENT IS TWICE CALLED OUT NEEDLESSLY.

Two more false alarms brought out the borough fire department last night. One rang in at 10:20, from the box at Hudson avenue and Somerset street, and the other came in shortly before 2 o'clock from the box at Harrison and Cedar streets.

Chief Marshal Weiss, of the borough police force, is engaged in a determined attempt to run the offenders down. He has two suspects under surveillance and an arrest may be made in a day or two.

One thing good that the alarms do is to give the men useful training. On the first alarm they came out of the house before the second round ended. The borough officials are wrought to a high pitch over the tampering with the alarm system. Mayor Smalley is strongly indignant, and this morning he offered a reward of $100 for information leading to the arrest of the guilty men. He has inserted a formal offer of the reward in The Daily Press.

SALE FOR HOSPITAL BENEFIT

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY NETS $137 FOR NURSES' HOME FUND.

Under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, a sale of fancy and useful articles, candy, cake, ice cream and lemonade was held at the home of Mrs. C. Wesley Holland in West Seventh street, yesterday afternoon. There was a gratifying patronage in aid of the fund for the new nurses' home soon to be built. The net profit were $137.

In the decorations, the hospital colors, red and white, were used in the dining room and on the lawn, where lemonade and cream were served at booths. There were several little waitresses who were also dressed in the hospital colors.

These women were in charge of the affair: Mrs. C. Wesley Holland, Mrs. Julia M. VanBuren, Miss Elizabeth M. Cook, Mrs. Hugh Hasting, Mrs. Samuel Huntington, Mrs. H. M. Stockton, Mrs. F. H. Andrews, Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Jr., Mrs. W. T. Pelletier, Mrs. E. S. Hyatt, Mrs. Wright, Mrs. Darke, Mrs. W. L. O. Glenney, Mrs. C. S. Guion, Mrs. Daniel T. Ginna, Mrs. Henry E. Bowen, Miss Schipper, Mrs. R. M. Stover and Mrs. C. M. Church.

These young women assisted as waitresses: The Misses Fleming, Finch, Martin, Harmon, Hyatt, Marie Loring, Ella Holland, Molly Perkins, Louise Saunders, Maizie Day and Florence Curtis. In addition these young girls assisted: Jean Saunders, Elizabeth McGee, Alberta Holland, Catherine Ginna and Louise Andrews.

Acts Without Authority.

Mr. Pearson, of 1139 Dunellen avenue, requests The Daily Press to state that a Thomas Skinner, colored, has no authority to solicit money for the purpose of defraying burial expenses of James Haines, who was killed at Garwood on Saturday. Mr. Pearson desires to warn the public against giving money to Mr. Skinner.

Big Reward Offered.

One hundred dollars reward for evidence that will lead to arrest and conviction of any person ringing in a false alarm of fire in the borough of North Plainfield.

Newton B. Smalley,
Mayor.

PERSONAL ASSESSMENT MUST BE MUCH LARGER

County Board Expects An Increase of at Least $150,000 in This City.

ASSESSORS AT WORK

GREAT VALUATIONS ARE TO BE FOUND IN THE FIRST WARD.

Hard Work to Cover the Fourth Ward—Commissioners of Appeal to Meet After Assessors Work is Entirely Completed.

With the exception of Charles H. Hand, all of the assessors of the city have started their annual tours about the town. Mr. Hand will commence the work in his ward on Monday. It is estimated that a week and a half is required to cover the entire city and make the proper assessment on the basis of a house to house canvass. Mr. Hand has the advantage of his fellowmembers because he makes use of a horse and carriage.

While there are a number of new buildings to be assessed this year, it is not believed that the general increase will be as large as anticipated. The Board of Assessors received a special notice from the State Board instructing them to increase the personal assessment. This is a matter that has not always been strictly adhered to; that is, there are some persons who no doubt should pay more personal tax than they do and the State Board undoubtedly has knowledge of this fact. One of the local assessors said yesterday that if there is not an increase of at least $150,000 in the assessment on personal property in the entire city this year, the board is likely to get a severe "call down." However, it is generally admitted that Plainfield's assessors are about as fair and judicious in their work as any in the State. They are men of intelligence in the matter of assessment and while any one is likely to make mistakes, they know the value of property and always try to place the proper assessment upon it.

Charles Hand says that the great money valuations are to be found in the First ward, while the great number of taxpayers are located in the Fourth ward. In spite of this the Second and Third wards are considered good both as to number of taxpayers and the value of their property.

In each ward but the Fourth, the assessors are able to cover the ground alone. In the Fourth Assessor H. C. Runyon is generally assisted by Assessor Hubbard and David Pope, of Collector Smith's office. There is so much territory to cover and so many thickly populated sections that it is almost impossible for one man to do this work within the prescribed time, when one realizes that he is obliged to call at every house and store.

After all of the assessments are made the Board meets and confers regarding its report to the county board at Elizabeth. In the meantime the Commissioners of Appeal hold their meetings to confer with protesting taxpayers, the Common Council has to pass on the assessments and then the county board meets and fixes the rate. While the local board can guess fairly accurate what the rate here will be, not until the county board concludes its labors is it known definitely.

Plainfield has always prided itself on its low rate and every effort will be made this year to keep it as low as possible and not exceed the present rate. This is a difficult matter when one considers the number of improvements made and desired. The city wants a municipal system of garbage collection, a three-platoon police system and all the advantages of a place many times that of this city, but the city fathers have come to the conclusion that all these things cost money and a careful policy has been adopted, all of which has been of benefit to the town. This is shown in the recognized credit of Plainfield throughout the country.

A. L. Titsworth Improving.

Arthur L. Titsworth, who was operated upon at the hospital on Saturday, continues to improve. He will probably be able to leave the hospital within a week, although it will be another week or ten days before he can resume business.

Exemplified U. O. of I. O. L. Work.

Mrs. W. N. Roberts, of Boston, one of the Grand Lodge officers of the Odd Ladies, visited Minpah Lodge, No. 1, U. O. of I. O. L., last night and exemplified the new work.

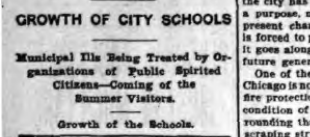
OUR CHICAGO LETTER

TIMELY FACTS AND FIGURES FROM LAKE METROPOLIS.

GROWTH OF CITY SCHOOLS

Municipal Ills Being Treated by Organizations of Public Spirited Citizens—Coming of the Summer Visitors.

Growth of the Schools.



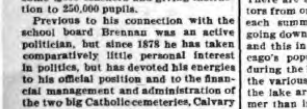
Chicago.—With the death of Thomas Brennan a few days ago the city lost one of its historic characters. Brennan had been in Chicago since 1849. That is not remarkable, as there are hundreds who have been here equally as long. He had seen the city grow from a western village of 15,000 people without a railroad to a city of 2,000,000 and the greatest railroad center of the world. Hundreds, too, have seen these things.

On one thing that made Thomas Brennan remarkable, and a man long to be remembered in the city, was his connection with the public schools. For almost 26 years he has served the city as a member of the board of education. Though a democrat in politics, he has been reappointed by every republican mayor since 1878, when he was named first by Mayor Heath.

During his incumbency of office he has witnessed some remarkable changes in the public schools of Chicago. When he was first appointed to the board Chicago, then a city of considerably less than 500,000 people, had but 74 public schoolhouses, in which were employed less than 800 teachers, and at which there was an attendance of less than 55,000 pupils. To compare these figures with the statistics of to-day gives an idea of the enormity of the task the school board, of which Brennan was an influential and aggressive member, has had to accomplish, for now there are 300 public schoolhouses in the city, employing some 8,000 teachers and giving instruction to 250,000 pupils.

Previous to his connection with the school board Brennan was an active politician, but since 1879 he has taken comparatively little personal interest in politics, but has devoted his energies to his official position and to the financial management and administration of the two big Catholic cemeteries, Calvary and Mount Hope, which he handled for the church as the representative of the late Bishop Feehan.

Cleaning the Streets.



Chicago is to have clean streets—in spots. What the city government has confessed an inability to accomplish organizations of property owners and business men, both in the residence and business section, propose to do—clean the streets—in spots.

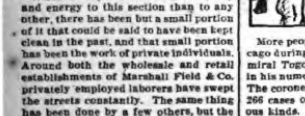
Two prominent clubs of the city, the Merchants' and the Commercial, have undertaken the task of providing the means for cleaning and keeping clean the central business section, including the retail district of State and Wabash, the office district of Dearborn, Clark and La Salle, and the wholesale district of Fifth avenue, Franklin and Market—all the territory within the elevated loop, and a little besides.

While the city has devoted more money and energy to this section than to any other, there has been but a small portion of it that could be said to have been kept clean, for the part and the small portion has been the work of private individuals. Around both the wholesale and retail establishments of Marshall Field & Co. privately employed laborers have swept the streets constantly. The same thing has been done by a few others, but the spots cleaned in this way have been so widely separated as to merely attract attention because of comparison.

The movement for clean streets is, even though it must be at private expense, is gaining ground rapidly on the South and North sides especially. The Hyde Park Improvement association cares for a large section surrounding Jackson and Washington parks; the South Central association cares for a large section lying between Twenty-second and Thirtieth streets and the Lake Shore drive district on the North side is cared for by an association of which Mrs. Potter Palmer is the moving spirit.

Chicago is the only big city in America where such methods are necessary.

The Fire Department.



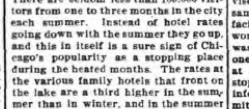
The trouble with Chicago is not so much a lack of enterprise, pride or ambition as a lack of funds. The same cause that prevents municipal cleanliness, prevents, according to Chief Musham, competency in the fire department, and handicaps the city with heavy insurance rates because of a lack of adequate fire protection.

Whatever may be the faults of the fire department and its administration, it is hardly to be expected that Chicago, with less than half the money to expend for fire protection than is at the command of the New York department, will make a showing equal to that of the New York department. A lack of money means both a lack of men and of apparatus, and it is of this more than of a lack of administration that the insurance companies have complained. One of the first needs is a high-pressure water system for the business section especially, but the city has not a cent to devote to such a purpose, nor can it have it under its present charter. Immediately the city is forced to pay for all improvements as it goes along, and can leave nothing for future generations, as New York does.

One of the most serious conditions in Chicago is not so much a lack of adequate fire protection as it is the inflamable condition of the district immediately surrounding the business center, with sky-scraping structures worth from half to three million dollars each, is a district filled with the most dangerous fire traps, and peopled with the worst and most careless element that are to be found in a large city. Once a fire starts in any portion of this belt, with a strong wind blowing toward the business center, would seriously endanger millions of dollars' worth of property.

Time alone can change these conditions, it seems. These fire traps must eventually give place to other substantial structures. They were built before the days of fire limits, and must now be allowed to stand until such time as their rotting timbers render them amenable to condemnation on the part of the city. The great majority of them will disappear within another 25 years, if the city is not burned up within that time.

Summer Visitors.

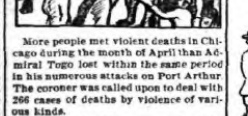


Just as the people of the city are talking of and preparing for their annual summer flitting to seashore, mountain or lake resorts, the railroads and business interests of the city are beginning to again push the claims of Chicago as a summer resort. To bring the people to the city the same inducements in the way of railroad fare will be offered tourists to Chicago as are given those wishing to attend the exposition at St. Louis.

There is more than mere talk to this idea of Chicago as a summer resort. There are seldom less than 100,000 visitors from one to three months in the city each summer. Instead of hotel rates going down with the summer they go up, and this in itself is a sure sign of Chicago's popularity as a stopping place during the heated months. The rates at the various family hotels that front on the lake are a third higher in the summer than in winter, and in the summer they are crowded to the roof. It is the visitors to the city that make it profitable to keep the theaters open through the summer; it is the visitors that make it possible for the summer gardens, with high-priced musical and vaudeville talent, to pay their expenses—and a profit.

Another evidence of Chicago's popularity as a summer resort is the ease with which furnished flats can find renters during the summer period. Real estate men find it impossible to supply the demand for flats that will accommodate those people who come into the city for the summer. Flats that will rent for $50 monthly unfurnished can be rerented during June, July and August with furnishing for $75 to $80 without trouble. Of the regular residents of the city an increasing number are each summer renting their apartments in this way to people from the south and from the country to people who wish to spend the summer in the city.

Going the City Pace.



More people met violent deaths in Chicago during the month of April than Admiral Togo lost within the same period in his numerous attacks on Port Arthur. The coroner was called upon to deal with 266 cases of deaths by violence of various kinds.

Of this number 56 were cases of suicide the largest number of cases of this kind in the history of the city. The suicidal tendencies of the people are seemingly on the increase, and have been for the past two or three years. Sociologists claim the reason for this is to be found in the faster rate of living. The effort to keep pace with modern society, the desire for expensive luxuries which they are unable to gratify, drive men to self-destruction.

One sees evidence of this extravagance on every hand. There are more than 3,000 automobiles being operated in the city. Clerks of modest salaries are driving machines that cost well up into the hundreds and thousands of dollars. Membership lists at the expensive clubs are filled and there is always the waiting lists. New clubs are springing up each week, and the cost of memberships in the older ones are going up. The expensive restaurants are rushed with business as they never were before, and prices at many of these places have been advanced as much as 50 per cent.

Keeping in "the swim" is driving men to destruction, and from that to suicide is but a short step. It is not the poor so much as the well-to-do that are taking their own lives.

WRIGHT A. PATTERSON.

Japanese Houses Are Small.

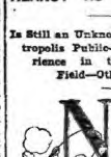
Most of the Japanese dwellings have but one floor. Portable partitions divide the floor into as many apartments as are necessary. These partitions are arranged in panels about three feet square. The panels are so contrived as to be closed with framed paper shutters, which slide in grooves.

GOTHAM JOURNALISM

MEN WHO MAKE THE NEWSPAPERS OF NEW YORK.

HEARST AS A CANDIDATE

Is Still an Unknown Man to the Metropolis Public—Munsey's Experience in the Newspaper Field—Other Gossip.



NEW YORK.—The appearance of William R. Hearst as a presidential candidate has brought his personality before the public in a way that 50 years of conducting multiple newspapers could never have done.

Yet to the public, even in New York, he remains an unknown man. He is not recognized upon the street, as Depew would be. He does not seek or court personal publicity. Withal, his face and figure are of the type that pass unnoticed in a city that draws from all parts of the country slender, smooth-faced men to manifold industries and walks of commerce.

Smooth-faced, I have called Mr. Hearst. He is about 40 years of age, and his slender figure and boyish appearance give him the look of even greater youth. Some one of his numerous retinue of campaign managers has issued a lithograph of him that shows the face old and seamed like that of a middle-aged man. In that respect it is not a portrait. Mr. Hearst's years sit lightly upon him. The cares of a vast and complex business of publication simply do not for him exist. He has the power of disassociation; of being to some degree a nates work that does not personally appeal to him.

Mr. Hearst has young men about him. Mr. Arthur Brisbane, who has been much named of late as Mr. Hearst's adviser and literary man, is of about the same age and of the same smooth-shaven facial type, though much more careworn in appearance. Still, Mr. Brisbane was already past 30 when, happening one day to attempt to enter the casino at Monte Carlo as a visitor, he was stopped by the watchful attendant, who informed him that minors were not permitted to enter the famous gambling hall. The Monte Carlo men, being sporting and unprejudiced bruises, very often take northern blond men as young-er than they really are.

Mr. Brisbane is only one of a brilliant group of men whom Mr. Hearst has had at times gathered about him, and whose services have had much to do with the circulation of his newspapers. Mr. Chamberlain, Arthur McEwen, Ambrose Bierce and Willie Holly are a few of the men who have written the stirring editorials attributed to Mr. Hearst by those who do not know how a great newspaper is really edited.

I am not sure that Mr. Hearst does not owe more to Mr. Carvalho, the astute business manager of various of his papers at various times, than to any writer whatever. Mr. Carvalho and Mr. Brisbane have been close friends for 15 years. They were associated in practically their present work upon the World until seven years ago, since then they have been the "steady team" of the Hearst establishment.

The Queer Fate of the News.

R. FRANK MUNSEY is another young Maine newspaper man of New York and other cities, though one whose success has been less than Mr. Hearst's.

Mr. Munsey was the first man in America to try the "tabloid" form of journalism, publishing the old Star for a few weeks in small page form as "The Continent." Only newspaper men remember the experiment. Munsey had at that time already won and lost more than one respectable competency; wealth soon after dawned for him with the success of Munsey's Magazine. His more recent venture with the Washington Times, the Boston Journal and the New York News has proved a less easy road to fortune. The case of the News is most instructive. This paper was long ago the personal organ of Mayor Fernando Wood, he whose claim to immortality chiefly rests upon the inspired remark that "We must pander sometimes to the moral sense of the community." While Mr. Wood was a Tammany mayor during the war, was a concession. Afterwards the News was run for years by Col. "Bill" Brown, who was also in the Tammany confidence. It made money right along and had the largest circulation in the world, its 150,000 daily buyers were the standing marvel of newspaper men. The paper was chiefly bought by those in humble circumstances and paid more attention to prize fights than to pink tea.

When Col. Brown died his widow still had in the News a profitable property, though its circulation had been whittled away by the Sun, World and Journal, one after another establishing evening papers of great enterprise.

However, the paper was sold to Mr. Munsey for a substantial price and was worth it. Every step that he took to "boom" it has precisely the opposite effect. He changed it from an afternoon to a morning edition without consulting anybody. Not being a newspaper man, it never occurred to him that there would be any difficulty about the press franchise for telegraphic news. There was. He changed the Sunday edition into a Saturday afternoon edition, and when that was worked changed it back again, confusing the few remaining readers who dropped away rapidly.

So presently the strange spectacle was seen of a paper which had been greatly improved, which published excellent matter excellently written, clearly printed and well illustrated, with a circulation of one-tenth what it has been when the paper was not so good, but who at least consistently prospered. In a single year, Mr. Munsey is supposed to have spent nearly a million dollars, including the purchase price, upon the News, up to the time when he publicly announced that he was ready practically to throw it away, to suspend publication without one cent for data.

That is the other side of the newspaper story, good to tell when one speaks of the wonders Mr. Hearst has wrought with practically unlimited money and nerve. Even these qualities do not always win. Mrs. Brown, it is said to say, is better off through the year much better than the purchaser of her paper. She was one of the unfortunates who purchased considerable quantities of the "busted" shipbuilding trust.

What Can Be Done.

UT Mr. Hearst is not the only man who has "done things" of late in New York journalism.

Mr. Adolph Ochs, coming from Chattanooga, took over the New York Times, for 20 years a hopeless proposition. Now he has it on a paying basis, runs in connection with it the Philadelphia Times, consolidated into one strong paper, and has been beating the town with Jap war news obtained in partnership with the London Times.

The new proprietor of the Globe, which started as the Commercial over a hundred years ago, has worked it up to over 100,000 circulation in a few months. The manager of the Mail and Express, son of the Post Stoddard, is a young man, but has practically at the head of the New York Herald, where his father was so long business manager. The "down-stairs men" of the World, the managing editor, the city editor, the Sunday editor, are all men under 45.

Anything unusual in Philadelphia journalism naturally has something to do with obituary notices, which have always been a specialty of Quaker City Journalism since Mr. Childs used to print the poetical variety in the old Ledger. Death notices are valuable in Philadelphia. Therefore, again, they were eagerly sought by the competing papers. A "cut-rate war" was the result; and of this no equally natural outcome was a trust.

Go to any Philadelphia paper nowadays—it makes no matter which one—to secure the insertion of a "death notice" and the charge will be three dollars, and all the papers publish it in just the same form. Thus Philadelphia is assured of its favorite reading matter.

The "Original Delmonicos."

HE death of Miss Rose Delmonico left New York's most famous restaurant still without a masculine owner.

Three-fourths of the estate of Miss Delmonico's will goes to her niece, Josephine Crist Delmonico, the other fourth to her nephew, Lorens Crist Delmonico. The famous old house still maintains two, and only two, houses, the downtown branch on Beaver street and the one which, on the corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-fourth street, faces its newer rival, Sherry's, in the fight for smart patronage.

In no way that I could name has the effect in New York on the growth of great wealth and the habit of ostentation been more manifest than in the matter of costly places of dining. Where Delmonico's is to-day it has grown almost a monopoly of expensive banquets, it has seen the industry divided among 20 places, while its own share has not decreased. The Holland house, Sherry's, the Savoy, the New Netherland, the Majestic, are but a few of a score of hotels where it is impossible to dine from the card at a moderate price. The table d'hote dinner, costing $1.50, is almost contemptuously regarded in such places as "cheap." The Cafe Martin, on the site of the old Delmonico's, relegates its table d'hote diners at that price to inferior quarters on the third floor, far from the music and gayety, and taxes 25 cents per person extra, those who do not order wine. This, indeed, is a common practice.

In the race for distinction, the competition seems to be not to cut prices under other competitors, but to get them higher. Delmonico rates are slow to change; and the famous old house still enables two persons, who order with care and judgment, to get something to eat for about three dollars. Delmonico has no fixed-price dinner, and, of course, no absurd tax upon those who do not order wine. It is not now, as once it was, the highest priced restaurant in New York, but it is still an institution, after having enriched three generations of the original family.

OWEN LANGDON.

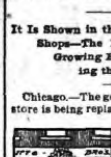
STORES OF CHICAGO

METHODS OF MERCHANDISING IN WESTERN METROPOLIS.

COMING COSMOPOLITANISM

It Is Shown in the Increase of Small Shops—The Big Stores Are Growing Bigger—Serving the Public.

Chicago.—The gent's furnishing goods store is being replaced by the men's toggery; the dressmaker by the modiste. It is a sign of the growing cosmopolitanism of the city; a sign of the passing of the village into the metropolis.



The Small Shop Is the Vogue.

Ten years ago a man who would have attempted to make a living by selling imported neckties at retail would have starved to death. Half a dozen men are doing it to-day. Ten years ago one dollar was an unusual price to pay for a necktie; to-day hundreds of them are sold for three to five dollars each every week.

Ten years ago it was only the ultra-fashionable man who wore custom-made shirts, and there was but one or two men in the city who made them; to-day 50 men are conducting prosperous shirt making establishments.

The growth in numbers of the fashionable small shops, selling expensive novelties for both men and women, has been remarkable. The fashionable woman has her shirt waists made by a man tailor who makes nothing else, and imports his models from Paris. For what she paid three or four dollars a few years ago when a woman made them and secured her idea from a monthly fashion journal, she pays $12 to $15 for to-day, and the name of the maker is left on the garment and displayed as an indication of the wearer's standing in society. As with women's waists so it is with hats and shoes for men and women. They come from the fashionable small shop in which names are taken as a guarantee of style and good form.

Big Stores Growing Bigger.

But while the small shops that sell specialties and imported novelties to the fashionable set are growing rapidly in numbers the big department stores are gaining in size and volume of business.

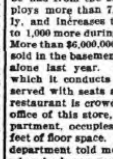
Big Stores Are Gaining in Size.

With but two or three exceptions every big store on State street simply reflects the growth of the city in its own growth. Ten years ago Field's, which now covers nearly a square block of ground and rises to more than ten stories high, was but little larger than a country grocery. It has grown with the growth of the city, as have the others. Two things keep competition for these great merchandising establishments out of the field. One is an almost impossibility of securing a desirable location in the center of the shopping district, and the other is the enormous capital, and familiarity with merchandising methods required.

Some idea of the magnitude of the Chicago retail stores may be had from the statement that it employs more than 7,500 people regularly, and increases this number by close to 1,000 more during the holiday season. More than $6,000,000 worth of goods were sold in the basement section of this store alone last year. In the restaurant which it conducts 1,800 people can be served with seats at one time, and this restaurant is crowded every noon. The office of this store, that is the credit department, occupies about 10,000 square feet of floor space. The manager of this department told me a few days ago that when he began work for the concern—as a cashboy—the entire office space consisted of one small room about ten feet square, with one desk and one employe.

Modern Methods.

Modern methods of merchandising calls for courtesy on the part of the store employes in their dealings with the public, strict integrity on the part of the store management, the advertising of nothing that is not just represented and a willingness to grant the same need of accommodation to all visitors to the store whether they be buyers or not.



Is There to Serve the Public.

Under the old methods, still in vogue in some of the State street stores, a clerk was expected to sell goods to every person who stopped at their counters, or if they did not be able to give a reason why they did not. The new method does not call for this. The clerk is there to serve the public, and whether the people he serves come merely to look and pass on, or whether they come to buy, they are expected to be given the same courteous attention.

To secure such service from an army of employes means a careful attention to detail, and the really successful merchant finds no detail too small to be looked after carefully. In one store the management are so anxious to attain perfection that they not only keep high-salaried employes traveling about the world looking for ideas that will better their service to the public, but they pay their employes in the store for every idea of value which they may offer. As an example: One employe suggested that the elevator conductors not be permitted to refer to the ground floor as the main floor, but as the first floor. The idea being that all floors were of equal importance. The suggestion was adopted and the employe well paid for his thoughtfulness.

The same store pays its employes for every mistake or misstatement they can find in its advertisements. The idea being not only to familiarize the employes with the store's advertising, but to check any possible tendency on the part of the department managers to exaggeration or misleading statements.

Such examples illustrate the modern idea in merchandising. A method founded on strict business integrity.

The Care of Employes.

The store management which has come nearest attaining perfection in its service to the public is the one that takes the most thoughtful care of its army of employes. In this store one complete floor is devoted to the employes. On that floor each employe has an individual locker for his or her clothing. On it there is a large dressing room, where the employes may eat lunches brought from home, with accommodations for the making of a cupful of tea, or they can purchase a luncheon at exactly cost price.

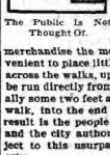
Thoughtful Care of Its Employes.

The same floor contains rest rooms, gymnasiums, reading and correspondence rooms, music rooms, shower baths and emergency hospitals. For the cash and errand boys a school is maintained with competent teachers, where the elementary studies are taught. Every employe is not only given an hour at noon, or as near noon as the time can be arranged, but is given a half hour in the forenoon and afternoon as well. During this time they are at liberty to go where they please, but the great majority spend this time in the rooms fitted up so elaborately for them by their employers. The cash and errand boys are organized into classes, and each class has four hours each week in the gymnasium. In addition to this, all employes are given two weeks' vacation with full pay every year.

It is such treatment that secures efficient service for the public. Coupled with these things is the rule in the store that permits any employe to appeal to the manager of the store at any time in his own behalf. If he believes he is capable of filling a more important position than he holds, or if he believes he should have an increase in wages, it is his privilege to go direct to the store manager with his statement.

In the Wholesale District.

But while the policy of the retail merchant is tending more and more to a faithful service to the public, the motto of the wholesale district seems to be: "The public be d—d."



The Public Is Not Thought Of.

Almost anywhere in the wholesale district one stands side-walks occupied by bales and bundles and boxes of goods going out or in. Not content with these, the sidewalks with their merchandise the merchants find it convenient to place little elevated platforms across the walks, upon which trucks can be run directly from the store door, usually some two feet above the level of the walk, into the end of the wagon. The result is the people walk in the streets, and the city authorities seem not to object to this usurpation of public property.

Chicago streets are at their best not attractive, and the heavy snow of the past winter, with a treasury depleted that it was impossible to care for but a very few of the more important thoroughfares in the retail district, the streets became almost impassable for pedestrians. But conditions made no perceptible difference to the selfish wholesale merchants, who continued to force the public into the mud and slush just the same.

There is a striking contrast in the treatment of the public in the wholesale and retail districts.

As to Coriolanus.

Ex-Congressman Gill, of Ohio, was chatting with a group of friends in Washington when he said something that sounded like a reference to "Charlie" Landis, of Indiana.

A newspaper man chipped in, saying: "Yes, Charlie's a nice fellow, and so is his brother, Frank Landis. I've always said that Charlie Landis—"

Mr. Gill said, severely: "I did not mention Charlie Landis. I was speaking of Coriolanus, who was called from the plow to lead the armies of Rome."

The correspondent retired in confusion and later told the story to another newspaper man.

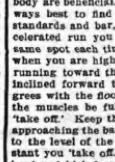
"Why," said the latter, "the joke is not on you, but on Gill. It was Cincinnatus that was called from the plow, not Coriolanus." And the two hunted up the Ohio man, who made amends in time-honored fashion.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

Followers of college athletic sports have been astonished by the recent good work of A. M. Sullivan, the University of Chicago high jumper, and holder of the varsity record of five feet 9¼ inches. In recent trials he has cleared only a fraction of an inch under five feet ten inches. Sullivan's history as a high jumper and his great improvement since he entered the academy school three years ago has been an interesting one. He was barely able to clear five feet four inches in his freshman year, but after the track season was over he kept doggedly at work and last year showed an improvement which surprised even the wary stars. His record stamps him as a first-class high jumper—something which few critics say is possible. Sullivan's physical make-up is hardly of the high-jumping type. In speaking of form and training for high jumping Sullivan says: "To be a good high jumper one must essentially be a steady, consistent worker. First of all one must work up a form and then a watchful eye must be kept on training. As for form, nearly every high jumper has one and only one—that is, he has ideas of his own which he likes, and by which he is able to attain good results. But the advice and tutoring of a competent coach or athlete should not be disregarded. A good deal can also be gained by watching another man jump. Pointers and knacks in the art are always worth while. In preliminary training, running, jumping the rope, chest weight and calesthenic exercises generally produce the best results. When active training for the performance of the exercises, especially those which will develop the back and knees, is essential. I have always found it profitable to take about ten jumps each day, not going higher than five feet six or seven inches for the last. After hard training, or rather training in midseason, is begun I think it is best not to jump more than three times a week. For the other three days jogging and exercises to strengthen other portions of the body are beneficial. In training I always best to find a distance from the standards and bar, so that with an accelerated run you will take off at the same spot each time and clear the bar when you are highest in midair. When clearing the bar the head and body inclined forward to an angle of 70 degrees with the floor or ground. Let all the muscles be fully relaxed until you 'take off.' Keep the arms well down in approaching the bar, but raise them both to the level of the shoulders at the instant you 'take off.' Kick the free foot hard and kick from the 'take off.' The quicker you are at the 'take off' the greater will be your height and the better your form will be. In approaching the bar I find it best to meet it at right angles. Many high jumpers approach from the side at about 45 degrees. Preceding a meet it is not advisable to jump for three days before the date scheduled. For the last two days take as little exercise as possible."

A. M. Sullivan.

English Lad, the gallant son of Requital-English Lady, is now pronounced by horsemen to be the most legitimate favorite for the American Derby that has even been shown so early in the season. The much-talked-of Cook colt made his three-year-old debut at Worth recently, and his performance was such as to leave no doubt, expert judges say, as to his superiority over any colt or filly that he showed up to the present time. With 6 pounds on his back he met S. C. Hildreth's seasoned and speedy mare, Witfull, with 105 up, and he gave her a beating. "If eastern horsemen expect to win the Derby this year with anything that has shown up so far I would like to know the candidate's name," said one prominent horse lover. "Years before when the east sent Hemo, Terminus, Hermis, Arsenal and others along to compete for the rich prize they had no such three-year-olds to meet as English Lad. Sidney Lucas was not considered such a horse until he won. Neither was Robert Waddell or Wyeth or The Picket. Now the west has a full-fledged star performer. A three-year-old that loves the Derby route, can pack weight and is as game as a bulldog has been found, and English Lad will be the star of the three-year-old division in the coming season, barring an accident."



English Lad.

Yale defeated Princeton recently in the third track meet of the two colleges by the score of 77 to 27. After the pole vault Ward McLanahan cleared the bar in an exhibition at exactly 12 feet, breaking the world's record of 11 feet 10¾ inches, made in 1898 in Chicago by Raymond Gallagher, of the Yale class of 1899 of 11 feet 10¼ inches.

A new world's bowling record for a five men team, three games, was made on the Omaha Bowling association alley the other evening. The score was made in a contest, the winning team making 3,238 pins. The record was made on a regulation alley.

Rose, the phenomenal University of Michigan shot-putter, in a recent trial at Ann Arbor, smashed his own record of 48 feet eight inches, made at Franklin field, Philadelphia, last month, by heaving the weight 48 feet ten inches. The mark will not be counted as record, as it was not made in competition.

FOR WARM DAYS.

Pretty Embroidered Linen Dresses. The New Leaves and Insertions.

Small hats tilted over the face, with elaborate trimmings on the band behind, are among the old millinery shapes which are being revived.

Pretty linen dresses embroidered in colors are worn with wide belts to correspond. These belts are made of leather, finely stitched and boned in the back to keep them up. Ecru linen embroidered in white and white linen inlet with lace and fine embroideries are particularly smart.

A shade of orange known as cavalry is the latest. It is particularly effective when used in relieving gray, white or tan costumes.

Points and scallops appear on many gowns; even in some cases the horizontal trimmings have scalloped or pointed edges. Ruffles are arranged in scallops, and new laces and embroidery insertions have waved edges.

GOWN OF ECRU VEILING.

The all white chip hat trimmed with coq feathers cannot be replaced in the millinery collection of the smart woman unless it be superseded by the flat French sailor hat, tilted in the back and trimmed with a great bunch of white roses on the crown and a circle of green leaves.

Mohair in white and delicate colors is a favorite material for toilets of every description of dressiness.

The illustration shows a gown of ecru veiling with undersleeves of ecru and white lace and a vest of the same. The hat is of ecru straw with a pale blue feather.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

COTTON DRESSES.

Dainty Embroidered Linens Used For Smart Suits—Fashionable Tints.

Clusters of red roses are the fashionable decoration for white lace and straw hats.

White linen buttons embroidered in shaded silk or thread to match the color which is introduced to trim the gown are very pretty as well as useful. They can be made at home by using the plain covered linen buttons and some wash embroidery silk.

Wedgwood buttons with raised figures on blue ground are very pretty to trim blue veiling gowns. Pearl buttons of all the popular shades, grass green, violet and ox blood are quite the thing for wash gowns.

The dip yoke is returning owing to the increased fullness in skirts, which seems to demand it. The fullness inconfined on the hips is apt to make a figure look excessively dumpy.

The simple fashion of a two flounced skirt is one to be recommended to the amateur dressmaker. The upper flounce is shirred a little around the hips, or else it can be laid in fine tucks.

CHILD'S DRESS.

Spotted linens are greatly in vogue and also a material which resembles ponjees and has the advantage of washing, which ponjees never does well. Every shade of blue appears in linen from pale hydrangea blue to dark blue relieved with white. Grass greens also play an important part in the season's cotton gowns.

Very effective are the large low crowned hats of plain taffeta draped with embroidered or painted mousseline, the brim being lined with tiny frills of valenciennes lace.

The illustration shows a child's dress of tucked batiste trimmed with insertion run through with blue ribbon.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

IN FASHION'S REALM.

Straw Toques Are Much Worn—Embroidery Is Favored Than Lace.

Straw toques are to be worn a great deal this summer, as much so in fact as the larger shapes. These little toques are usually made of some bright colored material, satin straw or flowers, and if of straw they are simply decorated with straw rosettes or soft satin bows and quills.

Bands of embroidery are being used more than those of plain lace. This embroidery is rarely openwork, except in the case of English embroidery or the Tenerife drawn work. The preference is for raised embroidery.

GREEN STRAW TOQUE.

Both on blouses and skirts cording is much used. Checks of every description are very smart. Even on veiling these checks appear in dull rubbed in effect, and they give a changeable effect when combined with a bright lining.

Some of the most effective picture hats are made of black guipure edged with velours and trimmed with one long plume brought around the brim and falling down upon the shoulders.

Some of the hats are worn straight off the face; others have a decided downward tilt.

A magnificent evening toilet may be fashioned of cream chiffon gauze over rich sulphur colored silk. The corsage should be trimmed with spiderweb lace medallions, from which falls a white silk fringe, the sleeves terminating in a deep fall of accordion plaited chiffon, relieved by shirred chiffon and lace medallions. Effective touches of gold cord may be introduced into this costume.

The picture shows a toque of green straw trimmed with a rosette of soft silk and two quills.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

WHAT IS WORN.

Sleeves Are Very Wide and Much Filled In With Lace.

Sleeves are still very wide, and the fullness either hangs bell shaped or it is plaited into a loose cuff, which is filled in with lace. The newest sleeve frills are of plaited lawn edged with color embroidery or yellow lace valenciennes. Some of the new sleeves are decorated with from three to five frills of lace, which reach almost from the elbow down.

TAILOR MADE GOWN.

The heavy coats now worn by motorists are giving way to coats of shantung of pale colored mohair and silky alpaca. These are made long enough to cover the entire costume, with becoming bertha and collar arrangements and very wide sleeves, having lace and plaited frills put into the new loose cuff.

Lace veils lined throughout with tulle are fastened on draped toques of tussore silk or satin straw. Some of these ecru shapes are very becoming when relieved by touches of red or bright blue.

The bolero is still the most popular jacket. It is deservedly so, as it is al most universally flattering to the figure, much more so, in fact, than the braided military coat which dressmakers tried to introduce in the spring.

The model shows a tailor made suit of green silk trimmed with strappings of white silk. It has the long shoulder ed effect, which is so smart at present.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

Madame Dieulafoy

A Woman Scientist Who Wears Male Attire

IN France, behind some other nations in the emancipation of woman, the government by special license permits a member of the feminine sex to wear male attire. If a petition is presented to it setting forth sufficient reason, industrial or otherwise, why the wearing of trousers will be of advantage to a woman, she generally gets the privilege and thereafter may unmolested walk abroad dressed as a man.

Oddly enough, too, it has often been the brainiest women of France who have asked and obtained such leave. One of the most eminent of living women of science, Mme. Jane Paule Mayre Dieulafoy, dresses habitually as a man.

How Mme. Dieulafoy came to wear trousers is an interesting story. She and her equally distinguished husband, M. Marcel Auguste Dieulafoy, are both archaeologists. When she was thirty years old, in 1881, her husband received from the French government a commission to go to Persia to explore the ancient ruins there. His wife, already drawn to the study of archaeology, accompanied him. Eagerly she climbed down into holes and over crumbling walls, spending her days watching the progress of the excavations. She found that in moments of interest the most intense she would suddenly be recalled to outside things by her feminine skirts. At the same time she saw her husband constantly skipping about unimpeded and walking quite away from her when they went among the ruins. Again, as a woman it was dangerous for her to go unattended into many places which she needed to explore. Her husband could not possibly be with her every moment. At length she said:

"Here among dust and ruins thousands of years old, what matter whether I dress as man or woman? I will put off these hampering feminine clothes."

Accordingly she cut her long hair short and put on trousers and coat and for five years wore this masculine garb in Persia. She was free of foot and limb and found she could skip about, walk and climb up and down quite as readily as M. Dieulafoy. At the end of the five years the pair returned to Paris laden with their treasure, which enriched nobly the French archaeological museum. And then, strangely enough, or perhaps it was not strange, Mme. Dieulafoy found she had been free so long that she could not abide the thought of going back into the slavery of petticoats.

THE LADY IN TROUSERS.

Mme. Dieulafoy petitioned the government to allow her to continue to wear men's clothes in France, and the authorities gave her a special license to do so.

One of the most important of M. and Mme. Dieulafoy's discoveries was the ancient palace and necropolis at Susa, in Persia, of Artaxerxes II. the Great, the follower of Zoroaster, who died 358 B. C. Mme. Dieulafoy wrote a book describing the researches at Susa, and it brought her fame. Then she was made a member of the Legion of Honor.

Jane Dieulafoy has made also on her own account a series of investigations quite as important as discovering the palace of Artaxerxes. The common belief was for many years that oriental art took its rise in Arabia. That did not seem possible, considering the tribes of bloody barbarians whom Mohammed fought and conquered, yet it was believed. Mme Dieulafoy doubted this.

She began a patient tracing of oriental art. With the enthusiasm and persistence of a lover of art she traveled and studied. She spent fifteen years in this work. She began with the remains of Moorish and old time art in Spain. Through Algiers, Morocco and eastward to Egypt the thread ran, then farther and farther east till at last, upon the site of ancient Babylon, she discovered the cradle of oriental art and arts. The fair, slender woman in coat and trousers is an eloquent and accomplished lecturer.

MARY EDITH DAY.

THE DRUMMER'S LIE.

IT WAS A BOLD ONE, BUT IT CARRIED THE DAY.

Incidentally It Also Shows That the Veracity of the Father of This Country Is Not a Hereditary Virtue.

According to the Kansas City Star George Washington Smith proved himself a full fledged commercial traveler upon one occasion at least. He used to go on the road for a Kansas City firm, whose name might have been Billings, Wentworth & Ward. Mr. Ward, junior member of the firm, had traveled and as his front name was George, he had taken a fancy to G. W. Smith, a young man of promise who was about to be sent on the road far away to the west. Economy being a source of wealth, George Ward suggested to Smith that a certain mileage book partly used up by him might just as well be finished up by Smith as far as it would go, and the latter acquiesced, taking the book with a caution from Ward that he should practice his signature and be mighty careful not to give the snap away or the book would be taken up by the conductor.

When George Washington Smith struck the road and got aboard his train, and the conductor came around for the first time Smith looked at him calmly as he handed him his, or rather George Ward's book. Mr. Conductor looked at the book and then at Smith.

"You don't look at all like George Ward," ventured the conductor.

"Do you suppose I am lying about that book?"

"No, sir," replied the conductor, "but I am ordered to have every man sign his name on a piece of paper, and if it is not the same as that in the book I'm to take it up."

"All right," said Smith, bold as a lion and sure of his ground now; "give me paper and pencil."

The signature was made and the conductor closely scrutinized it. He was not entirely satisfied and felt sure it was an imitation. There was no proof, however, and he could not without some further fact take up the book.

It was a night train, and Smith had to make up his mind to be sleepy. In the morning he arose, and, taking from his grip his sponge, soap and towel, which useful articles had been presented to him by his best girl, who had also beautifully woven upon it in large letters the initials of George Washington Smith, "G. W. S.," proceeded to the end of the car, where was located the wash basin.

BOSS OF TRAIN STOPPED.

George was a great lover of soap, and while he was lathering himself profusely all over his frowsipiece, eyes and mouth shut, the conductor suddenly opened the door close by and yelled, "Tickets!" Smith said nothing, but went right on with his ablutions, sputtering and throwing the water about him like a porpoise. The boss of the train stopped, of course, and looked at his passenger, then at the bag, which was hanging, innocently enough, just over Smith's head. Then he smiled. Smith went right on, but the conductor did not. He stood still and laughed.

George Washington, despite the soap in his eyes, lifted his head, looked savagely at the conductor, and wanted to know what he was laughing at.

"I'll take that book," said the conductor.

"Not on your marriage certificate!" remarked Smith.

"I told you that you did not look like George Ward," said the train boss, unable to control his laughter at the joke.

"What makes you think I'm not George Ward?" queried Smith, beginning to think the man might have some proof against him, but never thinking of the letters on the bag. Roaring with laughter, the conductor pointed to the bag, and when able to speak said:

"Them letters, 'G. W. S.' is a dead give away. Gimme yer book that was issued to George Ward."

"You're crazy, man," coolly replied Smith, "I tell you my name is George Ward and that is my sponge bag, given to me by my sister, and you don't get no book."

"But," said the other man, his laughter subsiding at the cool and self-assured manner of the passenger, "them initials says 'G. W. S.' and George Ward's is 'G. W.'"

"Of course, you're right as far as you go," replied Smith, "but see what a fool you've made of yourself! The initials are all right if you understand them. My name is George Ward, and the letters mean 'George Washington Smith.' Don't you see?"

The conductor shook his head, but did not see, but he was finally passed on without further

The New Woman

How a Settled Married Man Behaves

YOU would have known that couple were husband and wife the minute they came to the little table in the restaurant. He shoved rudely past her and left her standing till he had leisurely hung up his hat and overcoat. Then he let her find her seat. He knew in his own head just what he wanted for breakfast and made no delay in ordering it emphatically. Then he remembered his wife and said to her, "Anything you want?" She murmured something, a modest little request, in an undertone, and he, being altogether "it" in that family, repeated her order to the waiter. Then he added, again in his emphatic manner, "Bring me an orange." The wife was a timid looking little body. She had rather a peevish face, and no wonder. It was the outpicturing of the discontent in her soul at being tied for a lifetime to a masculine creature who was stronger than she was and who never gave a thought to anybody's comfort but his own. The orange was brought. The man grabbed it, cut it in two at one slash and began spooning its contents into the aperture in his face with the adeptness of long practice. Suddenly, with his mouth full of the refreshing orange juice, he turned toward the woman and asked, "Say, don't you want an orange?" She was "miffed" at his neglect plainly and silently shook her head. Again he said, in a louder voice, "Don't you want an orange?" "No, I don't," she answered, a little tartly, and no wonder again. "I forgot all about it," said the man as he returned to the gobbling of his own food. Meantime his wife minced at her weak tea and boiled potato with a disconsolated, *sulky, sulky air, which was not sur*prising under the circumstances. No doubt that husband considers himself a martyr and wonders why his wife is never satisfied. But I tell you it is these little things that discourage self respecting young women from matrimony.

If husbands would continue toward their wives the little attentions they bestowed on their sweethearts they would find their wives would be always their sweethearts.

A strong, cheery, energetic woman had supported a husband and brought up and educated a family of children with credit to themselves and to her. The husband in the case was one of those no account masculines who always have some physical ailment when work is demanded. Twenty-five years give time for a human being to have a variety of ills, and this husband had enjoyed almost everything from grip to appendicitis. He is now enjoying spring fever. The sleeve, capable man, who still holds the family head above water, in a recent letter to a friend of her girlhood wrote this: "Dad still grunts." And in many another family "dad still grunts."

Illness is often merely the excuse of the cowardly and the lazy for not doing their duty. Never make it.

Mrs. Clarence Burns established some years ago in New York a social and industrial club for girls who work in factories. These girls had very long hours, and there was no recreation for them except to walk the streets in the evening. On the streets temptations unspeakable beset them; in their uncomfortable tenement homes was no joy or light or even rest. The girls paid each 5 cents a month dues in the club. There was established for them a class in physical drill to straighten their bent backs and fill out their stunted figures. Every night there were music and dancing to keep them out of the public dance halls. Once a month their men friends were invited. There were classes in dressmaking and in singing. Now the union numbers 500 girls and is nearly self supporting. Several times a year the girls give an entertainment, and that helps with the expenses. Many of the girls say this club gives them all the pleasure there is in their lives.

Do you know what has given the Japs such decided advantage over the Russians? Three things—silence, observation so close and accurate that it seems almost supernatural and a vast amount of thinking. Nobody knows for certain to this day just how the Japs destroyed several of the Russian warships, only it is known they did it. Observe minute and accurate observation, absolute silence and a whole lot of thinking. Let us look, think and keep our mouths shut.

Many women's minds are of that cast that they regard light things seriously and serious things lightly.

Civilization, with all its advantages, heaps upon us conventionalities that weigh down the free soul like iron.

He is a wise man, the Massachusetts judge who decided that "nagging" is a sufficient cause for divorce. In that particular case it was the husband who nagged the wife, but the principle applies equally to both sexes.

The weak are always suspicious, the strong never.

ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

MODES AND COLORS.

Stunning Summer Fashion Novelties For the Well Dressed Woman.

Many persons like colors, but the best taste prefers that dress material shall be white or black or a judicious mixture of the two. Colors can so easily be added as trimmings and accessories that it is better to have the costume black, with white for more dressy occasions. Black is said to be depressing to both wearer and to those who see it, but this need not be if trimmings hold some color, and so many of the very prettiest ones do. There are fine braids worthy a place on the richest velvet and silk, and these are so inwoven with various colored threads that they are as refined as they are beautiful. These laid upon the waist and sleeves, with possibly a tiny bit in some place on the skirt, make it fanciful enough. Then there are the dainty lace, feather and chiffon boas and the flowers on the hats.

Parasols also may give color and elegance to a plain black costume.

BLACK CHIFFON COSTUME.

Parasols are exceedingly beautiful this season. The useful black silk rain umbrella is so close that it rolls into a small compass no larger than a walking stick. But it spreads out quite big enough to cover the hats, and that means something in this day of grace. The handles are wrought in some fine design. The parasols are as ornate as the umbrellas are plain. Frills of chiffon over other frills of painted or printed silk mull or soft silk are of tenest seen, but there is even in this matter a great variety.

Some clever ladies purchase a plain white or light colored silk sun umbrella and cover this with all over lace and edge it with frills of chiffon or other light and delicate material. If the lady can paint dainty flowers on the plain silk, she does not cover it with lace, but paints some flowers and sprays of foliage on the silk and like wise on the frills. And sometimes she puts a bow of ribbon on as a finish. White, ivory and pale pink are the favored shades for those bows.

It was asserted at the beginning of the season that lace dresses were decidedly out, but if they were they did not go far before they returned, and there will be nothing more fashionable than gowns either wholly or in part of lace. Chiffon is also one of the novelties in day dress materials. Chiffon was thought for awhile to be only suitable for evening wear and for trimmings, but now whole dresses made of it are seen. And so much can be done with it. I saw in one big store a dress of black chiffon made with several flounces of the same and with a short shoulder cape, also ruffled. The front of another cape had a very full double ruff of the chiffon done so as to simulate a long boa. It made a very beautiful costume. With a hat to match, with some kind of bright flowers, it would be all that one could desire.

A hat was made of closely shirred black chiffon, with a turban brim, considerably higher on one side than on the other. There was no trimming on the outside of the brim, but under this high place and partly on the crown was a bunch of rather small roses in different shades of red.

Some very lovely tea gowns are shown just now. One had an underslip of pink taffeta and the outer dress of very open lace. The gown was cut quite low in the neck, and this part was finished with small loops of narrow black velvet ribbon. It hung free from the shoulders in the back and had a shirring of pink chiffon four inches wide all down the front and finished with four shirred ruffles at the foot.

I have noticed in several instances insets like this in front of gowns from neck to foot and also only on the skirt. The insets are usually of some contrasting color or material. Some of them are very much ornamented, being frequently picked out with gilt threads or colored silks and sometimes with jet beadings or spangles.

Running quite even in popularity with the linen ones are those of cloth of all colors, but with black and white the best liked. A white cloth dress properly made and trimmed is beautiful, while a black one is always valuable to the well dressed woman. Many ways are shown to trim the black ones, a favorite being to have fine castle braid in black and gold, with perhaps a thread of red showing fitfully. Very little is employed, but it is handsome.

HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU.

JAP MARRIAGE.

No Lovemaking Before Marriage, Yet Japanese Domestic Life Is Happy.

To us in America it certainly would appear as if more than half the fun of the world were lost if society were suddenly deprived of all the parties, picnics, dances, drives and evening calls where bachelor and maid meet, become acquainted and are drawn together by the mutual attraction of young life and joy. How would it seem if there were to be no more courting, no hand clasps or meetings on the sly to exchange words that are nothings and yet are all in this golden time of life, which ought to be prolonged forever, only nobody seems able to achieve it as yet!

They do all this differently in Japan, to our taste not half so delightfully. It is odd that the Japs, except perhaps the French, the most sentimental of all people, go about marriage in as businessslike a way as they build a ship. In many cases the bride and groom to be do not even know before betrothal time that they are going to be married.

Parents usually arrange marriages. A father decides that it is time for his son to take a wife. He and the youth's mother look about among their acquaintances for a pretty, sweet tempered girl who will make a pleasant home for their son. Sometimes a young man himself who thinks he wants to be married commissions an elderly woman friend to find a wife for him. In either case the method of betrothal is the same. There is always the intermediary who must arrange matters with the girl's parents.

A JAPANESE WEDDING.

If the girl's father is willing the betrothal occurs. This betrothal is the formal introduction to each other of the bride and groom to be, who probably have never spoken to each other previously. They are introduced at the house of some friend of both and exchange gifts. After this exchange of presents they are in for it. There can be no backing out and no "take back your gifts" business. When the parents of the pair arrange the marriage it must take place, no matter whether the young couple are satisfied or not. They have to be satisfied.

The wedding consists merely of ceremonial eating and drinking together by the bride and groom. There are no religious or state ceremonies. Japanese matrimony is a private matter. On the wedding day the bride, in light or white garments and with a white veil over her, is taken to the home of the groom's parents. Then comes the wedding feast. The groom squats or sits on the floor, Japanese fashion. He, too, is attired in light colored clothing. Next on the left of the groom squats his father, grave and dignified. On the left of this gentleman sits in the same fashion the woman mutual friend and on her left, last of the wedding group, the bride.

A table, one of those ridiculous Japanese affairs about four inches high, is in front of the group. It is painted white. They are a wedding feast. After that the bride is conveyed to the home her future husband has prepared for her. There both bride and groom change their costumes. The ceremonial drinking together by the bride and groom of sake (rice wine) completes the wedding observances. Sir Edwin Arnold married his gentle and pretty Japanese wife by the mere ceremonial drinking of cups of tea together. Though both Sir Edwin and his bride considered themselves thereby as fast married as if a lord bishop and lord mayor had doubly joined them in matrimony, yet for the sake of the looks of things in the minds of white people the western marriage service was afterward regularly performed.

"Three times three" the Japanese bride and groom, now in the groom's home, taste the sake wine together. On this occasion the man drinks first, the girl afterward. They are now ready to take up housekeeping and homemaking. It would be extremely improper to fall in love before marriage in Japan.

In spite of the lack of acquaintance of bride and groom Jap marriages are as happy as those in Christian countries. The little brown women are so bright and sweet that it would be a very evil tempered man who could not get on with one of them. Two sentiments pervade powerfully the Jap mind and influence for good all Jap life. These are love of children and love of the beautiful in nature. It is told that once a Jap burglar broke into a house in the absence of the family and found there the baby that had been temporarily left alone. He commenced to play with that baby and amused himself so entirely that he forgot what he was there for and was only aroused to the situation by the return of the family, when he was scared off on the double quick.

In the home of a Japanese family of means is always one room called the "chamber of the inspiring view." It is situated so as to look out upon some beautiful and picturesque natural scenery.

DORA BELLE DENISON.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, May 26, 1904.

About time for Port Arthur to be spilled again.

The silence of Judge Parker is painful—to Col. Bryan.

By this time Hearst surely realizes how Bryan must have felt when the returns came in.

The attempt to rob General Funston of fame by declaring that he never swam the Rag Ding in Kazan reminds one of Washington and the cherry tree story.

The man who seeks to be appointed Federal judge for the district of New Jersey will have an easy job landing in the berth compared to what he will have to do to hold it down.

It's safe to say that the postal card on which were written by a Kansas man 40,083 words was easy to decipher in comparison to some of the cards sent to an editorial desk.

If the reports emanating from Eliza both are to be believed, there are apt to be fewer stores doing business on Sunday in this city in the near future. The Grand Jury is after the speakeasies and some men are troubled with insomnia in Plainfield just at present.

From New York comes a tale that horse racing, such as ruined the fair name of New Jersey, will be legalized here again. Considering the blow recently dealt to the live pigeon shooters of Pennsylvania, it does not seem that the people of this State are in a mood to tolerate another race track epoch.

MINISTER TALKS ON BARGAINS

REV. A. E. FINN'S SERMON ON THE VALUE OF MAN'S PURCHASES.

An estimate of the humdrum affairs of life from what is, unfortunately, an unusual viewpoint, was embodied in the sermon for the evening at the Park Avenue Baptist church on Sunday by the Rev. A. E. Finn.

Mr. Finn chose as his subject "Everyday Bargains" and some of the bargains made every day look most unprofitable when judged by the standards set down in this sermon.

Esau's bargain with his brother Jacob was instanced as a miserable failure from any point of view. How many people, said the pastor, are every day buying at the expense of their immortal souls, things either totally unnecessary if not positively harmful, or other things necessary perhaps, but like Esau's mess of pottage, paid for out of all proportion to their worth?

The birthright of body, mind and soul, while bargained away by some, are misused by others who, in developing one or two, neglect the others. Physical culture is good but to be of real benefit it must be accompanied by mental and spiritual growth; for the strong body can never be perfect when guided by a weak mind or an impure soul any more than the soul can reach its limit of earthly perfection unless housed in a perfect body.

Symmetrical growth is the only true growth and the only kind worthy while, because it developes the soul and the soul lasts forever.

In mentioning ways of development Mr. Finn spoke of the added strength which always results from a successful encounter and said that commercial integrity is the truest developer of spiritual strength because of its constant exercise.

He spoke of Joseph's unswerving integrity and the increased capacity which he gained as a result of it. The greatest bargain offered any man, said the preacher, is Heaven; and the price is only a few short years of obedience to the will of God.

Turning the discussion to bargains altogether unprofitable, the speaker called attention to the modern tendency to overestimate the importance of temporal things because spiritual things appear so distant and indefinite.

He mentioned "white slave traffic" in our large cities as an instance of greed for gain on the part of those who carry it on and a bartering by those who support it, of their most precious birthright for the satisfaction of an appetite.

As a closing thought Mr. Finn said that those who looked for material gain first were losing eternal possessions more valuable than the whole world and that the only cure for the madness of sin which presents these bargains is such false lights is the true appreciation of God and his purpose regarding man.

Miss Mamie Brady has returned from a stay with New York friends.

AMUSEMENTS.

"Dreamland" having opened its gates to the public in a blaze of electric lights of 10,000,000 candle power, is beyond pale the grandest amusement resort on the Atlantic coast, if not in any part of the United States. Its tendency is to lift summer amusements to the highest plane of clean and artistic enjoyment. "Dreamland" is situated on the edge of the ocean at Coney Island, New York. Indeed it is in great part over the ocean. It is reached by fast express trains from the New York end of the Brooklyn bridge which leaves at frequent intervals and make the run in thirty-five minutes. The fare is ten cents each way. Police Commissioner McAdoo, after an inspection of "Dreamland," had this to say: "'Dreamland' solves largely the hardest of police problems. The men who have invested their millions in such a place for the people are deserving of great public applause." "Dreamland" in its construction, harmonizes in architectural effects, with lagoons which are channels of Venitian beauty, and ornamental towers, bridges and statuary, which betray the master hand of landscape architecture.

The engagement of Charles Hawtrey for appearance on the Proctor Circuit marks one of the most important vaudeville accomplishments of the season. Mr. Hawtrey has been appearing for the past season in "The Man from Blankley's," with extraordinary success, almost duplicating his tremendous popularity in "A Message from Mars," the previous season. It was his intention to return to London to revive the latter play under his own management, but having an offer to book before the steamer sailed, he was induced by Mr. Proctor to make appearances at the Twenty-third and Fifth Avenue Theatres, appearing at each house twice daily, this being necessary owing to the fact that he had but a single week vacant. During the season now coming to a close Proctor patrons have been permitted to witness every important vaudeville novelty, developed in this country or brought from Europe, and in many instances, as in the case of Mr. Hawtrey, the Proctor audiences alone have been enabled to witness important performances. The Hawtrey incident is but a single example of Proctor enterprise, which is always exerted toward the presentation in his theatres of the very best attractions.

At the Majestic Theatre, "The Man From China," has won popular favor and it is now nightly packing the house. Some of the alterations in the cast and action of the piece have made it more compact without in any way spoiling the fun producing effects. Miss Marie Tyler has been given the finale song in the last act and the management has discovered that she possessed a beautiful voice. Miss Tyler has had a small part as one of the "Matrons," and only recently it was made known to Melville B. Raymond, the owner of the production, that she had singing parts in London. Being a man who fosters talent he decided to let her have a trial in the final song. She was an immediate hit. Many remarked on the wonderful power of her voice. It could be hard above the full chorus of men and women and the glare of the orchestra just before the final curtain.

The return of the Bostonians, the most popular musical organization in America, is announced for this evening. This is welcome news, for whatever is done by these artists is the best of its kind. They have never fallen below the mark of good conscience in all their career of twenty-five years. Their productions have been numerous and they have sent a fortune in the presentation of new works; but nothing they have accomplished has exceeded in value and popularity the "Robin Hood" of Harry B. Smith and Reginald De-Koven, which has been in their repertory for many seasons, and always with more and more favor. The recent revival of this opera evokes much interested comment. For example, one widely known authority tells us that the Bostonians now, as of old, give the best performance, musically, of any light opera organization in America, and then clinches this conviction with the testimony that it is doubtful, indeed, whether any lyrical company in this or any other country could so fully develope the beauties of the score of "Robin Hood."

To Present Shakespearian Play.

Miss Hartridge, Miss Randolph and Miss Mellick have issued invitations for the presentation of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," to be given by the Randolph-Cooley Collegiate School at the home of L. V. F. Randolph, West Front street and Farragut road, Friday afternoon, May 27 at 3 o'clock. In case of rain, the play will be given Saturday afternoon, May 28.

Raise Dunellen P. M.'s Salary.

Postmaster P. W. Brakeley, of Dunellen, is now receiving $1,600 per annum, an increase in salary from $1,300. The change was granted last week by the Department at Washington.

LONG STANDING FEUD ENDS IN A FATALITY

Husband Kills Man Who Makes Reflections on His Wife's Character.

AN ITALIAN AFFRAY

MARTIN HAS POOR AIM AND VANUSCH FIRES THREE TIMES.

Vanusch Flees During the Excitement and is Still at Large—Were Playing Cards at the Time.

In a shooting affray in the Italian colony on Hunter avenue, Scotch Plains, Saturday night Tony Martin, junk dealer and boarding house keeper, was fatally wounded by Charles Vanusch, another Italian, twenty-one years old. Martin died in Muhlenberg Hospital Sunday morning. He was regarded as the leader of the colony. Bad blood had existed between the men for over a year. Their wives were engaged in a neighborhood feud and dragged the men into it until both of them were ready for anything in way of trouble.

Just how the clash occurred Saturday night, it is hard to learn. All the witnesses were Italians, and, as usual, after an affair of the kind, none of them will admit that he saw or heard anything. According to one of the colonists, however, who, while he will not admit having been present, acknowledged to a Daily Press reporter that he knew the details of the affray, Martin and Vanusch met at a card game in one of the former's boarding houses shortly after 12 o'clock. They started to wrangle almost immediately. Martin made a disparaging remark about Vanusch's wife and the talk took on an ugly turn. Martin lost his temper and drew a revolver.

"I am going to kill you!" he said.

Vanusch did not seem to believe there was any danger. "Oh, you wouldn't kill me," he said calmly.

"Yes, I will, and tonight, too!" exclaimed Martin, and opened fire.

The bullet grazed the young man's head. Before the Italian leader could fire again Vanusch pulled his own gun and shot back. In the fusilade that followed Martin was shot three times. One bullet entered his stomach and another penetrated his chest just below the heart. Either wound would have served to kill him.

During the excitement Vanusch escaped. Martin was carried to Muhlenberg Hospital, after Dr. F. W. Westcott had examined him. He died at 10 o'clock Sunday morning.

The county police are searching for Vanusch. They are inclined to believe the self-defense story, and expect that Vanusch will return to give himself up when his fright of the law cools. One of Vanusch's friends said yesterday that he would return at once but for fear of death at the hands of one of Martin's associates.

SCOTCH PLAINS' TALE OF WOE

VANQUISHED BY THE GARWOOD NINE BY SCORE OF EIGHT TO SIX.

Scotch Plains ball team fell before the onslaught of the Garwood A. C. team, in the game Saturday afternoon on the 'Plains diamond. "Smiling Jimmy" Montrose, who was in the box for the home team, had no one to blame for the defeat but himself.

The score by innings:

Garwood	2 0 0 3 0 0 3 0 0—8
Scotch Plains	1 1 1 2 1 0 0 0 1—6

Miss D. S. Smith to Wed.

Miss Drucilla S. Smith and William D. Pike, of East Front tarect, will be married Tuesday evening, June 7, at the home of the bride's parents, 68 West Sixty-ninth street, New York. The bride was a former resident of Washington avenue, in the borough.

For Chapels' Support.

The offering received at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, two weeks ago, for the chapel fund, amounted in gifts and pledges to $5,300. It is estimated that several hundred dollars more will be required for the coming year.

Cousin of Mr. Kenney Killed.

Paul Kenney, of Elizabeth, a young cousin of J. J. Kenney, of this city, was killed by a batted ball while watching a boys' game Saturday at Elizabeth.

Reformers Rout Collegians.

The Reform A. A. played a winning game against the Upsala College, of New Orange, on the latter's grounds Saturday afternoon. The score was 16-4.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Elizabeth Cutter, of Sandford avenue, and Oliver R. Hill, of 433 East Sixth street.

HILLSIDE RECEPTION A BRILLIANT AFFAIR

The Park Club and the Park Golf Club Are Present in Full Force.

NINE HUNDRED THERE

VICE PRESIDENT E. R. ACKERMAN, ASSISTED BY MANY WOMEN, RECEIVES.

Oshkosh Glee Club and Others in Cast of International Melange at the Dinner—Affair in Charge of the House Committee.

Ideal weather favored the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club at the opening club reception held on Saturday. Over five hundred members and friends were entertained in the afternoon and at night there were nearly three hundred at the dance. The Park Club and Park Golf Club were present, as well as many other society folks from the city and borough.

The affair was in charge of the house committee, composed of Lewis G. Timkpson, chairman; Miss Maude VanBoskerck, Miss May Holly, Lewis E. Waring and Theodore D. Wilson, who left nothing undone to make it a success. In the absence of the president, the vice president, Ernest R. Ackerman, assisted by Mrs. John Gray Foster, Mrs. E. T. Wilson, Mrs. A. V. Healy, Mrs. T. M. Day, Jr., Mrs. Lewis G. Timpson, Mrs. Lewis E. Waring, Mrs. Walter M. Mores, Mrs. Stuart S. Patterson and Mrs. E. T. Barrows received in the main room.

Six tables were set in the dining room and piazza cafe, from which were served coffee frappe, lemonade, iced tea, sandwiches, wafers and cakes. These women were in charge of the tables: Mrs. John B. Dumont, Mrs. Joseph M. Shellabarger, Mrs. Rufus Lincoln, Mrs. Townsend Bushmore, Miss Holly, and Miss Munger, assisted by Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Jr., Mrs. Daniel T. Ginna, Mrs. H. C. Irons, Mrs. J. W. Sandford, Mrs. Stuart H. Patterson, Mrs. E. A. Stevenson, Mrs. Lawrence Myers and Miss Hilda Harmon, Maidie Wadsworth, Grace Kauffman, Tenie Hyatt, Mary Anderson Reinhart, Josephine Lapsley, Mary Whiton and Violet Conklin.

Dinner was served to 125, among whom were the entire cast of the International Melange of Song and Dance, and before the dance in the evening they gave the opening and closing choruses of the melange. At 10:30 refreshments were served.

Throughout the afternoon and evening the visiting cars were run under fifteen minutes headway on the Arlington avenue line and stages met these cars at the end of the line.

BARD OWL IN CAPTIVITY

A RARE BIRD IS CAPTURED IN THE SWAMP NEAR SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

On an ornithological hunt in the Dismal Swamp, near South Plainfield, last Friday, Mrs. J. Boice Hubbard, of Central avenue, captured a young live barred owl. The bird is a fine specimen. As far as is known it is the only one in captivity in this section of the country. The barred owl is a rarity in a captive state.

Mrs. Hubbard is an enthusiastic naturalist and bird-lover. She often goes on expeditions after specimens, and in her search for living prizes she shows none of the timidity that usually afflicts femininity in the woods or swamps. In capturing the young owl last Friday she had to fight off the old bird, which made desperate efforts to rescue its young one. A little while after Mrs. Hubbard ran across a big blacksnake and killed it. The reptile measured over six feet in length. She will preserve the skin.

Mrs. Hubbard will try to keep the owl alive as a pet. It is only about three month old, and she is hopeful of training it to get accustomed to captivity. It is one of the prettiest specimens she has ever seen, and looks much like a feathery white puff-ball. It has been named "Happy Hooligan," and is beginning to answer to the appelation.

Hillside Contest Standing.

In the weekly play for the golf committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, this is the standing by points for the trophy: C. B. Morgan, 7; D. H. Rowland, 5; G. F. Earl, 3; J. E. Erickson, 5; Leighton Calkins, 2; R. S. Rowland, 2; S. D. Lounsbery, 1; Robert Abbott, 1; C. A. Tompkins, 1; Howard Huntington, 1.

To Open a Cigar Store.

Fred Benker, who has been employed as a cigar maker for Henry Eggerding, of Park avenue, for a great many years, has leased one of the new stores being built on East Front street by Dr. Pittis and will open a cigar store there.

POLICE FORCE DRILL WINS MANY PLAUDITS

Mayor O. L. Jenkins and Commissioner F. De W. Randolph Inspect the Department.

CITY OFFICIALS THERE

PRESIDENT OF COMMON COUNCIL TOLLES PRAISES THE COPS.

Speeches Are Also Made by the Mayor, City Judge, Councilmen and Former Assemblyman—At Co. K's Armory.

Snap and precision altogether military, marked the annual drill and inspection of the Plainfield police force Saturday afternoon at Co. K's armory. Sixteen men turned out, spotless and trim as West Pointers and their execution of the evolutions spoke volumes for the material composing the force and for Chief Kiely's ability to make the most of that material.

With Mayor O. L. Jenkins, President R. I. Tolles, of the Common Council, and members of the Council seated about the sides of the armory, the men were put through what William Newsorn spoke of later as "a course of sprouts" to show their ability in drill.

Drawn up in a single rank the squad was put through the manual with the baton and inspected by Mayor Jenkins and Police Commissioner Frank De W. Randolph. The Mayor made a congratulatory speech to the men in which he spoke of their appearance and drill in high praise.

Police Commissioner Randolph followed with a short speech in the same vein, adding a passing reference to the proposed change in hours of duty and expressing himself of the three platoon system.

Mr. Randolph then introduced in turn Councilman C. L. Murphy, City Judge William N. Runyon, who spoke of the uniform fairness and absence of bitterness shown by the officers in making their charges. Ralph I. Tolles, president of the Common Council, who mentioned the unfailing vilgance of the patrolmen on post, and Lawyer William Newsorn who spoke of the appearance of the local "finest" as superior to that of the men in many larger cities.

Chief Kiely was highly complimented on the showing made by his men.

DIRECTORY VS. CENSUS MAN

WAND SAYS THAT OFFICIAL FIGURES FALL 5,000 SHORT OF POPULATION.

If Wand, the directory man, knows what he is talking about, Plainfield is bigger than the census man says she is. Bigger by about 5,000 inhabitants. The official census credited the city proper with some 16,000 persons.

Wand says name-getting is a business. He has been in the business long enough to know its ins and outs thoroughly, and he stakes his business reputation on the statement that this city has at least 20,000 inhabitants. He became convinced of that after a complete canvass of Plainfield for data for the new directory, so that his statement has more than a little value.

If what he says is true, Plainfield is entitled to a district court. The law gives every city of 17,000 inhabitants or more the right to have a district court, and Plainfield wants one just as soon as she can get it. The lawyers and the merchants are a unit on that, and there is no shadow of doubt that steps will be taken to establish the court here whenever the time is right for the effort.

It has been claimed that Plainfield could have had the court several years ago if the citizens had been properly alive to the opportunity. While there are no figures to prove it, most of the men who know the town are certain that the population is over 17,000, and has been for pretty nearly five years.

"What we want to work for—and what we are going to get—is a government postoffice building and a district court," said a merchant yesterday. "They will boom the town wonderfully, give it a standing it can get in no other way, and increase business and real estate values."

FIGHT ON CAR.

Martin Keiderling, of West Third street, Says P. S. C. Crew Assaulted Him.

Martin Keiderling, of West Third street, who got in a dispute with the crew of a car coming from Bound Brook Saturday night, accuses the crew of throwing him from the car after assaulting him with the brass controller, until he lost consciousness. He claims the conductor asked him for his fare twice and beat him when he refused to pay a second time.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Standard Railroad of America.

FOUR TRACKS THROUGHOUT BY THE ELECTRIC AUTOMATIC BLOCK SIGNAL SYSTEM.

On and After May 16, 1904.

Trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

† 2 30 a m—Past Line daily, with Pullman Vestibule Parlor Cars, for Pittsburg and Chicago. Dining Car. Connects at Chemical Junction with Express Connecticut.

† 6 05 p m—Western Express, daily, with Vestibule Sleeping Cars and Dining Car, for Pittsburg and Cincinnati. Connects at Chemical Junction Saturdays.

† 8 25 p m—Pacific Express, daily, with Pullman Vestibule Sleeping Cars, for Pittsburg, Toledo and Chicago, daily, for Louisville, via Shenandoah Valley Route, for Cleveland, except Saturday.

For Long Branch, Ocean Grove, † 12 30 a m, 1 27 p m daily. Seaboard Florida Limited, † 1 27 p m daily.

For Baltimore, Washington and the South—12 05 † 1 30, 2 30, 3 30, 4 30, 5 30, 6 30, 7 30, 8 30, 9 30, 10 30, 11 30 p m. On Sunday at 12 05, 1 30, 7 30, 8 30 a m, and 10 07 p m.

For Newark and New York—6 20, 6 57, 7 24, 7 55, 8 24, 8 55, 9 24, 9 55, 10 24, 10 55, 11 24, 11 55 a m, 12 24, 12 55, 1 24, 1 55, 2 24, 2 55, 3 24, 3 55, 4 24, 4 55, 5 24, 5 55, 6 24, 6 55, 7 24, 7 55, 8 24, 8 55, 9 24, 9 55, 10 24, 10 55, 11 24 p m. Sundays, 6 05, 6 40, 7 10, 7 40, 8 10, 8 40, 9 10, 9 40, 10 10, 10 40, 11 10, 11 40 a m, 12 10, 12 40, 1 10, 1 40, 2 10, 2 40, 3 10, 3 40, 4 10, 4 40, 5 10, 5 40, 6 10, 6 40, 7 10, 7 40, 8 10, 8 40, 9 10, 9 40, 10 10, 10 40, 11 10 p m. Express for New York only, 12 05 a m, and 3 42 p m week days.

For Philadelphia—† 2 30, 3 45, † 5 05, 5 20, 6 07, 6 40, 7 10, 7 40, 8 10, 8 40, 9 10, 9 40, 10 10, 10 40, 11 10, 11 40 a m, 12 10, 12 40, 1 10, 1 40, 2 10, 2 40, 3 10, 3 40, 4 10, 4 40, 5 10, 5 40, 6 10, 6 40, 7 10, 7 40, 8 10, 8 40, 9 10, 9 40, 10 10, 10 40, 11 10 p m. Sundays, 1 01, 2 40, 3 45, 5 05, 5 20, 6 07, 6 40, 7 10, 7 40, 8 10, 8 40, 9 10, 9 40, 10 10, 10 40, 11 10, 11 40 a m, 12 10, 12 40, 1 10, 1 40, 2 10, 2 40, 3 10, 3 40, 4 10, 4 40, 5 10, 5 40, 6 10, 6 40, 7 10, 7 40, 8 10, 8 40, 9 10, 9 40, 10 10, 10 40, 11 10 p m.

For Atlantic City—Through Vestibuled Express, with Dining Car, 10 00 a m. Parlor Car, and Combined Coach, 10 30 a m, 2 00, 4 00, 5 00 p m. Sundays, 10 00 a m, 2 00, 4 00 p m. Sundays, 1 01 and 7 20 (Through Vestibuled Train, Pullman Parlor, Dining and Smoking Cars only), 10 30 a m (Vestibuled) m.

For Cape May—Via Delaware River Bridge, † 35 p m week days; † 41 a. m. Sundays.

For Cape May—Via Delaware River Bridge, † 35 p m week days; † 41 a. m. Sundays.

For Sea Girt—† 1 01, 4 25, 6 40, † 12, 8 06, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 a m, 12 40, 1 40, 2 40, 3 40, 4 40, 5 40, 6 40, 7 40, 8 40, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 p m. Sundays, † 1 01, 4 25, 6 40, † 12, 8 06, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 a m, 12 40, 1 40, 2 40, 3 40, 4 40, 5 40, 6 40, 7 40, 8 40, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 p m.

For Asbury Park—† 1 01, 4 25, 6 40, † 12, 8 06, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 a m, 12 40, 1 40, 2 40, 3 40, 4 40, 5 40, 6 40, 7 40, 8 40, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 p m. Sundays, † 1 01, 4 25, 6 40, † 12, 8 06, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 a m, 12 40, 1 40, 2 40, 3 40, 4 40, 5 40, 6 40, 7 40, 8 40, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 p m.

For Monmouth Beach—† 1 01, 4 25, 6 40, † 12, 8 06, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 a m, 12 40, 1 40, 2 40, 3 40, 4 40, 5 40, 6 40, 7 40, 8 40, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 p m. Sundays, † 1 01, 4 25, 6 40, † 12, 8 06, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 a m, 12 40, 1 40, 2 40, 3 40, 4 40, 5 40, 6 40, 7 40, 8 40, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 p m.

For Woodbridge and Perth Amboy—4 25, 6 40, 10 40 a m, 12 40, 5 40, 6 40, 11 40 p m. Sundays, 4 25, 6 40, 10 40 a m, 12 40, 5 40, 6 40, 11 40 p m. Sundays, 4 25, 6 40, 10 40 a m, 12 40, 5 40, 6 40, 11 40 p m.

For Rahway—† 1 01, 4 25, 6 40, † 12, 8 06, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 a m, 12 40, 1 40, 2 40, 3 40, 4 40, 5 40, 6 40, 7 40, 8 40, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 p m. Sundays, † 1 01, 4 25, 6 40, † 12, 8 06, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 a m, 12 40, 1 40, 2 40, 3 40, 4 40, 5 40, 6 40, 7 40, 8 40, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 p m.

For New Brunswick—† 1 01, 4 25, 6 40, † 12, 8 06, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 a m, 12 40, 1 40, 2 40, 3 40, 4 40, 5 40, 6 40, 7 40, 8 40, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 p m. Sundays, † 1 01, 4 25, 6 40, † 12, 8 06, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 a m, 12 40, 1 40, 2 40, 3 40, 4 40, 5 40, 6 40, 7 40, 8 40, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 p m.

For Trenton—† 1 01, 4 25, 6 40, † 12, 8 06, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 a m, 12 40, 1 40, 2 40, 3 40, 4 40, 5 40, 6 40, 7 40, 8 40, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 p m. Sundays, † 1 01, 4 25, 6 40, † 12, 8 06, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 a m, 12 40, 1 40, 2 40, 3 40, 4 40, 5 40, 6 40, 7 40, 8 40, 9 40, 10 40, 11 40 p m.

For Lambertville, Phillipsburg, Manunka Chunk, Delaware Water Gap and Stroudsburg—8 05, 10 25 a m, 4 30 p m week-days. Sundays, 8 05, 10 25 a m, 4 30 p m.

For Long Branch, Asbury Park, Ocean Grove and points on New York and Long Branch Railroad—8 05 a m, 12 05 noon, 5 45 p m week-days. Sundays, 8 53, 10 38 a m, and 5 45 p m. Parlor Cars on all trains. For additional information, apply to Ticket Agent, Jersey City.

For Brooklyn, N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with ferry of Pennsylvania Ferries, affording direct transfer to and from Pullman cars, avoiding double carriage and journey across New York City.

Leave New York (Liberty Street) and Jersey City (Pennsylvania Railroad Station)—2 00, 7 00, 8 10, 9 00, 9 45, 10 30, 11 00 a m, 12 00 noon, 1 00, 2 00, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00, 11 30 p m. Sundays, 2 00, 7 00, 8 10, 9 00, 9 45, 10 30, 11 00 a m, 12 00 noon, 1 00, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m.

† Stops on notice to agent or on signal.

For time from Desbrosses and Cortlandt streets consult local time-tables to be procured from agents.

W. W. ATTERBURY, Gen'l Manager. J. R. WOOD, Gen'l Pass. Agent. Traffic M'g'r.

GEO. W. BOYD, General Passenger Agent.

HOW TO OBTAIN Summer Boarders!

There is in New York City one daily newspaper which has made tremendous gains in popularity during the past five years. Its net cash paid circulation for 1903 was 400,000 daily throughout every section of New York City (including Brooklyn) and suburbs, and more than that of any other recognized resort medium. This newspaper's readers are mostly people of wealth, and well-to-do, intelligent people—those who can afford and do take extended vacations. They are looking for rest in the Summer. It carries more resort advertising than any other morning newspaper, so the public naturally turns to it for information as to where to go.

An advertisement in its columns is, therefore, exceedingly valuable and sure to produce results. That paper is

The New York Times

"All the News That's Fit to Print."

Write the Classified Advertising Department for rate card, sample copy and suggestions as to the best manner of running an advertisement.

5 ½ ins in th—c 2m

AGENTS WANTED,

LIFE OF T. DEWITT TALMAGE, by his son, REV. FRANK DEWITT TALMAGE and associate editors of Christian Herald. Only book endorsed by Talmage family. Enormous profits for agents who act quickly. Outfit ten cents. Write immediately CLARK & CO., 325 S. Fourth Street, Phila., Pa. Mention this paper. 7 19

Woolston & Buckle, PAINTERS.

Wall Papers, Painters' Supplies

141-145 North avenue.

GEORGE W. DAY,

General Auctioneer.

Sales of Personal Property solicited P. O. Box 132, Dunellen, N J, or address in care of Constitutionalist Terms reasonable

Vegetable and Flower SEEDS

Reliable and Tested. Catalogue Mailed Free

WEEBER & DON

114 CHAMBERS STREET NEW YORK

Fleischmann's Yeast

Reading System

New Jersey Central.

Stations in New York foot of Liberty and South Ferry, Whitehall Streets.

TIMETABLE IN EFFECT MAY 15, 1904.

Fast Mail for the West, 2 00 a m. Sundays, 2 00 a m.

For Somerville—6 35, 7 15, 8 15, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 12 05, 1 15, 2 15, 3 15, 4 15, 5 15, 6 15, 7 15, 8 15, 9 15, 10 15, 11 15 p m. Sundays—8 15, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 12 05, 1 15, 2 15, 3 15, 4 15, 5 15, 6 15, 7 15, 8 15, 9 15, 10 15, 11 15 p m.

For Flemington—7 15, 11 00 a m, 3 15, 5 15, 6 15 p m. Sundays—8 15 a m, 5 15 p m.

For Phillipsburg—2 00, 7 15, 9 34 a m, 3 15, 5 15, 6 41 p m. Sundays—8 15 a m, 2 00, 5 15 p m.

For Bethlehem, Allentown and Mauch Chunk—2 00, 7 15, 9 34 a m, 3 15, 5 15, 6 41 p m. Sundays—8 15 a m, 2 00, 5 15 p m.

For Wilkesbarre and Scranton—2 00, 9 34 a m; 3 15 and 6 41 p m. Sundays—2 00 a m, 5 15 p m.

For Long Branch and Ocean Grove, etc.—8 15, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 4 15 p m daily (except Ocean Grove)—9 05 a m, 4 15 p m.

For Red Bank—8 15, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 4 15 p m daily. Sundays—8 15 a m, 5 15 p m.

For Lakewood and Atlantic City—(Via Lakewood) 8 15 a m, 4 15 p m daily. (Via Long Branch) 9 05 a m, 4 15 p m daily (except Lakewood only). Sundays—8 15 a m.

For Toms River and Barnegat—8 15 a m, 4 15 p m. Sundays—8 15 a m.

For Bay Head—8 15 a m, 4 15 p m.

For Spring Lake, Point Pleasant and Manasquan—8 15, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 4 15 p m daily. Sundays—8 15 a m, 5 15 p m.

For Matawan—8 15, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 4 15 p m daily. Sundays—8 15 a m, 5 15 p m.

For Keyport and Keansburg—8 15, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 4 15 p m daily. Sundays—8 15 a m, 5 15 p m.

For Freehold—8 15, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 4 15 p m daily. Sundays—8 15 a m, 5 15 p m.

For Asbury Park—8 15, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 4 15 p m daily. Sundays—8 15 a m, 5 15 p m.

For Long Branch—8 15, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 4 15 p m daily. Sundays—8 15 a m, 5 15 p m.

For Matawan—8 15, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 4 15 p m daily. Sundays—8 15 a m, 5 15 p m.

For Keyport and Keansburg—8 15, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 4 15 p m daily. Sundays—8 15 a m, 5 15 p m.

For Freehold—8 15, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 4 15 p m daily. Sundays—8 15 a m, 5 15 p m.

For Asbury Park—8 15, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 4 15 p m daily. Sundays—8 15 a m, 5 15 p m.

For Long Branch—8 15, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 4 15 p m daily. Sundays—8 15 a m, 5 15 p m.

Lehigh Valley Railroad

Time Table in Effect Nov. 29, 1903.

LEAVE SOUTH LAINFIELD, N. J.

8 05 a.m. daily (except Sunday) local to Mauch Chunk.

8 05 a.m. daily for Easton, Wilkes-Barre, Rochester, Buffalo and principal intermediate stations. Connects at Delaware Junction for Niagara Falls and Suspension Bridge.

9 34 a.m. daily local for Easton, Mauch Chunk, Hazleton, Pottsville and Shenandoah.

4 56 p. m. daily (except Sunday) "Wilkes-Barre and Scranton Express" for Stroudsburg, Delaware Water Gap and Scranton.

6 16 p. m. daily (except Sunday) local to Easton.

7 p. m. daily solid vestibule train to Buffalo, Niagara Falls and principal intermediate stations except Rochester.

FRANK ROWLEY, City Ticket Agent, 218 West Front Street, Plainfield, N. J. Telephone 118-S.

Arrival and Departure of Mails.

PLAINFIELD POSTOFFICE.

Office opens 7 a. m., closes 7 p. m.

On Saturday's close half hour later.

SOMERVILLE—BASTON.

Arrive—8.30, 8.45, 11.30 a. m.; 2.30, 6.00 5.30 p. m.

Close—7.30, a. m.; 1.30, 2.30, 6.30, 7.45 p. m.

SOMERVILLE—FLEMINGTON.

Arrive—8.4 a. m.; 1.30, 5.30 and 7.00 p. m.

Close—7.30 a. m.; 1.30 and 4.30 p. m.

SOMERVILLE—BRIDGEWATER.

Arrive—8.40 a. m.; 2.30 and 5.30 p. m.

Close—7.30 a. m.; 1.30, 5.30, 6.30 p. m.

PENNSYLVANIA—West of Easton.

Close 12.30 p. m. Mail closed

NEWARK—Direct.

Arrive—8.40 a. m.; 2.30, 5.30 p. m.

Close—7.30, 8.30 a. m., 1.30, 6.30 and 6.00 p. m.

PHILADELPHIA—Direct.

Arrive—7.25, 8.40, 11.30 a. m.; 2.30 and 7.00 p. m.

Close—7.30, 8.30 a. m.; 1.30, 6.30, 6.00, 7.45 p. m.

Through fast mail for West and South close 6.30 and 7.45 p. m.

Through fast mail for East, close 1.30 and 7.30 p. m.

WATCHUNG, WARRENVILLE & GALLIA (Mt. Bethel)

Arrive—1.30 p. m. Close—9.00 a. m

Watchung—Arrive 9.45 p. m. Close 6.30 p. m.

SUNDAY MAILS.

Office open from 9.30 to 10.30 a.m.

Mail closes at 6.15 p. m.

E. H. BIRD, P. M.

To Attend Church Conference.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, editor of the Sabbath Recorder, left yesterday for Shiloh, N. J., where he will attend the Eastern Conference of the Seventh-Day Baptists.

Painted in Church.

While attending divine services at the First Baptist church, Sunday morning, Miss Bruner, of this city had a fainting spell and in trying to leave the edifice she fell. She is now convalescing.

His Brother-in-Law Dead.

Justice of the Peace J. E. Mosher received word Monday of the death of his brother-in-law, Edward Burdick, at Westerly, R. I. His death occurred on Sunday.

Turkey, His Subject.

M. N. Kalemjeson, of Marash, Turkey, and a recent graduate of Rutgers Seminary, will speak at the Warren chapel missionary meeting Friday evening. He will talk on his native country.

It's An S. S. S.

The Ladies' Aid Society, of Monroe Avenue church will hold an S. S. S., on Tuesday night. It will be a novel affair and something different from the usual strawberry festival. An attractive programme has been arranged.

To Talk on Russia.

A. V. D. Honeyman will address the Young Men's Brotherhood of the First M. E. church, Friday night on Russia.

Miss Olive Koons, of Sandford avenue, is visiting friends at Norfolk, Va.

Mrs. Lakue, of New Brunswick, is visiting her relatives here for a few days.

H. Deibl, of Newark, is visiting Plainfield friends.

WINNING IS GETTING TO BE AN ALIS HABIT

Everett College Team Defeated for the First Time This Season.

ALMOST A SHUT OUT

FINE BATTERY WORK OF DAVIS AND FARMER.

Davis and Roberts Lead in the Batting—The College Boys Make Only Six Hits—The Summary.

Following a series of ten straight victories, the Everett College team met its first defeat on Crescent Oval, Saturday, Captain Lauder's colts winning out by a score of 8 to 2. In the ordinary course of events the visitors could have been shut out, but in the ninth inning Hollywood, in left field, made a couple of inexcusable errors and these together with a foul fly which got away from Farmer and Lauder, and an error by Davis gave the opposing team the two runs. Up to that time they drew blanks in every inning. They worked mighty hard to tally, but the sharp fielding of Alis and the steady work of Davis and Farmer held them down.

In the first two innings Alis retired with goose-eggs, but in the third and fourth innings they scored a run. In the third, Farmer got a pass to first, Griffin secured the initial bag on fielders' choice and Davis, who had his peepers on the ball, swatted the sphere for two bags, bringing Griffin home. In the next inning, McGeoy and Mehler each got a single and the centre fielder scored.

The fifth was a lucky inning for Alis for they netted three runs, Roberts, Griffin and Davis, each scoring. Roberts slashed the leather for two bags and Davis repeated the dose, while Farmer again secured a free pass, although he was caught trying to steal second. In the remaining three innings that Alis went to the bat, they added three runs to the score, making the total eight.

Davis fanned eleven of the opposing batmen and he only allowed six safeties throughout the game. Clinton pitched well. He was touched for eight safeties and had a streak of three strike outs.

Alis played fast snappy ball, the coaching of Lauder and Mehler being a feature, and they held the interest of the big crowd until the end of the contest. Lauder was troubled some what by his sprained ankle and in the eighth inning he retired in favor of Devens, who has been on the bench. Although Devens had little to do he handled himself well and gives promise of being a fixture on the team for a fielding position. The fielding work of McGeoy was, as usual, a feature. Nothing gets away from him and he caught two difficult flies in clever fashion. Another feature was the base running of "Kid" Roberts. Farmer was invincible, as usual, and he held "Lefty" to perfection, not making a single misplay.

This is the detail score of the game:

Alis.	R	1B	PO	A	E
Roberts, ss	2	2	2	4	0
Lauder, 3b	0	0	1	1	0
Crean, 3b	0	0	1	0	0
McGeoy, cf	1	1	3	0	0
Mehler, 1b	1	1	8	0	0
Hollywood, lf	1	1	2	0	2
Farmer, c	0	0	11	1	0
Griffin, rf	2	0	0	0	0
Davis, p	1	3	0	3	1
Devens, 3b	0	0	0	0	1
	8	8	27	9	4

Everett College.	R	1B	PO	A	E
Thompson, 3b	1	2	1	3	1
Kavanaugh, 2b	0	1	2	3	0
McQuaide, lf	0	2	2	0	0
Kirk, cf	0	0	1	0	0
Danay, 1b	0	0	10	0	1
Gimbernat, ss	0	0	4	2	2
G. Ryan, c	0	1	4	1	0
Clinton, p	1	0	1	1	0
W. Ryan, rf	0	0	1	0	0
	2	6	24	10	6

Score by innings:

Alis ..... 0 0 1 1 3 1 1 1 x— 8
Everett College. 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 2— 2

Earned runs — Griffin, McGeoy, Davis. Two-base hits — Davis, 2; Roberts. First on balls—Off Davis, 3, off Clinton, 2. Struck out—By Davis, 11; by Clinton, 3. Left on base —Alis, 5; Everett College, 9. Double plays—Gimbernat unassisted. Wild pitch — Clinton. Passed balls — G. Ryan, 2. First base on errors—Alis, 5; Everett College, 2. Time of game —1:40 Umpire—Mertty.

Charles Engelhart, of Roselle, has returned home after a visit to Alfred Clement, of Central avenue.

Mrs. James Evans and Miss Clara Gilbert, of Easton, are visiting Miss Daisy Snyder, of West Front street, for a few days.

Edward Koechlein, of the borough, will leave for Niagara Falls Saturday morning. He will spend several days there.

GOLF ENTHUSIASTS SPORT ON THE LINKS

Chas. B. Morse Scores First Points for Park Golf Club Cup.

CONTEST AT HILLSIDE

JULIUS E. ERICKSON WINS FIRST HONORS FOR GOLF COMMITTEE CUP.

Large List of Entries—The Kickers' Handicap at Westfield Golf Club—Individual Scores Posted.

The delightful weather on Saturday attracted a goodly number of golf enthusiasts to the Park Golf Club, where the weekly competition for the President's and Park Golf Club cups was the event of the day. Although the season has just opened on this course, there is already spirited rivalry for honors and good scores were posted for the two trophies. The course is in the best of condition, making it a real pleasure to play.

H. C. Wells won first honors for the President's cup, with a net score of 89, while George T. Rogers with a net score of 88 and T. U. Dudley, Jr., with an 89 net, finished second and third. For the other cup, scratch competition, Charles B. Morse carried off first honors, with a gross score of 104. Rev. J. O. McKelvey finished second with a score of 105, while the remaining point was won by Samuel Townsend.

These scores were posted for the two cups:

H. C. Wells 112, 20—92; George T. Rogers, 113, 23—88; T. U. Dudley, Jr., 108, 19—89; Charles B. Morse, 104, 14—90; Samuel Townsend, 106, 14—92; Rev. J. O. McKelvey, 105, 10—95; Frank Rogers, 117, 21—96; J. L. Watson, 127, 26—101; Charles A. Reed, 108, 4—104.

The interest in the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club is steadily increasing as was shown in the large field of players taking part in the competition on Saturday. Conditions were perfect, the weather and course being all that one could desire. Julius E. Erickson won the honors for the cup with a net score of 78, while C. B. Morgan, who leads in the competition, finished second with a net score of 79 and Howard Hunstington was given the remaining point with an 80 net.

These scores were posted for the cup:

Julius E. Erickson, 89, 11—78: C. B. Morgan, 88, 9—79; Howard Huntington, 97, 17—80; George T. Van-Boskerck, 91, 9—82; H. F. Fox, 102, 20—82; H. C. Munger, 97, 15—82; E. E. Iremonger, 98, 16—82; H. Reeve Stockton, 86, 4—82; S. D. Lounsbery, 89, 6—83; H. D. Hibbard, 90, 7—83; Roger F. Murray, 90, 6—84; Walter Peterson, 93, 6—86; G. F. Earl, 111, 25—86; C. W. Abbott, 91, 4—87; E. B. Stedman, 103, 15—88.

The event at the Westfield Golf Club on Saturday was a kickers' handicap. M. Whitlatch was the winner with a net score of 77. The numbers selected were 74 and 83 and Mr. Whitlatch picked his score from a bunch of numbers thrown in a hat. The best gross score for the day, 90, was posted by R. I. Townley.

These scores were posted in the competition:

L. D. Compson, 109, 35—74; R. I. Townley, 90, 15—75; J. B. Wilson, 111, 35—76; M. Whitlatch, 92, 15—77; C. R. Worth, 104, 25—79; C. M. Trexler, 114, 30—79; Wm. S. Taylor, 110, 30—80; J. A. Worth, 100, 19—81; R. H. Sterr, 121, 40—81; S. A. Trevett, 118, 35—83; H. Shaver, 143, 53—90; H. W. Gledwin, 129, 35—94; F. B. Simpson, 125, 25—100.

ATTEMPTED TO KILL HIMSELF

ADOLPH BRANDT SWALLOWED PARIS GREEN AT FANWOOD.

Adolph Brandt, a Scotch Plains gardener, made an unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide by swallowing Paris green Saturday afternoon.

Brandt purchased the stuff at Sheelen Bros.' store in Fanwood. He took it into a back room and emptied the packet in his mouth.

Dr. Westcott was summoned and he administered antidotes and saved the would-be suicide's life. Brandt would give no reason for his act.

West End Terrors Won.

The West End Terrors defeated the Woodsides, of South Plainfield, Saturday afternoon, on the former's grounds, by the score of 9-8, in a ten-inning battle.

Y. M. C. A. Wins in Tenth.

Y. M. C. A. won another victory Saturday afternoon, in a spirited ten-inning game with the Garwood Field Club, at Garwood. The score was 8 to 6.

P. H. S. Defeats South Orange.

In a hard fought game the Plainfield High School nine defeated the South Orange High School on the latter's grounds Saturday by a score of 3 to 2.

MR. MEEKER'S WORK AT ST. LOUIS FAIR

Plainfielder Superintends the Construction of Roads That Have Made State Famous.

NEW JERSEY'S EXHIBITS

ITS DISPLAY IN EDUCATIONAL LINE SURPASSES ALL OTHERS.

In the Fish and Game Department, This State Excels—What He Saw During His Stay at the Exposition.

New Jersey's State Supervisor of Roads, Robert A. Meeker, of this city, has returned from the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, at St. Louis, bringing with him an enthusiastic story of the National and International Good Roads Convention and a feeling of great pride in being a citizen of New Jersey. His pride arises from the fact that Jersey's exhibits in various departments excel those of her sister States by a great measure and have won for her high encomiums. In particular he was pleased with the position that he found New Jersey to hold so far as good roads are concerned.

Mr. Meeker went to St. Louis on April 12 to supervise the building of various types of roads in connection with the model city at the Fair. It was his task to prepare specimens of roads, for which New Jersey is famed. Under his direction, fine Telford roads, such as are to be seen around Newark, macadam roads, for which the entire central and Northern section of the State is noted; gravel roads, and finally oyster shell roads, noticable in the Southern section of the State. In the central part of the city he built a Jersey trap rock road, 100 feet long and forty-two feet wide.

Not only did the members of the International Roads Convention desire to learn something about the methods employed in Jersey in the building of roads but there was a general eagerness to see the various types of road. Before the convention began its sessions on May 16 all the Jersey roads were ready for inspection and Mr. Meeker's task was finished.

In referring to his visit to the Exposition, Mr. Meeker told a reporter for The Daily Press that the New Jersey exhibit in the public education display surpasses any other to be found in the Palace of Education and Social Economy and that this fact is generally admitted by the educators who have visited the place. "It is far beyond what is shown by Massachusetts, New York or Pennsylvania, and the people of those States realize it," declared the Plainfielder. The most conspicuous spot in the educational department has been given Plainfield, said Mr. Meeker, who declared that the work of the Plainfield pupils is of the highest order shown.

Another attraction in which Jersey excels, according to Mr. Meeker, is to be found in the Forestry, Fish and Game building. From a purely scientific standpoint, says he, this State's exhibit is unequalled.

As for the New Jersey State building, Mr. Meeker considers it the most homelike and comfortable of any to be found on the grounds. "Others are more stately but none are so attractive," says he. The rates for board and lodging, he declares, have been grossly exaggerated. During the first week of the Fair fancy prices were asked but the landlords and boarding house keepers soon realized that they would loose money and lost no time in conforming to regular rates, which the Plainfielder declares generally prevail at present.

W. N. CROMWELL'S LIFE.

Celebrated Lawyer Whose Father's Body is in Local Cemetery.

A story on the life of William Nelson Cromwell, of New York, who has just returned from Paris, where he completed the sale of the Panama Canal to the United States, was contained in The New York World on Sunday. Aside from his other claims to celebrity, he is credited with the distinction of having received the largest single fee paid for legal services, $1,000,000. Mr. Cromwell, as well as his father, who was an officer in the Civil War, were residents of this city. The father, who died many years ago, was buried in the Baptist cemetery in Plainfield avenue.

Dislocated His Elbow.

While playing about a pile of lumber near his home Saturday afternoon, Edward F. Glaentzer, the young son of Charles Glaentzer, the letter-carrier, fell and dislocated his left arm at the elbow. Dr. Curry was called and put the injured limb in place.

A Memorial Day Address.

Rev. Frank Fletcher, of the Baptist church, New Market, will deliver an address appropriate to Memorial Day at the Seventh-Day Baptist church on Saturday morning.

C. H. YATMAN TELLS OF WORLD-WIDE TRIPS

Evangelist, Whose Life is Consecrated to the Unconverted, Recounts Some Incidents.

GRAPHIC DESCRIPTIONS

LARGE AUDIENCE AT THE MONROE AVENUE M. E. CHURCH.

Displays An American Flag He Carried Around the Globe—His Labors in Hawaii and South Africa.

Numerous anecdotes of evangelistic mission work were told by the Rev. C. H. Yatman, of Ocean Grove, in his missionary talk at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church Monday. His recollections were so graphically put that the scenes described could fairly be seen by his hearers and the human interest present in all his stories held their attention throughout.

Mr. Yatman's two tours around the world were, he said, the result of his determination, taken when converted, to preach to all the heathen races. His account of the saving and begging policy followed by him in order to raise the funds to start with were so quaintly told as to cause laughter at times at his witty remarks.

The same American flag, carried around the world by him, was spread over the desk amid applause from the congregation. On shipboard Mr. Yatman always has service twice a day, preaching, as he says, in the morning to the "swells" and in the evening to the "smells." At Honolulu he first preached by means of an interpreter as he was ignorant of the language.

Preaching through an interpreter is more satisfactory to him than direct preaching because no matter what flowery terms are used by the preacher, the interpreter is sure to present the translation in the simplest form.

After successful work in the Hawaiian Islands, he left for New Zealand. His friends in Honolulu garlanded him with flowers on his departure.

At Sydney where he went after preaching to the lepers of Hawaii and vast crowds of British colonials in Auckland, 1,000 men were converted by him at one meeting. The diamond fields at Kimberly were also visited on this tour and even among the Kaffirs many converts were made. Brief reference was made also to his second tour and the hope expressed that he would be enabled to make a third trip and during that trip he hopes to repeat the Pentecost by converting 5,000 souls in one city in one day.

In the first tour, Mr. Yatman covered 40,000 miles; 53,000 miles on the second, and if he makes the third he intends to make it between 60,000 and 65,000 miles long. During the opening service of song, J. Edmund Skiff sang, accompanied by May V. Whitney the pianist.

ANDERSON CASE NOT SETTLED

ESTATE TIED UP PENDING RESULT OF PRESENT LITIGATION.

Contrary to reports the much-talked of Anderson case relative to the Catholic Benevolent Legion insurance money, claimed under the benefit certificate of the late James A. Anderson, is not settled, neither have the Anderson heirs been awarded the money. The facts of the case are that the Anderson's disputed the right of John P. Owens, Esq., as substituted administrator of Rosanna Anderson, who was wife of and beneficiary of James A. Anderson, to receive the money.

John C. Anderson, administrator of James A. Anderson, obtained an order from Chancellor Magie, April 19 last, restraining the Supreme Council and the Plainfield Council, Catholic Benevolent Legion, from paying the money to Mr. Owens as such administrator, although he, according to the laws of the Legion, is entitled to receive the money and distribute it to the heirs at law of the deceased beneficiary, Rosanna Anderson, who are Mrs. Bridget Burke and Julia Burke, of this city.

Argument on the restraining order was set down for May 3 and adjourned to May 31, so there has been no decision rendered in the case regarding the disposition of the insurance money.

Mrs. Truell, of Central avenue, has returned from a stay with friends in Philadelphia.

Miss Nellie Schutt, of New York, who has been visiting friends here, has returned home.

Lester B. Walton, Jr., of Westervelt avenue, entertained his parents from New York over Sunday.

Miss Julia E. Shark, of New York, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. John Manley, of Park avenue.

PIANO MAKERS GRIND OUT TUNE OF VICTORY

Denman's Colts Are Swallowed Up, and the Aeolian Bunch Are the Guilty Ones.

WALLER AN EASY ONE

A RESULT OF THE GAME READS "SIX TO THREE."

Westfield's Infield Poor—Doesher, Alias Wallace, Hands Out the Real Article to the Batsmen—The Details.

With Doesher, of the Brooklyn Nationals, behind the machine gun, and a big hole that yawned invitingly for the sacrificial victims, the Aeolians descended on Westfield Saturday afternoon. And the Colts dropped into the hole with a dull thud that jarred C. Denman's smile clean off into the refrigerator. He doesn't know yet whether they were pushed or fell in, but they haven't come out yet, and don't quite know when they will. 10 to 3. That was it. And the making thereof was full of dull anguish and self-cussing for the Westfield pets.

Doesher—he called himself Wallace, but a National League pitcher under any other name is just as superslendiferous—was trouble enough for Westfield, but there was a nice mess of home-made errors and foolishness to increase the list of dead and wounded.

Everywhere and in everything, pretty nearly, Westfield was punk—just punk. Waller pitched like a man with a bad case of stage fright. There were times when he seemed to be in form and there were other more numerous transpirations when he was so far from form that he couldn't have fanned a ten-year-old with a nickel bat. The Westfield infield was so bad that the Aeolians looked cruel and unfeeling when they loped around the bases. Jacklitch, Tommy Barry, Leonard and even the much-hailed Burk did monkey tricks that made the game one grand sweet stick of molasses candy for the enemy. Jacklitch, who vaunts himself as a brother to big leaguers—Brooklyn Nationals are supposed to be responsible for him—played like a gingerbread elephant, and Burk got in his own way so much that he gave Aeolians more chances than they needed and a severe pain in the midriff to the Westfield fanatics.

Just one redeeming thing the Westfields produced. In the sixth inning they tied the score, 3-3. Then they got mad at themselves for being good and allowed Aeolian to yank three more runs in the seventh. And then they quit scoring and settled down to help the self-playing pianos grind out a paean of victory.

Line-up:

Westfield—Burk, c; Waller, p; Jacklitch, 1b; Hickman, 2b; Leonard, ss; Barry, 3b; Goldberg, lf; Mallen, cf; Connolly, rf.

Aeolians—W. Poole, c; Wallace, p; A. Poole, 1b; Flynn, 2b; Supple, ss; Gray, 3b; Neaby, lf; Goldstein, cf; Alberts, rf.

	R	H	E
Aeolian	0 2 0 0 1 0 3 3 1—10	12	3
Westfield...	0 0 0 0 3 0 0 0 0— 3	8	6

TOMBSTONE FELL ON HER.

Little Anna Carson's Leg Injured by Accident in Cemetery.

Anna Carson, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Carson, of Belmont avenue, is detained at home with an injury, the result of a peculiar accident. The little girl, with some relatives, visited the North Plainfield Cemetery a few days ago and while there she accidentally touched a tomb-stone. The stone was not firmly set and it fell, striking the child on the leg. She was hurriedly taken home and a physician summoned. At first it was thought the leg was broken, but an examination disclosed a bad sprain. She will be detained at home some time.

Mrs. Hepner, of 222 East Front street, is spending several days in Bensonhurst.

George Marsh, of Willow avenue, who has been critically ill, is now convalescing.

Emil Rasmove, of Warrenville, is home from a three weeks' stay at the St. Louis Fair.

Mrs. Wilbur J. Henderson, of West Front street, is greatly improved from her recent critical illness.

The Misses Annie Hogan and Katie and Mary Meehan visited Mrs. Austin, of Somerville, on Sunday.

Joseph Pike, a former resident of this city, but now of New York, has been visiting friends here.

Miss Dorothy Clement, of Central avenue, has returned from a stay with friends in Bay Ridge, S. I.

George W. Abbott and family, who spent several months at Truell Court, are now living near High Bridge.

ALL PLANS COMPLETE TO HONOR SOLDIER-DEAD

Veterans of Civil War; Co. E, Second Regiment, and High School Cadets in Parade.

EXERCISES IN SCHOOLS

REV. DR. J. A. CHAMBLISS ORATOR OF THE DAY.

To Decorate Graves of Those Who Fought for Union's Preservation —Rev. L. E. Livermore to Officiate at Service Sunday Night.

Plans for the observance of Memorial Day by Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., have been completed and within a few days official orders will be issued by Commander W. C. Smith and Adjutant Charles B. Stephens. The Post will be assisted by Co. K and the High School cadets in the Memorial Day parade, these organizations having accepted the invitation extended by the Post.

Members of the Post will assemble at headquarters, G. A. R. Hall, Friday morning, at 8 o'clock in full uniform for the purpose of visiting the various public schools in this vicinity where exercises will be held. The schools to be visited and those in charge of the details are:

Plainfield High School, 8:20, W. D. W. Miller; Bryant, 9, M. C. Dobbins; Franklin, 10, W. W. Coriell; Irving, 11, H. C. Cerns; Whittier, 12 noon, T. C. Doane; Washington, 2, J. F. Berg; Parochial, 3, M. C. Dobbins; North Plainfield High School, 12:20, W. W. Coriell; Somerset street school, 2, William Hand; Watchung, 2, Joseph Begert; Scotch Plains, 2, W. D. Johnston and Rev. Mr. Parks; Westfield, 2, S. W. Reese.

On Sunday night, the Post will assemble at headquarters at 7:30 for the purpose of attending divine services at Reform Hall. The address will be delivered by Rev. L. E. Livermore, of New Market. On Memorial Day morning at 7:30 for the purpose of visiting the various cemeteries and decorating the soldiers' graves. These members will be in charge of the details visiting the cemeteries named:

Hillside Cemetery, Andrew Cox; Friends, William Day; St. Mary's, John Finley; Scotch Plains, Charles R. Stephens; Westfield, S. W. Reese; South Plainfield, R. D. Manning; New Market, John Wagner; Watchung, J. W. Coddington.

The commanders will report again at headquarters at 9:30 for the purpose of taking part in the parade. William Hand will be marshal of the day. The line will form on East Front street, right resting on Watchung avenue. The parade will start at 10 o'clock sharp and this will be the line of march: East Front street to Elm place, to Chatham street, to North Plainfield cemetery, where graves will be decorated and exercises held; to Watchung avenue, to Jackson avenue, to Somerset street, to Plainfield avenue, to Evergreen cemetery, where graves will be decorated and exercises held; to West Fifth street, to Park avenue, to Front street and dismiss.

Re-assembling at 1:45 in the afternoon the comrades will proceed to Reform Hall, where appropriate exercises will be held including a musical programme, an address by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church; patriotic songs by a children's chorus and exercises by the comrades decorating the grave of the unknown dead.

The Woman's Relief Corps will also assist in these exercises and through this organization flowers will be collected for decorating graves.

Competitions at Park Golf Club.

Although the weekly competitions for the President's and golf club cups at the Park Golf Club have been going but two weeks there is already great rivalry. This is the standing by points for the president's cup: Arthur Peck, 3; H. C. Wells, 3; Geo. T. Rogers, 2; J. O. McKelvey, 1½; J. H. Howell, 1½; T. U. Dudley, 1. This is the standing by points for the Park Golf Club cup: Arthur Peck, 3; Charles B. Morse, 3; J. O. McKelvey, 3; Charles A. Reed, 2; Samuel Townsend, 1.

DIED.

MADEN—In this city, Thursday, May 12, 1904, Henrietta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher C. Maden, aged 13 years, 7 months and 3 days.

BARNES—On Thursday morning, May 12, 1904, in her 83d year, at her late residence, 107 Hewes street, Brooklyn, Mary Elizabeth Jennings, widow of Henry Barnes, and mother of Mrs. H. K. Carroll.

Notice of Copyright Renewal, Class C, XXC No. 6344. Library of Congress, to wit: Be it remembered that on January 4, 1904, Mary Runyon Lowry, of Plainfield, New Jersey, hath deposited in this office, the titles of two musical compositions by Robert Lowry, viz: "Morning Refrains," and "The Shadow's Song," in accordance with the laws of the United States respecting copyrights. Herbert Putnam, Librarian of Congress, by Thorvald Solberg, Register of Copyrights. 1264

Sanitary Plumbing

Brick and Portable Furnaces
Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing,
Etc., Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Members Association of New York City, I employ none but first class mechanics and non-union ones. I believe in every man running his own business, at all times and in all cases.

D. W. LITTELL,

No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Handbook on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

NEW IN EVERY DETAIL

My new barber shop at

143 NORTH AVE.

is now open ready for business.
All the latest appointments in the tonsorial line.

EDWIN B. MAYNARD.

CARNEY BROS.,

MADISON AVENUE.

Between Front and Second streets.

Tinners,
Plumbers
Gas Fitters,

Grates and bricks for all kinds of stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your tinware mending to us. The best tinners, the best plumbers, and the best gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction. Keys of all kinds are made here. Tinware made to order. Ranges, brick and portable furnaces. Sanitary plumbing.

DIME

Savings Institution,

Of Plainfield, N. J.,

Is now receiving deposits with interest, allowed on all sums from $5 to $3,000.

J. Frank Hubbard, President.
Wm. F. Arnold, } Vice-Pres
Jeremiah Manning, }
J. C. Pope, Sec'y and Treas.

Money deposited on or before January tenth will draw interest from the first.

Guaranteed Salary $900 YEARLY.

Men and women of good address to represent us, some to travel appointing agents others for local work looking after our interests. $900 salary guaranteed yearly; extra commissions and expenses, rapid advancement, old established house. Grand chance for earnest man or woman to secure pleasant permanent position. Liberal income and future. New, brilliant lines. Write at once.

STAFFORD PRESS,
23 Church St., New Haven, Conn

W. R. CODINGTON,

Counsellor-at-Law

Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-chancery, Notary Public. Offices Corner of Park avenue and Second street.

ALBERT HEDDEN

Livery & Boarding Stables

FOURTH ST.,

between Watchung and Park avenues, First-class Livery. Horses boarded by week or month. Telephone call No. 114.

Wm. A. Woodruff

Fire and Life

INSURANCE AGENT,

OFFICE,

corner Front St. and Park Avenue, Plainfield, N. J.

INTERNATIONAL MELANGE LIKE A COMIC OPERA

A Weber-Fieldsan Display in Song and Dance, With Burlesque Cut Out.

A CASINO ATTRACTION

THE BOYS FROM OSHKOSH FURNISH MUSICAL MIRTH IN ABUNDANCE.

Hillside's Pot Pourri of Sketches—"S. H. O." Sign Displayed Before Curtain Rings Up—The Programme in Detail.

No better entertainment was ever offered to the Plainfield public than the one produced by the Hillside Club at the Casino Thursday under the title of "An International Melange of Song and Dance on the 'Hillside;' A May Evening at the Club, or Our Members at Play; assisted by the Oshkosh Glee Club." It was all that a production with a name as long as that should have been, and a little more. An audience that completely filled the chairs was present, and everyone in it was enthusiastic in applause at every stage of the programme.

In staging and rendition the entertainment is fully on a par with any professional show of similar character that has ever been in this city. Made up of songs and choruses rendered in costume, the "International Melange, etc.," was very nearly a comic opera. It had no plot, to be sure, but neither has most of the modern comic operas, and only one or two of the latter running now can actually be rated as better as an entertainment. And every one of the forty members of the troupe is an amateur and a Plainfielder.

The programme was as tuneful a "melange" as anyone in the audience could hope to hear; and the programme as a whole produced a changing spectacle of rare beauty.

"International" was the proper term to apply to it. Every nation of the comic weeklies was represented, including Africa and Italy.

The initial number was a medley of college songs by the Oshkosh Glee Club. The club looked like its name. The members came on with dress suit make-ups that would have justified their entrance if they hadn't sung a line. Some of them wore pink ties, some had belts prominently displayed beneath low-cut waistcoats, and some of them had four-in-hand ties tucked carefully in their shirt bosoms. The club, otherwise known as the chorus on the programme, was made up of: G. W. Abbott, 41, Barlow, D. C. Bartlett, H. M. Burt, Leigh Cain, Calkins, G. Dupee, C. Dupee, J. Dodd, C. T. Elliott, F. W. Goddard, H. L. Hall, F. M. Honeyman, H. B. Lovell, C. W. McGee, H. L. McGee, A. Masters, A. Peck, W. R. Rushmore, G. Schoonmaker, L. S. Treadwell, W. Wadsworth, L. A. Williams, Jr., A. W. West.

Five other numbers constituted the first part: Chins, by Miss Madeleine Uhler and D. C. Bartlett; New York, The City, by Willard Wadsworth, supported by Messrs. Honeyman, Calkins, Clifford McGee, Masters and Treadwell; Indians, by the Misses Mary A. Reinhart, Cornelia L. Hyatt, Ruth Thies, Marjory Fleming and Messrs. Burt, West, Williams and Peterkin; Italy, by Miss Mary Hubbell and Messrs. Schoonmaker, Abbott and Honeyman; Germany, by James Dodd and Messrs. Bartlett, Harry McGee, Peck, Lovell, Elliott and Abbott. Criticism of any one of the singers and choruses is out of the question, and praise in proper proportion to their performance would take up altogether too much space.

At the close of the first part an unexpected bit of humor was interjected in the form of a pantomime not on the programme. H. W. Burt, dressed as Carrie the Smasher, descended on two immaculately clad young men at a cafe table. Victory was with Carrie, and the young men got no sympathy from the audience.

Part II was made up of six tableaux, illustrating many familiar advertising posters. They were as follows: Jap Rose Soap, Miss Fleming and Miss Bagsley; Uneeda Biscuit, Miss Hyatt; Miss Phoebe Snow of Buffalo, the D. L. & W. girl, Mrs. C. W. McGee; Gold Dust Twins, by two little colored boys, down on the programme as Worthington Whitehouse and Norman Gould—names suspected of being assumed; Pearline—"Let the Man Do the Washing"—Evarts Tracy; and Whisky of his Forefathers, M. J. Dumont, H. R. Stockton, Arthur Murphy and James Middleditch. The tableaux were remarkably well staged and posed.

Part III opened with "Africa," in which the entire chorus supported Clifford McGee, and Miss Reinhart and Harold Hall in ragtime songs. Scotland, with Mrs. Joseph Sheltzberger and Messrs. Honeyman, Wadsworth, Watkins and Elliott; Little Italy, with Miss Uhler and Messrs. Dodd and Rushmore; Ireland, with Harold Hall, and Messrs. C. Dupee, Treadwell, G. Dupee, Schoonmaker, Goddard and West, followed in the order named.

Miss Uhler and Messrs. Dodd and Hall made the audience sit up with verses on the unhappiness growing out of the recent defeat of the Sunday golf proposition at the club.

America, the final number, brought all the members of the troup, in the costume of their repsective parts, on the stage for a medley of patriotic songs. The word of comment on the first part applies to every number of the third. As a whole, the show is what many of the audience enthusiastically termed it at the final closing of the curtains, "the best ever produced in this city."

All the music used in the "melange" was arranged by Joseph Sbeilabarger, and he was before the stage last night conducting the singing like a practice and graceful leader. H. W. Burt was the director of dances and Henry L. Hall and George B. Ring managed the staging and the tableaux settings. F. W. Goddard was master of the dressing room.

There was a full orchestra, under the direction of W. A. MacClymont, of this city. The overture and numbers between the parts were Mr. MacClymont's own waltzes, composed for the occasion.

The following corps of ushers was in attendance: Howard Huntington, T. D. Wilson, Arthur Otterson, George VonBoskerck, O. G. Waring, L. E. Waring. Although his name does not appear on the programme—he probably cut it out himself—L. G. Timpson should be credited with a very large share of the compliments that are being showered on the management. He worked hard and appreciably for the success of the entertainment.

DRAKE WON'T BE FORCED OUT

FOUNDER OF LINCOLN TO FIGHT POLHEMUS' MOVE.

Silas Dewey Drake declares that the application of Peter G. Polhemus, of New Brunswick, for a receivership for the Prudential Realty Company, the owners of Lincoln Park, is an attempt to freeze him out of the corporation. Mr. Drake says he will fight any attempt to force him from the management of the town he founded.

According to Mr. Drake, Mr. Polhemus offered to finance the realty company if the people he designated were placed in control. On March 1, Mr. Drake claims, he and Mr. Polhemus entered into such an agreement. In consideration of the election of Mattias Bergen as president, Mr. Polhemus as treasurer and George Bodine, of New Brunswick, as secretary, and the delivery of 105 shares of stock to Mr. Polhemus in addition to the ninety-five shares he already held, Mr. Polhemus bound himself to assume the financing of the corporation. Mr. Drake says he did all these things.

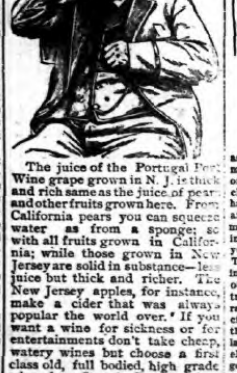
Mr. and Mrs. William Smith, of this city, have returned from a visit with Raritan friends.

ALFRED SPEER,

THE ORIGINAL

Port Grape Wine Producer in America.

The first native wine sold and used in San Francisco and Sacramento was from Speer's Passaic, N. J., vineyards, was shipped around Cape Horn before there was any railroad to California, and are now being used by physicians and first families there as the richest and best wine to be had



The juice of the Portugal Port Wine grapes grown in N. J. is thick and rich same as the juice of pear and other fruits grown here. From California pears you can squeeze water as from a sponge; so with all fruits grown in California; while those grown in New Jersey are solid in substance—less juice but thick and richer. The New Jersey apples for instance, make a cider that was always popular the world over. If you want a wine for sickness or for entertainments don't take cheap, watery wines but choose a first class old, full bodied, high grade wine from Speer's Passaic vineyards. Sold by Druggists.

BRUIN MEETS A BUZZ-SAW.

And, of Course, Comes Out Minus Several Indispensable Parts of His Big Anatomy.

A black bear invaded J. F. Henry & Son's big sawmill at Lincoln, N. H., the other afternoon and tried to eat up the crew, but came to grief when it started to knock out one of the big saws.

The bear, a huge one, but lean from its winter fast, came down the woods on the back side of the mill pond and crossed over on the boom of logs. The first seen of the brute was when he was coming up with a yell that could be heard for half a mile. The man on the slip threw up both hands and dived off into the stream. Half a dozen men poked out their heads to see what the row was about. They got under cover as soon as they could.

The men started back into the mill, the bear after them. Up came the bear, and the first man he set his eyes on was the marker, who had been busy at his work and had not had time to run. The bear jumped on the carriage that moves the log up to the band saw and at the same time the marker gave a jump and disappeared.

BEAR MADE A LURCH.

The sawyer, who had not taken alarm, probably because the rip of the saw had drowned all other noise, was the only man left in view. Now the bear, which had crawled upon the log, made a lurch for him. The motion of the log evidently deceived the bear, for he lurched up against the big band-saw with a violence that nearly broke it in two. A rip in his shoulder only served to make the bear more desperate. Another big rip by the saw teeth practically put his right paw out of commission, and by that time the crew had rallied and knocked him out with canthooks and sledgehammers.

The bear was one of the largest ever seen in this vicinity, measuring fully five feet and weighing 450 pounds. The skin will be patched and mounted and will be sent on to the St. Louis fair to be put on exhibition in the New Hampshire building.

GIRLS DISPLAY READY WIT.

Adopt Unique and Effective Method of Winning a Contest with a Gang of Men.

By the quick wit and courage of two pretty girls the telephone company was prevented from erecting a pole in the alley in the rear of 703 Kenyon avenue, Cincinnati. Mrs. L. H. Reed owns the place, and, after workmen had dug a deep hole in the "shot gravel," it seemed to undermine the foundation of her house and she complained to City Electrician Weisaleder and Building Inspector Tooker. These officials hurried to the place, but declared the foundation would not be affected after the pole was in the ground. They left and the workmen continued digging. As soon as the hole was completed, one of the men jumped in, as he feared the woman or her daughter might throw an obstacle into it. To his surprise the two handsome girls sprang into the hole after him, and refused to get out. The man climbed out and left the girls holding the fort. Only the heads of the young ladies were above the ground. The other men had the pole ready to put into the hole, but could not do so without injuring the girls. The scene attracted a large crowd, and excitement ran high. At this juncture City Electrician Weisleder came back and, sizing the situation, advised the foreman of the laborers to give it up and erect the pole elsewhere. The plucky girls refused to get out of the hole until assured that it would be filled up with dirt at once, which was done, amid the cheers of the amused spectators.

GIRLS HELD THE FORT.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

Public Library Notes.

American Series, No. 1.

With this begins an American series of Public Library Bulletins. Others will follow, from time to time, on the Revolution, famous Americans, American institutions, stories of American life, etc.

Only the best books will be noted.

By reading one or two books on each list, the reader will obtain a clear idea of the history and institutions of this country.

Channing, E., and Hart, A. B. Guide to the study of American history. "A most useful manual for readers, students and teachers. Especially helpful for those engaged in private reading."

Channing, E. Students' history of the United States. "Decidedly the best one volume American history yet published."

Fiske, John. History of the United States. "The book was written by a master of clear and forcible English. It seems to be very free from errors of statement, and the few which may be noted are generally not important."

Hart, A. B. Source-book of American history: edited for schools and readers. "Gives extracts from books, pamphlets and periodicals, extending from the time of Columbus to the war with Spain. They are well chosen and make a most useful and interesting book."

Higginson, T. W. Young folks' history of the United States. "Essentially a book which will arouse an interest in the reading of other histories."

Johnston, A. History of the United States: with an introductory history of the discovery and English colonization of North America. "Shows a profound sense for the really vital events in the life of the nation and is the work of a scientific historian of exceptional ability and unusual judgment."

Lodge, H. C., and Roosevelt, T. Hero tales from American history. "Narrative sketches of the more dramatic scenes of American history, including accounts of Boone, Battle of Trenton and charge at Gettysburg, etc."

McLaughlin, A. C. History of the American nation. "A welcome-edition to our one-volume histories. Here we have 300 pages, compact of sound scholarship and accurate statement, that make a distinct addition to our briefer historical narratives."

Macdonald, S. History of American privateers. "Intimate and vivid accounts of the fitting out of the vessels, the incidents of their voyages, and the thrilling adventures of the brave sailors who manned them."

Maclay, E. S. History of the United States navy, 2v. "Taken as a whole, this history of the navy is the best in print."

McMaster, J. B. History of the people of the United States from the Revolution to the Civil war, 5v. "Special stress is laid upon social and economic conditions. The style is attractive, and the author has industriously searched contemporary records, especially newspapers, journals and books of travel, for his material. Within its field it has no equal."

Scudder, H. E. History of the United States. "The author does not isolate the United States, but attempts to connect the history of this country with the contemporary changes taking place in Europe. The relationship, historical stress is laid upon social and economic conditions. The style is attractive, and the author has industriously searched contemporary records, especially newspapers, journals and books of travel, for his material. Within its field it has no equal."

Smith, Goldwin. The United States: an outline of political history, 1492-1871. "A brilliantly written sketch, well proportioned and marvellously condensed. The author's standpoint, while critical, is distinctly sympathetic."

Model Directory for Plainfield.

The new directory is nearly ready for publication. Manager Wand says it will be the finest ever issued here. The New York directory publishers and workers recognize the Plainfield publication as the best suburban directory in the country. It is expected that the book will be published about July 1, like all city directories. Any resident who has an idea that his or her name is not down in Mr. Wand's book correctly can set him right by sending a note to 101 West Front street.

Wandered From Home.

The three-year-old daughter of John Richardson, of Arlington avenue, wandered from home about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and was found two hours later by Special Officer Babbish, who took her home. When found she had reached the Somerset street bridge.

Miss Nellie Schutt, of New York, is visiting Miss Elsie Smith, of Westervelt avenue.

RAN HOME IN DESHABILLE.

Yale Student Lost Clothes in a Poker Game and Appeared on Street in Pajamas.

A Yale "freshie" dashing home across York street to Pierson hall, at New Haven, Conn., with an electric light burning bright on a corner two rods away, a policeman standing under the light and men and women pedestrians passing to and fro from the theater, led to an investigation by the policeman, and the discovery of the most remarkable game of poker ever played at Yale.

According to the "freshie," who told the story only on threat of arrest, half a dozen of his fellow classmen gathered in a room across the street from the dormitory. As is usual this season of the year, none of them could raise a "sou," not having heard from home in a long period. A game of poker was proposed, but how to make it interesting without some cash was a question.

DRESSED ONLY IN PAJAMAS.

One freshman proposed that they play for their clothing. The idea was seized upon at once. It was decided to bet a price on each piece of clothing won by the various youths and use them by removal as needed in the game and depositing the same in the chair of the winner. It was agreed that if any one lost his clothing he must seek his abiding place in night attire only, to be loaned by the man who occupied the room, the clothes to be returned to the owner next day.

The game grew exciting. Some of those engaged lost so heavily that at times but one sock remained in their possession. Then luck changed and they won back portions of their attire which they donned again. It was near midnight when the unlucky freshman "went broke."

A freshman yell rent the smoky atmosphere of the apartment and, dressed only in pajamas "Freshie" was turned out into the cold.

"For excitement it's the greatest poker game I ever sat in," said he to the policeman.

It is thought the fad is likely to spread.

SMILED A SICKLY SMILE.

Why Mr. Ticker, a Disputative London Broker, Did Not Pursue a Racy Argument.

A member of the London stock exchange was married a short time ago, and of course the first time he appeared on 'change after the honeymoon he was subjected to many congratulations and much good-natured bantering. One of his friends, after congratulating him, suddenly reached over and took a long brown hair from his shoulder.

"Looks bad in a married man, Ticker," he continued, holding it up to the light. "But, that's all right," replied Ticker, smiling; "it's my wife's."

"No, no; that won't do," responded the friend; "your wife's hair is darker than that."

This made Ticker a trifle angry, and he exclaimed, excitedly: "I tell you it's my wife's. I fancy I know my wife's hair when I see it."

"OH, THAT'S ALL RIGHT."

"Well, you certainly ought to," said the friend. "But are you sure?"

"Sure? Of course I am. Why do you ask?"

"Oh, I thought, perhaps, there might be some mistake. You see, I found it on Brown's shoulder just before I saw you."

Sawdust Sold in Bricks.

Sawdust is converted into a portable fuel in Germany by a very simple process. It is heated under high steam pressure until the resinous ingredients become sticky, when it is pressed into bricks.

Many Holidays in Russia.

The Russian's saints' days and imperial fete days are so numerous that he works not more than 21 days in a month.

PUPILS' CHARMING MUSICAL

G. MORGAN STRICKLETT ASSISTS AT MISS PALMER'S RECITAL.

The efforts of the pupils of Miss S. A. Palmer at the last piano recital given yesterday afternoon at the Randolph-Cooley Collegiate School, won meritorious applause from the large number of friends and parents of the young performers who were present. They displayed unusual intelligence in the rendition of the difficult numbers and the progress made was clearly evidenced by the careful and painstaking work of Miss Palmer.

In addition to the numbers on the programme, there was a pleasant surprise in the appearance of G. Morgan Strickletl, formerly of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church quartette, and a member of the Lotus Glee Club. Mr. Strickletl sang "Calm as the Night," by Bohm; "The Violet," "In Nicotina," and "The Four Leaf Clover." He sang in his usual good voice and was warmly received.

Another feature was the recitation by Miss Louise Fox, given in connection with the Song without Words, by Miss Grace Burke. The musical number was associated with the poem and a picture of "The Huguenot," by Millais. This, as well as every number of the programme, received hearty applause and Miss Palmer was highly complimented upon the showing of her pupils.

This was the programme:

Divertimenti, Scharwenka; Highland Laddie, Morey, Miss Frances Foster; Goblins' Revelry, Ellenberg, Miss Marjorie Brown; Little Hunting Song, Brown, Miss Carolyn Ross; Vasantasena, Klein; Spanish Dance, Nortbrup, Miss Ana Wilson; Elfin Dance, Jensen; Gitana, Godard, Miss Edith Foster; Soberin, Schubert; Norwegian Spring Dance, Lasaus, Miss Ellen D. Burke; Seguidilla, canzone espanola, Bohm, Arthur Wills; Waltz, Grondahl; Ballade, Sinding, Miss Virginia Fox; Berceuse, from Jocelyn, Godard; Barcarole, Ward, Miss Dorothy Burke; Melodie—The Song of the Traveller, Paderewski; Gypsy Dance, Bohm, Miss Mal Rivers; At Evening, Paderewski; Drolleries, von-Wilm, Miss Grace Otterson; Valse Chromatique, Godard, Miss Alice Ross; No. 20—Song without Words, No. 18—Song without Words, Mendelssohn, Miss Grace Burke.

FLAGPOLE IN A CEMETERY

AMERICAN FLAG TO BE UNFURLED WHEN REQUIRED AT EVERGREEN.

The management of Evergreen Cemetery has erected a large flagpole near the gate of the burying ground. It will be used to mark burials where a display of patriotism is fitting.

Whenever a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, of the Knights of Pythias, the Junior Order United American Mechanics, the Sons of Veterans' Union or other organization patriotic in character is buried the flag will float at half-mast. On the Pythian decoration day, which falls on Sunday, May 29, the flag will be half-masted all day.

The standard will be half-masted on Decoration Day and float from the top on all other legal holidays. The pole is in plain view from all sides of the graveyard, and rears up prominently from above the tombstones.

The Day of Outings.

The one pleasure which the American public thoroughly enjoys is its outings. Low priced and at popular places and where there may be unrestrained enjoyment in out-of-door sports. Around New York there are many popular resorts but perhaps the most popular for holiday excursions is Manch Chunk in the mountains of Pennsylvania. The journey is delightful and passes through an interesting country, through the farm lands of New Jersey and then into that busy section of the Keystone State which bristles with industries which are renowned the world over. Manch Chunk is high in the mountains and the exhilarating atmosphere is a tonic for the hived-up city man. The chief feature of the trip to Manch Chunk is to make the journey over the Switchback railroad which is a gravity road some eighteen miles in length. The tourist is carried at a rapid rate to the inclines of Mt. Pisgah and Jefferson over which the cars are lifted by mammoth mechanical devices only to continue the romantic journey to the end, over fascinating and thrilling. On Decoration Day the New Jersey Central will run one of its popular priced excursions to Manch Chunk, the rate for the round trip to be $1.50, and special train will leave Plainfield at 9:20 a. m., returning train will leave Manch Cuhnk at 5:30 p. m. This is a trip worth taking and to miss it will be doing yourself an injustice. 5 23 6 o

Grammar School Commencement.

The graduation exercises of the Plainfield grammar schools will take place on Wednesday, June 15, in Franklin School assembly hall.

IMPORTANT TROLLEY CHANGES TO BE MADE

Through Service From Elizabeth to Dunellen and Raritan Every Fifteen Minutes.

THE NEW SCHEDULE

TWENTY NEW CARS SECURED FOR THE SERVICE.

Change of Cars to be Abolished—Jersey City and Philadelphia Schedule Will Remain the Same.

Another important change is about to be made by the Public Service Corporation in the manner of operating its trolley cars, following the introduction of the through-line cars from Jersey City to Trenton and Philadelphia. A time-card has been arranged and as soon as the road in the vicinity of Bound Brook is properly repaired, it will take effect.

The trolley cars now being operated between Elizabeth and Dunellen, will be taken to Newark and used in that city and in their place the new cars now being operated between Jersey City and Philadelphia will be used. It will require in the neighborhood of twenty cars to operate this line properly. They are equipped with seats similar to a passenger coach and will comfortably seat about forty-five persons. The cars now used will carry fully fifteen more passengers, but the new style cars are more comfortable and are possible of attaining higher speed. One of these cars is now being run between Elizabeth and Dunellen, replacing one of the old style.

In accordance with the new schedule these cars will be run between Jersey City, Elizabeth and Raritan and Philadelphia. Every other car running from Elizabeth will run through to Raritan without change, while other cars will run as far as Gallagher's Corner, West Dunellen, and the remainder will be operated between Jersey City and Philadelphia, as at present. This change will give the residents of Dunellen a fifteen minute service and the residents of Lincoln, Bound Brook, Somerville and Raritan a service much improved over the old schedule.

The cars leaving the Watchung avenue stand on the hour and half hour will run through to Raritan, while those leaving on the quarter after and quarter of the hour will go as far as Gallagher's Corner. The schedule for the Jersey City-Philadelphia cars will remain the same. With this change the travelling public will be well taken care of and less liking is likely to result. At present many complaints are made because the Plainfield cars do not always connect at Dunellen for points east and west and a person often is obliged to wait fifteen minutes.

The change does away with these waits. Persons wishing to go to Dunellen can do so without a change and a car can be had every fifteen minutes, while if they want to go further they can arrange to take the proper car. The patronage of the Jersey City-Philadelphia cars is quite satisfactory. The novelty is wearing off and a substantial business is being done. While there are many through passengers, it is the persons riding a short distance that pays the company. Many were under the impression that the through cars would not stop for local trade. This is a mistake. The cars will stop to pick up or let off passengers at any point.

In establishing the through service with the long runs much repair work is necessary along the road. New and heavier rails will have to be substituted for those worn out and new ties will have to be put in. The Public Service Corporation has lately given evidence of improving the service, and residents of this city will be pleased if some attention is given to the Netherwood, Fourth and Somerset street lines, taking off the old cars now unfit for service and putting more modern cars in their place.

LITERARY.

Mr. Folk's platform is as simple as his speeches. "Thou shalt not steal—even if thou art a Democrat, thou shalt not steal." He reiterates it everywhere as he stands on the platform, short, thick-set and wearing on his face that look of quiet, almost placid determination which is photographed on the soul of every boodler in Missouri. The farmers trust him. Folk himself told me once that he believed every Democrat in Missouri with a beard more than two inches long was with him. Is it true.—From Fighting the Good Fight in Missouri, in Leslie's Monthly for June.

Lloyd VanMiddlesworth, of West Front street, has recovered from an attack of the measles.

Mrs. M. S. Simpson, formerly of this city, but now of Middle Valley, is visiting friends here.

GALAXY OF SINGERS FURNISH ENTERTAINMENT

Concert at Congregational Church in Aid of Swedish Pilgrim Church Fund.

DELIGHTFUL NUMBERS

MILLIAN HOLMES ACTS AS DIRECTOR FOR THE OCCASION.

Miss Emmons Scores a Hit—'Cello Solos by W. Paulding DeNike Enjoyable—Those Taking Part in the Affair.

The concert for the benefit of the Swedish Evangelical church at the Congregational church, Thursday, was well attended in spite of the counting programme presented next door at the Casino.

The most critical audience could have found no fault with the execution of the various members. Some who are fond of speaking of the singer who does considerable choral work as lacking the adaptability necessary to a performance of the sort given last night would change their opinion after hearing the singers in that programme.

The Glee Club proved a favorite deservedly as its rendition of the pieces "Annie Laurie," "On the Rhine" and "Ave Maria" would be hard to excel. The quartette, composed of Mrs. Tugwell, Mrs. Gildden, Elmer Cutting and William Holmes, also received high praise.

Miss Aimee Louise Emmons' readings met with the hearty approval which a critical audience always bestows without stint when real merit presents itself in such a pleasing form. Her greatness of the quarrel scene from Sheridan's "School for Scandal" show her to have as good a claim to histrionic ability as to a genius for elocution.

Following Schumann's "The Two Grenadiers" and accompanied by Howard M. Case, William Holmes sang as a solo the song composed by Mr. Case, entitled "When I Know That Some One Loves Me" and received enthusiastic applause.

Plainfielders are too well acquainted with the 'cello playing of W. Paulding De Nike to need to be told that his playing pleased the audience. His rendition of the Adagio selection by Rietti had, in particular, all the sureness of touch and the sweep and definition which has characterized his solo work in the past.

The solo ability of the different singers was amply shown in "In The Chimney Corner," Mrs. Tugwell, a soprano solo by Mrs. Gildden, two tenor solos by Mr. Cutting and the solos by Mr. Holmes. The serenade from Robin Hood was particularly fine. Clifford Braider, as conductor, contributed in no small measure to the evening's success.

In regard to the execution too much cannot be said for William Holmes who trained all the vocalists on the programme. His careful and painstaking instruction has brought out the best points of each voice to its full capacity.

A

To be a Quiet Nuptial Event.

The Evening Enterprise, of Poughkeepsie, under date of May 17, states that Mr. and Mrs. David Snediker, formerly of this city, but now of Poughkeepsie, have returned from a trip to St. Louis and that Mr. Snediker has been dangerously ill. Owing to Mr. Snediker's illness the marriage of his daughter, Anna Louise, to Edward B. Harder, also of Poughkeepsie, on Wednesday, June 8, will be a quiet affair.

PHILADELPHIA HORSE SHOW AT WISSAHICKON HEIGHTS.

Special Excursion Tickets via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The thirteenth annual open-air exhibition of the Philadelphia Horse Show will be held on St. Martin's Green, Wissahickon Heights Station, Philadelphia, May 30 to June 4 inclusive.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell special excursion tickets, including coupon of admission, from New York, Philadelphia, Belvidere, Lancaster, Wilmington, West Chester, Phoenixville, and principal intermediate stations (as well as stations on the Chestnut Hill Branch) to Wissahickon Heights Station, May 30 to June 4, good to return until June 6, 1904, inclusive.

The grounds of the Philadelphia Horse Show Association are located immediately on the Germantown and Chestnut Hill Branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad, eleven miles from Broad Street Station.

George White and family, of the borough, were recent visitors at Millstone.

Edmond Texier, of Watchung, has returned from a stay with friends in Elizabeth.

WARREN ENDEAVORERS OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

Sixteenth Year of Work the Cause of Rejoicing at Borough Chapel Celebration.

TWO MINISTERS SPEAK

EIGHTY SEVEN MEMBERS IN THE ORGANIZATION.

Rev. Mr. Casselberry Makes a Timely Address—Words of Congratulation From the Pastor—Some Solos.

The Christian Endeavorers of Warren chapel celebrated its sixteenth anniversary Thursday with a special programme. Vocal and instrumental music, recitations and an address by the Rev. Mr. Casselberry were all included in the evening's exercises.

F. H. Andrews, superintendent of the Warren chapel Sunday-school, offered the opening prayer and the pastor, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, welcomed the audience with a few well-chosen words. He mentioned the fact that the sixth anniversary of the society was the only one he had missed during his pastorate. As he and Mrs. McKelvey were on their honeymoon at that time he said that the recurring exercises always brought the pleasantest memories to him. After referring to former pastors who have held the same charge, Mr. McKelvey introduced the Rev. Mr. Casselberry, pastor of the Dunellen Presbyterian church.

Mr. Casselberry chose as his topic, "The Minute Men of the Twentieth Century." He began by speaking of the deep impression made upon him by the painting "Minute Men of '76," which he saw at Memorial Hall during the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia in 1876.

His description of this picture, which has since been so widely copied, was vivid and one could almost hear the shrill note of the fife and the drum-beat as the three patriots, father, son and grandson, march at the head of the Continental troops.

He spoke of the organization of the minute men, how their scattered members were enabled to rally at the first hint of the enemy's approach because they left everything at once when the call of duty sounded. His comparisons between the work of the Christian volunteer on the firing line of life and in the clash and bustle of affairs and that of the soldier who faces the perils of the battle-field were well drawn and convincing. The twentieth century minute man must combat influences and principals rather than guard against unexpected moves on the part of a foe who is amenable to shot and steel but his watchfulness should not be the less on that account. The "Comrades of the Silent Hour" were spoken of as examples of steadfast prayerfulness.

Altogether the minute men in Christian Endeavor are the ones who will do the most successful fighting. This was Mr. Casselberry's first talk before a Plainfield audience in thirteen years.

A collection was then taken and the pastor, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, welcomed the audience with a few well-chosen words. He mentioned the fact that the sixth anniversary of the society was the only one he had missed during his pastorate. As he and Mrs. McKelvey were on their honeymoon at that time he said that the recurring exercises always brought the pleasantest memories to him. After referring to former pastors who have held the same charge, Mr. McKelvey introduced the Rev. Mr. Casselberry, pastor of the Dunellen Presbyterian church.

Mr. Casselberry chose as his topic, "The Minute Men of the Twentieth Century." He began by speaking of the deep impression made upon him by the painting "Minute Men of '76," which he saw at Memorial Hall during the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia in 1876.

His description of this picture, which has since been so widely copied, was vivid and one could almost hear the shrill note of the fife and the drum-beat as the three patriots, father, son and grandson, march at the head of the Continental troops.

He spoke of the organization of the minute men, how their scattered members were enabled to rally at the first hint of the enemy's approach because they left everything at once when the call of duty sounded. His comparisons between the work of the Christian volunteer on the firing line of life and in the clash and bustle of affairs and that of the soldier who faces the perils of the battle-field were well drawn and convincing. The twentieth century minute man must combat influences and principals rather than guard against unexpected moves on the part of a foe who is amenable to shot and steel but his watchfulness should not be the less on that account. The "Comrades of the Silent Hour" were spoken of as examples of steadfast prayerfulness.

Altogether the minute men in Christian Endeavor are the ones who will do the most successful fighting. This was Mr. Casselberry's first talk before a Plainfield audience in thirteen years.

Saligaul tribute was paid Miss Georgina Galloway, the society's president, by the pastor in speaking of her work and he also laid stress on the fact that no other young woman had held that office up to this time. Just before the address, the secretary, Miss Dora Bennett, read her report for the past year. It showed that forty-nine meetings have been held with a total attendance of 1,557 and an average attendance of fifty-two.

Six missionary meetings were held during the year. The total membership is now eighty-seven, of which fifty-two are active members. Twelve members teach in the Sunday-school. The work of the flower, social and other committees was highly commended also.

In the absence of Charles F. Windham, his report as treasurer was read by Mr. Nielsen. It gave the general fund receipts for the year as $99.33, the disbursements as $97.99, leaving a balance of $1.43 in the treasury.

The total receipts in the missionary fund were $98.94 and the disbursements were $93.49, leaving a balance of $1 45 on hand.

Vocal solos by Miss Florence Bennets, a piano trio by the Misses Ella and Tilly Coddington and Dora Schenck, selections by the orchestra and Miss Edna Bonnell's recitations made up the balance of the programme.

Editors Excursion.

The New Jersey Central has issued invitations for its third annual excursion to Lake Hopatcong, in which the editors along the line will be its guests. The outing will be enjoyed on Thursday, June 2. Special trains will leave Point Pleasant and Scranton respectively.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl E. Drange, of Park avenue, have returned from their bridal trip.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning May 29.

Topic—What Christian Endeavor is doing in mission lands.—Luke i, 67-80.

The Christian Endeavor movement has always placed especial emphasis upon the subject of missions. From the beginning of its history the missionary committee has had a conspicuous place among its activities, the principle of systematic and proportionate giving for missions has been advocated, and faithful efforts have been made to give the young people of our churches the best possible missionary information, upon the principle that knowledge will create interest and co-operation. Christian Endeavor missionary literature has been abundant and attractive, and the missionary prayer meetings have been noted for their attractiveness and helpfulness. Thus in the society the missionary spirit has been developed, and here, of course, the work in foreign lands begins. Christian Endeavor is doing nothing in mission lands except first the missionary spirit be developed and fostered at home.

The active work of Christian Endeavor in mission lands is carried on through two agencies—(1) denominational societies and (2) by the organization of Christian Endeavor societies in mission lands.

1. Christian Endeavor works in mission lands through its denominational agencies. Christian Endeavor is "interdenominational." It could not and does not form societies to contribute mission sympathy and support a non-denominational mission work. Each one of our great denominations has its missionary activities, and the Christian Endeavor societies work through their Presbyterian channels, Congregational societies through Congregational agencies, etc. In this way Christian Endeavor has done much for heathen lands. Thousands of dollars have been raised by it, missionaries have been supported on the field and boys and girls educated in the schools. In 1903 the Young People's societies, largely Christian Endeavor, gave $9,897 to foreign missions, an increase of $414 over the previous year. This merely represents what all our societies are doing — giving through their own denominational channels their time, their sympathy, their prayers and their money for the unsaved millions in heathen lands. And may this phase of our work ever increase rather than decrease!

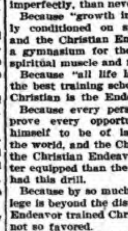
2. Christian Endeavor works in mission lands through the organization of C. E. societies in these lands. Christian Endeavor has invaded practically every mission land, and wherever a society has been organized something is being done for missions—young people have learned of Christ and have been won for Christ. Let us remember that we are bound in fellowship to these Endeavorers across the seas, and let us ever pray for their continued "growth in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. lxxii, 8-20; Isa. xxxv, 1-10; Zech. iv, 6; Matt. xxviii, 19, 20; Acts i, 6-14; xiii, 1-3; Rom. x, 14,15; I. Cor. iii, 5-7; Rev. xxii, 17.

The "Man Behind the Gun."

Frederick W. Fisher, chairman of the Buffalo convention committee, is a well known educator of the Bison City and a long time Christian Endeavorer. He is an active member of the Calvary Presbyterian church and is displaying much ability in the handling of the committee that is arranging for what promises to be New York state's greatest convention.



FREDERICK W. FISHER.

Why Be an Endeavorer?

Because it is better to strive, even imperfectly, than never to strive at all.

Because "growth in grace" is largely conditioned on spiritual exercise, and the Christian Endeavor society is a gymnasium for the development of spiritual muscle and sinew.

Because "all life is a school," and the best training school for the young Christian is the Endeavor society.

Because every person ought to improve every opportunity for fitting himself to be of largest service to the world, and the Christian trained in the Christian Endeavor society is better equipped than the one who has not had this drill.

Because by so much more as the college is beyond the district school is the Endeavor trained Christian beyond one not so favored.

Because the Christian Endeavor idea is practical; because the Christian Endeavor way is the Bible way; because Christian Endeavor has proved its right to your consideration by the record of its twenty odd years, and, better than all, because your pastor wants you to be an Endeavorer.

JOHN R. CLEMENTS.

Mission Study.

The mission study class is a great developer of leaders. Says Dr. Saller in the Assembly Herald for February: "The need of the hour is for missionary locomotives, persons who are qualified and strategic to move others rather than more amiable freight cars, persons who can be moved by a certain amount of exertion, but who altogether lack initiative. The study class under favorable conditions, with separate weekly sessions of sufficient length, is especially adapted to develop the former type of workers."

A CURIOUS SWINDLE.

A FRENCH FORTUNE TELLER FINDS AN "EASY MARK."

Woman Induced to Bury Money as Bait for Spirits Robbed by Sorceress and Her Friend—Arrest of the Couple.

The Paris criminal authorities have just unraveled a story of deception and swindling made possible by the ignorance and superstition of a victim whose credulity is so amazing as to be almost incredible.

Mme. Fournier, a stationer in the Rue de Meaux, about a year ago made the acquaintance of a fortune teller, Mme. Saligna, of the Rue d'Allemagne, where she enjoyed the reputation of being endowed with truly supernatural powers. She is now under arrest, and before the examining magistrate Mme. Fournier told an astonishing story:

"I went to consult Mme. Saligna: last June," she said. "She read my hand, and, looking fixedly at my eyes, told me I should be immensely rich before very long. How the promised wealth was to come to me could not say. It was necessary for her to consult the spirits, and she promised to give me further information at a subsequent interview. At the second visit I found Mme. Saligna in the company of a gentleman elegantly dressed. He, I was informed, was the medium who hypnotized Mme. Saligna, or rather, put her in communication with the spirits."

This individual, who is named Flaumenbaum, has also been arrested.

When he had made some passes before Mme. Saligna and evoked the spirits from the other world, the medium fell into a sleep in which she beheld a golden vision. "I see millions, millions of francs," she cried. "They are hidden in the bottom of a cellar quite close to here, in the Rue de Meaux. The cellar belongs to a stationer. She for whom the treasure is intended is here," and with a divining finger the sorceress pointed to Mme. Fournier, who listened enraptured to the tidings of the good fortune reserved for her.

The seer continued to the effect that a fortune of $700,000 and a patent of nobility were buried in the cellar and advised the victim to deposit "bait" in the form of gold and banknotes to draw the fortune from the depths. The treasure was declared to consist of gold pieces and 20-franc notes. The magician then awoke and the same night saw beginning of the search for the treasure.

READ MME. FOURNIER'S HAND.

Mme. Fournier began by depositing a gold louis ($4) in each corner of her cellar, but the treasure did not appear. "You must use more bait," said Mme. Saligna, and so the stationer deposited successively two, three and ten notes of $20 each. But still there was no sign of the promised millions.

"The amount is not sufficient," declared the sorceress, and Mme. Fournier revisited the cellar, taking with her several banknotes of $100 and $200 each. Still the hidden fortune gave no sign.

"I shall go myself," said Mme. Saligna, "and charm the spirits with my incantations." So when night had fallen on the Rue de Meaux the magician, taking in her hand a further offering of banknotes from the confiding stationer, descended to the basement, and for half an hour practiced the rites of her witchcraft. When she reappeared her hands were empty. She had, she explained, buried the banknotes deep in the earth.

The process went on for some time, the guileless victim handing over further "bait" as often as it was asked for. Another night, when Mme. Fournier had closed her eyes for thinking of the millions which were certain to be hers, she resolved to visit the cellar herself. But not only did she fail to find the hoped-for treasure, but she could not discover the faintest trace of the money which should have been deposited there.

"That is not surprising," observed Mme. Saligna. "The spirits take possession of it as soon as it is buried, and the last time I went to the cellar they bore the notes from my hands before I had time to hide them in the earth. But have no fear, you will get it all back with interest once the treasure is discovered."

But one evening, when the medium was supposed to be invoking the spirits in the cellar, the stationer watched her through a hole in the door and saw her tucking the banknotes in her corset. Next day the disillusioned victim informed the police and Mme. Saligna was arrested.

Tremendous Sale of Novels.

The sale of novels is 26 times greater than the sale of instructive works. This is explained by the fact that most people prefer to be entertained than instructed.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

May 29: "Christian Women in Non-Christian Lands."—Acts xvi, 11-15; Phil. iv, 3; Rom. xvi, 1-3.

Women's work for Jesus Christ has been in times past and still continues to be one of the most potent influences for the establishment of righteousness and purity on the earth.

In the apostolic age women were prominent in affairs both religious and secular and frequently decked the crowns of public events. Lydia in Philippi, Phoebe in Cenchrea, Priscilla in Ephesus, Corinth and Rome, are but specimens in zeal, beneficence and holiness of heart of the Christian womanhood of that age. Multitudes of others were equally worthy of honor, though less known to fame. In Paul's salutation to the Christians in Rome, in the last chapter of his letter to them, what stories lie hidden, what experiences covered, under the names of the women there mentioned by name as associated in the work of world evangelization with this tireless apostle to the gentiles!

All subsequent Christian centuries and lands have furbished worthy successors of "Tryphena and Tryphosa, of Mary and Julia and all those "who labored much in the Lord." St. Brigid, or Bridget, as she is more familiarly known, is not less worthy of honor for her work in Ireland than St. Patrick, and both were as faithful missionaries of Jesus Christ to a heathen people as the annals of the church have known. Undoubtedly the monastic orders preserved the church and education during the dark ages in Europe and made possible our modern civilization, saving the world from the chaos of barbarism. In this work women of holy lives were as efficient as men. Our young people's societies would do well to give some time to the study of the work of women in the church during the middle ages. Heroism and devoted service in the cause of the Master are not limited to early or to recent times. All times have had their Deborahs and Dorcases. Especial study should be given to the consideration of the work of our women in recent years. The deaconess movement in Germany and America is worthy of careful study. The woman's home missionary work in the south and west and in the congested sections of our great cities and in the sparsely populated country districts all deserves consideration. How much attention the foreign work of our women claims also! In not a few lands the most hopeful factor in the future of Christ is that which the women are accomplishing. Schools, medical work, Bible reading, zenana visitation and teacher training are reaching the womanhood of countries where womanhood is debased. Indeed, in no land where no general betterment of conditions can come unless the women are raised to purity and enlightenment.

In Africa woman is the drudge, the beast for labor and lust. Polygamy, slavery and witchcraft are the cursing trinity which rules and makes it the dark continent. Christian women are enthroning there the Holy Trinity and will rescue motherhood and wifehood and faith by the power of God and make a woman out of the black female.

In India the result may be epitomized by referring to the story of Scobooangain Ammal. Whoever has not read it should do so as soon as possible.

In China the feet of the woman shall be unbound and shod with sandals of peace.

In Korea she shall emerge from seclusion and its weakness and chastity become unequal of man.

"Help these women."

The Strength of Christ.

Our efforts in the strength of Christ constantly remind us of our dependence. Especially is this true in the face of the strong enemies which we have to encounter. He who has a proper view of the strength of these enemies and of the absolute necessity of relying on and overcoming them cannot be proud, but in all humility will throw himself upon the arm of Christ. In all his efforts to escape sin in its guilt and in its destroying power he will feel the need of divine help. The Lord working out of our own salvation to which we are exhorted and which brings us to Christ for the knowledge of the truth and for help in everything that pertains to life and godliness. It is working in everything to subjection to and dependence upon Him who worketh in us "both to will and to do of His own good pleasure."—Christian Instructor.

And For God.

Our Lord gives the answer to a difficulty continually perplexing honest Christians: "How am I to learn to love God? I want to do my duty, but I do not feel as if I loved God." Our Lord gives the answer, "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." Act for God, do and say the things that He wills, direct your thoughts and intentions Godward, and, depend upon it, in the slow process of nature all that belongs to you—your instincts, your intelligence, your affections, your feelings—will gradually follow along the line of your action. Act for God; you are already showing love to Him, and you will learn to feel it.—Charles Gore.

Just to Believe.

With the heart man believeth under righteousness.—Rom. x, 10.

Just to believe that He loveth,
And that His love will already own;
Just to believe that He careth,
And your woes He has already borne;
Just to believe He'll forgive you,
And His pardon hath then made you whole;
Just to believe He's your Shepherd,
And then you have entered the fold;
Just to believe full and freely
That your debt the Saviour will pay—
Believe it with loving repentance,
An I you are redeemed today.

—Christian Endeavor World.

DELINQUENT TAX SALE OF MANY PROPERTIES

Collector Smith Disposes of 28 Tracts, the City's Claim Aggregating $4,170.

UNDER THE MARTIN ACT

ALTOGETHER $3,747 IS REALIZED AT THE PUBLIC SALE.

City Treasurer Arnold Assists Collector—As a Rule Prices Were Above the Average—The Detailed Sales.

The annual sale of delinquent lands for unpaid taxes and assessments, attracted a number of buyers to the office of Collector F. H. Smith, last Thursday. Of the ninety-nine properties on the list, twenty-eight were sold, aggregating a net amount of $3,747. The city's claim is $4,170.

Collector Smith was the auctioneer and assisting him was City Treasurer William F. Arnold. In most cases the prices were above the average. E. D. York purchased the greatest number of properties. He secured those owned by Franklin Wiley, 1431-1475 East Front street; No. 9, Unknown owner, 1457-1459 North avenue; No. 12, Unknown owner, 820-831 St. Mary's avenue; Levina P. Choat, 264-266 Waston avenue; No. 20, Unknown owner, 336-338 Terrill road; Watchung Realty Company, 1301-1309 Randolph road; George H. Kitchen, 1077-1079 Rose street; John A. Doty, 1201-1223 Plainfield avenue; A. Rodman Parsons, 1301-1311 Plainfield avenue; Richard Curd Daniel, 1313-1323 Plainfield avenue; A. Rodman Parsons, 429 435 Beatrice street; John A. Doty, 513-531 Beatrice street; R. K. Brown, 430-434 Beatrice street; John A. Doty, 512-530 and 413 435 Pemberton avenue. For these properties he paid $1,857.

J. L. Stillwell purchased for $577 the properties owned by Union Land Improvement Company, 326-327 Johnston avenue and Minnie Stryker, 38-40 Manuese place. Clarence Murphy secured for $593 properties owned by John A. Doty, 1300-1304 Central avenue, 513-527 Pemberton avenue and 1300-1322 Field avenue. D. Foster Updike got the properties owned by John A. Doty, 1308-1322 Central avenue and Irving S. Haynes, 1200-1222 Field avenue, for $577. A. Kunzman purchased the properties owned by Jane Ann Bundy, 421-423 Elizabeth street and R. E. Brown, 412 418 Beatrice street, for $690. Dr. Jefferson C. Anderson secured George Drew's property at 330-515 Elizabeth street for $72. M. Kadansky secured the properties owned by Patrick McNamara, 551 South Second street and John Ray, 214 New street, for $532 and Ralph Waldo Emerson got the property owned by Catherine R. Parsons, 1201-1235 Field avenue for $156.

In nearly every case the purchaser paid the cash for the property purchased, but in a few instances the twenty per cent. required was put up and the balance must be paid by Monday. Collector Smith will sell the remaining properties Thursday afternoon, June 16, at 2 o'clock.

TABLEAUX AT A SOCIAL

EPWORTH LEAGUE OF FIRST M. E. CHURCH HOLDS PLEASANT AFFAIR.

Tableaux, guessing pictures and instrumental music were included in the programme of the social held in Vincent chapel, last night, under the auspices of the First M. E. church Epworth League. It was the last social for the season and nearly one hundred members and friends were present. A feature of the affair were the tableaux given to represent James Whitcomb Reilly's charming poem "That Old Sweetheart of Mine." Harry Gee read the poem and the various scenes were enacted by the young people of the church.

Another amusing features was the display of photograps of many of the prominent members of the church, taken in their youth. They were all numbered and the scheme was to guess the name of each. In addition there were several pleasing selections by the Misses Shupp and Kenneth Shupp, violin, piano and bass. Following this programme there was a social time and refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gee and Mrs. S. H. Tugwell were in charge of the affair.

Miss Nellie Mead, of High Bridge, who has been visiting friends here, has returned home.

Many School Children are Sickly

Mother Gray's Sweet Powders for Children, used by Mother Gray, a nurse in Children's Home, New York, break up Colds in 24 hours, cure Feverishness, Headache, Stomach Troubles, Teething, Diarrhœa, Worms, and regulate the Bowels, and Destroy Worms. Mrs. Emily Mc-Pherson, Morrison, Ill., says: "I like the best medicine in the world for children when feverish and constipated." Sold by all Druggists or by mail for 25 cents. Sample sent FREE. Address Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N. Y.

CHANGES IN COURSE OF HIGH SCHOOL WORK

Announcements as Made Today Include Several Changes in the Curriculum.

NEW TEACHING CORPS

MISS NILES RETURNS AFTER A YEAR'S VACATION.

Miss Ariadne Gilbert, Miss Mary E. Ferry and Samuel B. Howe, Jr., Additions to Faculty—Some Teachers to Go.

Announcement was made at the High School last week of the curriculum for 1904-5. The increased number of recitation rooms for the accommodation of a larger number of classes makes it necessary for some recitations to be held in the afternoon. This enforced return to the old plan of two sessions will, however, affect only the preparatory and first year classes. Other classes will continue under the one session plan.

Changes in the course of studies are these: American History is given in the senior year, following three full year courses in Ancient History, Mediaeval and Modern History, and English History. German may now be taken in the second year, and studied for three years, as has long been the arrangement with Greek and French. A class is organized in advanced mathematics, including Advanced Algebra, Solid Geometry and Trigonometry.

Miss E. E. Niles will resume her place in the school after the year's leave of absence that she has been enjoying. The faculty is to lose from its number Miss Grace E. Burroughs and Miss Eloise B. Santee. The former will pursue post-graduate study at Radcliffe College, while the latter has passed the examinations for appointment to a high school position in New York city.

The new teachers are Miss Ariadne Gilbert, of Cambridge, Mass.; Miss Mary E. Ferry, of Matteawan, N. Y., and Samuel B. Howe, Jr., of Saugerties, N. Y. Miss Gilbert has already taught for several years in the Plainfield schools, and has for two years been doing college work at Johns Hopkins' University and Radcliffe College. Her special work will be English. Miss Ferry is a graduate of Mount Holyoke College, and is now principal of the high school at Matteawan, N. Y. Miss Ferry will have the work in German, for teaching which she has had special preparation in study abroad. Mr. Howe is a graduate of Union College, and is now principal of the high school at Saugerties, N. Y. He will have the classes in history.

The entire high school faculty for next year will be as follows: I. W. Travell, principal; Miss E. E. Niles, Miss S. L. Bass, Miss E. K. Cumming, Miss K. F. Ball, Lindsey Bon, James D. Maxwell, Miss F. D. Lovell, Miss M. E. Benedict, Miss Ariadne Gilbert, Miss M. E. Ferry, Samuel B. Howe, Jr.

THE PLAINFIELD IN SERVICE

HANDSOME FERRYBOAT OF JERSEY CENTRAL NOW IN SERVICE.

The palatial ferry boat, The Plainfield, of the Jersey Central road, is now in service on the North river between the Jersey City terminal and Liberty street, New York. It is greatly admired by the crowd of Plainfield commuters who are daily passengers.

The boat cost the railroad company $350,000, and is designed to run between Jersey City and the Liberty street slip. It is equipped with gangways on both the main and upper decks, is operated with triple expansion, compound engines, and has a propeller fore and aft. It is said to be the fastest ferryboat on the rivers. Down in the engine room is a dynamo which provides electricity for the lights throughout the ship.

All the new Central ferryboats have been equipped with the upstairs gangways, because of the contemplated improvements in New York, where the railroad company intends erecting a fine terminal station to replace the wooden structures there at present. This will be equipped with an overhead bridge over West street, so that passengers on the second deck of the steamer may cross that street on an elevation and without descending to the main deck of the steamer. On the opposite side of the street there will be a staircase, which will bring passengers ons on the sidewalk like the passageway at the Pennsylvania railroad depot.

John Haughey, of Rockview avenue, is visiting at Princeton.

David Sharp, of the borough, has been visiting relatives at Somerville.

UNITARIAN MINISTER ON FALSE STANDARDS

Too Much Quantity and Not Enough Quality Today Says Rev. Hobart Clark.

CHARACTER BUILDING

SAYS WORKMAN HAS BECOME SEMI-MECHANICAL SLAVE.

Refers to Attitude of Those who Jeered President Elliott's Utterance—The True Destiny of the Workingman.

"Every man said he, who really lives, is building a character," said Rev. Hobart Clark, of West New Brighton, in a short but impressive sermon Sunday morning in All Souls' Unitarian church. "The product of our work," said he, "depends not alone upon the material at hand but also upon the use we make of it. Some people mistake the value of things through counting too heavily on quantity and failing to give due weight to the quality exhibited. This tendency to adopt false standards has resulted, perhaps from the artificial conditions under which the product of our labor is brought forth.

"Some such reason is indicated," he said, "when an audience composed of workingmen jeer at a speaker like President Elliott, because he stated that work well done is the source of a truer satisfaction than is the wage return from the work.

"This spirit among the men who make their living by working with their hands is a great change from the spirit of the old craftsmen whose main object was to make every article the best of its kind and whose pride in their work proves Dr. Elliott's saying which the artisan of the twentieth century ridicules.

"No one class can be held accountable for the change in conditions, which is the result of a universal demand for quantity without due regard for quality.

"The workman has gained, in some respects, a measure of freedom; but he has become, at the same time, the most mechanical slave of the machine which does his work. This state of things has loosened the inducements to think independently; man's mental activity always corresponding to the range of his work. Many forget," said Rev. Mr. Clark, "that they have any other destiny in the world, than to draw the wage to which their work entitles them.

"A soul thoroughly wrapped in questions of profit and loss stand very slight chance of being affected by purely religious considerations."

RECEPTION FOR BISHOP-ELECT

PLAINFIELD METHODISTS TO WELCOME REV. MR. SPELLMEYER AT NEWARK.

Bishop-elect Spellmeyer will be given a reception in the Centenary M. E. church, Newark, probably on Wednesday, June 15. Rev. Dr. W. Snodgrass, Rev. Dr. S. L. Earp and Rev. George Mooney and a number of other Methodists are planning to attend the reception.

The plans as arranged are for the Methodist Preachers' Association to give Bishop Spellmeyer a reception in the afternoon of June 15 and in the evening at Centenary church there will be a general reception.

Bishop's Annual Visit.

St. Rev. Dr. John Scarborough, head of the New Jersey diocese of the Protestant Episcopal church, was in this city Sunday to confirm classes at Grace and Holy Cross churches. He also visited St. Stephen's and the Church of the Heavenly Rest.

Miss Martin Acts as Organist.

Miss Hazel Martin presided at the organ in Trinity Reformed church, Sunday morning and evening, in the absence of Arthur L. Titsworth, who is ill. Her work was very satisfactory.

Unknown Man Killed.

The remains of an unknown man, who was horribly mangled at the Lehigh station at Picton on Monday, are at Cole's morgue awaiting identification.

Sauerbrund's May Walk.

The Young and Torn Verein held its annual May walk Sunday. Very nearly the entire membership, accompanied by wives and families, took part.

Musicale at Fanwood.

For the benefit of the repair fund of All Saints' church, Scotch Plains, a musicale was held in the Fanwood Clubhouse, Saturday night.

Vice Presidents of Chicago.

George A. Chapman, of Belle avenue, has been nominated for the vice-presidency of the New York Cotton Exchange and will probably be elected at the annual meeting, June 6.

HOLZWASSER & CO

SPECIAL DISCOUNT THIS MONTH OF 10%
ALLOWED ON ALL CASH PURCHASES.

A HOME COMPLETELY FURNISHED AT $128.99

ACTUAL VALUE $200.

We Also Furnish a Flat at $65.00.

Write for Our New Catalogue. Mailed Upon Application.

$1.00 a Week Opens an Account.

We Also Carry a Complete Line of CLOTHING For Men, Women and Children.

Freight and R. R. Fare Allowed on All Out-of-Town Orders.

PARLOR.—Two Velour Parlor Suits, 6 pieces; Fine Velour Parlor Suit, 5 pieces; Parlor Tables; Fine Parlor Lamps and Divan; pair Brass Oriental Rugs, 7.6x10.6; pair Chenille Curtains.

BEDROOM.—Golden Oak Chiffonier; Oak Wardrobe; Oak Bedstead, woven wire bed spring, mattress and pillows; Oak Dresser with Mirror; Oak Rocker; 12 yards Matting; Rug, 9x12; Toilet Set, 10 pieces.

DINING-ROOM.—Oak Sideboard, brass mirror; set elegant Dining Machine, with 8 roomy drawers; Leather or Couch; oak Dining Table; Dining Chairs; 12 pieces Dishes; 12 pieces Glassware.

KITCHEN.—Oak Kitchen Closet, glass doors; Kitchen Range, with Reservoir; 3 Kitchen Chairs; Kitchen Table; 10 pieces Cutlery.

1417 TO 1423 3D AVE. BETWEEN 80 & 81 ST

Open Evenings until 9 o'clock. NEW YORK, N. Y.

POSITION OF TRUST FOR A PLAINFIELDER

E. T. Perine Becomes Treasurer and General Manager of the Audit Co., of New York.

ONLY 34 YEARS OLD

A GRADUATE OF THE STILLMAN HIGH SCHOOL IN THIS CITY.

First With Bank in Jersey City—Later Becomes Comptroller of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company.

High honor in the New York financial world has been conferred upon a young Plainfielder, Edward Ten Broeck Perine. He has just been selected to fill the position of treasurer and general manager of The Audit Company of New York, the most prominent fiduciary concern in the country, and of which August Belmont is president. Mr. Perine is the son of the late James H. Perine, who will be remembered by native and old residents of this city as a prominent temperance worker here years ago. Edward Perine was born here about thirty-four years ago, and graduated from the Stillman High School in the class of 1888. He was a classmate of City Judge William N. Runyon.

Even in those days Perine showed a marvelous command of figures. His career was indicated then, and the news of his success will not come as a surprise to his friends here.

"Trust Companies," the monthly organ of the trust companies of the country, speaks in the highest terms of praise of Mr. Perine. It is believed, it says, that his return to The Audit Company (he was with it in 1897) will create a new era in the history of the company. It is predicted that the company will attain an even more prominent position and exercise a greater influence than before under the stimulus of his management.

Before he was elevated to the high position with the Audit Company Mr. Perine had already made a noteworthy record as comptroller and treasurer of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company. Since his earliest business connection, with the Third National Bank of Jersey City, a year after he left school here, the advances he has made are called remarkable by "Trust Companies." Mr. Perine went to the Mortgage and Trust Company in 1899 as cashier, when the concern was organized. In 1897, when The Audit Company was formed, he went to it as secretary and treasurer. During the four years of his work in this company he developed the field for expert services and assisted materially in making the company the foremost of its kind in the United States.

In 1902, because of his stock exchange and other financial experience, Mr. Perine was appointed assignee of a suspended brokerage house. The able way in which he handled the affairs of this concern not only won the confidence and admiration of a large circle of prominent financial powers, but also permitted the re-instatement of the assignors on the Stock Exchange and a settlement with creditors for 70 per cent. of their claims.

Mr. Perine is now living in Hackensack. He married a Jersey City girl a short time after his removal from this city.

Attending Friends' Meeting.

Mrs. Arthur Stryker, Mrs. John Poole, Mrs. Henry Palmer, Mrs. Harry Adams, Mrs. Phoebe Vail and Mrs. Charles H. Vail, of the Friends Meeting House on Watchung avenue, are attending the quarterly meeting of the Society of Friends being held in New York this week.

BOROUGHITES TO MEET ON SCHOOL QUESTION

Board Divided Against Itself and Matters in An Unsatisfactory State.

RECOMMEND A SITE

LOCATION FOR BUILDING ON SOMERSET STREET.

Long Debate on Question—Only One Place is Suggested by the Board—Meeting on Monday, June 6.

In answer to the expression of opinion registered by the voters at the recent public meeting, the North Plainfield Board of Education decided Monday, at an executive session, to submit the corner lot adjoining the Somerset street school for the site of the proposed new building. The vote on the proposition will be taken on June 6.

The decision was reached after a spirited discussion on various propositions regarding the needed school enlargement, in which the old factional lines were drawn. At the recent public meeting the Citizens voted that three central sites be submitted. The anti majority last night appeared to have decided that the corner lot alone should be given the chance, and the various clashes through their opposition to the suggestions of the other side on the three-sites idea. There was considerable discussion as to whether the will of the people as expressed at the recent meeting, on the three sites, was to be carried out. The Citizens strongly opposed such action in the face of arguments in its favor by the administration members.

The Citizens submitted a plan to offer the Washington avenue site with the Somerset street one. As that site would cost $8,500, $2,000 more than the Somerset street one, giving the voters practically Hobson's choice, the other side regarded the plan as a blind and opposed it accordingly.

Samuel Townsend offered a resolution to submit the old Grove street site with the corner plot, with plans for an eight-room house, but the measure was lost by a five to four vote, Messrs. Townsend, Valiant, Joy and Woodruff voting for, and Messrs. Honeyman, Cooley, Fountain, Needham and Cooley voting against it. *Mr. Honeyman spoke in favor of en*larging the Watchung School, and a suggestion was made to offer the Vine street site. No vote was taken on these. When it finally became apparent that the board could not agree on any plan outside of the submission of *the corner lot the Board voted to pres*ent that alone.

This site is o'fered for $5,500, and it takes in the lot and house adjoining. All the other centrally located lots were considered by the Board, but every other one of the available lots is priced so high that the majority of the Board believes the choice would practically be confined to the corner lot no matter how many of the others were submitted.

High School Play.

The class of 1906 of Plainfield High School presented "Raggles in the Rear" at Franklin School hall Saturday evening. The play was well received by an audience which crowded the place to its full capacity.

Killed While at Work.

The body of James Haines, colored, who was killed while operating an electric crane at Garwood on Saturday, was brought to Cole's morgue.

Miss May Serrell's Party.

Miss May Serrell, of Plainfield avenue, entertained twenty of her young women friends at a shirt waist party Saturday afternoon.

THE COSSACKS FLED

General Kuroki Reports Defeat of Russian Force.

SQUADRON WAS ALMOST WIPED OUT

Paris Hears of Great Japanese Defeat—Continued Skirmishing In Hills Near Liaoyang—Japs Playing a Waiting Game.

LONDON, May 25.—A Tokyo dispatch says General Kuroki has reported that a section of Japanese infantry encountered and defeated 200 Cossacks at Toutsokon, eight miles northeast of Kuangtien. The Cossacks fled to Aiyoungpinemen, leaving twenty dead. The Japanese sustained no losses.

Additional details of the fight at Wangchiatun, near Takushan, indicate that the squadron of Cossacks was almost annihilated by the Japanese infantry, which surrounded and completely routed the enemy. All the Russian officers were killed, wounded or captured. Natives report that some of the Cossacks escaped on foot, abandoning their equipment. Many killed or wounded were found on the battlefield.

A Paris report says the Japanese have been defeated, with terrible loss, in a battle near Kinchau. The report says the Japanese lost 9,000 men, the Russians 3,000. No details are given. There are two places of that name in the zone of active war operations, and the Japs have been trying to force a landing at both. One is south of Newchwang; the other is on the Port Arthur railroad, just north of the be*sieged port.*

A report from Liaoyang says there is continual skirmishing between the Russian cavalry and the Japanese. Cossacks are harassing the Japanese in the hills and byroads, generally driving them back.

The general plan of the Japanese has *not been divulged. They are apparent*ly marking time, awaiting the arrival of reserves from Korea, who have been delayed owing to the impassability of the roads.

The Japanese are sending all invalids in the direction of the Yalu to a central hospital.

The Chinese report the destruction of another Japanese battleship off Port Arthur, but the report is unconfirmed and is not credited.

Seven Japanese, who landed from junks near Port Arthur and started toward the town with the intention of dynamiting the docks were captured and shot.

A typhoon is raging off the coast.

A St. Petersburg report says the prevailing opinion at the headquarters of the general staff is that the withdrawal of the Japanese upon Fengwangcheng means that the enemy has decided to devote himself primarily to operations against the Russian flank and that the present object of General Kuroki, with the first army, supported by General Nadya, with the third army, now landing near Takushan, is to watch General Kuropatkin and prevent a move southward, which would take General Oku and the second army, on the Liaotung peninsula, in the rear.

A Liaoyang dispatch says that the Japanese have evacuated Fengwangcheng and are occupying the villages in the surrounding territory. It is thought that it may be connected with the prevailing cholera epidemic.

From Mukden it is reported that General Rennenkampff's Cossacks have captured two Japanese transport columns, thus leaving the Japanese army without supplies in a difficult country.

Gillespie Murder Trial.

RISING SUN, Ind., May 25.—The fate of James S. Gillespie, Myron Barbour, Mrs. Carrie Barbour, his wife, and Mrs. Belle Seward, charged with the murder of Elizabeth Gillespie, will soon hang on the deliberations of the jury. The examination of James Gillespie has been concluded, and, contrary to expectation, the cross examination was not protracted. Mrs. Belle Seward was the last witness called by the defense, and, like the other defendants, she testified in connection with the crime. The testimony is all in. The state, however, gave notice that if the court would allow it the state would call Myron Barbour and would ask him the cause of his unfriendliness to Elizabeth Gillespie.

Alkali Ike Is Dead.

GRAND ENCAMPMENT, Wyo., May 25.—Daniel Burrows, familiarly known on the frontier as Alkali Ike, is dead at the Saratoga hot springs. He came to Wyoming forty years ago from Independence, Mo., and was a friend of Bill Nye. He was a well known frontier character and was with General Miles in many of his Indian fights.

Spain Wants French Friendship.

PARIS, May 25.—The rumors that King Alfonso intends to abandon his proposed visit to President Loubet in order to avoid friction with the pope are unfounded. The visit will certainly take place. All Spanish statesmen desire that his majesty shall visit France, as they are anxious for a rapprochement with that country.

Engineer of Barge Canal.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 25.—State Engineer Van Alstyn has appointed Emil Low of Buffalo as resident engineer on the barge canal. He was employed on the United States engineering force at Buffalo which was in charge of Major Symonds.

Five Negro Leaders Arrested.

NYACK, N. Y., May 25.—The strike at the Haverstraw brickyards, which was forced by 300 negroes, has practically ended. Five ringleaders were arrested, charged with intimidating the men and compelling them to strike.

BASEBALL SCORES.

Results of Yesterday's Games In National and American Leagues.

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

At Pittsburg—
Boston..... 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—0
Pittsburg..... 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 1—1
Batteries—Wilhelm and Moran; Miller and Phelps.

TABLE OF PERCENTAGES.

Club.	W.	L.	P.C.
Cincinnati	19	10	.655
Chicago	19	10	.655
New York	19	10	.643
St. Louis	14	15	.555
Pittsburg	13	15	.493
Brooklyn	13	17	.433
Boston	10	15	.345
Philadelphia	7	19	.175

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

At New York—
St. Louis..... 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—0
New York..... 0 0 0 1 0 0 1 0 *—2
Batteries—Pelty and Sugden; Chesbro and McGuire.

At Chicago—
Chicago..... 0 0 0 1 0 0 0 1 0—2
Boston..... 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—0
Batteries—Walsh and McFarland; Dineen and Farrell.

At Philadelphia—
Detroit..... 0 0 0 0 1 0 3 2 0—6
Philadelphia..... 0 0 1 0 0 1 0 0 0—2
Batteries—Killian and Wood; Bender and Schreck.

At Washington—
Cleveland..... 1 0 0 3 1 5 0 0 0—10
Washington..... 1 0 0 0 0 0 1 0 0—2
Batteries—Rhoades and Bemis; Dunkle and Drill.

TABLE OF PERCENTAGES.

Club.	W.	L.	P.C.
Boston	20	9	.690
New York	17	12	.571
Cleveland	15	13	.535
Philadelphia	15	13	.535
Chicago	12	15	.444
St. Louis	12	15	.444
Detroit	11	15	.379
Washington	6	20	.231

Dolly Spanker Won Jockey Club.

NEW YORK, May 25.—Dolly Spanker, 7 to 10 favorite, won the Jockey Club weight for age, mile and a furlong, at Morris park. Eugenia Burch finished first, but was disqualified for fouling. The Southerner, an added starter, was placed second and Robin Hood third. The start was good, and in making the paddock turn Eugenia Burch, Cormack up, who was on the outside, pulled over on Robin Hood, who in turn bumped Major Dangerfield and nearly knocked him down. Eugenia Burch and Dolly Spanker raced together to the stretch, where Cormack sent Eugenia Burch to the front and won driving by three-quarters of a length from Dolly Spanker, who was eight lengths in front of The Southerner. Robin Hood was fourth, five lengths back. W. B. Ewing, at 60 to 1, won the Amateur Cup for gentlemen riders, while Coligny, favorite, won the Meadowbrook Hunters steeplechase.

Jake Greenberg Got Merchants'.

CINCINNATI, May 25.—Jake Greenberg, with B. Davis in the saddle, won the Merchants' Selling stakes over a fast track at Latonia. The stake, which was for three-year-olds and upward and worth $1,815 to the winner, brought out a field of eleven. Fonsoluca was the favorite at 7 to 2, but did not finish in the money. Jake Greenberg went to the front at the three-quarters and won easily, with Handmore second and Harding third. In the second race Reservation ran a mile in 1:39¾.

Bookies Were Hard Hit.

ST. LOUIS, May 25.—The bookmakers were losers at Delmar park. Five well played horses won for the talent. Liddon won the first, Sid Silver the second, Footlight's Favorite, backed from fours to 5 to 2, nosed out Frank Collins in the third, Toby Tosa reached the wire a head in front of Deutschland in the feature event, and King Ellsworth won the closing event.

Dead Heat at Hawthorne.

CHICAGO, May 25.—Major Mansir at 30 to 1 and Lacy Crawford, an odds on favorite, ran a dead heat in the fifth race at Hawthorne. The race was at a mile and an eighth, and as neither horse was in shape to travel the distance a second time the purse was divided.

Methodists Favor Church Union.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—With enthusiastic approval the Methodist Protestant conference here received the proposition for church union embracing their denomination, the Congregationalists and the United Brethren. The conference unanimously indorsed the interchurch movement for uniform law on marriage and divorce and authorized a committee of three to represent the denomination in this regard.

Duggins Is Without Remorse.

LAPORTE, Ind., May 25.—Jerry Duggins, who is under sentence to be hanged here, has made a confession. He says Mrs. Ramsey of Terre Haute, whom he murdered with her two children, refused to leave her husband and elope with him. Duggins says it was for that reason he killed her and the two children, when they were sleeping at the time. *He is apparently without re*morse for his crime.

Secretary Moody Out Again.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Secretary Moody was able to take a short drive. The exact nature of his malady is not disclosed, but it is understood to be either the hives or a mild type of measles contracted during his recent cruise in Cuban waters. He is under medical treatment and is expected to be able to resume his official duties at the navy department in a few days.

Killed Man Who Insulted Her.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 25.—Joseph Hastings, forty-five years old, was shot and killed here by Mrs. Frank Hicks. She says she had known Hastings about two years. He came to see her, and she could not make him go away. She says he insulted her, and she got a revolver and shot him.

Doubts Ended, Both Dead.

ST. JOHN, N. B., May 25.—A message has been received from Oromocto river announcing that the bodies of John H. Thomson, a military storekeeper, and R. P. Foster of the general Bank of Canada of this city had been recovered. The men were drowned on Sunday while fishing.

LABOR ORGANIZER ON UNION BENEFITS

Representative of International Association of Machinists' Makes Address.

HE REFERS TO "SCABS"

A LARGE NUMBER OF POND'S MACHINISTS PRESENT AT MEETING.

The Dangers of Non-Unionism—High Wages Mean a Better Education of Workingman's Children—Child Labor Laws.

M. W. Landers, general organizer of the Grand Lodge, International Association of Machinists, addressed seventy-five or more of the machinists affected by the recent ten per cent cut in wages at the shops of the Pond Machine Tool Company, in Trades' Council Hall last Friday.

Some of those at the meeting, which was called by the local branch of the Association, are men who were dropped from the organization at the end of the last strike as Pond's, because they were considered to have deserted the strikers' ranks in returning to work. He incidently referred to the term "scab," which was originally used to designate a member of a union who took a fellow-unionist's place when the latter was out on strike in an effort to better his condition.

The indiscriminate used of the word by men who say "all scabs are alike," has caused more ill feeling among the machinists than any other one thing, said he. One man may return to work out of consideration for the welfare of his family, being practically forced to take action which another member of the same union believes for altogether selfish reasons; such for instance as the desire to get a job from some better man who is more loyal. Some parts of Mr. Landers' talk dealt with the conditions of the unorganized machinists who are, said he, because of their moral cowardice, allowing their constitutional rights to be taken from them, and in losing rights already theirs, sinking to a lower level than of the negro slaves of the old South, who at least were valued at so many dollars.

The speaker made a plea in behalf of the children who are driven to work at an early age because of the limited earning capacity of their parents. He urged every man present, who had not done so, to sign an application for membership in the union.

Business Manager J. A. Sonnabend, of Newark, was present also and spoke briefly, urging the men to join the organization now so as to be in a position to defy any attempt to reduce their pay.

A number of applications were signed and others promised to consider the question carefully.

TROLLEY SURVEY COMPLETED

WORK UNDER WAY FOR THE P. S. C. LINE TO METUCHEN.

The preliminary survey for the trolley extension to Metuchen has been completed to Marconnier chapel, and the line itself is staked as far as the Driving Park.

Although every effort will be made to have the spur to the latter place in operation by the first of July, it is doubtful if it can be done.

The proposed spur to Allis Oval from Park avenue and Randolph road will not be built immediately, according to present indications, as it requires sixty days to secure a franchise for such construction.

Another difficulty to be considered, is that although the verbal consents of the property owners along the Metuchen extension have been secured, the changes in grade which at some places will amount to several feet, may cause some of them to reconsider at least temporarily, their attitude toward the improvement.

Allis Grandstands Seat 1,500.

The Allis Club has purchased the Hope Y. M. A. grandstands and placed them on Crescent Oval, thus making a total seating capacity of 1,500. The extra seats were secured in anticipation of the large crowds that will want to witness the series of five games arranged for the rest of the season, although it is believed that there will be a severe attest on Saturday, June 11, when the ministers play the physicians.

Mayor Bill Patron of Music.

Mayor Bill Smith, the New Market "milliouaire," has arranged another musical evening. Before he goes away he will have Harry Witters, of this city, the harmonica expert, out to his place for a second recital similar to the one held last week. Mr. Witters will be supported by a piano player and a banjoist. The harmonica is the Mayor's favorite musical instrument.

MYSTERIOUS WOMAN PUZZLES NEW MARKET

Richly Gowned and in Tears She Rebels Against Making Her Identity Known.

MRS. H. LEROY JONES?

THEORY THAT STRANGER IS MISSING WIFE OF MILLIONAIRE.

Tells Squire von Minden That She is the Wife of New Brunswick Brickworker—Her Story is Discredited.

New Market has a "beautiful woman" mystery. The village is convinced that the woman in the case is the lost Mrs. H. Leroy Jones, the millionaire's wife for whom the police of New York and the entire East are searching. Mrs. Jones disappeared from her husband's side at the Morris Park on Monday, and nothing has been seen of her since.

On Wednesday afternoon a "beautiful, refined looking" woman got off a Lehigh Valley train at New Market. She wandered about the village in an apparently aimless manner for several hours and then disappeared. At dusk she was discovered seated at the side of the roadway leading from the village weeping. She attracted the attention of Miss Alice Perrine, who told Justice VonMinden of the incident. The justice examined the woman in a fruitless effort to discover her trouble.

She refused to explain her tears or her actions. "I am an American citizen," she said with dignity, "and can do as I please." She said her husband was a brickworker in New Brunswick. The New Market people say her dress was too richly gowned and her manner too refined to admit of the truth of that statement.

Justice VonMinden turned her over to Constable Pierce, with instructions to hold her until the question of her sanity had been determined. Constable Pierce, it is said, took pity on the distressed woman, and put her on the train for New Brunswick. At any rate she is not in New Market any longer, and the people there are sure she was the Mrs. Jones whose name has appeared in the columns of the New York papers since Tuesday. One man was so sure of this that he telephoned the story of the mysterious female to a New York paper yesterday. The paper has done nothing in the way of sleuthing out the clue yet, but a descent of yellow journalistic detectives is looked for at any minute.

SYMPATHY FOR VACCARIELLO

HIS VICTIM, TONY MARTIN, SAID TO HAVE BEEN A BAD MAN.

Later developments in the shooting affray on Hunter avenue, Scotch Plains, Saturday night, which cost Tony Martin his life, shows a growing sentiment of sympathy for Charles Vaccariello, the alleged murderer. Now that the excitement of the affair is beginning to pass over the residents of the colony are beginning to talk more freely.

It is said that Martin was a bad man when under the influence of liquor and tried to scare the rest of the residents with an alleged record of having killed a man in New York city several years ago. Vaccariello lived next door to Martin and at one time the two were the best of friends, Martin being the one who introduced Vaccariello to his bride of only a few months. This fact the murdered man was constantly throwing up to the young husband, accompanied, it is alleged, to things in the bride's life before she was married.

Constant bickerings made the two enemies. On Saturday night at a card party at which beer flowed freely, Martin after filling up began to pick on Vaccariello and made a vile remark about Mrs. Vaccariello. Words waxed warm. Suddenly Martin pulled out his revolver and began blazing away. Vaccariello, who no doubt expected trouble would become serious at some time, was also armed and returned the fire. If this is the true story Vaccariello may return and give himself up to the officers of the law, as he acted only in self-defense.

Sold Sweet Morsels.

The cake sale of the Young Women's Mission Band, of Trinity church, held in the church parlor Saturday afternoon, was a complete success. A neat sum will go into the Band's treasury. The committee in charge was made up of Miss Lillian Force, chairman; Mrs. Alfred Baker, Mrs. William Startup and Miss Anna Searing.

Twenty-Five Years Married.

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Phillips, of Bookview terrace, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage on Saturday, entertaining about forty-five relatives and friends, many of whom had attended the wedding

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1904. NO. 22.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

BOROUGH JAIL BIDS ARE BEING RECEIVED

Contract for Alterations to Warren Engine House is Soon to be Awarded.

PLANS ARE OUTLINED

UP-TO-DATE METHODS TO BE INTRODUCED IN DEPARTMENT.

Money to Come Out of the General Fund—Improvements to Cost $1,000—New Roof on Structure—To Keep Records.

Active preparation is being made by the borough authorities for the conversion of the old engine house on Somerset street into a modern jail. Work on the remodelling of the interior of the structure will begin in a very short time.

At present the police committee is receiving bids for new cells to be installed in the rear of the house. The cages will be three in number, modelled exactly like the steel ones in the city jail. Each cell will have two beds. The floor beneath the cells will be cemented, and the sanitary arrangements will be of the finest and most modern kind.

Chief Weiss, of the police force, will have an office in the front part of the lower floor. A new desk is to be placed there for him, and in connection with other improvements a better and more systematized method of keeping the jail and court records will be inaugurated. The use of a registration blotter, something unknown in the borough, will be the chief feature of the new regime. On this blotter all the data of interest to criminologists will be kept. Every prisoner will be measured according to the Bertillon system, and other details usually noted by the regularly organized police forces will be taken. These records will be carefully kept and filed.

The upper floor will be remodelled into a court room of ample size. The present court is small, ill ventilated and inadequate. The proposed chamber will be a very great improvement.

A new roof will be put on the structure, and needed attention will be given to other worn parts of the building. When the work is completed the borough will have one of the best appointed jails of any municipality of its size in the State.

It is estimated that the improvements will cost $1,000. The money will be taken from the general fund.

COULD NOT HANDLE CROWD.

Arlington Avenue Line Service Insufficient on Monday.

The Public Service Corporation fell down Monday on the Arlington avenue service. Although just double the number of cars were used on the various lines, they were not sufficient to carry the large crowds travelling to Crescent Oval and the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club. Many persons were obliged to walk from the Oval to town. On Saturday a crowd got on an Arlington avenue car at Randolph road and Park avenue, were carried to the golf grounds and were obliged to pay a double fare to get back to town, much to their disgust.

Chief Dougherty at St. Louis.

William Dougherty, chief of police of the New Jersey Central, left for St. Louis this morning, where he will attend the convention of railway special agents on Friday and Saturday and the police chief's convention on Sunday and Monday. While in St. Louis he will visit the Exposition, leaving for home on June 13.

Miss Berry's Wedding Day.

Invitations were issued today to the marriage of Miss Ruth Berry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Berry, of 40 Grove street, and William Bowley Faber, of 38 Rockview avenue, which will be celebrated in the Church of the Holy Cross, Wednesday afternoon, June 22, at 5 o'clock.

To Study Nursing.

Following her graduation from the Plainfield High School this month, Miss Elizabeth Wilson will enter the Training School for Nurses at Muhlenberg Hospital as a pupil nurse. After the new Nurses' Home is completed two more pupil nurses will be admitted.

Connie Overland Fined.

Connie Overland arrested for drunkenness Saturday night, was fined $3 by Recorder Dond in the borough court Monday night.

Mr. and Mrs. George Giddes, of Dorr street, have been entertaining relatives from Brooklyn for a week.

PLAINFIELD GOT $138,705

PAYMENTS MADE IN N. J. ON LIFE INSURANCE DURING 1903.

The following figures on life insurance, of interest to Plainfielders, are given in the annual review of the payments made during 1903 of the Life Insurance Press:

Plainfield received $138,705 of the missions paid out, being far down in the list of the leading cities. One payment of over $10,000 was made here—on the life of Charles B. Fest, $20,000.

The payments throughout the entire State amounted to $12,065,452. This is considerably more than last year.

OVERHAULING DRIVING PARK

GETTING THE PLACE INTO SHAPE FOR THE HORSE SHOW.

In preparation for the horse show, the grounds of the Driving Club on Park avenue are being overhauled and improved. When the affair comes off the Driving Park will be in the finest possible shape.

Workmen are now engaged in cutting the grass. The grandstand is to be made more comfortable and attractive, and the inside track will be regraded.

Horsemen all over this section are beginning to be interested in the show. Indications point to a record-breaking attendance.

INJURED BY HIS PLAYMATE

PERCY EMERY HURT IN THE KNEE, HE SAYS, BY HERBERT HAND.

Percy Emery, the eleven-year-old son of Adolphus Emery, of Somerset street, was taken to Dr. Pittis yesterday afternoon, suffering from a severe hurt to his knee. He said Herbert Hand, the fifteen-year-old son of Charles H. Hand, had kicked him. The leg was hurt so badly that the boy was disabled. Dr. Pittis found it necessary to swath the limb in a number of bandages, and this morning the leg was so badly swollen as to cause grave anxiety.

According to the injured boy's story, Hand became enraged over his refusal to give him a ticket punch that another boy had handed to Emery for inspection. Without any warning, the Emery boy says, young Hand fell on him, bit his arm and kicked him. Percy suffered so much from his injury that he had to be carried to the doctor's office.

Mr. Emery said this morning, to a Daily Press reporter, that he would take action in the matter as soon as the full extent of his son's injuries had been determined.

BADGLEY ON ALIS NINE.

Easton Papers Say He Has Signed With Manager Johnston's Team.

The Easton papers have announced that Badgley, the crack Lehigh pitcher, has signed with Manager Johnston. They say he will begin to do slab work for Alis after June 15, when the college season closes. Manager Johnston has said that Badgley was a possibility, but so far he has denied that he is anything more than that.

If Badgley does come to Alis the other teams will have to sit up and watch all through the game. Badgley is one of the best pitchers in the semi-professional ranks.

REVISING HANDICAPS.

Hillside Club Already at Work on Task of Importance.

The handicap committee at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club has already begun the work of trimming the handicaps of members. In some instances recently some of the contestants have shown a marked improvement in their game and their old handicaps have been pared accordingly. The work of getting these handicaps to the proper basis for the season will require some time, as the committee is giving much care and thought to the matter.

Wedding Invitations Issued.

Mr. and Mrs. Augustus VanDeventer, of No. 2 Myrtle avenue, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Eleanor Thurston VanDeventer, to George Herbert Whittingham, of the borough, in Holy Cross church on Wednesday evening, June 22, at 7 o'clock.

Witnessed Raritan Races.

Dr. Knott drove a party of friends with a spike team to New Brunswick, Decoration Day, where they witnessed the races held by the Raritan Driving Association.

SUES TO RECOVER ON TOWNSHIP BONDS

Isaac P. Runyon Commences Action for $75,000 Against New Providence Township.

MR. SMYTH PLAINTIFF

STORY OF THE BUILDING OF PEAPACK AND PASSAIC VALLEY ROAD.

Township Took Stock in Railroad in Pursuance of an Act of the Legislature.—Following Example of Other Townships.

Roland M. Smyth, through Isaac P. Runyon, Esq., has brought suit in the United States Circuit Court, against the inhabitants of New Providence, in this county, the state of demand being $75,000, while the true amount is about $37,000.

The suit was started on May 24 to recover on certain bonds issued by New Providence township on January 1, 1869, pursuant to an act of the New Jersey Legislature, authorizing certain townships in Union and Somerset Counties to issue bonds and take stock in the Peapack and Passaic Valley Railroad, which is now a branch of the Lackawanna Railroad. The road was built at that time and the township took stock and issued and sold bonds for that purpose. In nearly every case the bonds were sold for 85 cents on the dollar in the open market and were purchased as an investment.

The township paid the interest on the bonds for awhile, but inasmuch as it did not realize as much benefit from the railroad stock as was expected, it was not considered a paying enterprise. The various townships interested have settled except New Providence and they have settled for a large portion of the bonds. Last fall Mr. Runyon settled a batch of similar cases without suit.

The plaintiff avers that he is an innocent holder for value. The sum of eighty-five cents on the dollar was paid less than a year after the issue of bonds. Mr. Smyth lives in Brooklyn. The case will be tried at Trenton or Newark in September.

MARGARET LARUE A BRIDE

PLAINFIELDER BECOMES WIFE OF A BROOKLYN NEWSPAPER MAN.

Announcement is made that Miss Margaret A. LaRue, of this city, and Clarence D. Andrade, of Brooklyn, were quietly married in Kingston, N. Y., on Monday, May 23. The ceremony took place in the Albany Avenue Baptist church, the Rev. Philip B. Stong, the pastor, officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrade are spending their honeymoon at Niagara Falls. They will go to St. Louis to take in the Louisiana Purchase Exposition and expect to spend the summer in California.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. LaRue, of 140 East Ninth street. Mr. Andrade is a former city editor of the York, Pa., Gazette, and for some time was connected with Turf, Field and Farm and other well known periodicals.

Won First Honors.

Louis W. Conover, of New Market, won first honors in the classical course at Rutgers College this year. He is a member of the Senior Class. The baccalaureate sermon will be preached in the Second Reformed church, New Brunswick, on Sunday, June 30, by Rev. Henry E. Cobb, of the West End Collegiate church, New York.

Golf Events Postponed.

The approaching and putting contest scheduled for Memorial Day at the Park Golf Club, was postponed on account of the rain to Saturday. This and the weekly competition for the President's and Park Golf Club cups will be the events for that day.

Successful Skin Grafting.

John Butler, colored, of Manning avenue, who several months ago was severely burned about the head and arms, has fully recovered. Skin grafting was resorted to, flesh being taken from the arm to cover the head.

High School Dance.

The Alumni Association of the North Plainfield High School will give a reception to the Class '04 in the Casino on Friday night, June 17.

Gathering of Osteopaths.

Osteopaths practicing in this vicinity will meet Saturday night in the office of Dr. Herring in the Babcock building, for conference.

A REALTY CO.'S RECEIVER

APPOINTMENT MADE TO TAKE CARE OF SILAS D. DRAKE'S CONCERN.

Former Senator James H. VanCleef, of New Brunswick, has been appointed receiver for the Prudential Realty Company by Vice Chancellor Reed.

The receiver was appointed at the request of Peter G. Palhemus and other stockholders of the company, which deals in land in northern Middlesex county. The applicants claim that their interests are not properly guarded. Silas Dewey Drake is the present head of the company.

JOHN BECKMAN'S BIRTHDAY

MERRY PARTY OF FRIENDS SURPRISED HIM AT HIS HOME LAST NIGHT.

John Beckman's birthday was yesterday. He was reminded of the fact last night by a merry party of friends, who descended suddenly and without warning upon him at his home on Fairview avenue.

The party that followed was a delightful one. Games of various kinds, music, dancing and singing were the features. In a pit contest, Miss Grace Emmons won the women's prize and William Cassebrook captured the men's prize. Mrs. Harry Taylor had a clear title to the booby prize.

Refreshments were served at the close of the evening. Mr. and Mrs. George E. Dunham arranged the affair.

H. B. DRAKE'S WEDDING DAY

HIS MARRIAGE TO PHILADELPHIA GIRL TAKES PLACE NEXT WEDNESDAY.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Miss Edna T. Williams, daughter of the late H. B. Williams, of Philadelphia, and niece of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Williams, of West Seventh street, to Henry Baldwin Drake, son of Nanton F. Drake, of Somerset street.

The affair will be quietly celebrated Wednesday afternoon, June 8, at 4 o'clock, at the home of the bride's cousin, Richard D. Williams, 600 Darrow avenue. The ceremony will be according to the custom of the Society of Friends, there being no officiating minister. After a honeymoon the couple will reside at the groom's home on Dorr street.

P. H. S. CADETS FINAL DRILL

CAPTAIN EDWARDS TO REVIEW BATTALION AND TO PRESENT MEDALS.

The final drill of the Plainfield High School battalion will be held at Crescent Oval Friday. Owing to failure of the members to compete, the individual prize for excellence in the manual of arms will not be awarded.

The drill will close with a review by Captain George F. Edwards, the first commandant of the battalion, who will also present the 100 per cent. medals for drill attendance.

Captain Edwards, who resides in Cranford at present, was for some time in charge of the Leal's School cadet corps, when that organization was a familiar sight marching to and from the Crescent Rink where the drills were held twice a week.

Miss Clawson's Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. James Clawson, of West Seventh street, have issued invitations to the wedding of their daughter, Miss Louella A. Clawson, and Asa Fitz Randolph, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan F. Randolph, of Belleview, in the Seventh-Day Baptist church Thursday evening, June 9, at 7:30 o'clock.

Woman's Exchange Luncheon.

Members of the Woman's Exchange are arranging to hold another one of a series of luncheons at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Thursday, June 9. The luncheons already given during the past season have been very successful, netting the exchange a gratifying sum.

Hearing in Case Against Borough.

The certiorari case brought by John Goodwin, through his counsel, S. S. Swackhamer, against the borough, is set for a hearing in the Supreme Court at Trenton for June 6. It is expected that the case will be argued without further adjournment.

—Strawberries are getting finer in quality every day. And the price is getting cheaper as the flavor gets better. The best berries in the market—Maryland's finest—are to be had at Neuman Bros.

YOUNG WOMEN GIVE A DELIGHTFUL FESTIVAL

An Entertainment As An Additional Attraction in the First Baptist Church.

A PLEASING PICTURE

MISS ADA FOUNTAIN CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE IN CHARGE.

Violin Selections, Dumb-Bell Drill and Recitations—Miss Florence Serrell Treasurer—The Programme.

Strawberries, cake, ice cream and candy were the temptations to took less spending, offered at the festival held by the Young Ladies' Missionary Society, of the First Baptist church, last night.

Notwithstanding the dismal weather the attendance was scarcely smaller than would have been the case had the original programme of an outdoor affair been followed.

The large lecture room of the church had been cleared of seats and an array of tastily laid tables formed a pleasing picture under the bright lights.

Beside the refreshments a short programme was given, which included violin selections by Miss Florence Wolfert and a dumb-bell drill by Lawrence French, who also recited. Miss Emmons played a piano accompaniment to the drill.

Miss Ada Fountain was chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements and was ably seconded by the following young women: Miss Alice Sortiner, Miss Velma Oakley, Mrs. Frank Jones, Mrs. Walter G. Dobbins.

Those on the candy committee were Mrs. W. B Vail, Miss May Batchelor, Miss Carrie Combs and Miss Etta Acker.

The waitresses, who so efficiently served the refreshments, were Miss Pauline Denton, Miss Angie Kinsman, Miss Ethel King, Miss Cleeto Bird, Miss Josephine Serrell, Miss Lizzie VanCleaven, Miss Florence Wolfert, Miss Edna Lewis, Miss Elsie Drake, Miss Bessie Flanders and Miss Bessie TenEyck. The cash tickets were in charge of Miss Florence Serrell, treasurer of the society.

JUSTICE PAROLES TRUANT

JOHN CONSHEE, WHO PLAYED "HOOKEY" IS ON HIS GOOD BEHAVIOR.

John Conshee, the thirteen-year-old truant arrested two weeks ago, has been released under a limited parole by Justice Mattison. Since his arrest the boy has been behaving himself and attending school regularly. After a conference between the Justice and A. V. D. Honeyman, who acted for the truancy committee, it was decided to take no action whatever in the case until the end of the school year. If Conshee continues his good behavior he will be allowed to go free. If he has a relapse of the "hookey" habit he will be sent to Somerville and the authorities will seek to have him committed from there to the State Reform School.

Glee Club's Good Work.

The Plainfield High School Banjo and Mandolin Club, composed of Garth Williams, Chester H. Briggs, Theodore O. Gavett, William E. Briggs, Irving Martin, Monroe H. Long, Herbert Smith and VanWyck Brooks, has been making excellent progress during the past season. The club made a most favorable appearance at the recent graduation of nurses in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, receiving hearty applause for its work. Of late, the club has been taking up several difficult selections and the rendition is creditable.

To Erect Handsome Dwelling.

D. G. Weems, of Colorado, who has been making his home here for some time, has purchased through the Mulford agency, the valuable lot corner of Hillside and Prospect avenues, belonging to Frederick Gray, and he will erect a handsome dwelling for his own occupancy. L. M. Archer, of the Prudence Exchange, has rented through the same agency, W. M. Sandford's house on Woodland avenue, near Watchung avenue.

Saturday's Golf Attractions.

In addition to the weekly play for the Golf Committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Saturday there will be the play-off for the kickers' handicap between seven contestants who were tie on Memorial Day with a score of 77.

'PLAINS GUN CLUB RECORD

POOR SCORES MADE AT THE HOLIDAY SHOOTS OF SUBURBAN ORGANIZATION.

The regular holiday shoot at the Scotch Plains Gun Club was productive of much sport, but poor scores. The latter were as follows:

Schmidt	2	2	4	3	4	4	2	2	1	4—31
Jahn	4	3	3	3	4	2	3	2	1	3—29
Johnston	3	4	5	5	4	3	4	5	2	4—39

Schmidt	3	2	3	4	2	3—16
Johnston	4	2	3	5	4	3—21
Jahn	1	4	2	3	4	3—17
Robison	3	2	3	5	4	3—19
Hand	2	4	3	2	3	3—17

TO DECORATE HIS GRAVE

PYTHIAN KNIGHTS TO HONOR MEMORY OF HARVEY L. PATTERSON.

The members of Crescent Company, No. 13, U. R., K. of P., will go to Fort Chester, N. Y., next Sunday for the purpose of decorating the grave of their late brother, Harvey L. Patterson, who met his death in the Westfield wreck. This is an annual custom and the local Knights will be met at Fort Chester by members of Fort Chester Company, No. 88, U. R., K. of P., who will assist in the services. Crescent Company will meet at its lodge rooms Sunday morning at 8:15 sharp and proceed to the North Avenue station to take the 8:53 train. The Company will be in command of Captain J. E. Flannery.

SUPREME COURT DISTRICTS

UNION COUNTY TO BE IN THE FIFTH CIRCUIT AFTER JUNE 15.

Taking advantage of the authority vested in them by the last Legislature, the justices of the Supreme Court have decided on an almost complete re-arrangement of the judicial districts of the State. Five of the nine circuits have been changed, so far as county lines are concerned, and, with the exception of the Chief Justice and Justice Dixon, who will retain their present assignments, the jurists will sit either in new fields or have their present territory changed. The changes will take effect June 15, and a certificate setting forth this fact will be filed with the clerk of the Supreme Court probably tomorrow.

Justice Hendrickson will, as stated, preside in the third circuit, which, instead of comprising Union and Ocean counties, as at present, will include Monmouth, Burlington and Ocean counties. Justice Bennett Van Syckel, who has presided over the third district for a number of years, will retire from the court June 1.

The fifth circuit will be made up of Middlesex and Union counties, instead of Monmouth and Middlesex, as at present. Justice John Franklin Fort, who has the fifth circuit at present, will continue under the new conditions.

The eighth circuit, at present composed of Morris, Somerset and Sussex counties, has been changed, and will hereafter include Bergen, Morris and Somerset. Justice Abram G. Garrison will continue to officiate in this circuit.

TRINITY SUPPLY.

Revs. T. E. Davis and G. B. Shaw to Officiate During Pastor's Absence.

Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of Trinity Reformed church, will be absent two Sundays during attendance at the meeting of the General Synod. Next Sunday his pulpit will be occupied by Rev. Titus E. Davis, morning and evening. The following Sunday will be Children's Day and the morning service will be in charge of the Sunday-school. In the evening Rev. George B. Shaw, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, will preach.

"Christy" Taking a Rest.

Christy Mathewson, of the New York Nationals, has been spending a couple of days at his home in this city. His general condition is much better than at any time since the opening of the baseball season and he believes that when the weather settles down to genuine summer heat he will be found all right in the pitching line.

Editors to Meet.

The forty-eighth annual meeting of the members of the New Jersey Editorial Association will be held at The Kittatinny, Delaware Water Gap, beginning on Friday, June 10, and continuing until Monday morning, June 13.

—Col. Miles at Salvation Army postponed for a week.

MRS. HANNAH NELSON HAS FATAL MALADY

Mother of the Late Mrs. Chas. L. Fair in Serious Condition at Home of a Daughter.

SHE HAS SIX CHILDREN

AT HER DEATH THE ESTATE IS TO BE DIVIDED AMONG HEIRS.

Trip to California Weakened the Aged Woman—Has Been Sinking Slowly—Selling Property in New York.

Mrs. Hannah E. Nelson, mother of Caroline D. Fair, who, with her husband, Charles L. Fair, was killed in an automobile accident in Paris on August 14, 1903, is seriously ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Joshua Leonard, in Caldwell. For some time past Mrs. Nelson has been in poor health and after her tiresome journey to San Francisco to effect a settlement of the Fair estate, her condition grew worse.

Several specialists were called in, but not one gave a definite opinion as to the cause of illness. Recently, a physician called to attend her decided that Mrs. Nelson has a cancer of the stomach, that she may live a few weeks or she may die at any minute.

At all events it is the unanimous opinion that Mrs. Nelson cannot live very long, owing to her advanced age and general condition. In case of her death her property will be divided among six children.

At present the furnishings in a house in Eighty-sixth street, near Central Park West, New York, owned by the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Fair, are being disposed of to assist in the further settlement of the estate.

CHURCH CONCERT.

Y. M. C. A. Symphony Club to Give Recital in Park Avenue Baptist Church.

For the benefit of the general church fund, the Y. M. C. A. Symphony Club will hold a concert in the Park Avenue Baptist church next Monday night. A fine programme has been arranged by Conductor Kenneth Shupp.

The club will be assisted by Miss Aimee Louise Emmons, reader; Miss Helen Shupp, soprano; S. A. Parcubek, violinist; Whitney Frazee, cornetist. Tickets for the affair may be secured at Hill & Shupp's department store on West Front street.

MRS. KREWSON DEAD.

Aged Woman Passes Away at Home of Her Daughter, Mrs. Carver.

Mrs. Sarah S. Krewson, widow of John K. Krewson, aged seventy-nine years, died this morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Joseph D. Carver, 421 West Second street, following a long illness. For some time Mrs. Krewson has been living with her daughter. The funeral services will be held from the above residence tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment will be at South Hampton, Pa.

Clever Actresses.

In the production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," given by the Randolph-Cooley Collegiate School on Friday, the part of Bottom was taken by Miss Hetty Marshall who displayed such spirit and intelligence in the interpretation of her lines. Miss Ellen Burke impersonated Quince and her acting was one of the cleverest bits of the performance. Miss Helen Joy, whose name was inadvertently omitted from our Saturday account, completely captivated the audience.

Dexter, Vice President.

The executive committee of the Eastern Railroad Association has elected these officers: President, Theodore N. Ely, P. R. R.; vice president, W. G. Besler, New Jersey Central; general counsel, R. J. Fisher; secretary, John J. Harrower; treasurer, A. A. Folsom.

To be Married Next Wednesday.

Miss Lottie Chamberlain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Chamberlain, and M. J. Ausen, of East Third street, will be married Wednesday night, June 8, at the home of the bride at 8 o'clock.

Pythian Memorial Sunday.

Pythian Memorial Sunday will be observed June 12 and Crescent Company, No. 13, U. R., K. of P., will join in an annual celebration of the event.

Mr. and Mrs. David Holland and daughter, of New York, were guests of H. D. Williams, of West End avenue, on Memorial Day.

JAPANESE CUSTOMS

QUAINT CEREMONIES FOUND IN INTERIOR DISTRICTS.

Gentleness, Humility, Patience and Forbearance Teachings of the Lord Thaka—Pathetic Record of a Mother's Death.

Far from the "maddening crowd" in Japan I find not only the people and their language, but religion, too, are full of fathomless interest. True it is I am in the center of a province where the doctrines of the Lord Thaka, who came into the world to teach gentleness, humility, patience and forbearance, according to the Buddhistic laws, have a supreme sway, and as I watch the quaint symbols and tender little rites, so conscientiously carried out, I echo the people's cry of "Mamu Amida Butsu" ("Hail and save us, Buddha"), and sigh for their Nirvana.

Here I have seen a sight not often met with in cities and towns, but frequently in the country places and suburbs. Two miles beyond the town a pathway plunges into a grove of dark pine trees and feathery bamboos, emerging by the banks of a quiet stream. By the water's edge is set a tall, slender tablet, with black, notched edges and sides, covered with fantastic lettering. Four bamboo poles set in the water, their hollow tops filled with field flowers, suspend a piece of cotton cloth stamped with the Chinese characters, "Amu mol ka cen ge kol" (all hail to the life-giving scriptures"). Resting within the cloth lies a wooden dipper. Could anything be more touching than the significance of this sagare kanjo (flowing invocation), denoting, as it does, that a women has given up the life for the first sweet hours of motherhood, a pathetic record of the laying down of one life that another may live? According to the Buddhistic belief, when death claims for his victim a sufferer at this time, the soul passes away to languish in a lake of blood in the darkness of Hades, for a transgression committed in a former state of being. In order to obtain liberation for the spirit of the mother and lessen her penalties, the symbolic cloth must be so worn out by the continuous pouring of water into it that the liquid instead of draining falls through at once. The early warfare passes by, sceptic or devout, as the case may be, but the ladle is reverently filled and emptied into the cloth to shorten the anguish of a soul in torment.

WHEN DISAPPOINTED IN LOVE.

Leaving the water's edge and strolling far beyond the outskirts of the village, I reach a winding lane that leads me up a flight of moss-grown, crumbling steps into the cemetery, where little Buddhas, with hands and gray headstones mark the last last resting place of countless sleepers. Last night, the close of the Feast of Lanterns, of Festival of the Dead, was celebrated, and thousands of lanterns and tiny pine torches twinkled among the hillsides, for the spirits of the departed have been revisiting the families and friends during three long nocturnal days, at the end of which they were guided back again to their tombs by loved ones, who formed long processions, carrying lanterns that shed a subdued white light over the slowly moving throng.

Nor can I leave this hallowed ground without stopping to place a stone on the heap before the Roker Jizo, "The Six Jizo," the gods of little children. Piles of stones are placed before these statues, but there pebble on pebble by the relatives, generally women, who have felt the joys and woes of motherhood, with a prayer to Jizo, thus helping some child soul to pursue its weary march along the river bed of the Buddhist Styx without cutting and wounding its little feet.

A stone's throw from these Jizo, within the temple grounds, there stands a most curious tree, bound with a fringed rope of rice straw that signifies its sanctity, yet with a trunk cruelly wounded and scarred with iron spikes from five to seven inches in length, just in the right origins of men made of straw. For this tree is supposed to possess supernatural powers of a very high order, and will visit vengeance upon those by whom and for whom it has been desecrated. Hence, in this primitive, out-of-the-way spot, a Japanese girl, disappointed in love, instead of placing roses upon the tomb of a faithless one who has broken her heart, waits for "the hour of the ox," two o'clock in the darkness of the morning, and with a crude image of straw, representing her lover, she repairs to a shrine, and, offering up her prayers for redress and future happiness, nails the effigy in place on the tree. These visits are paid several nights in succession to this same spot, until the object of the girl's vindictiveness sickens and dies.

MURASAKI AYAMI.

BIG CLAIM FOR DAMAGES.

Brooklyn Maid of All Work Asks $10,000 for Mr. Kittle's Kisses, Hugs and Squeezes.

A New York newspaper correspondent thus itemizes the bill:

To Broker Charles S. Kittle, No. 51 Wall street, sundry kisses, hugs, hand squeezes, etc. (under duress) $10,000

The creditor is Emma Kelacey, a servent, 20 years old. The consideration was delivered, or rather the damage was done, on the afternoon of March 25, at the home of Charles S.

HE HELD HER FAST.

Kittle, 1288 Degraw street, Brooklyn, in the absence of Mrs. Kittle, according to the legal papers duly setting forth the transaction, filed by Emma Kelacey in the Kings county supreme court. The case will be heard in the June trial term.

Mr. Kittle repudiates the bill, says it is blackmail and will fight the suit to the end.

Emma says in the papers that it was *her misfortune to be alone in the Kit*tle home when the master of the house returned unexpectedly from his office.

He proceeded to the kitchen, she declares, and put his arm about her waist. Then, she avers, he kissed her, again and again, causing her much mental anguish, and physical discomfort. He held her fast, she asserts, bruising her arms and neck. At that moment the bell rang.

"My God! my wife!" cried the broker, according to the complainant. He ran to the door. Emma locked herself in the butler's pantry. Kittle returned, says the complaint, and made speeches through the door, thereby adding to the bill of damages. Things were growing critical when the doorbell once more came to the rescue.

This time it was Mrs. Kittle, and the girl set about preparing dinner. The next morning she packed her trunk and left the house. With her lawyer, George A. Mott, she figured up her bill of damages at $10,000, and papers were served on the broker two weeks ago. He answered them through his attorney, James W. Ridgway. He makes a general denial.

GIRL FACES BIG BURGLAR.

Incidentally She Gives Him Tongue-Lashing and Makes Him Return Spoils.

"Hand over $23 and you may go."

The person who made the demand was a girl, young, fair and slender. The person to whom it was addressed was a burly man, who cowed before the gaze of the young woman.

One day not long ago Miss Katherine Fleming, of 426 South Waller avenue, in Chicago, was in the kitchen at her home, when she discovered the shadow of a moving form in the dining-room. Quietly she slipped around to a door leading into the dining-room, opened it quickly, and confronted a burglar, who was just in the act of stuffing some greenbacks in his pocket.

"HAND OVER THAT MONEY!"

So surprised was the burglar that he stood still, unable to move under the gaze of the young woman.

"Give me back that money," she demanded. Then calling to her mother in an adjoining room, "Mother, how much was there in the purse on the sideboard? Twenty-three dollars? All right, Mister Burglar, now you just hand over that $23 and you may go, although I have a notion to have you arrested."

Trembling like a leaf, the burglar counted out the money, which he had taken from the sideboard and handed it over to the young woman. Miss Fleming pointed to the open door, and the fellow slunk through it like a whipped cur, and hurriedly boarded a passing street car. He wore a heavy false beard to hide his identity.

WASHINGTON LETTER

GOSSIP OF THE CONGRESS WHICH HAS JUST CLOSED.

NOT RICH IN REPUTATIONS

But Few Men Have Developed in the Estimation of the Public—New Office Building for Senators.

Washington.—The adjournment of congress leaves Washington once more in the deserted and deadly condition which always characterizes the town when abandoned to its own devices. The hotels, which for six months have been packed to the roof, will soon resemble the sand-like interior of a summer resort during the dead days of winter.

Speaker Cannon.

There is no town on the continent which can empty itself more speedily than Washington of the transient visitors who give life to it while congress is here.

The session of congress which has just come to an end has not been rich in the making of reputations. If any one man has grown greatly in the estimation of house and senate it is Speaker Cannon, who, in a single session, has enrolled among the little group of really great speakers who have presided over the deliberations of the house. There are not many of them. Clay, Colfax, Blaine, Carlisle and Reed are the names which occur easily to anybody with a historical bent of mind, and it is a high tribute to Cannon that at the close of an unusually short and uneventful session, there should be many who are disposed to group him with the foregoing.

Both republicans and democrats unite to sing Cannon's praises. He is as highly regarded on the democratic side of the house as among his own party associates. Even the most hopeless partisans are forced to admit that they have no complaint to make against the speaker on account of his conduct in the chair. So free from partisanship has he been that the house has been treated several times to a spectacle hitherto unprecedented since the creation of the committee on rules. That committee more than once has made reports providing special orders for legislation in which the republicans and democrats on the committee united in unanimous action. If this had happened in the administration of Reed or Crisp, or Henderson, it would have been thought that the heavens were about to fall.

The Democratic Leader.

Another man who has gained a reputation in John Sharp Williams, the new democratic leader of the house. Williams was comparatively unknown outside the house members before the mantel of leadership fell on his shoulders at the beginning of this congress. He had been a member of the house for several terms and had made some little stir by occasional clever speeches in which he treated the republican majority without gloves. But that he had the qualities of real leadership was hardly suspected except by some of his intimates until the time came when it was necessary to pick out somebody to assume the responsibility laid down by Richardson, of Tennessee.

Congressman Williams.

Williams rose to his opportunity in a way to delight his fellow democrats in the house. He has shown the rapid brilliancy has kept his lance poised for any possible vulnerable spots in the republican armor, and at the same time has maintained personal relations with the republican leaders which give him influence on the majority side of the house.

Williams is a rather curious product of democratic generation. He was born in Memphis, Tenn., and his father was a confederate colonel, killed at Shiloh. Then young Williams, with his mother, moved to his mother's old family home-stead in Yazoo country, Mississippi. He still maintains himself there during the recesses of congress as a lawyer and a cotton planter. He is one of the most highly educated men in either branch of congress. As he himself expresses it, he "received a fair education" at private schools.

New Offices for Senators.

The senate has made up its mind that it shall not be outdone by the house in the matter of office accommodations for its members. An appropriation has been made for a new building to be erected just across the way from the senate end of the capitol, which is to be used as an office building for senators and which will cost, when completed, full $2,000,000.

As the People Imagined It.

be in keeping with the architecture of the capitol and, with the new senate office building, and the congressional library, will complete a group of monumental structures on Capitol hill which will not be exceeded in beauty and dignity by any other group of buildings in the world.

The two new buildings will transform what has hitherto been regarded as an unsightly section of the city into a spot which will be worth traveling thousands of miles to see. Each of the new structures will occupy an entire square, now filled with old houses and defaced by glaring billboards. Under the new arrangement each senator and representative will be accommodated with a fine suite of rooms, handsomely *furnished and supplied with every com*fort that any working statesman could desire.

It is not so many years since a great outcry went up over the country because the senators had bought an old hotel, known as the Maltby house, where those who could not be supplied with rooms in the capitol kept their secretaries and their records. Columns were written about the rugs, and sofas, and private baths with which these rooms were furnished, and many people throughout the country imagined that the senate was lavishing the money of the taxpayers in oriental luxury.

But times have changed. The Maltby building is out of date. Those senators who are condemned to occupy rooms there regard it as a hardship, and there are mutterings already about the dilapidated condition of the place. But it is seen now that a senator, or a representative, for that matter, is entitled to at least as much consideration in the choice of his working establishment as a lawyer burdened with half the business. As it is, many representatives are compelled to lease rooms outside the capitol.

With the increase in population of the country, the statesman in Washington finds his work and responsibility thrice or four times as great as in the days of the seventies.

Ire of the Clerks.

Representative Gillett, of Massachusetts, who got all Washington about his ears when he caused an increase of the hours of labor to the government clerks, has made more trouble for himself. He is chairman of the house committee on reform in the civil service committee, which ordinarily has very little to do, and he has devoted himself this winter to making a record for a hitherto innocuous body.

Aroused the Ire of the Clerks.

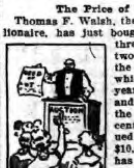
He has reported a bill by which it is proposed that after the 30th day of June, 1907, every office in the classified service held by any person who is then over 70 years of age shall become vacant, and that after the 30th day of June, 1907, every office in the classified service shall become vacant when the person holding it becomes 70 years old.

As if to add insult to injury, Gillett has also reported it as the opinion of the committee that such retired clerks should not be pensioned.

To show the injustice of it, some of them have prepared a list of members of the house and senate who will be over 70 years of age on June 30, 1907. That list includes the name of Speaker Cannon, whom nobody would accuse of being superannuated. In it, also, are the names of the following United States senators: Morgan and Pettus, of Alabama; Teller, of Colorado; Platt and Hawley, of Connecticut; Cullom, of Illinois; Allison, of Iowa; McEnery, of Louisiana; Hale and Frye, of Maine; Hoar, of Massachusetts; Burrows and Alger, of Michigan; Cockrell, of Missouri; Gibson, of Montana; Millard, of Nebraska; Gallinger, of New Hampshire; Platt and Depew, of New York; Mitchell, of Oregon; Quay, of Pennsylvania; Bate, of Tennessee; Proctor, of Vermont, and Foster, of Washington—24 in all, nearly one-third of the senate.

The Price of Land.

Thomas F. Walsh, the Colorado millionaire, has just bought for $250,000 three lots of land two blocks from the white house, which sold 100 years ago for $700, and which up to the middle of the century were valued at less than $10,000. So great has been the increase in value in real estate in the District of Columbia — an increase which many real estate experts believe is only just begun.



Society After Capitol Lots.

Curious Snowfall.

A curious instance of the formation of artificial snow was recently witnessed in the town of Agen, in France, recently. A fire broke out in a sawmill when the temperature was ten degrees below freezing point. The water thrown upon the fire was instantly vaporized, and, rising in the cold, dry air, was immediately condensed and fell as snow. What with bright starlight and the strong reflection of the blowing, the whirling snow above and the roaring fire below, a brilliant spectacle was presented.

Tuberculosis Decreasing.

The current report of the Connecticut board of health notes a decline in the death rate from consumption quite as striking as that which has taken place in Massachusetts. From a rate of 22.2 per 10,000 of population 25 years ago, there has been a fall to 14.9. Then the female victims outnumbered the males, but now the latter are the more numerous—Springfield Republican.

As Others See Us.

Biggs—Skinner tells me that he is making all kinds of money these days. Diggs—All but one kind, perhaps.

"What's the exception?"

"The proverbial honest dollar."—Chicago Daily News.

MOST FAMOUS MAUSOLEUM.

Beautiful Pavilion Wherein Rests the Remains of a Much-Loved Princess of India.

The Taj Mahal, the Wonder of Agra and the "Crown of the World," was erected as a mausoleum for the remains of the fair Arjamand Banu Begam, by her lord and lover, the Emperor Shah Jehan, writes Mrs. J. Ghosal, in "Records of the Past." Many royal princes and princesses used to choose in their lifetime a piece of picturesque ground, to inclose it with high walls, embellish its precincts with flower beds and groves of shady trees and to build upon it a pleasure house, where they took delight during their lifetime. After the founder died the pavilion became a mausoleum, and never again echoed with song and music. In all the world no king or queen had ever such monument as the Taj Mahal. It is known also by the name of Mumtazie Mahal, or exalted of the palaces. The queen died in 1629, and the building was set on foot soon after her death, though not completed till 1648. The beautiful domes of the Taj, "a dream of marble," rise on the river bank. The complexity of its design and the delicate intricacy of the workmanship baffle description. The Taj is built entirely of white marble, which is inlaid with precious stones arranged in lovely patterns of flowers. A feeling of purity impresses itself on the eye and the mind from the absence of any coarser material. The lower walls and panels are covered with tulips, oleanders and full blown lilies, worked in relief on the white marble, and although the inlaid work of flowers, done in gems, is very brilliant when looked at closely, there is on the whole but little color, and the all prevailing sentiment is one of whiteness, silence and calm, the sameness being relieved by the fine color of the inlaid gems, by lines in black marble and by delicately written inscriptions, also in black, from the Koran.

The whole mausoleum stands on a raised marble platform, at each of whose corners rises a tall and slender minaret of graceful proportions and exquisite beauty. In the center of the whole design the mausoleum occupies a square of 186 feet, with the angles deeply truncated, so as to form an unequal octagon. The main feature of this central pile is the great dome, which swells upward to nearly two-thirds of a sphere and tapers at its extremity into a pointed bulb, surmounted by a golden finial. At an inclosure of marble trellis work surrounds the tombs of the empress and her husband, the emperor. Each corner of the mausoleum is covered by a similar though much smaller dome, resting on a pedestal pierced with graceful saracene arches. Light is admitted into the interior through a double screen of pierced marble, which tempers the glare of an Indian sky, while its whiteness prevents the mellow effect from deteriorating into gloom. The internal decorations consist of inlaid work in precious stones, such as agate and jasper, with which every spandrel or other salient point in the architecture is covered. Here and there the violet marble is also freely employed in wreaths, scrolls and lintels to relieve the monotony of the white walls.

The color and design of the interior of the Taj, the perfect symmetry of its proportions and the real grace of its forms represent the most highly architectural period of India—the stage at which the architect ends and the jeweler begins. The gateway is also magnificent. The diagonal ornamentation at the corners by fine marble cables in bold relief is strong and beautiful. The triangular insertions of white marble and large flowers have in like manner given place to fine inlaid work. Firm perpendicular lines in black marble, with well proportioned panels of the same material are effectively used in the interior of the gateway. On its top the Hindoo brackets and monolithic architraves of sikandra are replaced by Moorish cusped arches, usually single blocks of red sandstone in the kiosks and pavilions which adorn the road. From this beautiful and splendid gateway one passes up a straight alley, shaded by evergreen trees and cooled by a broad shallow piece of water running along the middle of the path, to the Taj itself. The garden adds to the beauty of the buildings as the buildings to the garden. It is such an orderly wilderness of lovely vegetation as could only be had in India. Yet, says a great poet, 'if the Taj rose amid the sands of a dreary desert, the lovely gardens would beautify the waste and turn it into a tender parable of the desolation of death and power of love, which is stronger than death."

Curious Snowfall.

A curious instance of the formation of artificial snow was recently witnessed in the town of Agen, in France, recently. A fire broke out in a sawmill when the temperature was ten degrees below freezing point. The water thrown upon the fire was instantly vaporized, and, rising in the cold, dry air, was immediately condensed and fell as snow. What with bright starlight and the strong reflection of the blowing, the whirling snow above and the roaring fire below, a brilliant spectacle was presented.

Tuberculosis Decreasing.

The current report of the Connecticut board of health notes a decline in the death rate from consumption quite as striking as that which has taken place in Massachusetts. From a rate of 22.2 per 10,000 of population 25 years ago, there has been a fall to 14.9. Then the female victims outnumbered the males, but now the latter are the more numerous—Springfield Republican.

As Others See Us.

Biggs—Skinner tells me that he is making all kinds of money these days.

Diggs—All but one kind, perhaps.

"What's the exception?"

"The proverbial honest dollar."—Chicago Daily News.

LIGNITE, THE NEW FUEL.

It May Solve the Vexed Fuel Problem If It Can Be Made Up Into Bricks.

A fortune is in store for the man who will invent some way of briquetting lignite. Northwestern railroad men are deeply interested, for success would mean the opening of vast mines in their territory, states the New York Sun. If the experiments now being conducted with a view to briquetting this coal prove successful, it is possible the entire fuel problem will be revolutionized. North Dakota has a supply of this fuel so vast that under universal consumption it would serve for hundreds of years, for the amount is practically limitless. It has been largely used by settlers, and has proved a veritable boon on the treeless plains.

Though lignite has not always given satisfaction, on account of its rapid consumption and tendency to clog fires, fireboxes have recently been constructed especially for it and locomotives have been designed for its use.

With the ordinary engine the lignite produces too many sparks, endangering crops and property, but it is hoped to avoid this in the new locomotives. Some experimenters with the fuel declare it will not be necessary to use a binder in making a satisfactory fuel, but those most interested contend that some binder, perhaps similar to that used for briquetting iron ore, may will be needed.

One trouble with lignite is its dampness and another is that the air makes rapid consumption; but, mixed with some slowly burning substance, and pressed into briquettes by powerful machinery, these failings may be done away with. This expels the moisture and checks the tendency to slake.

Vast quantities of this coal are found near Bismarck, S. D., and mines near the town are opened up so that more than 1,000 tons a day are taken out. It is almost the only kind of fuel used there and its consumption in Fargo and other near-by towns is enormous.

The method of mining is unique. Usually the mines are entered by means of a drift which taps the vein of coal at a depth of 40 to 50 feet. This is done in sections, so that the whole mine is a series of galleries divided by coal partitions. Later these are removed and blasting with electricity enormous chunks of coal are blown down. These are carted away after the miners have broken them and put them in the receiving cars. Immense chutes carry the lignite to the cars which are waiting on the tracks, and so expert is the whole process, even at this initial stage, that the raw material costs only 40 cents or thereabouts a ton.

MONEY MADE BY THE WAR.

Unexpected Profits Realized Through the Fondness of Russians for X, Z and V.

"War is a great money-maker for lots of people who, at first thought, you would never imagine would profit by it," said the man who discovers things, according to the New York World.

"Uhuh," assented the other. "I suppose you've figured out how a ruble or a yen, spent for a pound of opium in Korea, manages to circulate around till it lands in John D. Rockefeller's pockets. I—"

"No; I leave that to others. However, I have just found out that the men who manufacture the typesetting machines in newspaper offices are gainers to no inconsiderable extent by the imbroglio between the mikado and the czar.

"You see, the ordinary use of the alphabet, as we know it, calls for a comparatively small number of certain letters. The English language, for instance, gets along very well without an over-indulgence in such characters as Z, X, V, and C. But the Russians fairly revel in these letters and can hardly spell a word without using one or another of them. As for the Japs, they rather incline to an excess of I's, O's and U's.

"As soon as the cables began to hand out news of the war maneuvers the cry came from the typesetters that they couldn't set the Russian names owing to a scarcity of the hard letters. So the manufacturers of the machines were called on to supply the deficiency.

"Now, in the old days of 'hand type,' when each letter was a separate affair, each was a little piece of lead cast in a mold. There was practically no expense to them and you could buy type by the pound. But all this has changed. In the typesetting machines each letter is represented by a piece of brass that looks like a Yale key.

"There is, therefore, considerable expense connected with the making of every one of the letters, so that when the newspaper offices ask for more Z's, X's, V's, C's and Z's the manufacturers gasped quite a little harvest."

Another Variable Asteroid.

The Harvard Observatory announces the discovery by Prof. Wendell that the asteroid Eros, which was first seen in 1847, exhibits a variation of light resembling that of the new asteroid Eros, which was discovered in 1898. The periodic change in the light of Iris takes place in about six hours, and amounts to two or three-tenths of a magnitude, which is much less than the amount of change exhibited by Eros.

A Long Line.

"Are they so very aristocratic?"

"Well, they can trace their ancestry back to the ark."

"Ah, to one of the officers of the ship, I suppose."

"Yes—er—that is, to one of the petty officers. They never were quite able to decide whether he was the stable boy or Mr. Noah's valet."—Detroit Free Press.

BOOMLET FOR ALSCHULER.

Eastern Managers Would Like to Have Illinois Man Nominated for Vice President.

Chicago Special.

Eastern reports of the inner workings in national democratic politics continue to link the name of Samuel Alschuler, of Chicago, with the vice presidential candidacy. It is argued as a matter of party policy that Alschuler is the most available candidate for the second highest office in the gift of the people.

Because he has diplomatically managed to keep out of the rival democratic factions in Illinois, it is assumed that he would be the best man to sooth any element of discord. His attitude toward labor has been such, it is claimed, as would receive the undivided support of the working classes.

Mr. Alschuler's record as political timber is also counted in his favor. In

SAMUEL ALSCHULER.
(Illinois Democratic Leader Who May Run for Vice President.)

1900 he ran 15,905 votes ahead of Bryan in the state, and in Cook county he beat Gov. Yates, his republican opponent, by a plurality of 7,573 votes.

Samuel Alschuler is a native of Illinois. He was born in Chicago November 20, 1859. He is a bachelor. His parents, Jacob and Caroline Alschuler, moved to Aurora, his present residence, in 1861. After clerking in a general store, young Alschuler studied law, and in 1881 he was admitted to the bar. Today he is considered not only a powerful orator, but an able lawyer. He was state commissioner of claims from 1893 to 1896, when he was elected to the legislature, which place he held for four years.

"I know nothing of these rumors beyond what I read in the papers," said Mr. Alschuler when asked if he was a candidate for vice president. "I have no idea where these accounts emanate, for I have never talked to any one on the subject in any way which would give the impression that I presume to seek the office."

PUBLIC LIKES MISS ALICE.

President Roosevelt's Daughter Has Warm Place in the Affections of Washingtonians.

Washington (D. C.) Special.

Miss Alice Roosevelt, the charming daughter of the president, called by some dyspeptic newspaper scribblers "Princess Alice," is unquestionably one of the most lovable girls of her age at the capital. Recently she suffered from an attack of German measles, and the interest which the public took in her illness proved beyond a doubt that the young lady has a warm place in the affections of the people. Miss Alice is perhaps not as diplomatic as she might be, but it must be remembered that she is just now passing through that peculiar period of a girl's life when there is but little to learn. If the women who criticise her would just think for a moment of their own young womanhood days, with its illusions and self-consciousness, they would be more charitable and quite ready to admit that Miss Alice, everything considered, is displaying a remarkable amount of tact.

MISS ALICE ROOSEVELT.
(Daughter of President and Leader of Washington's Younger Set.)

New Plays Tried in Country.

It is often the practice of theatrical managers to try a new play in country towns before producing it in the metropolis. A well-known manager was asked the reason. "Because," said the manager, "we know that if a new production will stand a show without killing the company, New York is likely to be perfectly delighted with it."

Danger in Transfer Slips.

Street car conductors in New York city are required to serve their transfer tickets dry. That is, they must not moisten with their mouths the fingers which tear off a ticket from a packet, just before giving it to a passenger. It is asserted that transfer tickets this moistened spread disease.

BRIDGES FOR ARMIES

DIFFERENT WAYS IN WHICH THEY ARE CONSTRUCTED.

The Pontoon Style the Most Popular and Feasible—Can Be Quickly Put Together Over Narrow Streams.

With an army in the field there must always be engineers whose business it is to understand bridge making. Obstacles such as rivers or ravines must be bridged when they occur on the line of march, and the art of bridge-making is as old as military art itself. Probably there is no bridge known to us now, from a bridge of boats to a trestle viaduct, that was not known to the Greek, Roman or Persian soldiers in their great campaigns.

The construction of bridges by civilians is the work of weeks and months, but their work is of a permanent nature. In military bridging everything must be done quickly. Consequently everything needed must be at hand. The bridging or pontoon battalion must carry with them everything that is needed.

The bridge chiefly made use of in war is constructed of pontoons. The pontoon is a flat-bottomed boat. A number of these are fastened together by balks laid on beams which are placed longitudinally in the center of the anchored boats, on which transversely are laid the planks which make the roadway of the bridge. Another form of floating bridge which is largely used is that known as the cask bridge. Ordinary beer or water casks are lashed together in such a way as to form a very good substitute for pontoons. A third form of bridge is the trestle bridge, but this can only be used when the ravine or river is not wide. Another method of crossing a river is by ferry. Boats or rafts made of boats, barrel pieces, etc., are often used to ferry considerable bodies of troops over rivers. These punts or rafts may be either rowed, poled or hauled across by a rope from bank to bank—this can only be done in the case of a narrow river of not over 50 or 60 yards wide, and then only when there is not a strong current—or they may be hauled across by a hawser passing over the raft on rollers or through hawseholes made for the purpose in its sides or ends. If a wire rope be stretched across from bank to bank, as far as is at its lowest point at least three or four feet above the highest flood level, the ferry-boat may be fastened to it by a short line secured to a large ring, working loose on the wire rope, or to specially constructed running gear provided with pulleys. The boat or craft can then be easily hauled backwards and forwards by a line secured to each bank of the river, no matter how swift the current may be.

BUILDING A PONTOON BRIDGE.

One of the most exciting methods of crossing a river is by a flying bridge. The principle of this bridge is the same as that of a kite. In this case the boat or raft is attached by hawser to a stationary boat in such a way as to be kept at an oblique angle to the stream, and the current is made use of to drive the flying boat across.

In making a pontoon bridge it is important to select a site as near as possible to an existing road, as the construction of the bridge with the nearest hard road is often as hard a piece of work as the construction of the bridge itself.

In the Russian army there are in the engineers in war time eight pontoon battalions, consisting of two companies each. Each battalion numbers 12 officers three officials, and 591 non-commissioned officers and men, and has 495 horses. The uniform consists of dark green blouses, with dark green collars and cuffs, the former piped with red; red scarlet shoulder straps and dark green trousers. The forage cap is dark green, with a dark green band and scarlet piping. Fur caps are worn in the winter. All dismounted men have dragoon rifles and bayonets and carry 30 rounds of ammunition, 30 more being carried in regimental transport.

It is a pretty sight to see a pontoon battalion at work. In a few minutes the flat-bottomed boats are emptied of the bridging-tackle which is stowed away inside. Steadying ropes are adjusted from the banks, and after a few moments of apparent confusion the men get their craft dressed in line, while the roadway is making and lashing fast to the roadway above.

His Specialty.

Dinglebats — I understand young Sneaksby is quite an athlete.

Snicklefritz—Is that so?

"Yes; they say his specialty is running up and jumping board bills."—Cincinnati Enquirer

STRUGGLE WITH A GRIZZLY.

Hunter from Ohio Has Experience in Sierra Madre Mountains Which He Won't Forget.

J. L. Anderson, a tourist from Sandusky, O., had an exciting experience recently while hunting in the Sierra Madre mountains. In telling the Mexican Herald about the matter, before leaving for his home, Mr. Anderson said that he was in northwestern Chihuahua hunting for big game and suddenly encountered a large grizzly bear. The animal started to run, when he fired, only slightly wounding it in the side. The sting of the bullet infuriated the beast, and quick as a flash of lightning it turned and attacked its assailant.

FIERCE FIGHT FOR LIFE.

"I fired one more shot," said Mr. Anderson, "but the bullet went wild, and before I could defend myself the bear was upon me with a mad, wild rush. It threw me down, and then began a fierce fight for my life. The claws of the beast severely lacerated my body. It caught my left arm above the elbow and broke the bone. With my other hand I got out my hunting knife but could not stab the animal in any vital place. Death seemed inevitable, but fortunately the contest occurred on the edge of a sharp precipice. The bear lost its balance and rolled over the cliff to a ledge 40 feet below. It almost carried me with it, but I clung to the underbrush and finally crawled away. I did not look to see where the bear went, but got out of that place as soon as possible."

Mr. Anderson is still suffering from the effects of his terrible experience, and it will be several weeks before he recovers.

HONEYMOON TRIP ON FOOT.

Two Loving Mountaineers Walk from Tennessee to Visit Relatives in Indiana.

A bridal trip on foot from Louden county, Tenn., to Crawfordsville, Ind., is an innovation in the honeymoon line. William Hurst and his bride, who made the novel bridal tour, spent one night at the police station at New Albany, Ind., and departed on their journey northward.

"You see, me and Lucindy was married last Sunday night," said the bridegroom. "She had relation in Indiany, near Crawfordsville, and we just vowed that we'd go and visit 'em. It 'pears like times is better up here, and if I can git work we'll stay. We had no money, so we thought we would chance it a-foot."

The couple were Tennessee mountaineers. The bridegroom was tall, slender and stoop-shouldered. He wore a blue check shirt, black sack coat and a pair of blue cottonade trousers that terminated midway between the knees and the tops of his brogan shoes. The bride was dressed in a blue calico dress and wore a fascinator over her head.

AT THE POLICE STATION.

Strategy of a Collie Dog.

A remarkable addition to the list of stories indicating animal intelligence comes from Ithaca, New York, the seat of Cornell university. A collie belonging to Prof. W. P. Durand and a bull-terrier belonging to Dr. L. Coville had long been enemies and had fought many battles, in which the terrier was usually victorious. On January 8 the foes met again near the edge of the Fall Creek gorge, where the precipice rises 100 feet vertically. The collie, finding itself overmastered, ran to the verge of the cliff. The terrier followed and, according to eyewitnesses, the collie circled about until, seizing an opportunity, it deliberately pushed its enemy over the edge. The terrier was dashed to death on the rocks below, and the victor, after peering down at the body of his fallen foe, trotted away with head and tail aloft.

GRANT REMEMBERED

FORMER RESIDENCE AT GALENA TO BE PRESERVED.

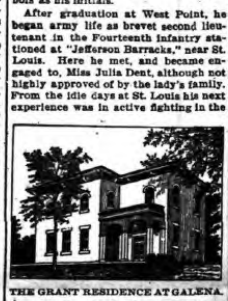
Presented to Him by the People at the Close of the War—It Has Now Been Deeded to the City.

The Grant heirs recently deeded to Galena the dwelling presented to the war hero by admirers on his return from the war August 18, 1865. It is a handsome old residence, and in many ways would fitly serve as a storehouse of relics connected with the career of the famous commander, as well as stand an historic monument itself.

Although the main facts of Gen. Grant's public life are well known, probably few have clear in mind many details of his private life, know just what localities are linked with his early history. Most of us could only hazily recall that at some time of other he lived somewhere or other in Illinois, believe he conducted a tannery there, and from there set out for the war; and it may be well to shortly summarize the successive periods of his life.

In Mount Pleasant, Ohio, he was born, and there spent the years of life previous to his West Point days, and in that little village acquainted his father with the fact that he did not wish to work longer at the father's tannery business, but wanted a chance to get an education. In his sixteenth year he obtained the appointment to West Point, then "a stumpy, freckle-faced, big-headed country lad," scarce measuring the required five feet in height. Although baptized Hiram Ulysses Grant, through some misunderstanding he was entered as Ulysses S. Grant, and for the rest of his life continued bearing the nation's symbols as his initials.

After graduation at West Point, he began army life as brevet second lieutenant in the Fourteenth infantry stationed at "Jefferson Barracks," near St. Louis. Here he met, and became engaged to, Miss Julia Dent, although not highly approved of by the lady's family. From the idle days at St. Louis his next experience was in active fighting in the



THE GRANT RESIDENCE AT GALENA.

Mexican war taking part in every battle of that war except that of Buena Vista, and becoming noted for his horsemanship, military skill, and bravery, as well as appreciated for ably filling the difficult position of quartermaster.

At the close of the war, Capt. Grant married Miss Dent, the family now heartily approving of him, he having shed, in battle with the Mexicans, a son of the Dent household, and having won various honors in the Mexican campaign. The young couple took up their residence in Detroit, where Grant continued quartermaster of his regiment. From Detroit the regiment was moved to Sackett's Harbor, and thence to Fort Vancouver, Washington territory, then far from civilization, and not considered a fit place for Mrs. Grant, who remained, therefore, in St. Louis, at her father's. Hereabouts Grant resigned in 1854, saying at the time to a friend: "Whoever hears of me in ten years will hear of a well-to-do Missouri farmer." On a little sixty-acre farm, about four miles from St. Louis, he settled down, his dwelling a log-house, "Hardscrabble." He knew nothing about farming, and did not attain the prophesied prosperity. Next he moved to St. Louis, tried his fortune at the real-estate business, but proved no more successful at it than at farming. The Grants were very poor in these days. In 1860 he moved to Galena to take a clerkship with his brothers, who were in the leather trade.

The family began their life in Galena very humbly, but when soon the war excitement had possession of the town Capt. Grant came into prominence. When a company was being organized, he made his first public speech: "I don't know anything about making speeches, that is not in my line, but we are forming a company in Galena, and mean to do what we can to put down the rebellion." There was too much scrambling for public office in the ensuing days to suit his quiet taste, and he was tempted more than once to take up again business life in Galena, but finally Gov. Yates sent him an appointment, "Colonel of the Twenty-first Illinois Volunteers," and the commander came into his own.

The journey home when the war was ended was one wildly enthusiastic ovation; the grand review of the Union army in Washington, a great reception in New York, a courtless multitude at the station in Chicago, and when at last he arrived in the little Illinois town he called home, he found Galena one dome mass of cheering citizens, a triumphal arch in his honor, and, presented by the citizens, a beautiful house completely furnished, to which a sidewalk had been built from the station half a mile away. To his new home he rode under the arch bearing this inscription, in flowers: "General, the sidewalk is built."

KATHERINE POPE.

Cut It Short!

Young Lady—Well, Aunt Rachel, I shall have to bid you a long farewell.

Guard—If you are going on this train, ma'am, you'll have to make it pretty short.—Tit-Bits.

THE WORLD OF FASHION.

Loose Bolero Costumes—Some Black and White Check Materials.

Among the spring styles for street wear the loose bolero certainly leads. It is made with or without sleeve seams, and in the former fashion it gives the effect of a loose cape partly tacked to form the sleeves. These loose boleros are decorated with strap trimmings and tiny buttons. They are worn with very full skirts either laid in box plaits or inch wide tucks. In both cases these flare from the figure downward.

Black and white checked materials in wool, linen and silk are among the smartest suit materials. They are trimmed with buttons either in green or steel, and they are worn with ecru straw hats trimmed with black and white or with grass green toque plumes. The parasol matches.

BOLERO COSTUME.

Pongee coats are ultra smart, especially when shirred in quite full and trimmed with touches of green.

Changeable taffeta in opalescent shades is charming under artificial light. Many of these changeable silks are made into evening wraps, and a favorite model has a circular yoke trimmed with the old fashioned pinked out ruches. Others have shawl effects of fine lace and the ever fashionable lining of accordion plaited chiffon.

The picture shows one of the latest street costumes. It is made of red mohair trimmed with bands of passementerie and tiny black velvet ribbon. The hat is of ecru straw trimmed with lace.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

COATS FOR SUMMER.

All the Pale Shades Used—White Cloths and Pongee Lead.

A well known Parisian has in her wardrobe a three-quarter length coat of oyster gray. It is cut circular shape and ganged with a cape effect of silver gray chiffon velours. This is lined with a still paler shade of gray chiffon and edged with festoons of brussels point.

Many nice coats are in cloth in shades of pink, ivory and apricot. These are much braided with light flat silk braid and silk ornaments to correspond.

The kimono shape is the most useful and universally becoming for coats. In many cases for summer wear these coats are unlined; in others they have a lining of shot silk.

PEAU DE CYGNE COAT.

The hood shaped cape is a feature of many smart coats, where it appears of different material.

White coats share with those of pongee popular fancy this summer. They are beautiful made of fine cloth and having a pelerine collar edged with bold braid and hanging tassels. Shantung silk is trimmed with black velvet and quantities of gold and silver braid.

Parisians this season are curiously devoted to bronze and to black and white effects for street wear.

The cut shows a bright peau de cygne coat trimmed with fringe and Persian [illegible].

JUDIC CHOLLET.

DAINTY HEADGEAR.

Torpedo Toques of White Roses, Purple Straw Hats Popular.

Some pretty hats for girls are of cream leghorn, simply trimmed with a full of fine lace or hand pointed chiffon or gauze and sometimes a bandeau on which rest tiny pink roses.

The torpedo toque is by no means laid aside, and its smartness is undeniable. It is now being made of tiny white roses or lilies of the valley.

Toques of red straw are worn with gray or check silk gowns.

Black or white straw is a favorite mixture. The old fashioned chip hat trimmed with one long black plume and black chantilly draped on the brim is considered very smart.

PURPLE STRAW HAT.

Straws this year are both light and pliable. Sometimes as many as three different shades are mixed in one hat.

Purple straw and chiffon toques are even smarter than the all flower hat. To match the purple gowns even shoes are now being dyed. They are made of the finest and most pliable leather.

The "fatiron" hat is becoming decidedly popular, the only adornment being a broad band of contrasting straw, drawing the brim well off the sides of the face.

Ribbon trimmings have become more and more popular. The flowered gauze trimmings set with spot stitching are a most charming addition to a summer gown, while the Louis or Pompadour bows are to be seen on almost everything. For the adornment of the full dress toilet nothing could be more charming than the gold and silver gauze ribbons on which are embroidered flower designs in delicate faded tones.

The picture shows a purple straw hat trimmed with grapes and a shaded green bow.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

THE LATEST IN GOWNS.

Horizontal Tucks on Many Skirts. Voile the Popular Material.

The horizontal tucks appear on a good many fine veiling and silk gowns. Five large tucks often appear from the knees downward, and the upper part down to the knees is simply relieved by the fullness at the waist line.

Linen gowns with cut embroidery are among the latest novelties, and some of these decorated with English embroidery have ribbons half an inch wide run through.

Grass green and a rich cherry red will both be seen a great deal on ecru linens and pongee.

Voile is without doubt the popular fabric this summer. Gray voile inlet with ivory lace and mounted on pink mauve or black is charming, and a dress of this veiling will be found both reasonable and useful.

BRIDE'S GOWN.

Brown taffeta and pongee tailor mades are to be worn by smart people this summer, combined with an ecru straw hat trimmed with pale yellow roses.

Shoes in a light champagne shade will be much seen this summer, embroidered in the prevailing tones of the costume. Distinctly novel are the tongueless shoes, the stocking showing through the lacing, although lacing is rather a misnomer, for they are fastened by the most lovely ribbons imaginable, terminating in a large bow near the toe. The smartest tongueless shoes have a perforated pattern. Naturally, with the hose so much in evidence, only the very prettiest designs are worn.

The cut shows a bride's dress of crepe de chine. There is a tucked yoke bordered by a lace and net fichu.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

THIN MATERIALS.

A Great Many Veiling Gowns Are Worn—Silk Mull Dresses.

There are a good many voile dresses worn at this season of the year both for dressy and street wear. Cashmere, crepe de chine, voile de soie, embroidered linon and some beautiful heavy guipures mixed with taffeta are all smart.

Even gowns of a tailor made description show a considerable amount of trimming in the way of frills and double and single skirts. Nothing is more difficult than to put on these softening effects in the right way and still to retain that chic and simplicity characteristic of the best French gowns.

White pongee is particularly smart for evening dresses. It is trimmed with handmade tucks and with laces of the embroidery description.

White and ecru gowns, the latter relieved with a touch of red or grass green, will lead this summer for afternoon wear.

Pale blue silk mull makes a dainty gown which can be worn both in summer and in winter. A gown of this description should be made up with a much ruffled skirt and the waist shirred into a fancy collar of Irish lace. The sleeves are prettiest made of tiny ruffles or huge transparent puffs.

BATISTE GOWN.

A pretty evening toilet was designed of white chenille spotted net of the 1830 style, the bolero effect being introduced by an arrangement of white velvet bands and lace insertion. Appique water lilies and their foliage in high relief formed the decoration of the decolletage.

The cut shows a batiste gown. The skirt is made plaited, and the waist is trimmed with a frilling of lace. The hat is trimmed with a black ostrich feather and ruching.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

SUMMER FASHIONS.

Fichus Are Again Popular—The Crape Fan Effects.

There will be another revival of the quaint old fashioned fichu this summer, and this will be particularly smart on the gowns of flowered net, which will be so much worn this season.

There is a great craze for everything shaded. A prominent New York firm shows dress patterns of shaded voile so arranged that both the waist and the skirt can be made up shaded from dark to light. This craze for shading even extends to the veils, and some particularly lively ones shade from red to pink.

DOTTED FOULARD WAIST.

The lace veil, while most unbecoming over the face, is very fetching draped around the brim of a tailor made hat or thrown back from the face, French fashion.

For cold weather in summer shoes of marabou and lace are charming.

Plain tailor made shirt waists will still be worn, but there is an increase of soft lacy waists, made either of net or thin washable materials, and these will be far daintier.

Lovely indeed are the new printed brussels nets, the artistic designs, all in delicate tones, having the effect of hand painting.

The cut shows a dotted foulard shirt waist with a long shoulder yoke and a full front.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

MILLINERY AND DRESS.

Popular Fancies in Straw—Velvet and Embroidered Applications.

For morning wear quite a few hats are made of taffeta silk in two shades of one color, softened in many cases with a cream lace veil. Most of the new millinery shapes seem to be wide on the sides and short back and front. The straws used in making them are light and pliable, and several are used on one hat. Soft shades of green are pretty trimmed with foliage. Some hats for morning wear are of the Breton shade trimmed with little straw roses or big Alsatian straw bows. Bright cerise shading into ox blood is a favorite combination in hat trimmings. Orange and brown and brilliant light blue shading into navy are also popular tints.

THREE CORNERED HAT.

Black chantilly lace is much employed in this season's millinery. It is particularly effective when it is used on white hats and combined with black ostrich tips.

Shirrings are now being used more than ever. They appear both on waists and skirts of all materials thin enough to be treated in this manner.

Touches of velvet cut out and applied on cloth are very smart. So also are bits of embroidered lace done in gold, silver or colors.

The cut shows a tricorne shaped hat of green straw trimmed with pink roses and a shaded pink bow.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

ACCESSORIES OF DRESS.

Sashes Are Again in Favor—Deep Kid and Silk Belts.

The deep belt has become an almost indispensable part of the costume. This belt is made of kid or silk, but kid is by far the smartest. It is shaped or else crushed. Some of the new belts are trimmed with buttons both front and back, and these are sewed on little crosswise strap effects.

White kid belts, white kid gloves, white linen shirt waists and bolero suits—these are combined with large white French sailor hats draped with lace or chiffon veils. The whole forms one of the smartest of summer costumes and one which, better still, can be laundered.

Overskirt and pannier effects are here to stay. The plain skirt is a thing of the past. Perhaps one of the easiest ways of making an old skirt up to date is by inserting a front panel of ruffings or embroidery, and gathering the additional fullness thus gained into a hip yoke if there is no hem to let down.

TRAVELING CLOAK.

Sashes are returning to favor, and quite a number of Parisian dressmakers are introducing them on the summer gowns they are making. But the new sash is anything but a simple affair. It is elaborately boned and knotted, and the ends are frequently trimmed with chiffon lace.

Every kind of linen, from the very coarsest to the finest, is in vogue, and never has Dame Fashion had so many varieties to place before her votaries. Loosely woven crashes flecked with color and coarse linens spangled with small rings of raised embroidery of the same color or of a darker shade are among the very newest designs.

The picture shows a traveling coat of blue cloth trimmed with white cloth revers and oriental embroidery. The hat is of soft straw, trimmed with a ribbon bow.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, June 2, 1904.

The horse show is an assured fact. Now let it be a sure success. Nice silver cups, $915 in cash and a couple of fine saddles are the prizes. Pretty good for a starter, eh?

The best asset a business can have is to be continually impressed on thousands of human brains. You can't see it; you can't feel it, but it does its work and sell goods.—Ex.

Complaint is being made of the acts of miscreants who confine their wrongdoing to stealing flowers and plants from graves in the various cemeteries of the city and borough. Severe punishment should follow the detection and arrest of the mean rascals.

If Col. Collins and Lieut. Col. Olime have any doubt as to what they actually did say at Company K's banquet, their memories may be refreshed by consulting the other dinners of May by taking a look at the files of The Daily Press. "It's all there, and it's all true."

LITERARY.

The Metropolitan Magazine for June is an especially seasonable number, dealing, as it does, with out-door subjects. It brings to its readers a taste of ante-vacation pleasure in its suggestion of the golden days of leisure in field, on mountain top, upon the sea and along the shore. Pictorially the number is a panorama of peoples and places, the illustrations showing life in its subtlest refinement and at its lowest ebb.

It is estimated that only about eighty-five million dollars, which is approximately five per cent. of the annual income of our railways, goes to foreign investors. There are not far from one million owners of railway stocks and bonds. Of the remaining ninety-five per cent., $1,684,447,408, forty per cent. is divided among the owners of the stocks and bonds, and sixty per cent. among 1,189,815 employes. Counting the families supported by the holders of securities and employes, over ten million people are in the railroad earnings.—From "Success."

The contents of the June issue of the Popular Science Monthly include the following articles: "The Total Solar Eclipse of August 30, 1905," Professor W. W. Campbell; "Conservationalism," Dr. Edward S. Holden; "On the Significance of Characteristic Curves of Composition," Dr. Robert E. Moritz; "The Physiographic Control of the Chattanooga Campaigns of the Civil War," Frederick V. Emerson; "The Value of the Teeth as a Means of Identification," Dr. Alton Howard Thompson; "Thorium, Carolinium and Berselium," "Immigration," Dr. Allan McLaughlin; "The Royal Prussian Academy of Sciences and the Fine Arts," Edward F. Williams; "Developments in the Respiration Calorimeter."

For the third time in the history of the Astor family one of its members has had built a hotel that in its way is better than any other hotel in the country. Before the war the old Astor House on lower Broadway was the hotel of New York city, much more recently the Waldorf-Astoria was the great metropolitan hotel, and now the St. Regis, on Fifth avenue, which is building for Col. John Jacob Astor, fulfils once again the family tradition of possessing the most distinctly metropolitan hotel of its day. The idea of making a new standard of excellence runs through all the details and dispositions of the building. Just wherein this superiority in quality consists is made clear in an extended article in the June Architectural Record.

—In Justice Hoff's court the cases of John Doe against Martha Harlin and John Doe against Marta Probasco, both on contract, have been made returnable June 7 and that of Sena Venezia against Amilla Dalello, charging the latter with assaulting the plaintiff and threatening his life, has been discontinued on request of the defendant.

—The social features at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club Memorial Day proved enjoyable to hundreds of members and friends. There was music in the afternoon and after the dinner at night dancing was the feature. Prominent society women received at the club. Special stages were employed to carry members and guests from the trolley line to the clubhouse.

—The Philadelphia and Reading Railroad is receiving locomotives recently ordered from the Baldwin Locomotive Works, and they will be put in operation on the coal-carrying division during the summer.

AMUSEMENTS.

True to tradition, the cool and cosy Casino is again setting the pace for late spring and summer attractions in America. The attendance at the performances of "Piff, Paff, Pouf" as that playhouse is even bigger than it was for "Florodora" and "A Chinese Honeymoon" for the same month two and three years ago. This is indeed a record to be proud of and proves the wisdom of F. C. Whitney, the owner of "Piff, Paff, Pouf," who insisted on having unlimited time for his show at the Casino. It is also a justification of his so-called recklessness in engaging an all-star company to interpret the lines of Stanislaus Stange and William Jerome and the music of Jean Schwartz. Certainly no musical comedy ever had four such clever and popular players at the head of its cast as Eddie Foy, Thomas Q. Seabrook, Alice Fisher and Grace Cameron.

TROLLEY ACROSS THE COUNTY

ROUTE FROM ELIZABETH TO SUMMIT WHICH WILL BENEFIT PLAINFIELD.

Progress is being made with the trolley roads to connect Elizabeth and Summit. Properties recently purchased in Summit by Louis Keller, secretary of the Baltusrol Club and one of the promoters of the trolley company, are understood to be for the use of the company for trolley barns and offices. Consents have been obtained for the use of such highways as may be necessary, but a great part of the road will be in its own right of way. Among the places conveniently reached will be the Baltusrol Club and New Orange. A branch road will touch the former. Construction is expected to begin soon. The road will develop some of the finest property in this section of the State and will give a direct connection between Summit and the county seat of Union County, in which Summit is located, as well as affording good connections with the Lehigh Valley, Central and Pennsylvania Railroads, for Union and Morris County people.

The effect of the new road will be to divert a good deal of traffic from Newark to Elizabeth. For some unknown reason the Public Service Company has not developed its lines west of Maplewood, and the result will be that business which would naturally come to Newark will now go to Elizabeth.—Newark Call.

MEDALS FOR P. H. S. CADETS

BATTALION BOYS TO BE DECORATED FOR FAITHFUL ATTENDANCE.

Medals for 100 per cent. attendance at drill will be received by the following members of the High School battalion at the final drill in June: F. K. Anderson, L. T. Koons, P. W. Brakely, L. English, W. W. Giddes, L. O. Mortimer, T. O. Gavett, J. Rottberg, E. Scott, W. Rafferty, A. VanBrocose, C. H. Briggs, J. M. Davis, A. Coddington, L. W. Fisher, L. L. Karner, C. R. Murphy, W. H. Hagge, H. Robins, A. Rubenstein, A. T. Slauson, A. S. Whitney, C. Elliott, H. G. Barr, G. H. Duran, F. B. Gray, M. T. Lambert, H. G. Thompson, P. P. Smith, S. Rockwell, M. Rubenstein, H. Shrager and G. S. Robbins.

Those who won medals for attendance at all drills last year and by reason of having an average of 100 per cent. again this year, will get bars to add to their medals, are C. F. Neagle, R. L. Kyte, L. J. Cline, M. St. John and J. H. Jones.

Harlem Branch of Fischer Piano Warerooms.

In order to accommodate their patrons in Harlem and the Bronx vicinity, J. & C. Fischer have established warerooms at No. 68 West 125th St., New York city. They cordially invite inspection of their fine exhibit of the latest styles and designs of their pianos, in the highest artistic type of case-architecture and in all varieties of woods. Their recent output, "The Fischer New Small Grand," is pronounced by competent musical experts the most remarkable grand piano of its size ever produced. Although but little larger than the upright, it has comparatively all the broad volumed tone-power, tone-purity and sweetness of the full grand. To those who have been heretofore kept from availing themselves of a grand piano on account of a lack of parlor space, the Fischer New Small Grand especially commends itself. In their new branch warerooms the same reputable business rules will be adhered to that have characterized their Fifth avenue house. Sixty-four years of reputation is the best assurance of this fact, and 130,000 homes made happier through the Fischer pianos is indeed an enviable record. We wish them the success they deserve.

—Arthur Hamble, of Somerset street, enters a position today, as stenographer in the office of Chief Engineer J. O. Osgood, of the Central.

STORM POSTPONES TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP

East Jersey Lawn Tennis Association's Two Days Battle in Mixed Doubles.

ON HILLSIDE COURTS LEADS IN FINALS FOR THE HONOR.

Mrs. Edgar and B. Berry Capture First Game of Third Set in Finals When Stopped by Downpour of Rain—Play Today.

Play was begun Saturday in the mixed doubles tennis championship of the East Jersey Lawn Tennis Association on the courts of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club. The entry list was unusually strong and the pick of the women experts represented in the league participated in the contests. There was a large gallery present on Saturday and Monday, the play being watched closely. The Hillside Tennis and Golf Club and Park Club were well represented and made excellent attempts to win their matches.

Mrs. Edgar and S. Berry of the Ilderan Outing Club of Rahway, in their match with Miss Helen Lock wood and W. Gennert, of the Danforth Tennis Club, the last match of the first round, had things by no means all their own way as this proved to be the most closely contested match of the day. All three of their sets went to deuce, the second set going sixteen games.

Summary of the first day's play:

Championship Mixed Doubles—Preliminary Round—Miss Helen Lockwood and W. Gennert, Danforth Tennis Club, defeated Miss Adelaide Ball and Frank Rogers, Park Club, 6—0, 6—0.

First Round—Miss A. R. Robinson and H. S. Eddy, Seawaren Land and Water Club, defeated Mrs. C. T. Elliot and W. M. McCutcheon, Park Club, 6—1, 6—4.

Mrs. A. H. Church and E. A. Weeks, Elizabeth Town and Country Club, defeated Miss Mary K. Whiton and T. M. Day, Jr., Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, 2—6, 6—3, 7—5. Miss FlorenceBradley and F. G. Smith, Westfield Club, defeated Miss Baldee Mae Howell and H. L. McGee, Park Club, 4—6, 6—4, 6—4. Miss Miller and E. W. Mulford, Roselle Casino, defeated Miss Jeanette Hobson and Charles Shaw, Bergen Point Tennis Club, 6—3, 6—2. Miss Amy Mitchell and W. Lockwood, Danforth Tennis Club, defeated Mrs. S. S. Weaver and G. W. Faber, Park Club, 6—1, 6—0. Mrs. W. MacQueid and Mr. Stisler, Roselle Casino, defeated Miss M. D. Wright and C. W. Fernald, Seawaren Land and Water Club, 6—3, 4—6, 7—5. Mrs. Edgar and B. Berry, Ilderan Outing Club of Rahway, defeated Miss Helen Lockwood and W. Gennert, Danforth Tennis Club, 5—7, 9—7, 8—6.

Second Round Miss A. R. Robinson and H. S. Eddy, Seawaren Land and Water Club, defeated Mrs. A. H. Church and E. A. Weeks, Elizabeth Town and Country Club, 8—6, 5—7, 6—2.

Last match in the second round: Mrs. A. W. Booth, Jr., and S. L. Smith, Bergen Point Tennis Club, beat Miss Blaacke and G. H. Miller, Roselle Casino, 6—2, 6—3.

Third round: Mrs. Edgar and B. Berry, Ilderan Outing Club, Rahway, beat Miss Florence Bradley and F. G. Smith, Westfield Club, 8—6, 9—7. Miss Miller and E. W. Mulford, Roselle Casino, beat Mrs. Booth and S. L. Smith, Bergen Point Tennis Club, 6—3, 6—0. Miss Amy Mitchell and W. Lockwood, Danforth Tennis Club, beat Mrs. C. W. MacQueid and Mr. Stisler, Roselle Casino, 6—2, 6 0.

Fourth round: Mrs. Edgar and B. Berry, Ilderan Outing Club, Rahway, beat Miss A. R. Robinson and H. S. Eddy, Seawaren Land and Water Club, 6 3, 6 2. Miss Miller and E. W. Mulford, Roselle Casino, beat Miss Amy Mitchell and W. Lockwood, Danforth Tennis Club, 6 4, 6 2.

The sudden advent of a thunder storm interrupted the finals when Mrs. Edgar and B. Berry, of the Ilderan Outing Club, Rahway, had taken one set from Miss Miller and E. W. Mulford, of the Roselle Casino, by a score of 6—3, and lost one 6—3. The first game of the third set had just been decided in favor of Mrs. Edgar and her partner when the rain put a stop to the play. The deciding set is slated to be played off at 4 o'clock today.

Phenominal play has been done by Mrs. Edgar throughout the tournament and the praise of her game is unanimous. Her pluck and steadiness have pulled her out of some very doubtful looking deuce sets and will without a doubt make for success in this last and most closely contested match of the series.

A. E. Beals Undergoes Operation.

A. E. Beals, formerly of The Press staff, but now on the Elizabeth Times, went to New Brunswick Monday to undergo an operation at the Wells Memorial Hospital there. Mr. Beals will probably be confined to the hospital for a fortnight.

OPEN-AIR PRODUCTION OF SHAKESPEARIAN PLAY

Pupils of the Hartridge School Give a Midsummer Night's Dream to Pleased Audience.

SOMETHING NEW HERE

PERFORMANCE TAKES PLACE ON L. V. F. RANDOLPH'S ESTATE.

High Praise for Members of the Cast—The Music and the Dancing Features of the Show—Reception Follows.

But for the fact that Ben Greet has taken away the novelty of outdoor performances, the production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" by the pupils of the Hartridge School, Thursday afternoon, might be considered somewhat unique, but be as it may the comedy was given in a way clearly showing that young people can be taught to correctly interpret the meaning of a Shakespearian play. The performance was given on the estate of L. V. F. Randolph, president of the New York Consolidated Investment and Stock Exchange, in East Front street, near Farragut road, and some three hundred people witnessed it. The lawn on the Plainfield side of the brook was the stage, the scenery being the small stream of water and its North Plainfield bank.

There was not a single hitch, the production being carried along as smoothly as if the players were giving a 100th souvenir performance. As for the color scheme of the costumes, it was admirable. In fact the costumes blended in excellent harmony and were well set off by the background of green. Particularly noticeable were the little fairies in their flower dresses of white and gold, with caps and wings. The dancing of the fairies to the graceful flute it brought forth enthusiastic applause from the spectators, who were seated in a semi-circle before them.

One of the most effective scenes was that in which the three artisans appear. They were impersonated by the Misses Ellen Burke, Hetty Marshall, Anne Waldo, Blanche Buttfield, Margaret Gibbs and Ruth VanVliet. Miss Nellie Hails was the dignified Theseus and her acting was spirited. Miss Frederica Mead in her costume of white and gold was certainly a picturesque Hippolyta and Miss Dorothy Burke as Egeus was one of the best in the cast. The part of the scornful Demetrius was taken by Miss Katharine McCutcheon and that of Helena by Miss Lillian King. Miss Mary Runkle was quite graceful as Hermia and Miss Ellen Burke inimitable as Bottom.

The others in the dramatis personae were: Lysander, Miss Verna McCutcheon; Philostrate, Miss Dorothy Stiles; Snug, Miss Blanche Buttfield; Flute, Anne Waldo; Snout, Miss Margaret Gibbs; Starveling, Ruth Van Vliet; Oberon, Richard H. Depew, Jr.; Puck, Miss Helen Beeler; Peaseblossom, Miss Mildred Brownlee; Cob-web, Miss Gladys Chase; Moth, Lawrence Healy; Mustard-seed, Charles Hyde.

The music, a special feature of the performance, was rendered under the direction of Dr. Leonard Waldo, of New York, who played cello. Otto Schill, of Newark, was first violin, and the Misses Lamson, Randolph and Anderson second violins. Miss Dorothy Waldo played the viola and Julius Black the horn. Mrs. Charles L. Lewis was at the piano. After the show, the members of the faculty and the pupils held an informal reception.

Miss Katharine Lord, one of the instructors in the school, acted as manager for the affair and she coached the pupils for their parts. Miss Seward's assistance was invaluable. The children were trained for the dances by Mrs. Charles Haseltine, and the chorus work was under the direction of Miss Julia J. Ketcham.

Among the audience were Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Ackerman, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Beaton, A. B. Beers, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Besler, Mr. and Mrs. G. Bornann, Mrs. W. T. R. Chase, Dr. Frank F. Clawson, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Cruikshank, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Graff, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Depew, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Castle, Mrs. Charles W. Foster, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Fox, Mrs. D. D. Fredricks, Mrs. J. B. Drayton, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Gibbs, Mr. and Mrs. D. Ginns, Mr. and Mrs. F. deLacey Hyde, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Iredell, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Joy, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. King, Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Mellick, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Murray, Mr. and Mrs. F. Paddock, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Philips, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Robley, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Rowland, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Fetenka, Mr. and Mrs. Deuss M. VanVliet, Mr. and Mrs. C. U. Hartridge, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Cachion, Hon. and Mrs. G. F. Seward, Wm. V. Schwill, the artist of New York; Mrs. Riardon, Mr. and Mrs. Sneden Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Baynes, Mr. and Mrs. John Brisben Walker, Miss May Moon, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Hartridge, Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. D. B. McCutcheon, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Runkle, Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Ryor, Mrs. White, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Stevens, Dr. and Mrs. Leonard Waldo, Mr. and Mrs. F. Dale Warren, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Yerkes.

DIME SOCIAL IN G. A. R. HALL

WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS HOLDS A SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR.

Under the auspices of the Woman's Relief Corps a successful dime social was held in G. A. R. Hall, Friday. The programme consisted of recitations by Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, Miss May E. Howlett and Miss Try Mattox; piano and violin selections by the Misses Ella and Agnes Merick; soprano solos by Mrs. John Manley.

There were short addresses by members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R.

PLAINFIELDERS GOING ABROAD

MR. HONEYMAN WILL CONDUCT THE TOURISTS TO LAND OF MIDNIGHT SUN.

A. V. D. Honeyman has secured his quota of twenty-five for his next trip abroad to Norway, Denmark and Lapland. Those from here who will be in the party are Mrs. George H. Babcock, George L. Babcock, Miss Myra Clark, Mrs. Emma F. Ege, and W. M. Sandford and family. While on the trip the party will make a journey over the new railroad through Lapland to The Land of the Midnight Sun. This will be the first trip of an American party over that road.

APPEALS FOR HOLIER LIFE

REV. MR. TODD'S STIRRING ADDRESS AT TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

Rev. A. F. Todd, the veteran preacher of Dansville, produced a strong impression upon the congregation of Trinity church at the close of the service Sunday night with a short talk on his conversion sixty years ago and an exhortation for the holy life.

He recalled his conversion in vivid language, and reviewed his life in the Christian service. His appeal for a better and holier life stirred his hearers strongly, and the effect of his words was noticeable. Coming from a man so venerable, in such an unexpected way the appeal will not be likely to pass from the minds of the auditors without affecting them to a greater or less extent. Mr. Todd pronounced the benediction, by request of Dr. Schenck.

SEMINARY'S COMMENCEMENT

THREE STUDENTS TO BE GRADUATED ON TUESDAY NEXT.

Commencement exercises will be held at the Plainfield Seminary on Tuesday morning, June 7, at 10:30. The Misses Margaret Curtis, Mai Faber and Christiana Scott will be graduated and the diplomas will be presented by the principal, Miss Kenyon. During the exercises there will be a pupil recital under the direction of Miss May.

Tomorrow afternoon, at 4 o'clock, there will be an exhibition by the drawing class and a French play, Une Chace a la cour, will be produced.

STEALING WIRE.

Colored Man Is Arrested on Charge Preferred.

Abe Connett, a young colored man, of 308 Arlington avenue, was taken up Sunday, on a State warrant issued by Justice Duff on complaint of William A. McClurg, superintendent of the electric light plant, who charged him with the theft of some copper wire. Connett, who served a term in Trenton prison some years ago for burglary, was in such a weakened condition from consumption, that he was allowed to go on his own recognizance.

Conjunction Jones in Court.

Walter Jones, better known as "Professor Conjunction" Jones, in the city court Tuesday morning answered the complaint of Richard Higgins, who charged him with using profane and abusive language. The judge released him to return to his agricultural experiments in Piscataway Township.

Clever Rhymers.

Among the boys who sent clever verses in the Rhyming End Contest of the Young Folks Page of last Saturday's Evening Mail were Earle Bigelow, of Truell Inn; Robert E. Gibbon, Rockview avenue; Norman Rhoades, of Central avenue, and Percy Watson, of Washington avenue.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

Standard Railroad of America.

CONSTRUCTED THROUGHOUT BY THE ELECTRIC AUTOMATIC BLOCK SIGNAL SYSTEM.

On and After May 30, 1904.

Trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

7 35 a m—Main Line Express daily, with Pullman Parlor Cars, for Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Louisville, Indianapolis, Chicago and St. Louis; Dining Car.

8 35 p m—Chicago and St. Louis Express, daily, for Nashville via Cincinnati and Louisville), Indianapolis, Chicago and St. Louis; Dining Car.

12 40 a m, Express for Pittsburg, daily, with Vestibule Sleeping Cars and Dining Car, for Pittsburg and Chicago.

4 07 p m—Pacific Express, daily, with Pullman Vestibule Sleeping Cars, for Pittsburg, Toledo and Chicago, daily, for Knox-ville, via Cincinnati; Dining Car. Sleeping Cars for Cleveland, and Washington.

6 30 and Atlantic Express, 7 04 p m daily.

For Rahway, 6 45, 7 35, 8 08, 9 07, 10 03 a m, 12 03, 1 04, 2 03, 3 07, 4 07, 5 03, 6 03, 7 07, 10 03 p m. On Sundays, 8 45, 9 04, 10 03 a m, 1 04, 10 03 p m.

For Newark, 6 45, 7 35, 8 08, 9 07, 10 03 a m, 12 03, 1 04, 2 03, 3 07, 4 07, 5 03, 6 03, 7 07, 10 03 p m. On Sundays, 8 45, 9 04, 10 03 a m, 1 04, 10 03 p m.

For Newark and New York—6 45, 7 35, 8 08, 9 07, 10 03 a m, 12 03, 1 04, 2 03, 3 07, 4 07, 5 03, 6 03, 7 07, 10 03 p m. On Sundays, 8 45, 9 04, 10 03 a m, 1 04, 10 03 p m.

For Jersey City, 6 45, 7 35, 8 08, 9 07, 10 03 a m, 12 03, 1 04, 2 03, 3 07, 4 07, 5 03, 6 03, 7 07, 10 03 p m. On Sundays, 8 45, 9 04, 10 03 a m, 1 04, 10 03 p m.

For New York, 7 45 and 8 31 a m, and 3 16 p m week days.

For Philadelphia—1 01, 6 45, 8 04, 8 30, 9 07, 9 38, 10 08, 11 00 a m, 12 01, 1 34, 2 03, 2 34, 3 07, 3 38, 4 07, 4 38, 5 03, 5 38, 6 03, 6 38, 7 07, 7 38, 8 07, 9 07, 10 08, 11 40 p m. Sundays, 1 01, 4 00, 8 04, 8 45, 9 04, 9 37, 10 03, 10 40 a m, 1 04, 4 00, 6 03, 7 07, 10 07 p m.

For Atlantic City—Through Vestibuled Express Trains, Buffet Parlor Cars, Passenger Coaches and Dining Car, 9 00 a m, 2 00 and 3 20 p m week days. Express 1 01 and 8 04 a m. Sundays, 1 01 and 9 00 (Through Vestibuled Train), 10 40 a m, 3 20 p m. Parlor and Smoking Cars and wide Vestibule Coaches.

For Atlantic City—Via Delaware River Bridge, 8 35 p m week days; 8 51 a. m. Sundays.

For Cape May—Express, 9 36 a m (Saturdays only), 3 47 and 8 04 p m daily.

For Asbury Park, 1 01, 6 45, 8 04, 8 30, 9 07, 9 38, 10 08, 11 00 a m, 12 01, 1 34, 2 03, 2 34, 3 07, 3 38, 4 07, 4 38, 5 03, 5 38, 6 03, 6 38, 7 07, 7 38, 8 07, 9 07, 10 08, 11 40 p m. Sundays, 1 01, 4 00, 8 04, 8 45, 9 04, 9 37, 10 03, 10 40 a m, 1 04, 4 00, 6 03, 7 07, 10 07 p m.

For Ocean Grove, 1 01, 6 45, 8 04, 8 30, 9 07, 9 38, 10 08, 11 00 a m, 12 01, 1 34, 2 03, 2 34, 3 07, 3 38, 4 07, 4 38, 5 03, 5 38, 6 03, 6 38, 7 07, 7 38, 8 07, 9 07, 10 08, 11 40 p m. Sundays, 1 01, 4 00, 8 04, 8 45, 9 04, 9 37, 10 03, 10 40 a m, 1 04, 4 00, 6 03, 7 07, 10 07 p m.

For Long Branch, Asbury Park, Ocean Grove, &c., Pier of Penn'a R. R., foot of Cortlandt St., 9 00 a m week days.

For Long Branch, Asbury Park, Ocean Grove and Lakewood, 4 45 p m week-days.

For Toms River, 9 00 a m week-days.

For Bay Head, Point Pleasant and Manasquan, 9 00 a m week-days.

For Sea Girt, 9 00 a m week-days.

For Spring Lake and Sea Girt, 9 00 a m week-days.

For Bradley Beach and Asbury Park, 9 00 a m week-days.

For Belmar, Spring Lake, Sea Girt, Manasquan, Bay Head, Point Pleasant and Toms River, 9 00 a m week-days.

For Lakewood, 9 00 a m week-days.

For Tuckerton, 9 00 a m week-days.

For Somerville—8 35, 7 35, 8 08, 9 07, 10 03 a m, 12 03, 1 04, 2 03, 3 07, 4 07, 5 03, 6 03, 7 07, 10 03 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 04, 10 03 a m, 1 04, 10 03 p m.

For Bound Brook—8 35, 7 35, 8 08, 9 07, 10 03 a m, 12 03, 1 04, 2 03, 3 07, 4 07, 5 03, 6 03, 7 07, 10 03 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 04, 10 03 a m, 1 04, 10 03 p m.

For Princeton—7 35, 11 00 a m, 3 11, 4 54 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m.

For Philadelphia and Easton—8 35, 9 04 a m, 12 03, 3 07, 4 07, 5 03, 6 03 p m. Sunday—8 45 a m.

For Bethlehem, Allentown and Mauch Chunk—8 35 a m, 3 07, 5 03 p m. Sunday—8 45 a m.

For Reading and Lebanon—4 35, 9 04 a m, 3 07 p m. Sunday—8 45 a m.

For Harrisburg, Pittsburg and Scranton—4 35, 9 04 a m, 3 07 p m. Sunday—8 45 a m, 3 07 p m.

For Lambertville, New Hope and Intermediate Points—8 35 a m, 3 07 p m. Sunday—8 45 a m.

For Flemington—7 35, 11 00 a m, 3 11, 4 54 p m. Sunday—8 45 a m.

For Philipsburg and Easton—8 35, 9 04 a m, 12 03, 3 07, 4 07, 5 03, 6 03 p m. Sunday—8 45 a m.

For Bethlehem, Allentown and Mauch Chunk—8 35 a m, 3 07, 5 03 p m. Sunday—8 45 a m.

For Reading and Lebanon—4 35, 9 04 a m, 3 07 p m. Sunday—8 45 a m.

For Harrisburg, Pittsburg and Scranton—4 35, 9 04 a m, 3 07 p m. Sunday—8 45 a m, 3 07 p m.

For Lambertville, New Hope and Intermediate Points—8 35 a m, 3 07 p m. Sunday—8 45 a m.

For Trenton—6 45, 7 35, 7 45, 8 04, 8 30, 9 04, 9 38, 10 08, 11 00 a m, 12 01, 1 34, 2 03, 2 34, 3 07, 3 38, 4 07, 4 38, 5 03, 5 38, 6 03, 6 38, 7 07, 7 38, 8 07, 9 07, 10 08, 11 40 p m. Sundays, 1 01 and 8 04 (Through Vestibuled Train), 8 45, 9 04, 10 03, 10 40 a m, 1 04, 4 00, 6 03, 7 07, 10 07 p m.

For Princeton Junction—7 35, 11 00 a m, 3 11, 4 54 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m, 3 07 p m.

For Camden and Atlantic City—Express, 1 01, 8 04, 9 00, 10 40 a m, 2 00, 3 20 p m week days. Express, 1 01 and 8 04 a m, 4 00 p m. Sundays, 1 01 and 9 00 (Through Vestibuled Train), 10 40 a m, 3 20 p m. Parlor and Smoking Cars and wide Vestibule Coaches.

For Camden and Atlantic City—Via Delaware River Bridge, 8 35 a m week days; 8 51 a m Sundays.

For Cape May—Express, 9 36 a m (Saturdays only), 3 47 and 8 04 p m daily.

For Asbury Park, 1 01, 8 04, 9 00, 10 40 a m, 2 00, 3 20 p m week-days. Express, 1 01 and 8 04 a m, 4 00 p m Sundays.

For Ocean Grove, 10 40 a m and 3 20 p m.

For Lakewood via Monmouth Junction—7 10 a m, 4 45 p m week-days.

For Long Branch via Monmouth Junction—7 10, 9 08 11 40 a m, 4 46 p m week-days. Sundays, 9 08 a m.

For Long Branch, Asbury Park, Ocean Grove and Point Pleasant on New York and Long Branch R. R., 1 01, 8 04, 9 00 a m week-days. Express, 1 01 and 8 04 a m, 4 00 p m Sundays.

For Brooklyn, N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with boats of Pennsylvania Ferry Co., affording direct transfer to and from Fulton street, avoiding double ferriage and cartage across New York city.

Leave New York for Elizabeth—From West Twenty-third Street Station, 6 05, 8 05, 9 05, 10 05, 11 05 a m, 12 05, 1 05, 2 05, 3 05, 4 05, 5 05, 6 05, 7 05, 8 05, 9 05, 10 05, 11 58 a m, 12 58, 1 55 (Saturdays only), 2 05, 3 05, 4 05, 5 05, 6 05, 7 05, 8 05, 9 05, 10 05, 11 55 p m. Sundays, 9 05, 10 05, 11 55 a m, 12 55, 1 55, 2 55, 3 55, 4 55, 5 55, 6 55, 7 55, 8 55, 9 55, 10 55, 11 55 p m. From Cortlandt Street Station, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a m, 12 00, 1 00, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m. Sundays, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a m, 12 00, 1 00, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m.

"P" Stops on notice to Agent or on signal. For time tables, folders and further information, streets consult local time-tables to be procured from agents.

W. W. ATTERBURY, J. R. WOOD, Gen'l M'g'r. Pass. Traffic M'g'r.

GEO. W. BOYD, General Passenger Agent.

HOW TO OBTAIN Summer Boarders!

There is in New York City one daily newspaper which has made tremendous gains in popular favor and prestige, and which has net cash paid circulation in over 100,000 copies daily throughout every section of New York City (including Brooklyn) and suburbs, more than any other recognized resort medium. This newspaper's circulation is of the wealthy, refined and highly intelligent people—those who can afford and do take extended vacations in the country during the Summer. It carries more resort advertising than any other newspaper, so the public naturally look to it for information as to where to go.

An advertisement in its columns is, therefore, exceedingly valuable and sure to produce results. This paper is

The New York Times

"All the News That's Fit to Print."

Write the Classified Advertising Department for rate cards, sample copy and suggestions as to the best manner of treating your business.

5 5 mm 1x 13—6 mm

AGENTS WANTED.

LIFE OF T. DEWITT TALMAGE, by his son, REV. FRANK DEWITT TALMAGE and associate editors of Christian Herald. Only book endorsed by Talmage family. Enormous profit for agents who act quickly. Outfit ten cents. Write immediately CLARK & CO., 222 S. Fourth Street, Phila., Pa. Mention this paper. 2 14

Woolston & Buckle,

PAINTERS.

Wall Papers, Painters' Supplies

141-145 North avenue.

GEORGE W. DAY,

General Auctioneer.

Sales of Personal Property solicited P. O. Box 152, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of Constitutionalist. Terms reasonable

Reading System

New Jersey Central.

Stations in New York foot of Liberty and South Ferry, Whitehall Streets.

TIMETABLE IN EFFECT MAY 15, 1904.

For New York—7 12, 7 45, 8 45, 9 45, 10 45 a m, 12 01, 1 45, 2 45, 3 45, 4 45, 5 45, 6 45, 7 45, 8 45, 9 45, 10 45, 11 45 p m. Sundays—7 45, 8 45, 9 45, 10 45 a m, 12 01, 1 45, 2 45, 3 45, 4 45, 5 45, 6 45, 7 45, 8 45, 9 45, 10 45, 11 45 p m.

For Newark—5 30, 6 30, 7 05, 7 37, 7 55, 7 45, 8 45, 9 45, 10 45, 11 45 a m, 12 45, 1 45, 2 45, 3 45, 4 45, 5 45, 6 45, 7 45, 8 45, 9 45, 10 45, 11 45 p m. Sundays—7 45, 8 45, 9 45, 10 45 a m, 12 45, 1 45, 2 45, 3 45, 4 45, 5 45, 6 45, 7 45, 8 45, 9 45, 10 45, 11 45 p m.

For Somerville—8 35, 7 35, 8 08, 9 08, 10 03 a m, 12 03, 1 04, 2 03, 3 07, 4 07, 5 03, 6 03, 7 07, 10 03 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 04, 10 03 a m, 1 04, 10 03 p m.

For Bound Brook—8 35, 7 35, 8 08, 9 08, 10 03 a m, 12 03, 1 04, 2 03, 3 07, 4 07, 5 03, 6 03, 7 07, 10 03 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 04, 10 03 a m, 1 04, 10 03 p m.

For Princeton—7 35, 11 00 a m, 3 11, 4 54 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m.

For Philadelphia and Easton—9 27 a m, 1 12, 3 44 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m.

For Bethlehem, Allentown and Mauch Chunk—6 45 a m, 12 12, 7 44, 8 44, 9 51, 10 44, 10 52, 11 44 a m, 12 44, 1 54, 2 44, 3 54, 4 54, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m, 12 12, 4 54, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m.

For Reading and Intermediate Points—6 45, 9 27 a m, 12 12, 1 12, 3 44, 4 54, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m, 12 12, 4 54, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m.

For Harrisburg, Pittsburg and Intermediate Points—6 45 a m, 12 12, 4 54, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m, 12 12, 4 54, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m.

For Lambertville and Intermediate Points—8 35, 9 27 a m, 12 12, 1 12, 3 44, 4 54, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m, 12 12, 4 54, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m.

For Trenton—7 12, 7 44, 8 44, 9 51, 10 44, 10 52, 11 44 a m, 12 44, 1 54, 2 44, 3 54, 4 54, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m, 12 12, 4 54, 5 44, 6 44, 7 44, 8 44, 9 44, 10 44, 11 44 p m.

For Camden and Atlantic City—Express, 9 27 a m, 1 12, 3 44 p m week days. Express, 9 27 a m, 1 12 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m, 3 07 p m.

For Cape May—Express, 9 27 a m, 3 44 p m week days. Express, 9 27 a m, 1 12 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m, 3 07 p m.

For Asbury Park, Ocean Grove, Long Branch and Intermediate Points—9 27 a m, 1 12, 3 44 p m week days. Express, 9 27 a m, 1 12 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m, 3 07 p m.

For Lakewood—9 27 a m, 3 44 p m week days. Sundays—8 45 a m, 3 07 p m.

For Tuckerton—9 27 a m, 3 44 p m week days.

Through trains for Easton, Allentown, Bethlehem, Buffalo and principal intermediate stations, connect at Depew Junction for Niagara Falls and Susquehanna Bridge.

LST p. m. daily local for Easton, Mauch Chunk, Allentown, Bethlehem and Shenandoah.

6:00 p. m. daily (except Sunday) "Wilkes-Barre and Scranton Express." Solid vestibuled train for Wilkes-Barre. Through Parlor Car via D. & H. R. R. to Scranton and Carbondale.

6:00 p.

HORSE SHOW PRIZE LIST

Cups, Cash and Ribbons to be Awarded in the Various Classes As Arranged.

CONDITIONS OF RACES

The Officers and Members of the Committee—L. E. Waring is Chairman—Races and Other Attractions—The Various Local Classes.

Prizes represented by nine handsome cups in addition to over $900 in cash will be given at the Plainfield Horse Show at the Driving Park here on Friday and Saturday, June 17 and 18. Announcement has been made that the list of entries will close on Thursday, June 9 and that to entitle anyone to make an exhibit it is necessary for a certificate of entry to be sent to William S. Hitts, the assistant secretary, at the Plainfield Casino before that date together with the required fee of $5. A condition is made that all horses must be the bona fide property of the exhibitor at the time the entry is made.

No prize will be awarded in any class unless there be at least three entries, two of which are by different owners. In case the animal is disqualified the winner of the next succeeding prize will be entitled to take the prize awarded for such disqualified horse. In addition to the cups and prize money, the usual ribbons will be awarded to the first, second and third in each event. There will be two races during the show, the Watchung and the Hillside. The Watchung is for ponies not over 14.3 hands, catch weights, half mile. This is a sweepstakes of $10 each, the total amount to go to the winner. The Hillside is a hurdle race for four-year-olds and upward; one and a half miles over nine flights of hurdles. This is also a sweepstakes of $10 each, the total amount to go to the winner. In each event colors must be worn by riders, who must be amateurs.

The horses entered in the roadsters classes will be judged as road horses that are driven regularly on the road. Their manners, conformation and style of going will be considered, not their pedigrees or records. Paces will be barred. In class No. 1, roadsters, any height, to be shown to wagon, another cup is offered. A third cup is the prize in class No. 1B, a horse, any height, and best appointed road rig. The following scale of points will govern in judging class, No. 1: Horse, sixty per cent.; general appointments, including wagon, harness, robes, blankets, whip, style, and the like, forty per cent. In judging pacers, conformation, style of going, manners, and as they are and appear at the time of showing in the rig, will be considered. A cup is offered in class No. 4, for pacers, any height, to be shown to wagon.

All animals entered in the horse, to-harness classes must be serviceably sound for the purposes for which they are shown and must have good manners. Conformation and quality will count fifty per cent. and action and style will count fifty per cent. In each of the eight classes of horses in harness the prize for first is $40 and for second $10. Class No. 5, is for horses over 14.3 hands and not exceeding 15.2; class No. 6, is for a pair of horses, over 14.2 and not exceeding 15.1; class No. 7, horse, over 14.2; class No. 8, horses to be shown before a women's appropriate vehicle, with woman to drive; class No. 1C, pair of horses, same as No. 9; class No. 11, horse, 14.2 and not exceeding 15.2. Suitable for a runabout; to be shown before a runabout; class No. 12, tandem, the wheeler to be of any height, but no tandem to be admitted in which the leader exceeds the wheeler in height.

A first prize of $40 and a second prize of $10 is offered in the four-in-hand class No. 13, horses to be of any height, to be shown before a coach, dog or break. In class No. 14, combination harness and saddle horses, the animal is to be first shown as an appropriate vehicle and judged as a horse suited for harness purposes; the horses to be unharnessed in the ring and to be judged and shown under saddle. Class No. 15, is for ponies in harness, and all ponies in this class must be serviceably sound, have good manners and be shown before an appropriate vehicle, for ponies over 13 hands and not exceeding 14.2. The prizes are $35 and $10.

Saddle horses will be required to back easily and stand long enough for a rider to dismount and mount without unnecessary trouble. A saddle will be the first prize in class No. 16, horse over 14.2 hands and under 15.3 hands. The second prize will be $10. In class No. 17, horse 15.3 hands or over; first, $40; second $10. Ladies' saddle horse, 14.2 hands or over, woman to ride, class No. 18; prizes $40 and $10. Class No. 19 is for ponies 14.3 hands or over, under saddle; prizes $35 and $10.

Polo ponies are to be shown with mallet and ball and their performance is to count 75 per cent. They are in class No. 20 and the prizes are $35 and $10. Classes Nos. 21 and 22, are the jumpers, the prizes being $40 and $10 in each class. In the former jumper performance over fences only is to count and in the latter 75 per cent. is given for performance.

The following classes are open only to amateur owners of horses residing in Union, Middlesex or Somerset counties: Harness horse—Class No. 23, pair of horses any height, to be shown to appropriate vehicles, horses only to count; class No. 24, horse to be shown before a woman's appropriate vehicle, horse to count 60 per cent; woman, amateur, to drive; winners of class No. 9, barred; class No. 25, horse and depot wagon for four passengers, driver included, for private depot work, wagon to be four wheeler, closed or with top, horse to count 60 per cent; ponies in harness—local, class No. 26, pony thirteen hands or under, children to drive; class No. 27, pony over thirteen hands and not exceeding 14.2 hands, winner of class No. 15, barred; saddle horses—local, class No. 28, horse 14.2 hands or over, if ridden by a woman 10 per cent. will be given in horse's favor, winner of class No. 18, barred. In the last of these attractions, a saddle is the prize and in all others handsome silver cups will be given.

The horse show committee consists of Lewis E. Waring, chairman; Dr. W. O'Malley Knott, secretary; J. Herbert Case, treasurer; William S. Hitts, assistant secretary; Marion S. Ackerman, Elliott T. Barrows, George S. Beston, Harry A. Bourne, Paul T. Brown, William J. Butsfield, William A. Coddington, S. A. Cruikshank, Martin I. Cooley, H. B. Condit, T. S. Davis, M. D., George W. Endicott, M. D., Robert A. Fairbairn, Edward L. Finch, Charles J. Fisk, John H. Greene, Jabez Gilbert, Daniel F. Ginna, George D. Hallock, John I. Holly, R. VanD. Hedges, M. D., Frank Dale Hyde, DeWitt C. Irving, Henry C. Irons, O. M. Jenkins, M. D., J. Wesley Johnson, William T. Kirk, Edward H. Ladd, Jr., Edward F. Lowe, Henry W. Lewe, George P. Mellick, Charles W. McCutcheon, Craig A. Marsh, Arthur L. Otterson, John W. Peale, Joseph W. Reinhart, David H. Rowland, Robert Rushmore, Charles A. Reed, Harry G. Runkle, Percy Stewart, S. W. Sharp, Joseph H. Shellenberger, Alfred H. Shrevell, Augustus D. Shepard, Jr., Rutherford M. Shepard, Newton B. Smalley, David C. Smalley, J. P. Stevens, William F. Smith, Henry A. Talmadge, 2d, Lewis G. Timpson, Evarts Tracy, Thomas H. VanBokerk, George T. VanBokerk, P. V. H. VanWyck, Edward H. VanBuren, Anthony C. Vail, Orville T. Waring, J. V. N. Willis, Theodore D. Wilson.

The executive committee is J. Herbert Case, George A. Beston, William J. Butsfield, Robert A. Fairbairn, Charles J. Fisk, Daniel F. Ginna, Francis DeL. Hyde, J. Wesley Johnson, Dr. M. O'Malley Knott, Edward H. Ladd, Jr., George P. Mellick, Henry A. Talmadge, 2d, Orville T. Waring, Lewis E. Waring.

RED LIGHTS.

Councilman Lee's Device Shines Above All the Fire Alarm Boxes.

Warning red reflectors have been placed about all electric lights shining above fire alarm boxes in the city. They are Councilman Lee's patented device that makes the light look red from the sidewalk or roadway, but, being open at the bottom, cuts off no illumination like the old-fashioned red globe.

CROWNING OF THE VIRGIN.

The Children of Mary Take Part in Special Services.

Clad in the white dress and veil of the order, about twenty candidates were received into the Sodality of the Children of Mary, at Saint Mary's church Sunday evening on the occasion of the May crowning of the Virgin.

Two hundred or more of the children belonging to the society marched into the church and were seated in a body. Beside the crowning of Our Lady, the service included the Litany of the Blessed Virgin Mary, the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, a sermon by the Rev. Father Cornelius Clifford and special music. The church was filled to overflowing.

Constable Pangborn Injured.

Constable William Pangborn, of Linden avenue, while getting off a trolley car at the Dunellen terminus Saturday afternoon, sustained a painful injury to his hand. Someone turned a seat over and caught his hand, scraping the skin from the back.

Mr. and Mrs. Owen Smith, of New York, have returned home after a visit with Mrs. Smith's father, B. R. Force, of East Front street.

RUSSIA, THE TOPIC OF MR. HONEYMAN'S TALK

Tourist Delivers a Lecture Before Young Men's Brotherhood of First M. E. Church.

MOSCOW'S BIG STORE

DWELLS ON CUSTOMS AND TRAITS OF THE PEOPLE.

First Presbyterian Church Quartette Furnishes Music—Clifford Braider, Organist—The Speaker's Fund of Knowledge on Subject.

It was a small but appreciative audience that heard A. V. D. Honeyman's lecture on "Russia" in Vincent chapel, Friday. The lecture was given under the auspices of the Young Men's Brotherhood, of the First M. E. church, it being the last public meeting for the season. In addition to the talk by Mr. Honeyman, the quartette from the First Presbyterian church; Mrs. Stephen H. Tugwell, alto; Miss Etta Raybert, soprano; Elmer Cutting, tenor, and R. Wilson Derby, bass, accompanied on the piano by Clifford Braider, organist, sang two selections.

Mr. Honeyman spoke of the mixed and peculiar people to be found in Russia, there being so many races. He referred to the very long winters continuing up to April 15, when within two weeks afterward the warmest summer weather begins. He said, by way of comparison, that Russia is one and a half as large as the United States and yet there are 26,000 miles of railroads there. The speaker referred to Peter the Great and his influence on the people. It was he who started the school system and gave the people a language.

Mr. Honeyman said that St. Petersburg represented the new Russia and Moscow the old, and he then compared the two places, showing how vastly different they are in important customs. He said that in Moscow they have presumably the largest store in the world. The building, three stories high, covers twenty acres and contains a thousand different stores.

A peculiar custom among those people is that they smoke before breakfast and they use cigar-holders fourteen and fifteen inches in length. Another old custom adhered to is the wearing of the high top boots.

The speaker said the country is noted for peddlers and they all make a good living. In explaining why so few Americans tour Russia, Mr. Honeyman said that it costs a person to travel in Russia and live at the hotels twice as much as it would at the Waldorf-Astoria. Meat is very high there and it adds greatly to the cost of living, which is nothing extra at that.

In conclusion, Mr. Honeyman related many amusing incidents in connection with his visits to Russia, giving his audience a clear idea of the peculiar customs which have governed that country for many years. At the close of the lecture a vote of thanks was given the speaker and a social time with refreshments followed.

MRS. HOWE 85 YEARS OLD

MOTHER OF MRS. FLORENCE HOWE HALL OBSERVES HER BIRTHDAY.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, mother of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of this city, observed her eighty-fifth birthday in Boston on Thursday, as is her custom on these anniversaries, in her own family circle.

With her are Mrs. Laura E. Richards and Mrs. Maude Howe Elliott, her daughters, and her two granddaughters, daughters of Mrs. Richards.

There were numerous callers during the afternoon at the Beacon street house and quantities of flowers were sent to Mrs. Howe.

MUSIC THE ATTRACTION.

Men's Club of Grace M. E. Church Has Enjoyable Time.

The Men's Assembly, of Grace M. E. church, entertained its women friends at a reception Thursday. Miss Clara Birkenshaw, of Brooklyn, rendered a number of elocutionary selections and Dyckman Winckler and the Speir brothers, of Watchung, played a number of instrumental duets. The committee in charge consisted of John Valiant, Rev. Dr. Harp and E. E. Winckler.

The following officers were elected at a business meeting: President, W. M. Warren; vice president, Charles Harden; secretary-treasurer, Russell Harden. Andrew Lutkins and G. C. Nelson were elected to the executive committee.

Bertram Hetfield, of this city, who has been working in Worchester, Mass., for some time, has entirely recovered from his recent severe illness.

HIGHER LICENSE PETITION REFUSED?

Judge Schenck Returns All Borough Applications Without Comment.

NO INCREASE LIKELY

NORTH PLAINFIELD COUNCIL'S PETITION PROBABLY TURNED DOWN.

No Formal Announcement Yet—Possibility That Desired Increase May Come Next Year.

Because Judge Schenck, before whom the application was laid, has sent all the borough liquor licenses to Collector George Brown with no word as to an increase, actual or expected, the North Plainfield officials believe that the increased license fee will not be ordered.

Judge Schenck has made no formal announcement one way or another. When Borough Counsel Reed closed his argument for the increase, at the time the matter was laid before the County Clerk several weeks ago, the court said it would take the matter under consideration and announce a decision later. The borough officials, in the light of Judge Schenck's action on the pending licenses, are inclined to feel that no further announcement is necessary. If the court decides in favor of the increase they will be greatly surprised.

No comment whatever was made by Judge Schenck in sending the licenses to Collector Brown's office. It may be that the Judge will order the increase to take effect next year, but that borough authorities and the citizens interested in the increase are doubtful if even that will be done.

RICHARD P. ROBISON WEDS A CAMDEN GIRL

Freeholder's Son Now the Husband of Miss May Browning, Her Pastor Officiating.

A QUIET CEREMONY

MR. AND MRS. ROBISON TO RESIDE IN NEW YORK CITY.

Bride Formerly a School Teacher—Groom Employed in Metropolis—Honeymoon at Atlantic City.

Richard Porteous Robison, son of Freeholder and Mrs. John Robison, of Scotch Plains, was married Friday at 6 o'clock to Miss May Browning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Frank Browning, at the bride's home in Camden. The ceremony was witnessed by a large gathering of relatives and friends from New York, Plainfield, Philadelphia, Camden, Scotch Plains and Fanwood. Rev. Mr. Lyall, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated.

The Mendelssohn wedding march was played by Miss Ella Schultz. The bride was given in marriage by her father. An altar had been erected in the parlor under a canopy of flowers and ferns.

The bride's gown was of white crepe de chine trimmed with Dunbesse lace. Her veil was caught up with a spray of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses. The parlor of the home was adorned in white and green; a combination of flowers and palms.

After the ceremony a reception was held. During the festivities Mr. and Mrs. Robison slipped away for a short wedding trip, their destination being Atlantic City. On their return they will reside in New York city. The many handsome presents received by the bride included cut glass, silverware, furniture, pictures and bric-a-brac. The bride has been for several years past a teacher in one of the public schools in Camden. The groom holds a position with the American Lithographic Company, of New York.

Aubrey B. Hall, formerly of this city, who now resides in New York, has been the guest of George Dupee, of Rockview avenue.

Miss Marion Porter has returned to New York after a stay with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Porter, of West Third street.

Mrs. William Cook is visiting her brother, Charles Force, of Somerset place.

Lieutenant Gerald Ollif, who, with his wife and child, have been visiting at the home of C. L. Moffett, have returned to Newport, R. I., where Lieutenant Ollif is an instructor in the training-school.

NEED OF A RAGEWAY BRIDGE IS OBVIATED

City Takes Action That Makes Giraud Avenue Span Unnecessary.

THE RACE TO BE FILLED

CONVENIENT DUMP FOR DIRT CITY ALWAYS HAS ON HAND.

Filling In Work Held Up Hitherto by Kick of One Property Owner. Who Blocked the Freeholders' Action.

While the Board of Freeholders was voting the consideration of a new bridge across the raceway at Giraud avenue Thursday afternoon, the city took action that made the erection of a span unnecessary. It was formally announced from Street Commissioner Garrett's office, to the county authorities, that the municipality had decided to use the raceway as a dirt dump, which would result in the filling in of the race and make a bridge a superfluity.

The raceway has not been used for years, and some time ago the Board of Freeholders desired to do away with the necessity of a bridge by filling it in. But the opposition of one of the property owners along the race prevented that action. He demanded that if the Freeholders fill the water course at the street it put filling in its entire length.

Inasmuch as the Board had prepared outlet pipes at the dam, which would prevent any flow of water to the streets, the Board regarded this opposition and the resulting demand as unjust, and, having no authority to hire horses or buy dirt, even had there been a desire to yield to the complaining property owners' demand, the bridge committee decided to keep the race bridged.

The street committee, however, recently took the matter under consideration and decided to cut the Gordian knot. The city always has a lot of dirt to dispose of, and the raceway would make a desirable and convenient dump. So the committee voted to use it for that purpose, and it is now only a matter of a short time before the race will be filled in from the roadway back.

The outlet pipes mentioned above will serve to protect the street and properties adjoining from the overflow water. As long as the water is carried away properly the property owner who has held up the Board of Freeholders can make no legal complaint to the city for filling in.

It is expected that the Giraud avenue bridge question, which has the raceway matter in hand, will formally recognize the obviation of the smaller span when the new avenue structure is inspected next week, and report back to the Board accordingly.

THOMAS G. PORTER BURIED.

Services Held Over Remains—Rev. Mr. McKelvey Officiating.

Relatives and friends crowded the home of John Porter, on West Third street, Saturday afternoon, to attend the funeral service over the remains of his eighteen-year-old son, Thomas, who was killed by a coal train Wednesday night at the Greenbrook Tanks. Rev. J. O. McKelvey conducted the service.

The display of flowers was very large. It included set pieces from the aid society of the Porter shop and the Y. M. A., of Hope chapel, to both of which the boy belonged. Many members of the two organizations were present.

Interment was made in Hillside. The bearers were Joseph Sweeney, William Fitzbrook, Herbert Fluck, Edwin Howse, John Fritts and Hugh Gray.

Trinity's Improvement Fund.

In response to an appeal for subscriptions to the fund for the enlargement of the school room, the classes of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school pledged liberal contributions Sunday afternoon. The pledges were made by class, and a total of $370 was promised. Several classes were not prepared to name the amount they would give, so that the sum named is less than the full amount to come from the scholars.

Children's Picnic in the Woods.

More than 100 children of the Infant Society of St. Mary's Sunday-school were taken for a picnic in the woods by the Sisters attached to the church Saturday morning. Perfect weather and a complete commissariat made the outing a complete success.

—D. J. Booths has been appointed agent at Cranford for the Lehigh Valley, vice E. R. Dashler resigned.

—George Fine, who has been a motorman on the main line trolley, is now running a car on the Arlington avenue line.

REMEMBERED FIGHTERS WHO PRESERVED UNION

Survivors of the Civil War and Young Militia Men Decorated Graves of the Dead.

DR. CHAMBLISS' ORATION

THE SPEAKER SOUNDED A WARNING AGAINST DEMAGOGISM.

Chorus of Fifty Children at the Reform Hall Exercises—Ceremonies at the Cemeteries Closed With "Taps."

Led by the Independent Fife and Drum Corps and with Company K, Second Regiment, N. G. N. J., as a guard of honor, the old soldiers who fought in the bloody struggle for national integrity during the early sixties, visited the local cemeteries Monday and decorated the graves of those of their comrades who are buried there.

Fully as impressive as the services in the cemetery itself was the sight of the stalwart young National Guardsmen presenting arms in salute of the older generation of fighters as the latter passed into the cemetery to strew flowers on the graves over which they fired the parting salute of three volleys. The ceremonies at the graves were appropriately closed by the sounding of the bugle call "taps."

Exercises were held in Reform Hall in the afternoon by the G. A. R., in which a chorus of about fifty children, trained by Mrs. John Manley, took part and which included post services of the G. A. R., songs and recitations and an address by the Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church.

Choosing for his subject "Voices from the Dead," Dr. Chambliss in his peculiarly sympathetic manner, described the origin of Memorial Day, first set apart by order of Gen. John A. Logan, who had seen the women of Alabama in 1866 laying flowers on the graves of the soldiers without regard to whether they had worn the blue or the gray.

Coming to his subject proper, he said that every man is heard from again after he dies, not once or twice, but constantly and perhaps forever. How happy it would be for some men if their remains could be shut down under the lid of a coffin. But a blessed thing for others, that it never can be so.

"There is no other entrance into the glory of any victory," said Dr. Chambliss, "but the gateway of suffering. The history of our country from Valley Forge and the Brandywine to the Rappertannock and the death-bed of a martyred President proclaiming the truth. And that flag which is loved and reverenced through all the world—is it not a beautiful and deep sign to us, almost an ordinance of God to us, that whether for nations or for men, stripes are first, blood-red perchance, and only afterward and through them—stars of glory.

"He who will not suffer for principle has no principle. He who will not suffer for love—love of man, love of country, love of God, does not know what love is. To sink self, to bury self—that is greatness, that is glory. Because no other country in the world has so many national cemeteries and so many patriot graves as ours, the American citizen today ought to be the noblest type of manhood on the earth.

"Another voice from the graves of the heroic dead is this: Keep that which one have committed to you. Let the time never come when it shall be said, 'They died in vain.' Remember that the true glory of a nation lies not in the splendid misery of victorious war, but in the dissemination of honorable happiness, the encouragement of righteousness and the suppression of vice; that it form the polution of demagogism and all political villainy, to preserve its institutions of education and religion in their republican purity and simplicity, to subdue and stamp out the mighty monstrous vices that stalk over the land, defying God and destroying souls; to a word, to hold fast the inheritance one have received, consecrated by the blood of a thousand battlefields."

Mr. and Mrs. William Conkling, of South Second street, were in Bayonne yesterday, attending the wedding of Mrs. Conkling's sister, Miss Frances Shea.

—There will be music at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club Saturday afternoon and at night there will be music for dancing.

DIED.

PORTER—Suddenly, on Thursday, May 26, 1904, Thomas G., son of John and Mary Porter, aged 18 years.

DUNN—On Thursday, May 26, 1904, Norman Dunn, aged 69 years.

GRIMSHAW—At Plainfield, N. J., on Sunday, May 29, 1904, Isabella Grimshaw, in the 77th year of her age.

Sanitary Plumbing

Brick and Portable Furnaces

Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing, Etc., Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class workmanship and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Plumbers Association of New York City, I employ none but first class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business at all times and in cases.

D. W. LITTELL,

No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Handbook on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

NEW IN EVERY DETAIL

My new barber shop at

143 NORTH AVE.

is now open ready for business. All the latest appointments in the tonsorial line.

EDWIN B. MAYNARD.

CARNEY BROS.

MADISON AVENUE.

Between Front and Second streets.

Tinners, Plumbers Gas Fitters,

Grates and bricks for all kinds of stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Fine your tinware mended by us. The best tinners, the best plumbers, and the best gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction. Keys of all kinds are made here. Tinware made to order. Ranges, brick and portable furnaces. Sanitary plumbing.

DIME

Savings Institution,

Of Plainfield, N. J.,

Is now receiving deposits with interest, allowed on all sums from $5 to $3,000.

J. Frank Hubbard, President.
Wm. F. Arnold, } Vice-Pres
Jeremiah Manning, }
J. C. Pope, Sec'y and Treas.

Money deposited on or before January tenth will draw interest from the first.

Guaranteed Salary $900 YEARLY.

Men and women of good address to call upon retail trade, appointing agents and others for local work; $18 weekly. Expenses advanced when necessary. Position permanent; salary guaranteed promptly; commissions and expenses added as advancement; old established house. Grand chance for earnest man or woman to secure pleasant, permanent position, liberal income and future. New, brilliant lines. Write at once.

STAFFORD PRESS,
23 Church St., New Haven, Conn.

W. B. CODINGTON,

Counsellor-at-Law

Commissioner of Deeds, Master in Chancery, Notary Public. Office: Corner of Park Avenue and Second street.

ALBERT HEDDEN

Livery & Boarding Stables

FOURTH ST.,

between Watchung and Park avenues. First-class Livery. Horses boarded by week or month. Telephone call No. 114.

Wm. A. Woodruff

Fire and Life

INSURANCE AGENT,

OFFICE,

corner Front St. and Park Avenue, Plainfield, N. J.

HE LOST HIS LIFE BY JUMPING CARS

Thomas Porter Lost His Leg Under Coaler's Wheels and Died in the Hospital.

ACCIDENT AT TANKS

THE VICTIM SUFFERED A GREAT LOSS OF BLOOD.

Dead Youth Eighteen Years Old—Popular Among His Mates—Son of John Porter, of West Third Street.

Laying along the New Jersey Central railroad tracks at Greenbrook Tanks, bleeding to death, Thomas C. Porter, the 18-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Porter, of 920 West Third street, was discovered by the crew of a passing train about 10:30 p. m. May 26, and hurriedly brought to this city, where he was removed in the ambulance to the hospital. The lad's leg had been cut off while he was stealing a ride home on a coal train and the great loss of blood argued against his recovery. He was accompanied by several companions, but when they learned what had happened to young Porter, it is said, they ran away and left him alone.

As soon as the lad was received at the hospital everything possible was done for him, but the physicians soon learned that his case was hopeless. He reached the hospital about 10:40 and at 11:45 he died. During that time he was conscious up to within fifteen minutes of the time he passed away. He realized from the first that his condition was serious. His right leg was off at the thigh, there was a lacerated wound of the left leg and an inside wound extending from the chest to the thigh.

Young Porter, together with companions had gone to Greenbrook for a swim, and after remaining there for some time started homeward. It was their intention of returning home on a coal or freight train. As they approached the railroad a coaler came along and Porter was the first to jump aboard. It being dark he was not sure of his position. His foot slipped, and he fell beneath the cars with the result as stated. He was left alone for some time, just how long, no one seems to know, but the crew of another train coming, heard groans and upon investigation discovered the young man along the tracks. The engine was detached from the train and with all possible speed hastened with the injured lad to this city. Upon the arrival of the engine here the ambulance was at the North Avenue station waiting to take the boy to the hospital.

The lad was well-known throughout the city, especially in the West End. He was a member of Hope chapel, and generally took part in the affairs under the auspices of Hope Y. M. A. Besides his parents, he is survived by an older brother, William, three sisters, Mrs. Arthur McVoy, Miss Marion Porter and a younger one, Lizzie.

BY TROLLEY TO CAMDEN

CONTINUOUS RIDE THROUGH STATE FROM JERSEY CITY.

It is now possible to ride in a trolley car from Jersey City to Camden, the first trip over this route being made on Tuesday afternoon as far as Trenton from Camden. This gives through connection across this State, and marks the formal opening of the much-talked of Philadelphia-New York trolley route. The last gap in the route was closed at Pennsauken Creek, six miles above Camden, last week, and regular traffic between Camden and the State Capitol began yesterday.

Officials of the Camden and Suburban Railway Company and the Camden and Trenton Railway Company made the initial trip Tuesday afternoon, leaving Camden at 2:30 o'clock. The trip was made in excellent time and gives promise of becoming very popular.

Lake Excursion.

The beauty spots of New Jersey is Lake Hopatcong and one who visits the place is charmed with the diversified entertainment afforded. The surroundings are delightful in every respect and a day spent in the rarified mountain air of the Jersey foothills will do wonders for the tourist. There are ample facilities for fishing and boating and one who enjoys the rambles in wooded paths and the quietness of the natural pine, to him Hopatcong is the gem of places. On June 5 the New Jersey Central is going to run one of its famous low priced and popular excursions to the Lake. Round trip $1, and special train leaves Plainfield at 9:20 a. m. The run is made in three hours and the entire day can be spent in delightful enjoyment.

NO COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT PLAINS

The Various Classes, However, Will Hold a Public Entertainment on June 16.

NONE TO GRADUATE

REV. DR. J. H. PARKS TO ADDRESS THE PUPILS TOMORROW.

Memorial Day Exercises—Delegation of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, to be Present—Parents and Friends Invited.

For the first time in a number of years the Scotch Plains Public School classes for the usual summer vacation without the customary commencement exercises. This is due to the fact that there will be no graduating class this year.

When the custom was started a number of years ago, the event was about the only opportunity that the parents and friends of the school had to hear and see the children in recitation, song and the like, but school laws have been changed and now it is possible for the parents or friends to enjoy a treat frequently. As laws recently enacted compels the schools to observe a number of the holidays in an appropriate manner. For this reason it has been decided that no commencement will be held.

When the school closes on June 16, the several classes will meet in an informal way in the assembly room and a short programme will be enjoyed.

On Friday afternoon the pupils observed Memorial Day. Rev. Dr. J. H. Parks made an address, while an interesting programme of recitations and songs was rendered by the pupils. A delegation from Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., was present. The parents and friends attended the exercises.

EX-ASSEMBLYMAN TO WED

WILLIAM NEWCORN TO BE MARRIED IN NEW YORK ON SUNDAY, JUNE 26.

Many of the friends of William Newcorn, Esq., will be greatly surprised to hear of his approaching marriage to Mrs. Mamie Leventhal, of New York.

Mr. Newcorn seemed a trifle nonplussed when a reporter for The Daily Press asked him this morning if there was anything in the report of his engagement. He had thought it a profound secret and probably counted on stealing a march on his friends by introducing his bride to them before they were aware that there was such a person.

The wedding, which will be private, will be solemnized in New York city on Sunday, June 26.

Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux, of Fairview avenue, who has been spending several weeks in Washington, D. C., is considerably improved in health but on account of the hot weather, will go to Atlantic City for a time before returning home.

ALFRED SPEER,

THE ORIGINAL

Port Grape Wine Producer in America.

The first native wine sold and used in San Francisco and Sacramento was from Speer's Passaic, N. J., vineyards, was shipped around Cape Horn before there was any railroad to California, and are now being used by physicians and first families there as the richest and best wine to be had

The juice of the Portugal Port Wine grape grown in N. J. is thick and rich sameas the juice of pear and other fruits grown here. From California pears you can squeeze water as from a sponge; so with all fruits grown in California; while those grown in New Jersey are solid in substance—less juice but thick and richer. The New Jersey apples, for instance, make a cider that was always popular the world over. If you want a wine for sickness or for entertainments don't take cheap, watery wines but choose a first class old, full bodied, high grade wine from Speer's Passaic vineyards. Sold by Druggists.

THE BRILLIANT FLAMINGO.

A Curious and Interesting Bird Which Is Said to Be Rapidly Nearing Extinction.

New York Special.

What is thought to be the first and only group of flamingo nests ever seen in this country will soon be placed on exhibition at the American Museum of Natural History at New York. This is expected to be one of the most attractive displays in the museum, representing these beautiful and rare birds in their natural haunts and showing their characteristic appearance.

There are about seven species of flamingoes inhabiting the tropical parts of both hemispheres, three of which are in America, frequenting the Bahamas,

FLAMINGOES IN CAPTIVITY.
(Snapshot of Mother and Young in American Museum.)

Florida and Cuba. In height the bird averages about five feet, and if its curved neck were stretched to its full length would tower above the head of an ordinary man. They breed in May and June. At this period their bright colored plumage is faded. It assumes its most radiant hues in winter. When first hatched the young have a straight bill, which, after a time, develops into one of bent shape. Their first plumage is grayish white and passes through various tints of pink, rose, carmine or vermillion to the full scarlet of the adult, which reaches its deepest shade on the wings. Several years are necessary to perfect the final plumage.

The eggs are white, showing a blue tinge when scraped under the surface. They are long, oval, and have a thick shell, equaling in size that of the common goose. The flesh is not palatable to the taste, being extremely oily. They feed upon both animal and vegetable matter from the ooze and soft bottoms of the shallow waters and lagoons selected by them both as a feeding ground and nesting place. When flying their long legs are stretched out behind and the neck becomes straight. They have a peculiar voice and a sort of one syllable outcry, which they utter as an alarm signal the moment they are approached or believe themselves to be in danger. On account of their keen eyed and wary nature it is almost impossible to get within close range of them.

NEW JOB FOR PRITCHARD.

Former Senator from North Carolina Is Made a Federal Judge by the President.

Washington (D. C.) Special.

President Roosevelt has nominated Justice Peter C. Pritchard, of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, to be United States circuit court judge of the Fourth circuit in succession to the late Judge Charles H. Simonton. The Fourth circuit includes the states of Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia, and under the law

JETER C. PRITCHARD.
(Appointed by President to United States Circuit Bench.)

the appointee had to be selected from one of these states.

Justice Pritchard, who formerly was a United States senator from North Carolina, has served on the supreme bench of the District of Columbia only a short time. He presided at the trial of Machen, the Groffs and Lorenzes, who recently were convicted of postal frauds.

Woman's Pathetic Inquiry.

An unfortunate woman in London consulted a clergyman in connection with her domestic troubles. There was some doubt as to whether her marriage was a legal one, inasmuch as her "husband" —as she had just discovered—appeared to have a wife living, from whom he had been separated. The woman's pathetic inquiry was: "If he is not my husband, what right has he to knock me about?"

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of literary news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like books. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

Public Library Notes.

List of books added to the Library during May, 1904.

Aesop, Fables, with those of La Fontaine.

Adler, Cyrus, ed., Voice of America on Kishineff.

Ady, Mrs. J. C., Jean Francois Millet.

Ahn, F. P., First German reader.

Baldry, A. L., Modern mural decoration.

Beale, Anne, Rose Mervyn.

Besant, Sir Walter, Fountain sealed.

Blakeney, W., On the coasts of Cathay and Cipango.

Boissier, Gaston, Roman Africa.

Booth, C., ed., Life and labour of the people of London.

Booth, J. C. and Monfit, C., Recent improvements in the chemical arts.

Boulton, W. B., Amusements of old London.

Brochner, Jessie, Danish life in town and country.

Burton, M. E., Annabel, collection of old portraits.

Colquhoun, A. R., Greater America.

Cornelio, Pierre, Theatre, choise, etc.

Dobson, Austin, Fanny Burney.

Farrar, F. W., Gathering clouds.

Gardiner, L. R., English history.

Gardenhire, S. M., Lux crucis, a tale of the great apostle.

Goschen, Viscount, Life and times of George Joachim Goschen.

Hardy, Thomas, Life's little ironies.

Howells, W. D., April hopes.

Howells, W. D., Traveler from Altruria.

Huston, Laurence, Other times and other seasons.

Institute of electrical engineers, Journal, vs. 20-date.

Johnston, Sir Harry, Uganda Protectorate.

Kingston, W. H. G., Will Weatherhelm.

Lang, Andrew, ed., Crimson fairy book.

Lang, Andrew, Prince Darling.

Levu, Charles, Lettrell of Arran.

MacKee, T. H., National conventions and platforms of all political parties, 1789-1901.

Manhattan guide, Greater New York red book.

Meakin, Budgett, The Moors.

Marimee, Prosper, Colomba.

Moulton, R. G., Moral system of Shakespeare.

New York State Historian, Ecclesiastical records, vs. 3-4.

Schelling, D. E., English chronicle play.

Smith, W. W., Sunday-school teaching.

Spencer, Herbert, Autobiography.

Sterne, Laurence, Sentimental journey.

Stevenson, R. L., Fables.

Sully, James, Essays on laughter.

Symons, Arthur, Cities.

U. S. Engineers' Dept., Mitering lock gates.

U. S. Engineers' Dept., Primary triangulations of the U. S. lake survey.

U. S. Ethnology Bureau, 20th annual report.

Wagner, Charles, By the fireside.

Washington, B. T., Negro problem.

Weber, Alice, For auld lang syne.

White, S. E., The forest.

MURPHY TO MANAGE CAMPAIGN

SENATORS KEAN AND FAIRBANKS FAVOR JERSEY'S GOVERNOR FOR CHAIRMAN.

Washington, May 26—It is expected that Senators Fairbanks, of Indiana; Aldrich, of Rhode Island, and Kean, of New Jersey, will see the President today and talk with him about the National Chairmanship. It is understood that Fairbanks does not want Cortelyou to be Chairman, but prefers Gov. Murphy, of New Jersey. Senator Kean also favors Murpoy. Senator Aldrich, who will have much to do with the management of the Republican campaign in the East, has expressed no preference.

The Republican leaders in the Senate are none too friendly to the selection of Cortelyou by the President. They think a Republican who has been identified with the party longer than Cortelyou has should be chosen. The President has no patience with this opinion. He has selected Cortelyou, and will probably stand by him, no matter what the Senators may say.

—The street cars are at work rolling Dueller avenue.

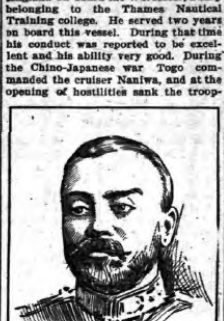
—Donald Bechtel, of East Seventh street, who joined the Forepaugh Shows at Boston some days ago, is home for a short time after several thrilling experiences, some of which came near resulting seriously to himself.

TOGO, NELSON OF JAPAN.

Admiral in Charge of Port Arthur Blockading Squadron Highly Esteemed at Home.

Tokio (Japan) Special.

Vice Admiral Heihatchi Togo, "the Nelson of Japan," is here shown from his latest photograph. The picture was taken at Tokio, just before the breaking out of hostilities. Admiral Togo is the hero of the campaign thus far. He is a true-blooded Japanese, being a go-called Satsuma Samurai. He was born October 14, 1857, and was educated in England on board the Worcester, a ship belonging to the Thames Nautical Training college. He served two years on board this vessel. During that time his conduct was reported to be excellent and his ability very good. During the Chino-Japanese war Togo commanded the cruiser Naniwa, and at the opening of hostilities sank the troop-



ADMIRAL HEHATCHI TOGO.
(Commander of the Japanese Fleet Investing Port Arthur.)

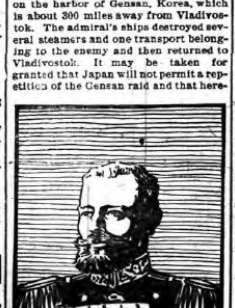
ship Kowshing, which was laden with Chinese troops. A curious fact in connection with this event was that the Kowshing was commanded by Capt. Galsworthy, who also had received his training on board the Worcester. When the Kowshing was sunk Galsworthy was nearly drowned, but his life was saved by Togo who sent a boat to rescue him. After the Chinese war Togo was raised to the rank of rear admiral, and promoted to be third in command of the mikado's fleet. Prior to his present appointment he was commander at Maizuru dockyard on the Sea of Japan. Togo is described as being reserved in manner, and he is cool, resolute, determined, very courageous in the same time being calm and unprecipitate in action. He is said to know his fleet well—knows what it can do to a nicety—and his operations at Port Arthur have shown that his conception of conditions has been wonderfully exact.

ADMIRAL JESSEN'S DASH.

Commander of Vladivostok Squadron Hailed as a Hero by the People of Russia.

Seoul (Korea) Special.

The only Russian naval commander who has thus far achieved any kind of success is Rear Admiral Jessen, commander of the Vladivostok fleet, who recently left the home base and made a raid on the harbor of Gensan, Korea, which is about 300 miles away from Vladivostok. The admiral's ships destroyed several steamers and one transport belonging to the enemy and then returned to Vladivostok. It may be taken for granted that Japan will not permit a repetition of the Gensan raid and that here-



REAR ADMIRAL JESSEN.
(Russian Commander Who Led the Raid on Gensan, Korea.)

after Admiral Jessen's four ships will be watched closely.

Admiral Jessen is not a particularly well-known figure in Russian naval circles. He is, however, a personal friend of Gen. Kuropatkin, commander of the Russian land forces in the far east, and has the reputation of being a good fighter. It is reported that, in spite of his bold dash, he will be retired upon the arrival of Admiral Skrydloff at Port Arthur.

Onion Stuck in Her Ear.

Ethel Root, of Philadelphia, Pa., 22 years old, found a pungent piece of onion an effective cure for earache, but it also necessitated her going to the Samaritan hospital to get rid of the cure. She had suffered severely from the pain in her ear, and on the advice of a friend tied a piece of onion against the ear cavity by means of a bandage about her head. The application so much relieved her that she hesitated to remove it lest the pain return. When she took the bandage off the onion could not be removed and she had to go out to the Samaritan hospital, where Dr. Carpenter extricated it.

The Insect Bell of Japan.

A natural curiosity of Japan is the "insect bell." It is a black beetle, which emits harmonious sounds like those of a little silver bell.

CLARENCE B. VAIL BECOMES A BENEDICT

Young Plainfielder Takes Miss Elveretta Cutler, of Chester, Pa., As His Wife.

WEDDING AT CHESTER

CEREMONY IN THE MEETING HOUSE OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

Paul Whitall, of This City, An Usher—Off on Their Honeymoon—To Reside on Norwood Avenue.

Clarence Brooks Vail, teller at the First National Bank, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Adelbert Vail, of East Sixth street, was married last Thursday to Miss Elveretta Cutler, in the Friends meeting-house, Chester, Pa., in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends from this city, Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Canada. The ceremony, strictly in accordance with the Society of Friends rules, was very simple and at the same time impressive. In the services a committee from the Society officiates, instead of a minister, and the people simply ascribe their names to a document, affirming their allegiance to God and one another.

The bride was attended by her brother, Chester Cutler, of Chester, while Dr. Charles T. Howard, of Boston, Mass., was the best man. The ushers were Fred Cranston and Paul Whitall, of this city; Arthur Dewees, of Philadelphia, and Henry Jones, of Chester. These were the only members of the bridal party.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Charles Palmer and later the bride and groom departed on a short wedding trip. Upon their return they will live at the groom's home in Norwood avenue. The bride received many presents of value.

The bride is a native of Cold Stream, Canada, but she has been living in Chester for some time past. Like her husband she is a member of the Society of Friends. Mr. Vail has been employed for several years at the First National Bank and through careful attention to his duties has been promoted to his position, that of teller.

VOTE TO ERECT SCHOOLHOUSE

FANWOOD, TOWNSHIP CITIZENS MAKE APPROPRIATION FOR NEW BUILDING.

Backing up the demands of the residents of school district No. 2, which met with such hearty approval of the Board of Education, the citizens of the borough and township decided May 25 that the lower end of Fanwood township should have the same school facilities that district No. 1 enjoys.

The old school building, which has served its purpose well, will be sold and a more commodious building with a seating capacity of eighty, will be erected on Raritan road, near the John L. Darby property, the cost not to exceed $4,500. The meeting was a most harmonious one, no opposition for the bettering of conditions being apparent.

POSTMASTER GETS $3,100

ELIAS BIRD RECEIVES AN INCREASE IN SALARY AS DO OTHERS.

In the readjustment of the salaries of thirty-three New Jersey postmasters announced by First Assistant Postmaster-General Wynn, Postmaster E. H. Bird has received an increase from $3,000 to $3,100, and Postmaster Day, of New Market, an increase from $1,100 to $1,200. Twelve postmasters of the thirty-three considered have had their pay reduced, while the other twenty-one will draw increased salaries.

CAMP WANAMASSA.

Harold Whitney and F. A. Martin in Charge of Place at Deal Beach.

Under the management of Harold Whitney, of Asbury Park, and Frederick A. Martin, of this city, "Camp Wanamassa," will be opened at Deal Beach on July 2 and remain open until September 15.

These young men have issued a neat pamphlet giving pictures and other information about this delightful summer resort and its advantages. Any one wishing to spend a day or many days at the camp can get all information by communicating with either Mr. Whitney, Box 1008, Asbury Park, or Mr. Martin in this city.

Leal's Team Won.

The Leal's School baseball team defeated the Mono A. C. on the Myrtle avenue grounds Wednesday afternoon by the score of 12 to 4.

ECCENTRIC TRAGEDIAN, DICK FOOTE, IS DEAD

Gifted Actor, Well-Known Here, Has Passed Away After a Wild Life.

"TOO MAD A BOHEMIAN"

LINEAL DESCENDANT OF SAMUEL FOOTE, DR. JOHNSON'S FRIEND.

Story of His Strange Life—Made Money, But Died Poor—Not Suited to the Effete East.

Richard K. Foote, the eccentric tragedian who conducted a series of plays and readings here in 1902 for the benefit of the Reform Club, during the course of which he brought out Miss Adele T. VonOhl as one of the most talented actresses-in-the-rough that he had ever discovered in the course of his travels, is dead.

It will surprise most of the people who knew or heard Foote here, to learn that he was a noted and a notable character in theatrical circles. The majority of those who met the man in this city or read of his eccentricities, were quick to jump to the conclusion that he was a faker and a grafter. He was neither. He was full of eccentricity and actorisms, and that was all. He really belonged to the West, where he roamed and knocked about for many years. Out there he was understood and loved. He was what a writer in the New York Times Sunday supplement, which devoted two and a half columns of reminiscence and appreciation to him last Sunday, calls "too mad a bohemian" for the Eastern taste.

This writer, who quotes an old actor, one of Foote's early associates, says he was a fine artist and a ripe Shakespearean scholar. He was a lineal descendant of Samuel Foote, Dr. Johnson's friend. Foote had a wonderful voice, and long dissipation never weakened it. It had one of the widest ranges of any actor on the American stage. Foote was conscious of his powers in that direction and always, whatever the weather, wore a soft shirt open at the neck. And he insisted upon every member of his company doing the same.

When quite a young man Foote left the stock company with which he was connected in New York and went West. He worked in the California mines for a year or two, making more money by occasional entertainments than with his pick and shovel. Then—in Sacramento—he conceived the idea of touring the mining camps with a company.

He gathered together a little company of six, two women and four men, one of the women being his wife, Annie Plunkett, a talented actress with a high reputation in the profession. The company toured all through the Sierras, travelling in wagons, and camping like emigrants. The repertory included "The Merchant of Venice," "Othello," "Hamlet," "Richard III," "King Lear," and "Hugo," a romantic tragedy written by Foote himself.

The company had no scenery, and the performances were sometimes given in a school house, sometimes in a tiny camp church, more often in the dining room of the camp hotel. They carried trestles and boards for a portable stage. The "stage" was hung with a red baize backing, and cards were hung in Elizabethan style, to tell the audience what scene was on. None of these things made any difference to the camps, which turned out en masse to see—and enjoy—the plays.

Foote made money, but with his prosperity he never paid any salaries. A loan was another matter. He was generous to the proverbial fault, and his company had only to ask for a loan to get all that was coming to them. They would forget to pay it back and Foote never remembered such matters. He was so free with his money—when it wasn't called salary —that he died a poor man, although he made a lot during his life.

When he had not been drinking Foote was a most loveable man. At other times his company was afraid to act with him. He did not do anything ugly, but he was much too strenuous for the comfort of his supporting cast, especially in wrestling or duelling scenes. He was devoted to his wife, and she to him.

Foote's posters always bore his name in the shape of a cross. This emblem has been placed on his tomb. Plainfielders who saw his advertisements in his local papers will remember the design.

—George H. Leland has been made the defendant in a contract suit brought by Rudolph W. Becker before Justice Joseph E. Mosher. The case is returnable June 3.

—A valuable horse belonging to Walter Scott, of East Front street, died a few days ago

VICTORIAN PROSE; SUBJECT OF LECTURE

Extended Report of Father Clifford's Intellectual Treat at the Casino.

QUALITY OF MAKERS

A PROSE AS WONDERFUL AND PERFECT AS IN PRECEDING AGES.

Great Writers of the Time—The American Prosemakers—The Elizabethian Era—Interesting Talk.

"There is a very suggestive hint thrown out in a remark in one of Walter Bagehot's essays to the effect that an author's personality tends to separate itself from the personality of the man. The remark has more in it than strikes the casual ear. Most of us, who have thought about the facts of the case at all, have recognized that between Shakespeare, as we know him in his wonderful plays and Shakespeare as he probably lived his life, there was a vast psychological gap which the student in literature today has vainly tried in each literary generation to bridge over. There is a mysterious effluence that goes out from the creative spirit of the man and incarnates itself in the Shakespeare that each one of us imagines for himself. Literary personality has indeed, its phases; and these may stand for disparate ideals in the field of art; and, in similar wise, it may be contended that the style of a period tends to separate itself from the master voices of a period and take shape as a dimly apprehended yet instinctively known something which we call the accepted prose utterance of the time. We all recognize, for instance, what is meant by the prose of the period of Shrewsbidas. We can discern in a not unlike fashion what is meant by the Elizabethan point of view in the choice and distribution of words marshalled in obedience to that subtler law of harmony that dominated the prose of Lord Bacon, of Mulcaster, of Sir Philip Sidney, of the translators of the English Bible. Most of us, if challenged, could give some account, too, some definite statement, which would fitly express for us what it was that went to make up those literary types. So, if I venture to speak to you this evening about the Makers of Victorian Prose, I do so because I wish to concentrate your attention upon certain qualities in those makers, which have helped to create for us a style which is as different as the types that came before it, as the Georgian Age is different from the Age of Queen Anne, or the Age of Elizabeth.

"Why this should be so is not a question, which need detain us now; but the fact is one that strikes the most elementary student of literature. The style of a period is something apart from something appreciably distinct from the separate, individual styles that enter subtly into its making. One will find it, perhaps, in its entirety in the second rate writer; he will not find it in the first rate writer. Yet that mysterious, not wholly abstract something which we call the prose of a period has no tangible existence apart from the separate singular and elect individuals whose utterances contributed, all unconsciously, to its gradual upbuilding.

"It is not the least remarkable of the many remarkable things about the Age of Queen Victoria, that it has given us a prose as wonderful in its way, as perfect in everything that goes to make a classic type of prose as any of the preceding periods, coincided curiously enough with the name of a reigning woman. If one looks at the history of English literature in the past, one finds that three great epochs stand out, before all others, to know these periods is to be well read in the literature of the Age of Elizabeth, in the literature of the Age of Queen Anne and in the literature of the Age of Queen Victoria. It is to be familiar with the Age of Sidney and of Lord Bacon, with the Age of Swift and of Addison, and derivatively, of course, with the intervening Age of Goldsmith, Burke and Johnson. That practically brigs us to our own time which is the Age of Macaulay, of Froude, of Newman, of Carlyle, of Mill, of Thackeray, of Dickens, of Sir Arthur Helps and of those lesser lights like Kinglake, whose gifts writing we still enjoy while we essay to trace the remoter sources of them to the masters at whose feet they sat.

"Most of us will agree that we may, for convenient purposes of division and analysis, take the war of 1870 in France as a crisis in the history of Victorian prose. That war shook Europe with expectation; it gave us a new and united people in Germany, a new world-power in the world. Making this war, therefore, our marking point, we shall find that the Victorian age, including a period of over sixty years, easily falls into two distinct literary generations, of thirty each. We shall find these two generations made up largely of writers of English prose as sharply divided from one another in their characteristics as the Age of Victoria is sharply divided from the Age of Queen Anne and much more so, of course, from the "spacious Age" of Queen Elizabeth. That certainly is a most wonderful fact to dwell upon. The names which are inseparably connected with the literary glories of Queen Victoria's reign in England are not the only shining instances of that galaxy that I have mentioned, but we have a newer and a later school which has sprung up since 1870 and 1880. Today we have not yet done marvelling over the achievements of Stevenson and Pater, of Thomas Hardy, of George Meredith, of John Richard Green, of Mathew Arnold.

"These men, we shall find, filled the most disparate and ethically opposed walks of life. One of them is a man of affairs, a statesman and orator; the world knows him today as an historian and an essayist, Thomas Babington Macaulay. Another is a recluse in his way who yet lives constantly before the world's gaze, Thomas Carlyle. Still another is a theologian, a logician and a dreamer who seems deliberately to have turned his back upon the world, and who comes before the world's notice, not because he loves it, but because he is dragged back upon its stage. That is Cardinal Newman. Another, also a recluse, during the early half of his life is that James Anthony Froude, who has learned his rare art of speech in the schools of Newman and of Carlyle. Another is a shy, austere, solitary type of man, the thinker, John Stuart Mill.

"If I have named no American writer, it is not because I wish to imply we have in the United States were without representatives in this great group of English prosemen; but English prose is after all, a derivative of the great English speaking race. It is to the glory of the mother country, that she continues to furnish spokesmen and representatives, who furnish in turn the lasting ideals of this new classical prose which we shall do well to keep us in a world increasingly ruled by a slip-shod-spoken press.

"It should like to claim for Hawthorne the honor and distinction of being himself the first prosemaker of his period; but Hawthorne's excellence, in spite of his lucid and incomparable style, was never very notable even in his own country. It is a somewhat melancholy fact that Hawthorne is more regarded abroad than he is here at home. What we say of Hawthorne is only another instance of that supreme indifference which was manifested by a generation and sons would say, even yes—to those prophets of art whom chance or fortune sends us.

"Poe is only half read here in America. It was reserved to a French critic to show how great a genius died when the author of the Prose Talks passed away.

"To go back, by way of illustrations to the Age of Elizabeth, we have the prose of Sidney; highly musical and ornate, but at the same time, what might be called in the language of the period, an intensely 'quaint' style. The schoolmaster who is gently held up to ridicule in 'Love's Labor Lost' was not entirely a creation of Shakespeare's brain. I do not know if any of our Plainfield school teachers are present this evening, or if they can be said to have even a pedantic interest in Malcolm. He was a charming personality of the Age of Queen Elizabeth, who seems to have impressed himself upon the literature of his time. It needed a genius like Shakespeare's amiably to satirize him, yet Shakespeare's presentment of the man is not entirely a just one. Mulcaster had his way about the capabilities of an English prose, and the claim that he makes for it has a curious modern note about it."

LITERARY.

The Red Book for June is a fascinating offering of fifteen short stories, beautifully illustrated, and seventeen photographic portrait art studies, all bound in a cover of unusual beauty, designed by Frederick J. Maihaust. The stores are clever, readable and seasonable in the extreme.

Fortunate is it for us that the lines upon which the reform of direct taxes must proceed have been so clearly marked out, and that some of our commonwealths have already taken pronounced steps in the right direction. The taxation of real estate by and for the local governments exclusively, the practical exemption of credits and chattels in individual hands, and the relegation both of the administration and the proceeds of corporate taxation to the State governments, foreshadow the financial reform to which we may soon time attain.—Winthrop M. Daniels, in the June Atlantic.

—Miniature Saffron has brought suit in tort against Annie Pugh in Justice Mosher's court. Papers returnable June 2 have been issued.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning June 5.

Topic—How my silence witnesses against Christ.—Matt. xii, 30; Luke xvii, 23.

That any one who has really found Christ as his Saviour should want to be silent concerning Him seems almost incredible, and yet we all know that this is frequently the case. Many claim to know Christ, yet they do not want to confess Him by uniting with His people and engaging in active Christian work. Others who have united with the church are often silent when it comes to personal testimony concerning His goodness. The opportunity to speak for Christ in public meeting is theirs, yet, having the ability to use it, they do not avail themselves of it. Again, some particular blessing comes to us through the Master, yet we do not tell it to His glory. Like the nine lepers who were healed, we accept the benefaction, but fail to praise the benefactor.

The silent attitude when the occasion demands confession or testimony is a false one. But let us particularly emphasize the condition. The believers should always confess Christ, of course, and yet there are many not qualified to testify before others, and to such confession is dependent upon his being able to speak for Christ or to pray in public. Some people witness against Christ more by a speech than by silence. "Swift to hear, slow to speak," was the apostles' motto, and it is corroborated by the world's proverb, "Speech is silver, silence is golden." But, there being the man and the hour, the speaker and the occasion, silence is not the true attitude toward Christ. "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so" is the exhortation of the psalmist, and Christ Himself commands us to confess Him before men, and this cannot be done by silence. There may be times when silence is golden, but there are also times when silence is cowardice, and cowardly silence is no place in the Christian's creed or life.

Silence when we should speak witnesses against Christ in two ways. He "that is not with Me is against Me." The world judges a man's attitude toward Christ by whether or not he confesses Him and takes his stand among Christ's people. If a man were at heart a Christian and yet was silent when called upon to confess Christ, would count him against Christ, upon the ground that if he were for Him he would manifest it. By silence, therefore, all his influence would be against Christ. (2) By silence we lose golden opportunities to present Christ to others and thus witness against Him. The nine lepers who were silent lost most splendid opportunities to tell others what Jesus had done for them, and in the telling they might have won many converts to Him. Who can tell what a word in season will do? By it Andrew led Peter to Christ, Nathaniel led Philip, and the Samaritan woman brought her entire village to see Him. Has a word of ours ever led a soul to Him? If not, let us seek pardon for past opportunities and not fail to take advantage of those to come.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. xix. 14; ii, 12, 13; cvii, 1-8; Matt. xxviii, 1-8; xix, 20; Mark v, 18, 20; Luke xii, 8, 9; John iv, 25-30; Rom. x, 9; Phil. ii, 1-11.

A Soul Winning Campaign.

The matter which we have promised each other to make supreme this year is the work of winning souls for Christ. You will be glad to know that in many sections of our own state the Endeavorers are taking hold of the work with new zeal. Some of the district and local unions are using for their convention motto the suggestion made some months ago, "Something for each society at each union or your society has not undertaken any work of this sort, do it without delay. Let us make this year a mighty one in its service for Christ. At the same time, however, the deepening process should go on. Not only "longer pews" should be our determination, but "stronger stakes" as well. A more faithful observance of the quiet hour, a more intelligent study of the word of God, a better loyalty to our own pastor and our own church—these will help to make it in the largest sense our best year.—Rev. Edwin Forrest Hallenbeck, Writing to Endeavorers From Great Pittsburg Evangelistic Campaign.

Dr. Clark's Journey.

Dr. Clark cables that he is to visit South Africa on his way back from Australia. The untiring efforts of the founder of the great Christian Endeavor movement and his self denying spirit and loyal devotion should serve as an inspiration to every person who marches under the banner on which is inscribed "For Christ and the Church." Dr. Clark is a leader in every sense of the word—a strenuous leader, if you please, particularly in the matter of downright hard work for the good of the world and the advancement of Christ's cause and kingdom. Would that we all might catch his spirit.—J. R. C. in "Empire State Notes."

A Labor of Love.

Among other resolutions passed at the Philadelphia conference was the following:

Resolved, That in view of the fact that the method of providing for the expenses of the secretary of the United Society in the interest of worldwide Christian Endeavor has been so frequently misunderstood, we, the delegates and Christian Endeavorers in attendance at this conference, desire to express our thanks to Mr. William Shaw, the treasurer of the United society, for the official statement that not a cent of any of these expenses is borne by the United society; nor does it come from any of the funds contributed for Christian Endeavor work, the present year, but that the entire work being used to meet the expenses of this branch of the extension work.

HOW ONE CROP WAS SAVED.

Nebraska Man's Story of the Way in Which He Conducted a Raid on Grasshoppers.

The Nebraska, State Journal tells this story of a gentleman who was growing wheat in southern Nebraska when the grasshoppers struck him. He had a 40-acre field of wheat that year, promising a big yield, and the prospect of its having to go to feed his enemies, the grasshoppers, was galling almost beyond endurance. Very soon after the vanguard of the hoppers appeared, however, this gentleman made an enomological discovery that saved his crop.

FOOLING THE HOPPERS.

"I found," he said, "that the grasshoppers were in the habit of climbing the wheat stalks every morning to spend the day feeding on what was intended to feed me and my family. I used to go out to the field to see how they were getting on every morning, and in my impatience at the liberties they were taking with my wheat I would occasionally strike at a clump of them as they hung to a stalk and knock them to the ground.

"After awhile I noticed that when a grasshopper was thus dislodged he made no further effort to get his dinner, but remained on the ground until the regular time to climb up the stalk next morning. Immediately on making the important discovery I went and took down our long wire clothes line, and called my wife to come and help me. Then we went through that 40-acre field, dragging the clothes line over the wheat between us, and knocked all the grasshoppers to the ground. Then they were still for the day.

"Next morning we gave the hoppers just time enough to get well started up the stalks when we went out and repeated the processing of the day before. The result was the same, and in the course of a few days every grasshopper in that field had died of starvation. Our neighbors came out every morning and called us a pair of old idiots, but we harvested the only wheat crop in that part of Nebraska that year."

SPANKS HER BIG HUSBAND.

George Railed at His Better Half's Gaudy Hosiery and Got a Good Licking for It.

George Kummerlee, of Hoboken, N. J., who is six feet tall and strong enough to tear his diminutive wife in twain, appealed to Recorder Stanton in Hoboken to punish her for her habit of boxing his ears, spanking him across her knees and scratching his face. He complains that she acquired the habit shortly after they were married and that it has grown in ferocity.

When Kummerlee explained that her conduct was due to the fact that he criticised the gaudiness of her stockings, she became indignant and shocked the recorder by displaying black hosiery to prove that she is anything but frivolous in that respect. The recorder angrily ordered her to drop her skirts.

AT HIS WIFE'S MERCY.

"I treated her well," said the husband. "Why, every Saturday night I'd bring home a bag of oranges and bananas, yet she beat me three and four times a week."

The recorder discharged the woman.

Smallest Government Check.

The smallest check drawn by the United States government is paid annually to Maurice Proctor, of Mineral Point, Wis., for carrying the mails from Mineral Point to Dodgeville. The check is for one cent. There were a dozen competitors for the job, and, as Proctor was the lowest bidder, he secured it. He is wealthy, and can afford to do the work for a penny a year.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

June 5: "Returning Christ by Substance."—Matt. xii, 30; Luke xvii, 23-25.

A secret friend is sometimes more annoying than an open enemy. Candid opposition can be estimated in its effect and, if not overcome, can at least be provided for in one's arrangements. But a friend who refuses to come out into the open and be counted is an embarrassment and practically worse than worthless. You cannot ignore him; you cannot forget him; you will in spite of yourself, expect some assistance, but only to find that help withheld in the critical moment. Your plans are upset, and you can scarcely avoid irritation. Some one may be a friend to you in secret, but you will never be able to feel particularly friendly to him, however hard you may try, if he persists in keeping his friendliness concealed from others.

Can you imagine a real, hearty, generous soul indulging in such concealment? Friendship demands open alliance—"He that is not for Me is against Me!" This must ever hold as the rule among earnest, true hearted folks. Neutrality on questions of right is an injury as well as insult. Too much is at stake in this life contest of ours to tolerate sham, and secret friendship is the veriest imposition.

Gideon was not weakened when he sent the bashful ones home. We are never made stronger by the regard of those ashamed or afraid to stand beside us in the time of our need.

Jesus is not well served by any one too busy to speak for Him. The éxtreme of delicacy is often pushed to explanation of silence when one should have spoken. Lack of ability or being less gifted in expression of thought than other people is the way many quiet consciences for neglect of duty.

All such attempts to evade the plain obligation which is upon us all is utterly unworthy us and the Lord whose name we bear and whom we profess to serve.

Nicodemus a Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea deserve some credit for furnishing spices and a tomb for a dead prophet, but the need of the Christ is for men who dare in the daytime stand in defense of the truth and right, and speak from their places in the council and in the ears of Pilate when the mob is raging and the rulers are in league against the innocent and godly. Boldness in begging a dead body is scant compensation for silence when one's soul is among the beasts of prey.

No after repentance can absolve one from the charge of cowardice and rescue from self contempt the soul who has preferred his safety to duty in defense of an imperiled friend. If you love me truly, say so, but not in my ears alone. Say so when men show me hatred and prove your love by deeds in my behalf!

If you are hesitant to let your regard be known, examine yourself and see certainly if you do in reality have love for Him.

If you, deep in your heart, praise Him for Him, no timidity and no difficulty stand in the way of open profession of your love. Confidence and facility will come with exercise and experience, but whatever exertion it may cost to openly befriend the Saviour never allow yourself to betray Him by silence when speech and action are yours to give.

A Christian Pledge.

First.—Constant trust in Christ for strength.

Second.—Constant effort to do whatever Christ would like to have me do.

Third.—Daily prayer and daily Bible study.

Fourth.—Laying by in store upon the first day of the week as the Lord hath prospered.

Fifth.—To be present at and participate in the Sunday and week day services of the church.

Sixth.—To have and to make no excuses for neglect of duty, except such as I would give to my Master were I face to face with Him.

Seventh.—To aim, throughout my whole life, to be a Christian.

The pledge is a means, not an end. Like other scaffolding, when the glorious temple of Christian character is complete it will be taken down and laid away.—Evangelist.

Lost Wishes.

The divine principle of work is the vital principle. God works from within outward. When God wishes to bless His people He has first to get into the hearts of His people. It is when He is enthroned there, when He dwells there, that the life of blessing is fully known. If we, therefore, would prepare the way of the Lord we must prepare our hearts; if we would discover stumbling blocks we must begin our search here.—Rev. G. H. C. MacGregor.

Reasons For Being Thankful.

He who sees in the heavens and the earth the loving power of Almighty God is never in want of reasons for being thankful. The light of the sun by day, the moon and the stars by night, are sufficient to sustain the strength of our God. Knowing these things, how can we fail to be thankful? For food and health, for home and its comforts, for garments and shelter, for liberty and friends, our sense of obligation ought to be great.—Lutheran.

Freed From Drudgery.

If you will let Him walk with you in your streets, and sit with you in your offices, and be with you in your homes, and teach you in your churches, and abide with you as the Living Presence in your hearts, you, too, shall know what freedom is, and while you do your duties be above your duties, and while you own yourselves the sons of men know you are the sons of God.—Phillips Brooks.

COUNTRY YOUTH A BIG SWINDLER

Postoffice Inspector Arrests Lad Who Received Piles of Mail at Fanwood.

GET-RICH-QUICK GAME

HIS ALLURING OFFER TO UNSUSPECTING INVESTORS.

Taken Into Custody at Berkeley Heights and Acknowledges His Guilt—His Method of Operation.

Charged with using the United States mail for fraudulent purposes, Charles Lester Murphy, a twenty-one-year-old youth of Berkeley Heights, was arrested at his home Thursday by Postal Inspector Meharey. Before United States Commissioner Whitehead in Newark, he acknowledged his guilt and waived examination. He was held in default of $1,000 bail to await the action of the United States Grand Jury.

Murphy is a raw country lad, and looks like the last person in the world to engage in a swindling scheme that involved the sale of mining and manufacturing stocks. He was working on the farm in his bare feet when arrested, and the Postal Inspector at first could hardly believe that he had the right man.

Murphy's scheme was to send alluring letters to people on a mailing list that he had purchased from one of the concerns selling such things, offering stocks of various kinds. He promised profits of fifty to one hundred per cent. on each share. He offered the stock of the Murphy-McMichael Company, and the Lunar Oil Company, mythical corporations, and of the Marconi Wireless and Western Union Companies.

Most of his letters were sent to people in the West and South. P. J. Hobb, of Salem, O., made the formal complaint that resulted in Murphy's arrest. He sent Murphy $75 for some "Lunar" stock, which never arrived.

Attention was first called to Murphy by Mrs. Bettman, of the Fanwood postoffice, where most of the young swindler's mail was sent. She noticed the sudden increase in his mail, and the various nature of the cards printed on the envelopes he sent out, and notified the United States officers. They watched the lad's operations for several months and collected the evidence upon which action was taken.

Murphy told Inspector Meharey that the idea for the scheme came from the stories of such operations in the newspapers. He said he had received over $600 within a few weeks.

LAWN FETE FOR BABY CAMP

BENEVOLENT BAND, KING'S DAUGHTERS, HOLD OUTDOOR AFFAIR.

Under the auspices of Benevolent Circle, King's Daughters, a lawn fete for the benefit of the baby camp on he mountain was held Thursday afternoon. The affair took place at the home of Mrs. Frank Sprague Maxtis, of Netherwood, the president of the Circle.

The lawn was prettily arranged with settees and tables, and the porch and awnings were lavishly decorated. Flowery Japanese lanterns hung from the trees, the whole effect being very much en fete. Special features of the affair, which supplemented the usual refreshment tables, were pony rides for the children and a Brownie show. Practically all the forty-three members of the Circle worked to make the fete a success.

There was a large attendance and the affair passed off most delightfully. Financially, as well as socially, it was a great success, and the camp fund will be materially swelled as a result.

The camp will be opened in a week or so. It will make an auspicious beginning, starting under better financial circumstances than last year.

ANOTHER GIRAUD AVE. SPAN

FREEHOLDERS ORDER BRIDGE FOR THE RACEWAY.

At the special meeting of the Board of Freeholders Thursday, Director Hubbard appointed all the standing committees. They are practically the same as last year, changes being few and insignificant.

One thing of interest in connection with the committee appointments was the re-appointment of the present Giraud avenue bridge committee to consider the matter of constructing a new span across the raceway near the avenue bridge. This bridge has been inadequate for traffic usage for some time. The committee was re-appointed upon a motion by Freeholder Westphal, of this city, the chairman.

BOARD APPROPRIATES $277,000 FOR COUNTY

Union's Freeholders Estimate That They Must Raise $232,000 for the Coming Year.

SCHEDULE OF EXPENSE

BALANCE IN THE TREASURY NOW AMOUNTS TO $45,000.

Sinking Fund to be Increased by $8,000—Plainfield Second Only to Rahway in Increase of Valuations.

Elizabeth, May 26—To meet the estimated expenses of the county for the fiscal year just started the Board of Freeholders will have to raise $232,000. The committee on appropriations reported to the Board this afternoon, at a meeting for that purpose, the sums necessary for the various departments of county work, and the total foots up to $277,000. There is a balance of $45,000 in the treasury, which cuts the amount to be raised throughout the county to the figure named above.

That figure is $3,000 more than that asked last year. The advance, however, is practically no advance at all, because the increase in valuations has been such that not a municipality or township of the county will feel the weight of the additional amount. The board looks to Rahway for the biggest percentage of the increase. Rahway has been going through a big boom, and is rated a good bit higher in the valuations. Plainfield is Rahway's second in the increase of valuation, but the figure experts of the board say that neither city will know there has been an increase as far as feeling it goes.

In detail the appropriations voted are as follows: For courts, $43,000, $3,000 more than last year; county jail, $6,500, a $500 increase; for taxation, $5,500, an increase of $300; compensation and lawful expenses of freeholders and committees and salaries of officers, $13,500, an increase of $500; coroner's fees, $650, same as last year; elections, $30,000, this is a decrease, because there was a special election last year; stationery, $2,000, the same; advertising, publishing and printing, $2,000 no increase; incidental expenses and schools, burial of soldiers and sailors, $14,000, a decrease of $4,000; $250 per guardian account, $1,000, same as last year; for National Guard, $850, same figure; payment of principal of bonded debt, $5,000, this sum must be paid off each year under the law; payment of interest on bonded debt, $35,000, a decrease of $2,000; payment of bank interest on temporary loans, $1,100, increase of $100; sinking fund, $8,000; permanent improvement of public buildings and grounds, $18,000, an increase of $10,000; erection and repair of culverts and bridges, $28,000, same as last year; repairs to county roads, $17,000, same figure; for hospitals, $15,000. This is $5,000 more than last year, the board taking advantage of the law to make a voluntary increase of the assistance extended to the hospital institutions.

There is something of more than passing interest in the $8,000 voted into the sinking fund. It is estimated that this fund, with the accrued interest, will pay off the entire debt on the new county courthouse in forty years. This plan will make the big debt fels very lightly, if at all.

A VALUABLE PUBLICATION.

The Pennsylvania Railroad 1904 Summer Excursion Route Book.

On June 1 the passenger department of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will publish the 1904 edition of the Summer Excursion Route Book. This work is designed to provide the public with descriptive notes of the principal summer resorts of Eastern America, with the best routes for reaching them, and the rates of fare. It contains all the principal seashore and mountain resorts of the East, and over seventeen hundred different routes or combinations of routes. The book has been compiled with the greatest care, and altogether is the most complete and comprehensive handbook of summer travel ever offered to the public.

The cover is handsome and striking, printed in colors, and the book contains several maps, presenting the exact routes over which tickets are sold. The book is profusely illustrated with fine half-tone cuts of scenery at the various resorts and along the lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

On and after June 1 this very interesting book may be procured at any Pennsylvania Railroad ticket office at the nominal price of ten cents, or, upon application to Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia Pa., by mail for twenty cents.

FOUR NURSES GET DIPLOMAS

Graduating Exercises of Muhlenberg Hospital's Training School for Nurses.

CHAS. J. FISK PRESIDES

Dr. Norman H. Probasco Makes An Address—Prayer Offered by Rev. E. M. Rodman—C. E. Brooks Presents Pins—Other Features.

Four women, having completed the three years' course at the Muhlenberg Hospital Training School for Nurses, were graduated from that institution Thursday with the customary honors. The exercises were held in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and were attended by physicians, graduate nurses, members of the Woman's Auxiliary Board and friends of the hospital.

The programme was one of interest and appropriate to the occasion, consisting of selections by the Plainfield High School Banjo and Mandolin Club, tenor solo by George W. Smith, accompanied by Howard Cass; prayer by Rev. E. M. Rodman, rector emeritus of Grace church; addresses by Charles J. Fisk, president of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital; Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and the presentation of diplomas and pins by Mr. Fisk and Charles E. Brooks.

The graduates were Mrs. Harriet J. Tabor, of Elmira, N. Y.; Miss Emily M. Hill, of Augusta, Ga.; Miss Helen E. Boice and Miss Alice M. Rand, of Plainfield. They together with the superintendent of the hospital, Miss Wildey, and her assistant as well as the other members of the training school occupied seats on the platform. When they entered the room hearty applause was given them.

After Dean Rodman offered prayer, there was a selection by the banjo and mandolin club, followed with a short address by President Charles J. Fisk. He reviewed the early history of the hospital, stating that twenty years ago it was founded by Dr. Clark and W. B. Cook. They called in Rev. E. M. Rodman for consultation. The first meeting was held in the vestry of Grace church, where with the aid of Dr. Burlingham the initiative was taken. In 1875 the hospital was incorporated and soon afterward the Woman's Auxiliary was formed. The first year $145 was raised for the institution. The next year $1,000 was subscribed, the third year $500 and the fourth year $3,000—was secured. This money was raised through the holding of picnics, excursions, fairs, etc. In 1881 the hospital was completed and opened on Thanksgiving Day.

Last year, Mr. Fisk reported, 445 patients were treated at the hospital, there were 335 operations and 800 persons visited the dispensary. Of the number one hundred were private patients, two hundred were pay-patients and 146 were charity patients. The work of the women in building additions to the old hospital, the work of starting the new one until at present the city has a plant that cost $60,000, and most of this money has been subscribed by the people of Plainfield. It costs $30,000 a year to maintain the present hospital, and of this sum about $12,000 is received from private sources and the county. Mr. Fisk said that if every person in the city would contribute $1 a year, the running expenses would be met easily. He added that while the hospital was started by Episcopalians it was now strictly interdenominational.

Mr. Zelie was the next speaker and he said at the outset that it must be refreshing to have some one come in and talk about something they know nothing about. He said that professions belong to humanity and those who have adopted them are simply holding them for the others who are to follow. Continuing he said that while every profession was being criticised more or less, the one of trained nursing is too new to be affected in that way and everyone appears good natured about it. He then cited the various professions, ministers, physicians, journalists and lawyers and about each one he made some pleasant remark.

He spoke of the fact that since coming to this city and in making calls he frequently would learn that those upon whom he intended to call had been taken to the hospital. By the time he reached the hospital he was informed by a nurse that the patient had been discharged the day before. This he considered very quick work. In conclusion Mr. Zelie referred to professions in the higher sense and he insisted a stronger desire among those present to attain the higher plane.

HOLZWASSER & CO

SPECIAL DISCOUNT THIS MONTH OF 10% ALLOWED ON ALL CASH PURCHASES.

ACTUAL VALUE $200.

We Also Furnish a Flat at $65.00.

Write for Our New Catalogue. Mailed Upon Application.

$1.00 a Week Opens an Account.

We Also Carry a Complete Line of CLOTHING For Men, Women and Children.

Freight and R. R. Fare Allowed on All Out-of-Town Orders.

1417 TO 1423 3D AVE BETWEEN 80 & 81ST

Open Evenings until 9 o'clock. NEW YORK, N. Y.

In introducing Dr. Norman H. Probasco, as the next speaker, who would represent the medical fraternity, Mr. Fisk said that every year the physicians threw dice to see who shall speak, and this year the lot fell to Dr. Probasco. He was called the "club man" because he was the baccteriologist at the hospital. Dr. Probasco then read a paper in which he congratulated the graduating nurses and gave them excellent advice as they are about to continue their profession in the world.

President Fisk then in a few well chosen words presented the graduates with their diplomas. This was followed with the presentation of the pins, the insignia attesting to their qualifications to do trained nursing. In conclusion the graduates received gifts of flowers in profusion. They were presented by the various physicians in attendance on behalf of relatives and friends.

After the exercises all adjourned to the Sunday-school room below where ice cream and cake were served and the graduates received the congratulations of their friends.

BVT. - MAJ. TELLS OF FIGHT

REV. DR. HUBBELL'S TALK AT TRINITY MEN'S ASSOCIATION.

Patriotism and gallantry marked the monthly socialde of the Men's Association, of Trinity church, Thursday. The members entertained their wives and women friends with a programme that was all of the flag. The affair was well attended and greatly enjoyed. Music by a four-piece orchestra and an address by Rev. Dr. W. O. Hubbell, were the features of the programme.

Dr. Hubbell's address was the chief number of the evening. He delivered a highly interesting account of the battle of Cold Harbor, the more interesting and absorbing because it came from one of the participants of the great conflict. Cold Harbor has been called "the unwritten battle of the war," and Dr. Hubbell's account is probably the best that has been given about it. He is in position to write fully and accurately because he was a bravet major.

Dr. Hubbell painted the "twelve days' fighting in graphic word pictures. His hearers saw the Unionists fail in their last attempt to turn the Confederate flank, and understood how the question of marching directly from the Rapidan to Richmond was answered in the negative by that failure.

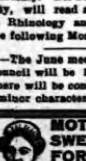
Six patriotic airs were played by the orchestra. Before the address, "Marching Through Georgia" was rendered and after it came "Maryland, My Maryland." The orchestra was composed of Mrs. G. W. Baums, piano; E. P. Wheeler, flute; Edward Young, cornet, and Irving Benisger, violin.

The committee in charge consisted of H. J. Martin, chairman; Edwin Bohan, O. W. Dunham, G. W. Hoagland, E. F. Sheppard.

Medical Men to Meet.

The 138th annual meeting of the Medical Society of New Jersey commences Saturday, June 4, at Atlantic City. Dr. E. W. Hedges, of this city, will make his report as corresponding secretary. Dr. F. C. Ard, also of this city, will read a paper on "Progress in Rhinology and Laryngology" on the following Monday.

—The June meeting of the Common Council will be held Monday night. There will be considerable business of a minor character.



MOTHER GRAY'S SWEET POWDERS FOR CHILDREN,

A Certain Cure for Feverishness, Constipation, Worms, Colic, Teething Disorders, Stomach and Bowel Troubles, and Destroys Worms of all kinds. Used by Mothers for over Thirty Years. Sold by Druggists, 25c. Sample FREE. Address A. S. OLMSTED, Le Roy, N. Y.

BIG CROWD AT H. S. CANTATA

THE LEGEND OF BREGENZ SUPERBLY RENDERED BY THE PUPILS.

Training of the most skillful and painstaking kind was evidenced by the singing of the chorus of High School pupils in their programme at the Seventh-day church Thursday. In "The Legend of Bregenz," an adaption of Adelaide A. Procter's poem of the same name, the chorus of girls supported, in the best possible manner, the solo and duet work of Miss Marie Newman and Miss Mary Collier who were heartily applauded.

G. Morgan Strickland's interpretation of the numbers on the programme which fell to his share was so well appreciated as to earn for him several encores. The solos by Mrs. Thomas Mendall, L. Lewis and Mr. Strickland were the subject of considerable favorable comment among the homegoing throng. While speaking of the general merits of the performance of the vocal music, it is only proper to mention the exceptionally fine accompaniment furnished by Mrs. C. L. Lewis. Miss Mabel Maxson and Miss Jessie Utter, organists.

Charles L. Lewis, as conductor, displayed admirable control of the voices under his command.

The following young men acted as ushers: F. K. Anderson, Jos Tweedy, Samuel Reed, Stewart Freeman, Richard Fenno and Charles Titsworth.

REV. J. W. MUSSON ACCEPTS

CROZER STUDENT TO BECOME PASTOR OF EAST THIRD STREET CHAPEL.

Rev. John W. Musson, now a student at Crozer Theological Seminary, has accepted the call to the pastorate of the East Third Street chapel and he will enter upon his new duties on Sunday, June 19. Mr. Musson will be graduated from Crozer Seminary early next month and on June 7 he will be ordained a minister in the First Baptist church at Washington, D. C.

Mr. Musson is a native of Washington and is thirty-two years old. Three years ago he entered Crozer Seminary and is now one of the honor men of a class of nine. He has a wife, having been married about five years ago. The couple will live over L. W. Randolph's drug store on West Front street.

DANCE FOR GRADUATES.

Annual P. H. S. Reception Planned by Alumni.

Preparations for the annual reception to the graduating class are being made by the P. H. S. Alumni Association. The task of welcoming the graduates into the alumni ranks falls on the two classes that precede them out of school, and in accordance with this custom the members of '02 and '03 have begun to gather funds for the affair.

The dance will be held in the Casino on June 16, immediately after the commencement exercises. The committee in charge has not yet been announced.

Boys Went to Newark and Elizabeth.

Good roads and good company, combined with splendid welcomes at both stopping places, made the ride to Newark and the return through Elizabeth, which eight members of the Junior Department of the local Y. M. C. A. took Monday a most pleasant holiday. Secretary Robbs made the run with the boys and they were shown all through the Association buildings of both cities. The party returned to Plainfield just in time to escape the shower.

Promotion for A. T. Perrin.

Alfred T. Perrin sailed last Thursday for Cherbourg, France. He goes to assume the assistant managership of the large factory of Perrin Freres et Cie.

ALIS LOSES FIRST BATTLE WITH WESTFIELD

Three Errors in Ninth Inning Quickly Changes Victory to Defeat.

BRILLIANT EXHIBITION

M'GOEY, CREGAN, DAVIS AND FARMER CARRY OFF HONORS.

Two Thousand Fans Attend Opening Game for County Championship—"Red" Waller Gets a Day Off—Thatcher in Box for Westfield.

With bright prospects for winning one of the finest exhibitions of baseball here this season, Alis went down ignobly before Westfield and two thousand fans on Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon. It was one of those heart-breaking contests that should have been won by the home team. After Davis had pitched a superb game, holding the visitors down throughout, victory was quickly turned to defeat through two errors by Roberts and another by Mehler. Up to this time Alis had the game 5 to 3. Then Westfield through a combination of three errors and a two-base hit by Brown, of the Jersey City Eastern League team, chalked four runs and won the game by a score of 7 to 5, much to the great disappointment of the big crowd of Alis supporters.

This is the detailed score of the game:

Alis.	R	1B	PO	A	E
Roberts, ss	0	0	3	4	2
Leader, 3b	0	1	1	2	2
Cregan, 2b	2	2	1	2	0
McGoey, cf	1	2	3	0	0
Mehler, 1b	1	2	14	1	1
Farmer, c	1	1	5	1	0
Devens, rf	0	0	0	0	0
Hollywood, lf	0	1	0	0	0
Davis, p	0	0	1	4	1
	5	9	27	15	6

Westfield.	R	1B	PO	A	E
Goldberg, lf	1	0	4	0	0
Barry, 3b	1	0	1	2	0
Rochford, 2b	1	0	0	4	0
Brown, 1b	1	2	13	0	0
Hickman, ss	1	1	4	4	0
Connelly, rf	0	1	0	0	0
Mallon, cf	0	1	0	0	0
Burke, c	1	2	6	2	0
Thatcher, p	1	2	0	2	0
	7	9	27	14	0

Alis	0	1	2	0	0	0	2	0	—5
Westfield	0	0	1	0	1	0	0	4	—7

Earned runs—Cregan 2, McGoey, Brown, Hickman, Burke, Thatcher. Two-base hits—Mehler, Hollywood, Hickman, Connelly, Thatcher. Three-base hits—Cregan, Farmer, Thatcher. First base on balls—Off Davis, 3; off Thatcher, 2. Struck out—By Davis, 5; by Thatcher, 3. Left on bases—Alis 4, Westfield 8. Double plays—Davis, M ehler and Roberts. Passed balls—Burke. First base on errors—Alis 0, Westfield 5. Hit by pitcher—McGoey, Devens. Time of game—Two hours and fifteen minutes. Umpire—Merity.

Westfield scored one run in each of the third, fifth and sixth innings. Davis was as steady as clock-work and he was backed up by Farmer in faultless style. In the ninth inning, after Thatcher fanned, Goldberg reached first on Mehler's error. Then Barry got the infield out on error by Roberts, who let the ball get by him, and the "Kid" repeated the offense with a ground ball hit by Rochford. With three men on bases, Brown connected with the leather sphere for two bases, bringing Goldberg, Barry and Rochford across the plate and later scoring himself, a total of four runs.

Alis scored one run in the second inning, two in the third and two in the eighth. Thatcher, who was given one trial by the Brooklyn National League team, and was subsequently released, was the slab artist for Westfield, "Red" Waller having been told he could have the day off. Denman said it was the first time "Red" had ever failed him, but it was generally believed that it was not intended that he should pitch. However, Davis pitched as good, if not a better game than Thatcher.

McGoey, Cregan, Davis and Farmer carried off the honors for Alis, while up to the ninth inning Roberts played an errorless game. He keenly felt his misplays, as did also Mehler. Cregan and Farmer gave Thatcher a solar plexus for three bases, while Mehler hit for two bases. In the fourth inning McGoey made the star play of the season. Hickman sent a sky scraper toward Hollieywood, but McGoey realising that Hollywood would not get it, started after the sphere. After a long run he made a desperate leap and picked the ball out of the air with one hand while the crowd went wild with delight.

Farmer made another star play in the second inning. He got a pass to first, stole second and third, and while Devens, who also got a pass, was stealing second, Farmer came home, tallying the first run.

In the third inning, Cregan put the ball out of reach for three bases, and was followed by McGoey with a single. Then Mehler hit for two bases, scoring two runs. The other two runs were made in the eighth inning. Cregan made a safety. McGoey did likewise, but was caught stealing second. Mehler then tapped Thatcher for a single, stole second, while Farmer got a pass. Devens was hit with the ball and Hollywood sacrificed, scoring Cregan and Mehler.

Captain Leader was considerably off his game. In one of two instances his catching was flawless and he did not exhibit his usual snap. Many insists that Manager Johnston should not have allowed "Billy" to play with his sprained ankle, which affected his work generally.

Hickman playing short for Westfield, marred the pleasure of the game somewhat by resorting to questionable tactics. He was roundly hissed several times.

VETS ATTEND DIVINE SERVICE

WINFIELD SCOTT POST HEARS ADDRESS MADE BY MR. LIVERMORE.

The members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., together with the Woman's Relief Corps attended divine services at Reform Hall, Sunday night. There was a large attendance of veterans and Corps members to enjoy the fine patriotic discourse by Rev. Dr. L. E. Livermore, of the New Market Seventh-Day Baptist church. It was an eloquent address and the speaker presented the divine side of patriotism, showing that the veterans should fight for God as well as their country. During the service there was special music.

POSTMASTER DUNN BURIED

FUNERAL SERVICES OVER REMAINS OF PROMINENT SCOTCH PLAINS MAN.

Funeral services of the late Norman Dunn, of Scotch Plains, were held Sunday afternoon from his late home on Park avenue. The house was filled with the neighbors, friends and members of the Royal Arcanum, who had known and respected him many years. Rev. G. M. Shott, his pastor, assisted by Rev. Dr. J. H. Parks, his former pastor, had charge of the sad obsequies. Rev. Mr. Shott delivered the eulogy.

During the service, "Asleep in Jesus," a favorite hymn of the dead man, was feelingly sung by Elmer E. Runyon. The floral display of sympathy nearly covered the casket. All the sons of the service, neighbors and brother members of the church and fraternal orders, tenderly carried the casket to the family plot in the cemetery adjoining the church. The pall bearers being John Robinson, John Borrmann, William S. Corey, Benjamin Elliott, William Archibold and David Hand.

INVESTIGATING CLIME'S TALK

NATIONAL GUARD STAFF OFFICER SECURES AFFIDAVITS AS TO SPEECHES.

Harry Valentine, of Trenton, a staff officer of the Second Brigade, N. G. N. J., was in this city Monday gathering facts concerning what took place at the recent dinner of Co. K, when Lieut. Col. J. F. Clime, of Burlington, made a speech criticising the New Jersey Legislature, and Col. Dennis F. Collins, of Elizabeth, also spoke in a similar manner.

It is understood that Col. Clime denies that he said anything derogatory to the legislators and further claims that his speech was incorrectly reported. While here Mr. Valentine secured several affidavits from persons who were at the dinner, verifying statements as to what occurred. The result of his investigation will be reported to headquarters.

CLINTON AVENUE WON.

Reform Club Defeated, the Score Being 8 to 1.

By a score of 8 to 1, the Clinton Avenue Baseball Club defeated the Reform Club nine in a well-played game on the Clinton Avenue's grounds Monday. VanArsdale, pitching for the Clinton Avenue's, struck out twelve men and was well supported by Magee as catcher. Clinton Avenue's keenest hitters were Brit Martin and Barnes.

The Reform Club had O'Loughlin behind the bat and Scott, who appeared to be out of form, in the box. Scott was pounded for eleven hits by the Clinton Avenue's during the game.

Will Attend His Niece's Wedding.

Charles Butt, of East Front street, will leave on Sunday for Toronto, Can., where on Wednesday, June 15, he will attend the wedding of his niece, Miss Maude Frances Butt, to Dr. VanDuzer, both of Toronto.

SCHOOL CHILDREN HONOR DEAD SOLDIERS

Appropriate Memorial Exercises in the City and Borough Today.

VETERANS PRESENT

MAJOR W. D. W. MILLER SPEAKS AT STILLMAN HIGH SCHOOL.

Patriotic Songs and Speeches—Debate at the North Plainfield High School—Features of Various Programmes.

Memorial exercises were held in the local schools Friday and were participated in by representatives from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R. An address by Major W. D. W. Miller to the pupils at the High School brought in the form of a reminiscence, the stirring scenes of the Gettysburg fight before his audience.

Capt. M. C. Dobbins spoke at the Bryant School. Agnes Scrivener read a composition and another by Leslie Arnold was read by John Kenney. W. W. Corlell made an address at the Franklin School.

St. Mary's parochial school was visited by a detail under Capt. M. C. Dobbins. The address at the Irving School was made by R. C. Corse.

T. O. Doane lead the detail visiting the Whitsiel School. The pupils of the Washington School in addition to patriotic songs and recitations listened to an address by J. F. Berg.

In common with those of the city, the borough school children observed Decorsiion Day today. All grades joined in exercises.

The feature of the observance held by the higher grades was a debate on "Resolved, that the Sympathies of the United States Should be With Japan in the Present War." Mary Robley and Sadie Fountain argued in the affirmative as did Stanley Fisher and Lee Kenney took the negative. Besides patriotic songs there were recitations by Angeline Jackson and Wilbur Dunning.

The special features of the primary programme were recitations by Harry Steiner, Alfred Seidel Harold Lunger, Helen Hummer, Gladys Marsh, Vincent Lee, Eddie Johnson, Helen Roberts, Helen Woodruff, Hazel Hyatt, Ethel Campbell, Russell Lee, Rudolph Heinold, Oscar Dilts, Anna Regan, Elsie Hafleer, Howard Riley, Lawrence French; piano solos by Beasie Stephenson and Marguerite Boehm; and an address on the meaning of the day by Capt. William Hand, of the G. A. R. detail.

HOSPITAL NEWS.

Woman's Auxiliary to the Board of Governors Choose Officers.

These officers were elected at the annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, held Thursday: President, Mrs. Samuel Huntington; vice presidents, Mrs. Julia M. VanNuren, Miss Elizabeth B. Cook; corresponding secretary, Mrs. John B. Dumont; recording secretary, Miss Emily E. Tracy; treasurer, Mrs. Henry Lapsley; auditors, Miss Mary Tweedy and Miss Emilie Schipper.

Mrs. Hugh Hastings, Mrs. W. C. Kinney and Miss Lincoln were chosen as visitors for June. The treasurer's report showed receipts with balance to be $971.09. There is a balance of about $50. The balance in the fund for the Nurses' Home is $1,792 80.

Anglers' Paradise.

South Plainfield pond has been the anglers' paradise for the last few days. Suckers and catfish have been so thick that when the water was low the fishermen could pick them up from the mud by hand. And the finny easy marks have been bigger than usual. Yesterday one man got a ten-pounder.

Y. M. C. A. Outing.

Those interested in the summer resort question will hear with pleasure of the lecture to be given at the Y. M. C. A. June 18 by W. H. Coughlin, of Brooklyn, who will give a full description of the Y. M. C. A. resort, Silver Bay, Lake George.

Rev. Mr. Bryan Seriously Ill.

Rev. Dr. J. R. Bryan, former pastor of the First M. E. church, is seriously ill at his home on Albert street. Last week he was seized with cerebral hemorrhage and his condition has been grave.

Washingtonville Growing.

Two new babies have increased the population of Washingtonville. Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Luerseen and Mr. and Mrs. William Titus are the happy couples.

Tickets for the Game.

Tickets for the baseball game between the Doctors and Ministers are on sale at all the local drug stores. Grandstand seats are on sale at Armstrong's drug store.

PUPILS' RECITAL ATTRACTS A CROWD

Miss Aimee Louise Emmons Presents An Enjoyable and Diversified Programme.

HELD AT THE CASINO

PUPILS HEARTILY APPLAUDED BY ADMIRING FRIENDS.

Drills, Pantomime, Songs and Recitations — Miss Myra Emmons Acts as Accompanist—The Teacher Congratulated.

Unqualified success attended the recital of the pupils of Miss Aimee Louise Emmons, the elocutionist, at the Casino Thursday. Friends and relatives of the pupils attended the affair in large numbers, and all of them enjoyed it thoroughly. There was a long and diversified programme, and the manner in which the numbers were presented reflected a very great amount of credit upon Miss Emmons and her methods of training. Prolonged applause greeted every number, and after recital Miss Emmons received congratulations and compliments from all sides among the audience.

In the order presented, the programme was as follows: A scarf drill, in which the Misses Frances Rittenhouse, Margaret Vandeventer, Amy Winant, Arline Brown, Anna McCullough, May Smith, Laura Woolston, Florence Johnson, Frances Mosher, Helen Ryder, Marion Wess and Ruth Wean took part. They were costumed in white, with gold trimmings, and drilled with bright yellow scarfs. A feature of the drill was a duet dance by the Misses Rittenhouse and Vandeventer.

Miss Jessica Hill sang a solo, "Swan Song." A pantomime, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," was acted by Miss Louise Davis; the words of the hymn were sung from behind the scenes by the Esterpean Glee Club. "A Little Quaker Sinner," a recitation, was delivered by Miss Amy Winant; Miss Helen Ryder rendered "Princess Lovely Locks," and Miss Frances Mosher rendered "How Did They Know," both recitations.

Lawrence French appeared in a dumbbell drill. "Legend of the Organ Grinder," a recitation, was delivered by Miss Anna McCullough. Another recitation, "What She Said," was rendered by Miss Marian Wess. May Ruth Wean posed to a number of poems read by Miss Arline Brown.

An Athenian drill, with six figures, scored a great hit. The Misses May Smith, Jessica Hill, Laura C. Woolston, Anna McCullough and Florence Johnson took part, clad in Greek costume.

"The Fairies' Party," a recitation, was delivered by Miss Frances Rittenhouse; "Mattie's Troubles," was recited by Miss Margaret Vandeventer and Miss Florence Johnson recited "Clear Creek." A monologue, "A Heart-rending Affair," was rendered by Miss May Smith; "Mice at Play," a recitation, was delivered by Miss Arline Brown. Pantomime, "Lead, Kindly Light," was posed by Miss Hill, the Esterpean Club singing from behind the scenes.

The programme closed with a comedy, "The Burglar Alarm," in which four of the girls took part: Misses Woolston, Davis, McCullough and Johnson. The parts were cleverly enacted.

Miss Myra Emmons acted as accompanist at the recital.

HOME FROM LONG TRIP.

Mrs. C. W. Eoff and Daughter Return From the West.

Mrs. Charles W. Eoff and daughter, Miss May Eoff, of Crescent avenue, reached home Thursday night, after a delightful nine weeks' pleasure trip. They were accompanied by Mrs. Eoff's cousin, P. M. Johnston, of the firm of Johnston & Johnston, of St. Elmo, Ill., the third largest contractors in the world, and the entire trip was made in Mr. Johnston's private car.

The party visited Corpus Christi, Texas; Mexico and returned by the way of St. Louis. Johnston & Johnston have been building a railroad in Texas, 250 miles thus far being constructed, and another contract for 175 miles additional trackage has just been signed. While in Texas the Vanderbilts were there in a private car inspecting the road with a view of purchasing it.

Extending Gas Mains.

The Public Service Corporation is preparing to lay gas mains through Liberty street, between West Front and Second streets. The gas mains will also be extended in many other streets about the city.

Chief's New Horse.

Chief Howard Woolston, of the borough fire department, is driving a speedy black horse. It is supposed that the borough bought it.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, JUNE 16, 1904. NO. 24.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Corner the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

AFTERMATH OF ALIS AND WESTFIELD GAME

Decisions of Umpire Kenzie Throughout the Contest Unsatisfactory to Local Crowd.

CONCERNING CAULLUM

STORIES AS TO WHY THE FORMER UMPIRE WAS RELEASED.

Can Plainfield Get Along Without Westfield—Some Teams Won't Play Denman's Colts—Kenzie's Illegability.

Following the great excitement attendant upon the game between Alis and Westfield on Saturday, the general opinion of the more conservative class who saw the contest is that Alis was clearly robbed of the contest. That there was a particular object and design on the part of Manager Denman in changing umpires at the last minute, coupled with the fact that Westfield sports were trying to make bets and giving odds, made things look unusually suspicious. It was openly charged that Umpire Kenzie, the new find, was a particular friend of Mallen, and although he was credited with never having umpired a game before, was considered superior to Caullum, who gave such general satisfaction last year and this.

Several times during the game his decisions were very yellow. Once he called Farmer out at second, when the catcher was beyond all doubt safe. Another time Hickman and Bochford went after a fly ball and in the attempt to catch it they fell down and an instant later Bochford put up his hand with the ball in it. It was said afterward that Hickman asserted that he picked the ball up and gave it to the second baseman, implying that neither one caught it.

As for the play at second, which caused the chief disturbance, Manager Johnston informed a reporter for The Daily Press Saturday night, that Connally, who was running from first to second, told him that Watson put him out at second and that he was not safe. Manager Denman admits that it looked suspicious in changing umpires for the game, but claims that he could not announce the fact earlier in the week before he had proof of his contention with Caullum. He charges the former umpire with being a busy messenger between Westfield and Alis to the detriment of Westfield. This Mr. Caullum denies absolutely, and further says that he always tried to act in an impartial manner both on and off the field.

Mr. Caullum told a reporter for The Daily Press that several times this season he was accused by Mallen of not "giving Westfield anything," and he informed the captain of the Westfield team that he would show no favoritism. It has been intimated that Caullum was trying to get Hickman on the Alis team and thus angered Denman. Whether this is true or not does not affect Saturday's result. Caullum denies the charge and says that he never interferred with the team.

This fact remains. Westfield cannot afford to go through the season without Plainfield's assistance. Of the 1,000 persons at Saturday's game, fully two-thirds were from this city. On the other hand Plainfield can get along without Westfield. The team has games scheduled with the Murray Hills, Chatham, Hoboken and similar strong teams, and can fill up its schedule easily. It is a known fact that there are strong teams in the semi-professional class that will not play at Westfield, because of unfair treatment. The motto of the Westfield bunch seems to be "Win—fair if we can, but win." and until Caullum began cheating at games, the town had an enviable reputation for fairness.

Another fact in connection with the game, a stranger approached Manager Johnston just before the game and wanted to wager $50 or $100 on Westfield. Mr. Johnston properly refused to bet.

In the eighth inning Manager Denman remarked that his team would win the game. He seemed to be so sure of it when others were afraid that the home team would win.

Umpire Kenzie is an old ball player, having been a member of the Westfield team twelve years ago when that team was in the Central League. It is understood that Acolian will not play Westfield on Saturday if he officiates.

Mrs. James Woods, of Bayonne, and daughter, Miriam, have returned home after a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Voehl, of Somerset street.

SEEK TO CAPTURE THIEVES

SOMERSET FREEHOLDERS OFFER $1,000 REWARD FOR THEIR CAPTURE.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders offered a reward of $1,000 for the conviction of the thieves who murderously assaulted Postmaster W. R. Opie and his wife, at Griggstown, June 10, at its meeting in Somerville yesterday. The couple are aged, and the crime was an unusually atrocious one. The resolution offering the reward was passed in response to a request preferred by a delegation of citizens from Griggstown and vicinity. The reward will be advertised in the county papers for a month.

By unanimous vote, $1,000 was appropriated for Somerset Hospital. The money will be paid quarterly.

Philbower & Kink were awarded the contract for the masonry on the Davies bridge, at $6.95 a cubic yard. There were five other bidders.

The county collector was authorized to borrow $80,000.

The Board will meet this afternoon at McMichael's bridge, in Bernardsville.

A NEW POLITICAL PARTY

ORGANIZATION TO ENDEAVOR TO HAVE IMMIGRATION RESTRICTED.

A new political party whose principal plank is patriotism is being organized in this State, and already thousands have been enrolled in the cause. Immigration restriction is the label the new party promoters have attached to this plank, and with restriction on their banner they expect to lead to victory this fall The league has 12,000 members in Union county, and 73,000 in the State.

The new party will incorporate in its constitution what it thinks is good in the present Republican and Democratic parties, and eliminate all that it considers reprehensible. Particular appeal will be made to patriotic societies, and the laboring people of the State for support. Its main object will be the restriction of immigration and an adherence to the provisions of the Lodge bill, which was introduced in the United States Senate by the junior representative of Massachusetts in the upper house of Congress.

From a study of the statistics of immigration into the country the organizers have come to the belief that some action should be taken to stop general immigration. They say that their position in this matter will appeal to the laboring people who, by shutting off immigration, will have more opportunities to obtain employment, and thereby attain to greater success in life. The same appeal is made to the patriotic societies, such as the Junior Order of United American Mechanics and similar bodies.

CHARLES STAHL WEDS QUIETLY

COMES HOME WITH HIS BRIDE, MISS ANNA PACEY.

The marriage of Charles Stahl, of Grove street, to Miss Anna Pacey was announced this morning. They were married very quietly last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Stahl returned from a honeymoon stay at Atlantic City this morning. They are living temporarily with the groom's mother, Mrs. Sophie Stahl, of Grove street. The groom is well known in the borough, where he is in business for himself as a carpenter. He is a brother of ex-Fire Chief Stahl, and a member of the North Plainfield Exempt Firemen's Association.

An Annual Habit.

Walter Scott and family, of East Front street, enjoyed the distinction of having new potatoes and peas from their garden on Saturday, June 11, as they do every year. The planting was done April 6 and considering the cool weather and backward summer, the fact is all the more remarkable.

St. Gabriel's Commencement.

Commencement will be held at St. Gabriel's Academy, the parish school of St. Joseph's R. C. church, North Plainfield, next Friday. Sister Mercedes, the superior, is in charge of the affair.

Suing on a Note.

The contract suit of George J. Tobin against James K. Tillotson on a $160 note will be tried this afternoon before Justice Moffett.

—It is impossible to say too much in praise of the celebrated Colburn strawberry, sold by Neuman Bros. The quintessence of quality. Getting better and cheaper.

HIGH SCHOOL GHOSTS WERE THE CLASS OF '04

Great Crowd at Class Day Exercises in the Franklin School Building Last Night.

PARTICULARLY GOOD

VANWYCK BROOKS WRITES AN ODE OF EXCEPTIONAL MERIT.

Class Prophecy Worthy of Mention—Dancing Follows the Entertainment—Class History by Mary Griggs.

Under the guise of a meeting in the distant future, of the spirits of the class of '04 Plainfield High School, the exercises last night opened with a very clever song, the words of which were by Francis E. Anderson who also led the singing, the class joining in the chorus.

A weird touch was given the character of the proceedings by the costumes adopted by the class in making their appearance on the stage. These rigs consisted of sheets with cowls and the face of each member was concealed as to the eyes by a mask.

In the course of their leave-taking, the class presented to the school two busts, one of Homer and the other of Caesar, in addition to a life-size statue of St. George. These gifts were grouped at the back of the platform.

Considerable applause was called forth by the sly and apt hits indulged in by the writers of the class legacy. This document, after authorizing the payment of the bills contracted by the class, provided for a very imposing brick monument surrounded by a wall six feet thick to keep the inquisitive public from reading the virtues of the class as inscribed on the monument. Other bequests were made in favor of the janitors, the freshmen, the Board of Education and the Czar of Russia. This extraordinary document was signed in the names of Moses and St. George.

Two songs were sung, one by Jean Douglas and the other by Martha Robert.

After the class history by Mary Griggs had been read, the prophecy under the captiom "Facts and Fiction," was read by Frances VanDeventer. This paper was full of amusement for everyone the four headings of each prediction furnishing every opportunity for sly hits at the person spoken of. These four headings were, the future occupation, matrimonial prospects, cause of death and probable greeting by St. Peter.

F. K. Anderson was warned that the greater part of his future would be taken up in dodging arrest for shooting cats. Martha Robert and Dorothy Fleming, sometimes referred to as "the inseparables" were described as being each the cause of the other's death.

Monroe Long came in for a little delicate attention in the form of a prediction that St. Peter would greet him with "no seats reserved for children," while the welcome extended by the Saint to Evelyn Berg would be to "go below and thaw out."

At the close of the exercises, two yells were given most spiritedly by the whole class, after which the floor was cleared and dancing was enjoyed by many in spite of the crowded floor.

Grossmann School Commencement.

The Grossman School for Nervous and Atypocal Children, at Watchung Crest, Johnston Drive, will have its annual term exercises, with exhibition of the pupils' work, on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. A number of prominent educators and other speakers will address the audience. The event will be a memorable one as it will be the first public function in the new home of the school.

Drunk in Westfield.

A drunk, giving his name as James Coibeld, and claiming Plainfield as his residence, was arraigned before Judge Tenney, of Westfield, Monday, charged with ringing doorbells and trying to go to sleep on the roadbed of the trolley line. He was fined $5.

M. E. Finch Delegate.

Among the members of the New York Republican Club who will be sent as delegates to the Chicago convention on Saturday next is Assemblyman Edward R. Finch, whose parents reside here.

Dance at Hillside.

There will be music and dancing at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club Friday evening of this week instead of Saturday evening.

500 LIVES LOST

The Gen. Slocum Afire in East River, Results in Terrible Disaster.

CHILDREN THE VICTIMS

Carrying over 1,600 passengers, mostly children, the General Slocum, a large steamboat, caught fire in the East river today and before help could be obtained about 500 lives were lost.

It is the greatest river disaster that has occurred in years.

The boat was off 135th street, when the fire was discovered, and every possible effort was made to subdue the flames.

It is reported that the crew battled heroically, but the women and children were in a mad panic.

The boat was bound for Locust Grove, L. I., and the passengers were the teachers and pupils of an East Side Sunday-school.

According to the Associated Press over 800 passengers were either burned or drowned.

It was 9 o'clock when the boat left the foot of East Third street, New York, bound for the grove, with the Evangelical Lutheran St. Mark's Sunday-school aboard.

When about opposite 135 street fire was discovered amidships, the flames having started in some overheated packing.

Several tugs came to the rescue.

Twenty-two bodies were recovered in a short time, and the rescuers are still at work.

DUNELLEN SCHOOLS' COMMENCEMENT DAY

Exercises Marking Promotion of Fourth and Eighth Year Classes Take Place.

CERTIFICATES GIVEN

CANTATA BY FOURTH YEAR PUPILS A FEATURE OF EXERCISES.

Rev. W. W. Casselberry Offers Prayer—Greeting by George Vliet—Songs and Recitations—Held in Presbyterian Church.

Exercises to mark the promotion of the fourth and eighth year classes of the Dunellen public schools were held in the Dunellen Presbyterian church last night. The church was lavishly decorated with roses, bunting and flags. A large audience attended the exercises.

Included in the programme that preceded the distribution of the certificates of promotion were prayer by Rev. W. W. Casselberry, a greeting by George Vliet, piano solo by Cathie Sampson, recitations by Emma Voorhees and Benjamin Dodwell, violin solo by Victoria Staples, tenor solo by A. T. Higgins and a cantata by fourth year pupils.

Rev. S. K. Doolittle, of the Methodist church, delivered the address of the evening. The certificates were distributed by W. J. Hamilton, president of the Board of Education.

The following eighth grade scholars were promoted: Cathie Sampson, Emma Voorhees, Katie Mohan, Pearl Dodwell, George Vliet, Benjamin Dodwell, Alvah Bowlby, Harry Tilsworth, Russell Garretson and Thomas Mohan. The fourth grade scholars who received certificates were: Helen Herrard, Gertrude Bowlby, Ruth Voorhees, Gertrude Day, May Ross, Sadie Mathews, Jeroldine Dunham, Belle Stites, Ruth Maurer, Sarah Cushing, Dorothy Beeson, Bessie McGovern, Florence McGovern, Lena Marcinshank, Alfred Day, William Brennan, John Shirley, Joseph Fisher, Sylvester Rinehart, Charles Dinneen, Louis Wall, Harold Frey, Eddie Gray, Oscar Kramer, Joe Hubbard and Joseph Fisher.

Herbert Wyckoff, Rulif Fisher and Robert Hampston acted as ushers.

Her Father Dead in Germany.

Miss Lydia Thorp, of Westervelt avenue, sailed for Germany yesterday, having received word of the death of her father.

MISS SUE S. WEBER MAX MUNGER'S BRIDE

Nuptial Event at the Home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman, West Eighth Street.

A QUIET CEREMONY

BRIDE'S SISTER AS MAID-OF-HONOR AND GROOM'S BROTHER BEST MAN.

Episcopal Church Ceremony Is Used—Bride is a Marylander—Reception Follows the Marriage.

Miss Sue Shepherd Weber, of Cumberland, Md., and Max Munger, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Munger, of Washington avenue, North Plainfield, were married Tuesday night at 8:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman, of West Eighth street. The affair was a quiet one, the relatives of both families and a very few intimate friends being among the guests.

The home was decorated with choice flowers, palms and potted plants, the arrangement being pleasing in the reception hall, parlors and dining room.

The bride was gowned in embroidered chiffon, trimmed with duchesse lace and she carried a bouquet of illies-of-the-valley. She was attended by her sister, Miss Julia Weber, of Cumberland, as maid-of-honor, and Miss Chandlee, of Baltimore and Miss Offutt, of Cumberland, as bridesmaids. They were gowned in white organdie and carried bouquets of sweet peas. The best man was Harry C. Munger, a brother of the groom.

The Episcopal church ceremony was performed by Rev. John Sheridan Zeltz, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, which the bride and groom attend. After the marriage a reception was held. The wedding manger bore from the reception was furnished by Austin, of Brooklyn.

The bride is a member of one of the most prominent families in Cumberland. For some time she has been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ackerman. During her stay here she has made many friends. She received many wedding gifts of value and use. The groom is well-known in local society, and is popular. He is engaged in the importing business in New York with his brother. Mr. and Mrs. Munger have gone to the White Mountains, where they will remian until fall. Upon their return they will make their home at Truell Inn on Park avenue.

G. A. R. REUNION.

Plainfielders to Attend Annual Meeting at Asbury Park Tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. William O. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cox, Mr. and Mrs. I. L. McVoy, Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Debbins, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Taylor are among the members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 75, G. A. R., and Women's Relief Corps, who will attend the annual conventions of these organizations to be held at Asbury Park, tomorrow and Friday. James T. Atwood, of Trenton, a member of Winfield Scott Post, is mentioned as a possibility for senior vice-commander of the State Department.

Divorce for Desertion.

William A. Coddington, of Reed & Coddington, has secured for Mrs. Fannie Everett in her divorce suit against John H. Everett, not only a decree of absolute divorce, but alimony and the custody of her children as well. The suit was brought on the ground of desertion and the defendant entered a counter claim on the same ground, saying that his wife had refused to live with him after his removal to a farm in Sussex County.

Property Changes Hands.

John M. Crane, formerly of this city, but at present of Brooklyn, has sold his property at 543 West Eighth street, to Benjamin Wood, who for a year or more has leased the place from Mr. Crane.

Chief Dougherty Back.

Chief of Police Dougherty, of the New Jersey Central, has returned from St. Louis, where he attended the Exposition and also the annual convention of police chiefs.

Scotch Plains vs. Newark A. C.

The Scotch Plains ball team will cross bats with Newark A. C., on the local grounds Saturday afternoon. This will be one of the best games at the Plains this season.

MANAGERS STILL ARGUING

WESTFIELD-ALIS BASEBALL DISPUTE IS UNSETTLED.

Despite the rumors flying thick and fast, Managers Johnston and Denman have not arrived at any agreement regarding the continuation of the Plainfield-Westfield series. About as far as the matter has gone so far, is the determination of Manager Johnston to make the payment of the guarantee money a sine qua non of any agreement that may be entered into. It has been said that the Plainfield manager will not consent to go into the games again unless the contest of last Saturday is thrown out, but Manager Johnston has never said that, and it is not even thought by those who are close to him that he will demand that now. Still, the whole matter is up in the air yet, just as much so almost, as on Saturday night. The dispute will be considered by the Alis Club at a special meeting tonight, and Manager Johnston will probably know just what he will ask for from Denman after the sentiment of the organization is made known.

FRESH AIR CAMP OPENING

WESTFIELD CHARITABLE INSTITUTION COMMENCES ITS WORK ON JULY 1.

It is announced that the Union Fresh Air Mission Association camp at Westfield will be opened on July 1. The fresh air work performed by this association is familiar to many people, and as another year of effort on behalf of the children of New York's tenement district is undertaken it is likely that liberal support will be given by the C. E. societies and Epworth Leagues affiliated with the association.

The camp started in 1895 with 325 guests, each of whom was entertained for seven days. It now entertains from 700 to 900 guests each summer for a period of eleven days each. During the past year receipts were $1,569.84 and disbursements $1,566.29, leaving a balance of $3.55. To this has been added the $1,000 left as a legacy by the late James Clark, of Westfield. This amount, however, will be used for permanent improvements, the decision having been reached by the camp managers at the annual meeting in May. It is therefore imperative that the societies give prompt heed to the matter of support for the running expenses of the camp. An early remittance to the treasurer, Lawrence A. Clark, Westfield, will be much appreciated. In less than two weeks Camp Woolfe will be opened for the reception of its little visitors and their mothers, and funds are needed for the expenses attendant upon the opening.

STRAWBERRIES EATEN BY 200

WOMEN OF THE FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH HOLD SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR.

Success attended the strawberry festival and candy and apron sale held last night by the women of the First Presbyterian church in the church parlors, fully 200 people attending. In addition to the varied refreshments offered for sale, the patrons of the affair were treated to music by the church choir and recitations by Miss Lucy Pound.

Mrs. J. A. Haynes was chairman of the committee in charge, being assisted by Miss Sarah Ross, chairman of the ice cream committee and Mrs. L. Kelly, chairman of the waitress committee. Those serving on the committees were: Ice cream—Mrs. J. Allen and Mrs. W. A. VanWinkle; waitresses—Fanny Mills, Bertha Wilcox, Winnie Hammond, Leah Hammond, May VanFleet, Julia Williams, Maud Haseltine, Louise Pond, Miss Declaman, Eva Kelly, Ella Lounsbury, Miss Bullman, Mrs. L. A. Hammer, Bertha Engelhart and Marion Engelhart.

Miss Bessie DeForest presided over the candy table, assisted by Florence DeForest and Mrs. E. W. Painter. The cake table was in charge of Mrs. Howard Pope, assisted by Mrs. William Dunn and Mrs. D. H. Young. At the apron table Mrs. L. A. Hammer and Mrs. J. H. Johnson displayed a tempting line of wares.

As it was Flag Day, suitable decorations were arranged by Mrs. LeRoy Gates, chairman, assisted by Miss Denning, Mrs. and Mrs. W. H. Miner and LeRoy Gates. A. V. Searing had charge of the tickets.

Mrs. Frank Vanderhoff, of West Front street, improves very slowly from her critical illness.

JUDGES ARE SELECTED FOR THE HORSE SHOW

One Philadelphian and Three New Yorkers Are to Judge the Various Classes.

TWO DAYS' PROGRAMME

SCHEDULE OF EVENTS FOR FRIDAY AND FOR SATURDAY.

Styles to Blow the Horn—Horses Must be Ready Fifteen Minutes Before Judges Begin Work—LaVere's Band to Play.

Horsemen well-known in the most exclusive circles of New York and Philadelphia, have been secured to judge the entries at the horseshow on both days. The judges will number four—George S. Willing, Philadelphia; Dr. Grenside, James G. Marshall and Louis Haight, New York.

It was announced this morning that Sty.es, who has acted in similar capacity at all the fashionable shows, will blow the horn that will signalize the entry of the different classes.

The complete time table was announced at the office of the management this morning. The various classes will be judged as follows:

Friday—2:30, pacers, class 4; 3:45, harness pairs, class 8 (over 15.2); 2:55, saddle ponies, class 19 (14.2 or under); 3:10, harness horses, class 5 (over 14.2 and not exceeding 15.2); 3:25, ladies' saddle horses, class 18, (ladies to ride); 3:45, jumpers, class 21; 4:05, tandems, class 12; 4:20, harness pairs, local, class 23; 4:35, watchung race; 5, harness horses, class 9, (ladies to drive); 5:10, road rigs, class 3; 5:20, saddle horses, local, class 28, (14.2 or over); 5:55, harness ponies, class 15, (over 13 and not exceeding 14.2).

Saturday—2:30, roadster pairs, class 2, 2:45, harness ponies, local, class 27, (over 13 and not exceeding 14.2); 2:55, harness pairs, class 6, (14.2 and not exceeding 15.2); 3:05, combination horses, class 14; 3:25, harness ponies, local, class 26, (13 hands or under); 3:45, jumpers, class 22; 4:15, runabout horses, class 11, (14.2 and not exceeding 15.2); 4:30, saddle horses, class 16, (over 14 2 and under 15.2); 4:45, roadsters, class 1; 5:10, harness horses, local, class 24, (ladies, amateurs, to drive); 5:20, saddle horses, class 17, (15 2 or over); 5:40, harness horses, class 7, (over 15.2); 5:55, the Hillside race.

Exhibitors must have their horses at the show grounds fifteen minutes before the class in which the horses are entered is to be judged. Horses may be removed as soon as the exhibitor desires after awards have been made. Each entry will have a number which appears in the catalogue, so that visitors will have no difficulty in recognizing the horses.

Each day makes the prospects of a great success more rosy. Tickets are selling rapidly, and the exhibitors are evincing that spirit of interest and anxiety that goes to make a stirring show.

It was announced this morning that stages will meet the trolley cars at the Park avenue terminus every fifteen minutes after 1:30 o'clock on the show days.

Men's Association Meeting.

The Men's Association, of Monroe Avenue M. E. church, held its regular business meeting last night and listened to several reports, the most important of which was that of the committee in charge of the concert of the Wesleyan Banjo and Mandolin Club. This committee reported a successful affair. In giving this concert, the Men's Association had the cooperation of Adam Neuman's Young Man's Bible Class.

Colored Baptist Conference.

Rev. E. E. Jackson and Nathan Pollard, of the Mount Olive Baptist church, left yesterday for Providence, R. I., where they will attend the New England Colored Baptist Convention. Rev. Scott Wallace, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, is also a delegate to this convention.

Park Club's Celebration.

The members of the Park Club have decided to celebrate Fourth of July in the good old-fashioned way. There will be a reception and tea in the afternoon, followed with a fine display of fireworks and dancing at night.

Rev. Dr. Buckle Resigns.

The Elizabeth Presbytery accepted yesterday the resignation of Rev. Dr. Buckle, pastor of the Graystone Presbyterian church, Elizabeth, who was accused some time ago by his wife, but was vindicated by the church.

PARIS NOVELTIES.

Kid Belts With Tailor Made Costumes—Cheviot Silks.

Pink and blue changeable materials form many smart little Paris gowns. The only trimming on these gowns is in the shape of a few touches of real lace and ruches of the frayed out silk.

Skirts of dressy gowns must be long and full, with a good deal of trimming in the way of tucks and ruching.

Kid and suede belts are the correct thing with tailor made gowns, while for smarter occasions there are the wide oriental satin and taffeta pointed bands and sashes.

CLOTH GOWN.

Plain and spotted pongees will be well to the fore this summer, and so also will plain and embroidered linens, both in pure white and in the natural tints.

Pompadour muslins are the rage of the hour. They are made up over soft silk slips of the color of the figuring. All kinds of Louis XV. designs are smart, no matter in what material they appear.

The smartest evening coat of the moment is made of dyed lace with a lustrous lining of soft louisine silk and chiffon.

The dressing jacket of today is a garment that commands great attention. A veritable chef d'oeuvre was of pale cream liberty satin, on which were embroidered maize colored flowers of velvet, the lining consisting of soft draperies of accordion plaited chiffon.

The picture shows a cloth gown trimmed with embroidery figures. The shade is cadet blue.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

WHAT WOMEN ARE WEARING

Belts Are Most Varied—Undersleeves of Net and Chiffon.

Belts are most varied in shape and make, but the folded kid and suede belts are very becoming. The newest are wide at the back and sides only, while they crush down to nothing in front.

Undersleeves of net chiffon and pliase muslin come in pale shades to embellish the wide cuffs. Evening sleeves and lace berthas to match are also to be found in up to date shops.

BLUE MULL GOWN.

A great deal of violet is being worn this season in all its tones, from the palest to the deepest.

The present trend of fashion tends to present a full wide appearance instead of the narrow clinging look formerly so fashionable. The smart black gown is always desirable, and some of the prettiest models are in black chiffon cloth trimmed with lustrous appliques and a judicious touch of cream white.

The combination of ecru lace and white material is voted very smart by leaders of fashion.

Quillings of ribbon are used on mousseline de soie gowns, and are seen also on evening dresses of fine net and point d'esprit.

Cream material is more popular than ever. Its neutral tint makes it very practical, for it can be given an entirely different aspect by the addition of a few touches of color.

White flannel, heavily embroidered in wool thread, will be much worn at the seashore and the mountains.

The picture shows a blue mull gown with a wide yoke. It is trimmed principally with bands of shirring.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

Disagreeable Girls

Why They Are Not Invited Very Often

"I FEEL so sorry for some poor girls who never seem to have a good time. No one appears to care to have them around, and they miss all the little pleasures that belong to their age, while other girls seem to 'catch on' and are invited everywhere," remarked the kind hearted woman.

"Well, those poor girls usually have themselves to blame," retorted the woman who had experience. "As a rule, you will find them written down in hostesses' books as disagreeable girls."

"Well, if any one were to ask me which kind of girl I preferred not to invite I should reply the girl who makes conversation out of her private affairs and, worse still, sometimes out of the private affairs of her parents or the people she is living with."

"That reminds me of a young married woman who used to come to my parties a good deal, and her inevitable subject when talking to her partner between dances—an entirely strange man, mind you—was how the pipes kept leaking in her new house and how the baby was having such trouble with its teeth."

"It hasn't much use either for the superior young person who comes to your young people's party prepared to dazzle everybody by her epigrams and who when she sees the fun waxing fast and furious all around her leans back in her chair looking unutterably bored."

"And what of the girl who comes horribly overdressed and prinks in every mirror?"

"I feel like shaking her as I feel when I see a girl suddenly stricken blind so she cannot see the approach of her dearest friend merely because a couple of men are paying her some attention."

LOOKS BORED.

"That sort of disagreeable girl would die rather than introduce a man."

"Yes, indeed. She doesn't seem to realize the other side of the picture, that it is the greatest blow to her charms, for it looks as if she were afraid."

"What about the whiners? You haven't mentioned them."

"Nor do I even want to think of them. I had one such precious individual at a picnic party I gave. I don't know what she expected a picnic to be, but I know that her voice was heard in lamentation from start to finish and that the only time when it wasn't heard was when she might have made herself useful, and then she was always out of sight and hearing."

"Have you ever had in your crowd at the mountains or seashore the contrary girl, who always wanted to do something different from what the others cared to do, even if it involved going on a very hot day or attempting to sail in a dead calm?"

"Yes, and after a bit we have always left her to follow out the desire of her heart all by her lonely."

"And the girl who says cattish things?"

"Such as by innuendo making me out an old fossil or replying brutally to a playful phrase like: 'Oh, you naughty girl!' You kept that handsome man all to yourself last evening.' Well, I couldn't help that?' or some equally graceful remark. She's no favorite of mine."

"Don't forget the damsel who thinks she is irresistible and deserts the man you have provided for her at a dinner party in favor of the one you have provided for yourself, even if conversation with the latter is of the long distance order across the table."

"Or my husband? Well, poor man; he is used to these attacks. Come, my dear, on the whole you must admit that if a girl isn't invited she usually has only herself to blame. We married women love to have at our houses nice, bright, attractive girls who are always smiling and agreeable. And to tell you the truth there are so many of these that, thank heaven, we don't have to bother with the disagreeable ones."

MAUD ROBINSON.

SUMMER STYLES.

New Shades of Yellow—Novel Blouse Waists For Hot Weather.

There is a new shade on the order of a deep apricot or a pale orange tone. It goes admirably with brown, pongee color and certain tints of blue.

The new white blouses are made of fine Persian lawn heavily trimmed with applique flowers in Irish lace work.

A charming hat of pale blue straw was adorned with two long feathers. They were brown and blue, arranged on either side of the hat, falling over the back, where they were fastened by a cluster of pale blue roses.

Velvet ribbons in different widths are being used to trim smart gowns of net.

Gray and ecru netgowns are thickly spangled with sequins of the same shade.

Very pretty novelty coats are made of black and white chantilly lace, and pongee also when trimmed with tinted embroidery is very smart for summer driving and evening coats.

The woman who can only afford one evening wrap will find the unlined loose coat of white cloth both pretty and economical, for it can be easily cleaned, especially if it be trimmed with a removable lace collar.

GREEN STRAW HAT.

The favorite length is the three-quarter, and the coats hang very full without any goring. They are often shirred about a round yoke.

Ecru batiste blouses embroidered in white or in a deeper tone of ecru are the latest and the smartest to go with pongee skirts.

Another pale blue hat was trimmed with a band of very small pink roses set closely together, while on the left side were small raised wings to match the straw.

Organdie is a favorite with dressmakers this summer and it comes in a variety of old world patterns which can be made up quaintly with the addition of ruchings or fichus. Combinations of mauve and white and green and white are particularly smart.

The picture shows a green straw hat trimmed with a shaded feather.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

FOR WARM WEATHER.

Picturesque Muslin Frocks—Panama Hats With Lace Veils.

Some of the muslin frocks are quaint revivals of old fashioned styles. They are made up very simply with full plaited skirts, chemisettes and fichus of embroidered lawn or muslin. With these are worn large flower trimmed hats. Vivid violets, odd blues and mauves are much to the fore.

A great deal of panama is being used for summer hats. The crowns of some of these are high and square, while others are tall and conical, with rather severe brims. The chief trimming is a wreath of roses and foliage, with a lace or chiffon veil hanging down.

VEILING GOWN.

Taffeta suits are being worn. These are made with jacket and skirt, and they are worn with soft blouses of net or lace. The favorite colors are tan and red.

Green is the most up to date shade this season.

The plaited skirt precedes all others, and this is used for silk as well as for serge. These skirts all barely escape the ground, and they are much fuller than the skirts worn last year.

The picture shows a veiling gown trimmed with yellow applique lace. Notice particularly the fashionable fichu effect.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

VAGARIES OF FASHION.

Mohair Is Very Popular—Black and White Taffeta Silks.

Mohair is once more to the fore among tailor made materials. It is seen in white, in gray, in heliotrope and in a new rich shade of red.

Black and white taffeta silk is used for every gown, both tailor mades and dressy creations. One of the former seen recently had its jacket made blouse fashion. The back was tucked into a wide swathed belt. The front and sleeve cuffs were trimmed with applications of grass green cloth outlined by black and white braid. The skirt was made very full. It was laid into tucks around the hips, but allowed to flare from the hips downward. The rest of the skirt was plain with the exception of a cluster of three large tucks about five inches from the bottom.

PURPLE MOHAIR COSTUME.

Very many trimmings are of oriental embroidery in figures which can be detached and used singly or in groups. Prominent among these are embroideries combining grass green and red.

The picture shows a tailor made of purple mohair. The coat is strapped a darker shade, and the wide cuffs and hip yoke are also strapped.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

ACCESSORIES OF DRESS.

Touches of Color In Belts and Stocks. Neckties of Lace.

Accessories play a very important part in dress nowadays, and both neckties and belts show a touch of color or of detail which adds much to a gown. The dresses of dull colored linen, for instance, are made much more becoming by the addition of bits of grass green or pinkish red in the way of belts or stocks.

The necktie is shown in its most attractive form in lace, and charming little "fold over" stocks are sold that in addition to the charm of daintiness will launder beautifully.

CHILD'S SUIT.

A curious but smart effect is produced by the introduction of cloth bands on taffeta gowns. A lavender silk gown seen recently had its skirt made in flounces, each flounce being edged with an application of cloth of a lighter shade done in scallops.

White taffeta for evening wear is excessively smart, and leading dressmakers are exhausting their ingenuity in planning new varieties of the dressy white gown.

In the way of trimming clung lace, both in loosegs and in square figures, is used a good deal on wash gowns. The figures are detached and appliqued on the waists and skirts as fancy dictates. Often the design is helped out by the addition of French knots made of bits of linen in contrasting shades.

Valenciennes lace is rather light in texture for the present modes, which seem to demand a heavier style of applique. In fact, the heaviest yellow laces are used even on light thin fabrics.

The picture shows a child's suit of blue brilliantine. The shirt is kilted, and the little jacket is trimmed with gold braid and buttons.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

The New Woman

Where Working Women Are Recognized Socially

IN one respect our national capital sets a noble example to all the world. In Washington the women department clerks, who are refined and cultured, may move in what is considered the highest social set, even the cabinet circle, and be looked on as the equal of anybody. Washington socially is the most democratic and truly republican city in civilization. There, where the commercial spirit is mostly lacking and where the inhabitants are more given to entertaining than in any other city in America, those who can give pleasure socially are sought after as nowhere else. Wit, learning and genius count. The women clerks who have attained respectable rank and salary in the departments are a superior class generally. Numbers of them are the widows or relatives of United States senators and military and naval officers. Before their officeholding days they were socially at the top of the Washington ladder, and when they entered on the performance of their clerical duties they did not slide down. The most highly paid women clerks those who have passed the severe civil service examination grade by grade and been promoted, receive from $1,200 to $2,100 a year. Of our large cities Washington is one of the least expensive in which to live. It is at the same time socially the most delightful of all our cities, largely because of the fact that there, if you have brains, you are somebody, whether you have much money or not. The government clerks work seven hours a day and have a month's vacation every year. The lowest salary is about $480. Perhaps in the course of four or five centuries more women who work for their living in other American cities will be recognized as not only as good as any others, but better than others, because they give a reason for their existence.

* *

That witty writer, Haryot Holt Dey, has prepared what ought to be called "the cheerful calendar." It contains a hopeful, inspiring quotation for every day in the year. The quotations are from eminent writers the world over. One of them from Harriet Beecher Stowe reads, "When you are in a tight place and everything goes against you till it seems as if you could not hold on a minute longer, never give up then, for that is just the time and place when the tide will turn."

* *

"I can't understand," said a woman recently at the close of a club meeting, "how women can talk so much and say so little." Can you?

* *

Martha Craig, the explorer, who journeyed 500 miles into the Canadian wilderness with two Indian guides, believes that tobacco and the overmuch eating of meat are stupefying the senses of the masculine sex.

* *

On general principles Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy is right in laying down the law against "single sex" clubs. Certainly the ideal club will be one composed of men and women both, but there is at present an insuperable objection to it—namely, wherever men and women both belong to an organization the men always crowd the women out of all the offices and all management or say in the society's affairs. I have seen that happen over and over again. For the present, therefore, until men are more modest and less "bossy" toward women, the only refuge is for women to have their own clubs.

* *

The famous decision given by a New Jersey judge in a suit for damages that a girl's life is worth to the world only half as much as a boy's has naturally aroused indignation among the feminine sex. Well, if women had a vote no American judge would dare render such a decision. Better work for woman suffrage.

* *

Most people, men and women both, mistake their prejudices for profound moral convictions.

* *

It is evident that the white masculine sex must get some of the conceit taken out of it before it can progress further. It is also plain that inevitable is beginning with the Russians, where the monstrous old Salic law is in force, forbidding a woman to occupy the imperial throne. Fitting, most fitting, this, and poetic justice. Every woman's heart in civilization has sorrowed for unhappy Empress Alix.

* *

Get health—above all things, get robust physical health. You can get it if you are determined, and, having that, you can get everything else.

* *

Don't shoot off your opinions concerning matters you don't know all about and understand. To do this is one of the besetting sins of woman.

* *

Professor C. A. Briggs recommends young ministers who are studying the higher criticism to defer matrimony till they finish a postgraduate course. Considering how some ministers' wives and children are supported, it would be advisable for them to put off matrimony altogether.

ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

ON BOARD A YACHT.

Just a Few Things a Girl Must Avoid If She Wishes to Be Popular.

There are some men who will think nine times before they will take a woman in a yacht with them. And, really, you can hardly blame them, for they often have a hard time as the result of their misguided hospitality.

There is the sweet young thing, for instance, who comes aboard dressed as if for a party. She plants herself in the place where she is most in the way, and then, in order to make navigation easier, she opens her parasol! Later she complains that the waves are getting her dress all wet, and why on earth can't the man who is running the boat keep it straight? Still later on she vanishes below stairs—and we will draw a curtain over that picture, save that her cries to be put back on land are something piteous, and she keeps everybody running in every direction waiting on her.

"DON'T BOTHER THE SKIPPER."

For the benefit of amateur sailors let me give a few don'ts which they would do well to cherish if they wish to be popular on boating and sailing excursions this summer.

Don't sit too close to the man at the tiller and don't bother the skipper with a volley of questions. He has to sail the boat.

Don't monkey with all the little ropes you come across, and, for heaven's sake, leave the anchor rope alone!

Don't crowd on the lee side of the boat.

When the boat tips dangerously don't scream; be sure to sit still.

Don't jiggle the centerboard because it's such fun, or for many other reasons, and particularly don't do so at the entrance to a harbor or you will have a chance to stick in the mud until the tide floats you off.

Don't try to be kittenish and scramble from the tender to the yacht unaided, as the result is apt to be anything but attractive.

If you are going out rowing, for goodness' sake step in the center of the boat, and do it quietly and steadily.

Don't tease to sail the boat when you don't know anything about it.

And if you are stranded in a calm don't be peevish about it, but do your little best to help entertain the crowd.

BEATRICE MILLER.

WOODWORK IN DINING ROOMS

It Is Often Ornate to Match the Massive Furniture.

The wainscoting and the beaming in the modern dining room are its important features.

In the illustration is shown a model room which is both attractive and simple. The woodwork is of green oak, and the paper, which is of the tapestry order, is of the same dark shade. The beamed ceiling is relieved by hanging lamps of stained glass in red and green. The somber woodwork is likewise set off by the bits of artistic pottery scattered about. The furniture follows the style of the woodwork and likewise its tone.

OAK WOODWORK.

A copper bowl filled with ferns gives an agreeable touch of color to the room.

R. DE LA BAUME.

JUNE FASHIONS.

Separate Waists For Dark Skirts. Some Dainty Costumes.

I saw a pretty summer dress the other day. It was made of the faintest pink mull over a slip skirt of taffeta of the same shade. Directly around the foot was a flounce eight inches deep, edged with embroidery in dark red—just a double row of scallops. Above that was a band of insertion four inches wide, and at each edge of this was a row of shirring of the mull, which, being closely gathered in three lines, seemed a shade darker. Six inches above this were another flounce and some lace, with the shirring exactly the same. The skirt was gathered at the hips for about a hand's breadth in depth and joined to the waist under a sash belt of pale pink louisine wide enough to drape prettily. The full waist had a deep cape bertha of the flounce, lace and shirring. The flounce portion fell over the sleeves and waist. The novel sleeves had the upper portion laid in tucks around the inner side of the arm, while the outer side was left full and hanging. The shirring extended down the fore part of the arms. The wrists were finished with ruffles.

THE NEW BOLERO JACKET.

There seems to be no limit to the variety of separate waists to wear with dark skirts. Some of them are marvels of delicate and dainty grace. The white batiste waists, with insets of lace or fine hand embroidery, are the prettiest and most desirable, because when they come from the laundry they are as fresh as ever. A bit of very pale baby ribbon run through the tiny eyelet holes made for the purpose gives them just the right touch of color. Some of these wash waists are of fine and delicate silk and are laid in narrow tucks from neck to belt. On the outside of this, extending from the bust line to the belt, is a sort of overwaist, consisting of lines of inch and a half insertion laid on pale green ribbon. The ribbon is held together by straps made of folded ribbon, and to these are fastened pearl or jet pearl beads. The sleeves are gathered full to the elbow and are finished with two puffs and two ruffles of the material. The lower ruffle has a fall of lace. The draped belt is of wide ribbon and is fastened at the left under a shirring. This is a particularly attractive model for a young girl.

There is a great demand for gowns for traveling and for mountain and seashore wear. These garments are more or less heavy, and some of them are very handsome, while others are really elegant, though the principal point in such costumes is to have them inconspicuous. Among some especially nice suits for traveling I noticed one of fine black mohair. The skirt was laid in two narrow box folds at the foot and had stranped seams.

Among the pretty things for the street is the new bolero. This fulfills all the requirements of a short jacket besides being much prettier and more dressy. This shape and style may be developed in any material, even in light silks. The model shown here was of black taffeta and matched the rest of the suit. A rich and heavy silk braid passed across the shoulders and down the seams in front and back, defining the shoulder. The sleeves were exceedingly fine and had cuffs of white silk with pompadour embroidery. Lace frills finished the cuffs. The flat collar was edged with silk lace like embroidery, and below this in front was a deep frill of lace. This was so constructed that it could be worn with any costume. I have seen similar gowns made of light tan pongee, but they are more elegant in the black.

In France they call the pedestrian suits "trotteurs," or trotters, which is a well chosen name. The neatest of these consists of a short skirt just reaching to the instep, and, though generally plain and daring, stitching being the only ornamentation, there is one style which breaks the deadly monotony of the plain skirt. This has the skirt cut in three laps.

The lowest lap is the bottom, the second reaches the knees, and another is just below the waist. All are made to hang smooth and flare just the least bit. The jacket is in bolero form and quite plain in shape, with coat sleeves. So we are not positively obliged to wear the silly and bungling sleeves seen so often. Tight sleeves always did look well, especially on walking suits.

I saw a gown today that took my breath. It was of purple taffeta gathered at the waist. All down the waist and skirt it was open to show a shirring of ivory white satin, and there were wide shirrings of the silk at each side of the openings. The sleeves were puffed and ruffled.

HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU.

A TOUGH LUCK COIN.

DISASTER ALWAYS OVERTOOK ITS ILL-FATED POSSESSOR.

Columbian Half Dollar Conclusively Proves Itself a Harbinger of Ill —Question Is "Where Is the Jonah Now?"

Who has it?

If you possess a Columbian half dollar, if you have been carefully pocketing it as a souvenir and can look back over a trail of inconceivable hard luck, then rid yourself of the coin and witness your rise into a normal condition of life. For in its time—and the story told in the New York Times is backed by the words of men who know—it has killed the hopes of many men and destroyed the lives of at least two.

There is in this tale no fabric of superstition. Facts do not deceive. To "see with one's own eyes" is to know. The writer is one who has suffered.

In 1892 there had been a little game in a little club in the city of Pittsburg. "Charley" McSwiggan, until recently press representative of the Carnegie Steel corporation, invariably took a hand. For weeks he was invincible. Nightly did he clean the table, stake his friends with car fare, and then bolt for an all-night conveyance to his suburban home. In time McSwiggan's affluence induced him to journey east for a rest. He came to New York. It was during the year preceding the Chicago fair. One day, when passing the subtreasury, he entered and availed himself of a shining Columbian half dollar.

McSwiggan's dairy shows that from that minute his god of good fortune deserted him. He went to the Sheepshead track. The "bookies" hit him hard. He rode on a Broadway car, and a pickpocket pumped him dry. He boarded a train for Pittsburg with a railroad ticket, a pain racking hunger, and his Columbian half dollar.

The "boys" were glad to have McSwiggan return, but sorry to learn that he had left all his money in the metropolis. While he had been away they had been preparing for a vigorous attack. They had to wait several weeks, however, until he pulled himself together. Then he "sat in."

McSwiggan was now the "easiest money" they had ever known. He couldn't touch anything. Every time he sat down he was separated from everything excepting carfare and the Columbian half dollar. Finally he said he had lost faith in his mascot. He played it in. Pressto! He picked up instantly. He redeemed the half dollar and carried it away.

BOUGHT A COLUMBIAN HALF.

The next time he played he got down to low water again, and in went the Columbian coin. Once more his luck came back. And so, night after night, McSwiggan lost, parted from his mascot, and then redeemed it. It dawned upon him that the coin always marked the turning point, and he finally abandoned it to the banker.

Harvey Reese, another of the group, came into possession of it. Finding it a "jonah," he cast it away. All around the table it went. Every man who got it fell under its influence. It was consigned to the chip box, where it remained for weeks.

A little later Coroner Heber McDowell came into possession of the coin. It had been found in the pocket of an old man named Jope, who had been murdered, beaten to death, in the cellar of the First Avenue hotel.

"Mickey" Hughes, dealer at Connolly's gambling house, had appropriated the coin for a souvenir, but unknowingly had passed it over the First Avenue bar. Jope, who was the cashier of the hotel, also had appropriated the coin upon finding it in the cash register.

"I know the history of this coin," said Coroner McDowell after the inquest to a group of reporters and loungers in his office. "I am going to put it in this drawer, and any person with a reckless disregard for life can cart it away."

For weeks the coin remained undisturbed. One day an old man who had haunted the coroner's office seeking his duty was found dead in the back room of a saloon. That day the coin was missed. It was never traced.

Where is it now?

Cork Leg Won the Race.

A funny walking watch was recently witnessed in Liverpool, England, by an immense crowd of spectators. The contestants were a man with one leg and a crutch and a man with a cork leg. The distance was one mile, and the wager, £10 a side. The cork leg won easily.

The Long and Short of It.

The native countries of the tallest and shortest people of Europe—the Norwegians and the Lapo—adjoin each other.

A VIXEN'S CHILDREN

THE STORY OF BABY FOXES BORN IN CAPTIVITY.

Under the Watchful Eye of a Noted Naturalist They Proved Interesting Studies—Actions, of Their Parents.

I have told before of the cubs that were born to the Vixen and Sprite which I keep in a cage in my yard, writes Ernest Harold Baynes. I will tell something of the youngsters whose first few weeks of life gave to me an interesting study.

For the first few days after the young foxes were born, the vixen never left them, save for a few moments now and then, when she wanted food or water. She had a ravenous appetite, and ate a great deal of meat. "The Sprite," on the other hand, seemed to live chiefly on air, for I could not observe that he ate a mouthful. He was just as eager to get the food, but, instead of devouring it, he set it down on the ground in front of him, and wagging his tail, raised his hand for more. When he found that he had received all that was coming to him, he would pick it up, a piece at a time, until his mouth would hold no more, and then he would run over to the den, put his head inside, and make the clucking sound which I have mentioned before, as though calling his puppies to the feast. Then, finding no response, he would take away the meat, dig a hole, and bury it. And he never tried to take away a piece of meat which the vixen had secured, as he often had done before the puppies arrived, but when the vixen tried to take away any of his food, he tried to prevent her, seemingly that he might offer it to the youngsters in the den. After he had buried it, I often saw the vixen dig it up and eat it.

The only food which "The Sprite" reserved for himself was the candy which we gave him now and then. The temptation to eat a caramel, it seemed beyond his power to resist, and he would sit with closed eyes and calmly chew away until the last atom was gone, and then lick his lips and wag his tail for another.

WAGGING HIS TAIL FOR MORE.

Every now and then, if she saw anyone watching her, the vixen would take one of the babies in her mouth, bring it out of the den, and hunt for some safe place to put it. Not finding one, she would often deposit the infant on the ground, and then bring the others out, one by one. Here they would instinctively form as close a bunch as possible, lying one across the back of another, like a little heap of grain-sacks. One day I saw "The Sprite," for the first time, take up a piece of meat to eat it. He chewed it, and was about to swallow it, when he caught sight of a pup lying on the ground near him. Up came the meat in an instant; and, clucking significantly, he put down the food beside the youngster, but the vixen, who seemed to have more sense if less generosity, quickly gobbled it up.

One afternoon when we were all away, some strangers came into the garden, and stood by the side of the fox-cage until the vixen was in a frenzy of anxiety. The next day she had a fit, and on the following day she had nearly 20 fits, and I was afraid she would die before we could get a veterinary surgeon whom I telephoned for at once. She seemed to waste away to a skeleton in the course of a few hours, her eyes were glazed, and, as she no longer recognized her pups, I took them away. The doctor gave little hope for her recovery, but we carried out his orders to the letter, and, save that she is still quite nervous, she has fully recovered from the attack. But we dared not give her the pups again, and they are now being brought up by hand.

When the young foxes were 13 days old, their teeth began to come through the gums, and three days later they could bite a finger hard enough to make it uncomfortable. Even earlier than this, if they were caught up suddenly, they would give a little "yap" and snap at the offending hand. When they were 15 days old the eye of one young fox began to show signs of opening, but it was not until they were 19 days old that all of them had their sight.

At first their only cry was a wailing whine, but after a few days it became vibratory, sometimes sounding like the usual note of a screech owl, and on the seventeenth day I first heard an uncertain "wow-wow-wow" at the end of the whine.

The cubs now, at three weeks old, beginning to take a real interest in life. They toddle all about the floor, pausing, when they meet one another, to have a miniature rough-and-tumble fight, growling all the while as if they really meant it, which, when they are very strongly after their father, who was just about their size a year ago to-day.

ERNEST HAROLD BAYNES.

GRAIN CURED IN HOSPITAL.

Unique Method of Treating Damaged Wheat and Restoring It to Usefulness.

Port Arthur (Ont.) Special.

Most of us are familiar with hospitals and retreats where life and health may be restored to human beings and animals, but a new and interesting phase is a sanitarium for grain.

Plants and bowers are subject to disease, and as the loss of crops throughout the United States alone has been estimated at some $18,000,000, it becomes imperative that an effort should be made to save the diseased grain. Very often farmers lose the whole crop because of being compelled to harvest in wet weather.

NURSE IN WHEAT HOSPITAL. (Prepared Against Inhaling Germs from Diseased Grain.)

To the new hospital, which is located at Port Arthur, Ontario, the farmers may send their grain to be treated and carefully nursed. After passing out of the care of the experts the grain is said to be cleaner and more wholesome than wheat which has not been subjected to this process. Convalescent wheat has been stored away and kept in perfect health for several years.

When the wheat ill unto death arrives, a nurse places it in a bath of pure water, where it is brushed and scoured in machines made for the purpose until the grains are highly polished and in good shape for the mill. It is then placed upon a bed made of screening and subjected to a jamming process, first of hot and then of cold air, until it is perfectly dry.

Again the grain is subjected to another cleaning process, after which it is ready to be returned to the owner, with the guarantee that it is thoroughly cured. Strange to say, when it is weighed it seems to have lost nothing, and, being grain, and no chaff, it weighs three or four pounds heavier to the bushel.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.

Son of Standard Oil Magnate Goes In for Money-Making and Practical Theology.

New York Special.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., already one of the richest young men on the continent, will doubtless be the richest when he inherits his father's vast fortune. Young Rockefeller goes in for theology as a fad. He teaches Sunday school, preaches now and then, and is also a good business man, holding responsible position with the Standard Oil company. Young Rockefeller is an economical chap, living simply and saving money. His was educated at Brown university and was once accused of plagiarism. He not only refuted the charge, but forced the faculty to apologize.

A few Sundays ago he was talking to his Sunday school class about industry.

"Our industry," he said, with a faint smile, "should not be of such a nature that the remark once applied to a certain Scot could ever be applied to us.

"I'll tell you what the remark I allude to was.

"Two old farmers were walking down a road near Dunfermline, when one of them pointed to a distant field and said, shading his eyes from the sun:

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR. (Business In His Forte, Sunday School Work His Fad.)

"'That figure over there—I wonder if it's a scarecrow.'

"He stopped and regarded the figure very attentively for a space. Then he concluded, in a satisfied tone:

"'Yes, it's not moving. It must be a scarecrow.'

"But the other farmer had sharper eyes and a better understanding, maybe, of certain types of human nature.

"'No,' he said, dryly; 'no, it's not a scarecrow. It's a man working by the day.'"

The Sabbath in Heligoland.

In Heligoland the Sabbath begins on Saturday evening at six o'clock, and extends until the same hour on the next day. In former times no vessel was allowed to leave port between those hours.

A NOVEL SUBMARINE

THE INVENTION OF SIMEON LAKE OF BALTIMORE.

He Claims for It Many Advantages Over Other Underwater Craft —Some of Its Peculiar Features.

The fact that two small submarines of the Lynx type have been sent to the far east on a French battleship is sufficient indication that, should France be drawn into war, she will make use of her under-water flotilla. Japan has no submarine boats, but Russia has one, at least, of a new type—the Petr Kochka—completed, which could be sent out in sections to the Pacific. Possibly she also possess some of the Goubet type.

The illustration accompanying this article represent the Protector, an entirely novel type of American submarine, which differs very greatly from the boats belonging to the British, French or our own government. She has been built as a private speculation by Mr. Simon Lake, of Baltimore, who is now in Europe, and hopes to induce the admiralties there to give his boat a trial. The Protector is 65 feet long by 11 foot beam, and displaces 115 tons. On the surface she is driven by a 250-horse power petrol motor, actuating twin screws, and is submerged by an electric motor of 75 horse power. She is fitted with three torpedo tubes, has a speed of about 14 knots on the surface and eight and nine-tenths knots below, and has a diver's compartment, by which divers can leave and enter the vessel while submerged.

THE PROTECTOR READY TO SUBMERGE.

Mr. Lake has built two submarines fitted with wheels whereby they roll along the ocean floor. The first is intended for peaceful operations, and is named the Argonaut; the second, which is armed with torpedoes, is the Protector. Mr. Lake believes that underwater vessels have a very useful future before them, both from a peaceful and from a warlike point of view, and already his submarine wrecking boat Argonaut has performed valuable service in wreck raising, recovering coal from sunken barges, and in similar operations.

Mr. Lake commenced the study of submarine navigation nearly 20 years ago, and he claims that he has traveled great distances under water than any other builder on either side of the Atlantic. The first practical and successful boat built by Mr. Lake was the Argonaut, and she has proved the practicability of this type of vessel for commercial purposes. She can remain for days under the surface; she can steer as correct courses as on the surface; she affords the crew the same comfort as when on the surface, with ample sleeping, cooking facilities, and she has means of enabling divers to enter and leave the hull through an open door through which no water can possibly enter.

CROSS SECTION OF THE CENTRAL PORTION OF THE PROTECTOR.

The main feature that distinguishes the "Lake" type of submarine is the power of traveling on the floor of the ocean. For this purpose they are fitted with wheels, and when on the bottom they run along the sea bed, just as a carriage rolls along a highroad. They also differ from the "diving torpedo boats" of the Holland type in the British and American navies, in that they go under as an even keel. The Lake boats need not always run on the ocean bed, but can be navigated at any predetermined depth between the surface and the bottom. In this position the depth of submergence is maintained nearly constant by means of hydropianes, one or more on each side of the vessel. These hydroplanes, or horizontal rudders, are controlled automatically, and the boat is submerging always maintains a level keel. The method of submersion by the side vanes, or hydroplanes, is as follows: Water ballast is taken in to bring the boat to the "awash" condition. The vanes are then turned downwards, and the water flowing against the upper portion of the planes, forces the structure beneath the surface until the required depth is reached.

AUTO WON HIM A BRIDE.

Happy Consequence of an Altogether Unexpected Breakdown After Late Dinner.

Possibly Jacobus never would have won his bride if it hadn't been for the kindly freakishness of his auto. The machine broke down at precisely the proper psychological moment and pitchforked him into matrimony—but let the history be told in due order.

Russell Jacobus lives in Cedar Grove, N. J. For months his heart beat solely for Miss Hattie Sigler, the lovely daughter of wealthy Isaac Sigler, of Upper Montclair. Russell took Miss Hattie to Philadelphia in his automobile the other afternoon. The level New Jersey roads spun past and under them in one smooth, grand, sweet song. Atearly dusk they sat down to dinner. After dinner they started for home.

"WILL YOU MARRY ME?"

But Dan Cupid had fooled the carburetter, smashed the sparkler, mauled the mufflers—in one word, the auto most thoroughly broke down, balked, wouldn't move a blessed inch.

Mr. Jacobus visited every automobile shop in town. All were closed. He hired the village blacksmiths. You may be sure that love laughs just as heartily at blacksmiths as at locksmiths. It was ten o'clock. Empty-handed and with bedded, furrowed brow the young man returned to where Miss Hattie patiently perched in the tonneau.

"I wish—I guess—now the—well, will you please marry me? and it'll be all right," he gasped. "It's our only chance."

"Oh, Russell; this is so sudden!" said she. But just the same they hastened to the parsonage of the Crescent Presbyterian church, where Rev. Dr. Zalle made them man and wife. They remained at Plainfield that night and telephoned home. Papa Sigler stormed a bit at first, but soon became reconciled.

OLD MAN MARRIED CHILD.

Girl Was Just Nine Years Old When She Became the Wife of Sixty-Year-Old Iowan.

A New York World correspondent, writing from Washington, Ia., says that, clad in a dress that scarcely cleared her knees and with her dark brown hair falling in long curls over her shoulders, Gertie Trust, 11 years old, filed a petition before Judge Scott for the annulment of her marriage with John Leeper, 60 years old, a resident of Brighton, Ia., whom she had been forced to wed, she declared, when she was nine years old.

The girl's story is a shocking revelation of the primitive theory of life followed by the scarcely civilized dwellers in the wild mountainous districts of Missouri.

Two years ago, according to her story, she lived with her mother in one of the most inaccessible regions of the Ozark mountains, near Lebanon, Mo. She was then scarcely nine years old. It was there she first met Leeper. He made a contract, the details of which she does not know, with her mother. Leeper stayed in their cabin. Then a traveling preacher—Buck was his name so far as the child could remember—came to the cabin. There was a ceremony, the nature of which she did not understand, and she was told she was Leeper's wife.

LEEPER'S CHILD WIFE.

Some months after their marriage Leeper returned to his home in Iowa. The girl put off the long dresses her mother had forced her to wear for the ceremony and was a child again.

About a month ago the old man sent for his child bride, and her mother sent her to him.

Neighbors heard her story, and reported to her live with the old man. County Attorney Besley brought the case to the attention of the court.

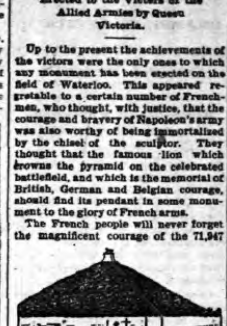
TO FRENCH HEROES

NEW MONUMENT TO BE ERECTED AT WATERLOO.

To Be a Fit Companion Piece to That Erected to the Victors of the Allied Armies by Queen Victoria.

Up to the present the achievements of the victors were the only ones to which any monument has been erected on the field of Waterloo. This appeared regrettable to a certain number of Frenchmen, who thought, with justice, that the courage and bravery of Napoleon's army was also worthy of being immortalized by the chisel of the sculptor. They thought that the famous lion which crowns the pyramid on the celebrated battlefield, and which is the memorial of British, German and Belgian courage, should find its pendant in some monument to the glory of French arms.

The French people will never forget the magnificent courage of the 71,947



THE BRITISH, GERMAN AND BELGIAN MEMORIAL.

French troops who fought the allied armies on that day, or the fact that had Marshal Grouchy interposed his forces between the British and Prussian armies as Napoleon had expected, the result of the battle would have been different, and instead of marking the downfall of the great French leader it would have marked the zenith of his military career.

Accordingly, on the initiative of the Bonapartist society known as "Le Petit Chapeau," a subscription was opened, and the late M. Gerome was intrusted with the work of preparing the monument. The result was the execution of the famous "Eagle of Waterloo," which is undoubtedly one of the greatest of the famous sculptor's great works. I well remember the impression it made on me when I saw it for the first time two years ago. It was on one winter evening, when I had gone to see the master in his studio. Coming through the vestibule on the ground floor M. Gerome switched on the electric light, and "The Eagle" stood before us.

It is truly a noble work. It represents an eagle wounded unto death grasping the staff of a French regimental color. The strong talons of one foot are closed round the staff, while those of the other are raised in the air. On the bird's left breast one sees a ragged hole by which it has received its death-wound. But, though wounded unto death, the noble bird is still unconquered. With open beak it still streams defiance to its foes.

The work which M. Gerome showed me was considerably above life size, but it was, nevertheless, only the model for the final monument. This is of immense size, as it necessarily for a work which will require to be visible at a great distance. The plaster cast of the completed monument was one of the clous of last year's salon, and was greatly admired. It did not, however, appear to the best advantage in the crowded sculpture gallery of the Grand Palais. In order to have its full effect the monument requires the isolation of the Plain of

THE WOUNDED EAGLE TO SURMOUNT THE FRENCH MEMORIAL.

Waterloo. Seen from a distance its immense proportions will be modified. It is a great monument to a great event in the history of the world, and is a striking symbol of the unconquerable spirit of the people who delight to call themselves la grande nation.

The great pyramid surrounded by a British lion which stands as a monument to the courage of the allied armies, whose combined efforts caused the setting of Napoleon's sun, was erected by Queen Victoria and unveiled by the duke of Cambridge on August 26, 1890. The French monument will be a fit companion piece, and will be no less worthy of the defeated than the other is of the victors.

Greeley, Col.

Greeley, Col., is becoming almost as noted for its lambs as for its potato industry. Shipments of young lambs from Greeley to eastern and other markets are now being made at the rate of from 75 to 100 carloads a week. The experiment of feeding lambs during the winter months on a food composed, in large part, of sugar-beet pulp, from the many beet sugar factories in that section of the state has proved a success in northern Colorado. Tens of thousands of sheep and lambs are now being fed in that manner at Greeley, Ft. Collins, Loveland and elsewhere, in the region referred to.

BURIED LEG WITH HONORS.

Member Had Been Useful Enough to John Haverty to Be Entitled to Burial.

A faithful friend of John Haverty—his left leg—was buried in St. Raymond's cemetery, at New York.

Haverty was crossing a track Wednesday evening in the Melrose yards of the New York Central & Hudson River railroad, at One Hundred and Fiftieth street and Park avenue, accompanied by Mrs. Katherine O'Keefe, a car cleaner, when he saw a train bearing down on the woman.

He started to throw her aside when the engine hit both of them. The woman had half a dozen ribs broken and was internally injured. Haverty's leg was cut off just above the knee.

HAVERTY ORDERS FUNERAL.

As soon as Haverty recovered consciousness in Lebanon hospital and discovered that his leg was gone he inquired what had become of the limb. They told him that it had been sent to the hospital morgue. Haverty objected to this.

"That old leg of mine," he said to the doctors, "has helped me earn a living for some years. I think it is entitled to decent burial."

Haverty gave orders that the leg should be dressed with a new sock, the foot encased in a new shoe and the whole placed in a coffin. A white child's coffin was used for the purpose. The leg was placed on a cushion in the coffin.

The leg was waked in the hospital morgue Thursday night by several of Haverty's friends.

The board of health refused to accept the certificate made out by the hospital surgeons for the interment of the leg so the coroner's office was appealed to and Coroner's Physician Riegelman issued the permit. The funeral cortege was followed to St. Raymond's cemetery by several of Haverty's friends and by his sweetheart. The coffin was lowered into the grave with all the ceremony attending a regular burial.

ARRESTED THE WRONG MAN

Stout Mechanic Makes Vigorous Fight Before Being Confined in Almshouse Cell.

Battered, half smothered, fighting angry, with energetic fists and heels, John Kalaher, a well-to-do mechanic, of Waterbury, Conn., was put into the padded cell at the almshouse by Policeman Michael and John Sullivan, who, being stout and not so active as they once were, are on the reserve force. Their task done, they sat down and breathed heavily in unison.

"Poor fellow," said Policeman Michael, "he's plum daffy."

"You're a liar!" howled Kalaher from behind the padded bars.

"Only sane in little streaks," said Policeman John. "See, don't these crazy fellows fight, though?"

"I ain't crazy," howled raging Kalaher, "and you're a lot of fools."

"They always carry on like that," commented the Sullivans.

A moment later Keeper Moran, who had arrived, was apologizing to the released Kalaher and enthusiastically confirming that gentleman's opinion of the astonished policemen. It seems that John Kalaher, Jr., had been acting strangely, and his physicians telephoned to the police to take him to the almshouse. The Sullivans went to his home and asked for Kalaher.

"YOU'RE A LIAR!"

"That's him," answered a little girl, pointing to her father, and the Sullivans effected a gallant capture.

"We took him up like a gentleman in a hack, but he smashed all the glass and knocked out John's best front teeth," said Michael Sullivan. "Anyway, we got the right man the second time we tried, and you can't expect detective work out of bounced patrolmen, anyway."

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, June 16, 1904.

For efficient advertising it is necessary to use the newspaper. A book publisher who got out an expensive booklet to advertise a popular novel had to spend even more money for newspaper space in order to get his booklet into the hands of prospective customers. An advertiser can get better results from a poster by calling attention to it through the press.—Ex.

The Camden Post-Telegram says that Col. Clime is entitled to the benefit of the doubt when he denies having attached the Legislature at Company K's banquet. The Camden paper will please take notice that the Burlington officer is the only man foolish enough to deny the published accounts of his speech. Others frankly admit that if anything the newspaper story was not couched in as strong language as that actually used by the indiplomatic colonel.

PASTOR'S ENFORCED VACATION

REV. DR. CHAMBLISS COMPELLED TO GIVE UP PREACHING FOR SOME TIME.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, who has been obliged to give up preaching on account of throat trouble, left today for his former home in Tennessee, where he will remain for some time.

His physician says that nothing but complete rest of the throat will effect a cure. It has been arranged to have Rev. J. W. Masson, pastor-elect of the East Third Street chapel, take charge of the mid-week prayer meetings at the church during the summer.

AMUSEMENTS.

The stork has paid several visits to Bostock's, at Coney Island, during the past ten days, the latest being to Nellie, a performing leopardess in the trio of Mlle. Dorme. Two cubs were born Sunday, which have yet to be named. In an adjoining den is Sheba and her lion cub, just able to walk. Nearby is Ben, a cub wolf, who wants to be petted all of the time. Then there are six lion cubs which have reached the mature age of three months, the baby Japanese bear, Togo, the infant monkeys and many other young animals. The little folks are flocking to the beautiful building and in inspecting the animals, are acquiring a knowledge of wild beasts, and natural history, impossible to obtain in any other manner.

A Ladies' Night.

Noah Dove Encampment, No. 82, I. O. O. F., will hold a "Ladies' Night" affair on Thursday night, June 30. There will be an entertainment, followed by refreshments.

OFFICIAL RECORDS IN Y. M. C. A. SPORTS

Athletic League of Y. M. C. A. of North America, Confirms Plainfielders Records.

CHAMPIONS IN STATE

RAYMOND H. SMITH AND WALTER M'NAUGHTON THE WINNERS.

State Records As Made by Local Athletes—Report is Transmitted to Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood.

Acting Secretary S. A. Lewis, of the Athletic League of Young Men's Christian Associations of North America, has transmitted to Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood, of the local association, the records made by Plainfielders who took part in the meet held here last winter. They have been approved by the governing committee.

These are the records: New Jersey State record, indoor, potato race, Raymond M. Smith, one minute, forty-three and three-fifths seconds; New Jersey State record, indoor, three standing broad jumps, twenty-nine feet and one-half inch; twelve pound shot-up, indoor, thirty-nine feet and four and one-half inches; New Jersey State record, indoor, running high dive, Walter C. McNaughton, five feet, eleven inches.

At the time these records were made, Secretary Hepburn, of the league, who was present in an official capacity, stated that the performances of Munger in both the events he took part in and McNaughton in the high dive constituted new records for the Eastern Section of the league; so that the approval of these performances as State records merely, would seem to indicate that they have been beaten somewhere in the Eastern Section outside New Jersey. McNaughton's record comes within one inch of the National record.

Sues for Commissions.

An interesting case was tried before Justice David S. Kitchen, in Somerville, Saturday, between William H. Rogers, of Warrenville, and Mary A. Lee, wife of Councilman Lee, of North Plainfield. The suit was brought to recover some commissions on a real estate deal. Horace Codington appeared for Rogers and Nelson Y. Dongan represented Mrs. Lee. Decision was reserved for two weeks.

Land Deal in Dunellen.

The block bounded by Jackson and Jefferson avenues, North avenue and the Central Railroad, in Dunellen, has been purchased from the Central Land Improvement Company by an unknown concern. About three acres of land belonging to Mrs. C. H. Penfield, of Plainfield, and Isaac Brokaw, has been purchased for outside parties by Howard Bird.

SENIORS IN "ANTIGONE" AS CLASS DAY EVENT

Borough High School's Graduating Class Presents Sophocles' Famous Tragedy.

RECEPTION FOLLOWS

GRECIANS COSTUMES HISTORICALLY CORRECT IN EVERY DETAIL.

Miss Jackson in the Title Roll Does Remarkably Well—Otto Mueck Creditable in Creon—Dance at Close of Performance.

Class Day was observed by the seniors of the borough High School Friday, with the usual play and class song, followed by a reception. The play presented was an English version of Sophocles' tragedy, "Antigone."

It was remarkably well performed. It moved smoothly, and the cast interpreted their parts so successfully that the audience followed the course of the tragic story with as much interest as if a practiced troupe were presenting it.

Following the custom of the ancient Greeks, there was no attempt at elaborate stage setting. The platform was hung with flowers and bunting. The end of the five acts was marked by the brief closing of the curtains.

The cast was as follows:

Creon, King of Thebes	Otto Mueck
Haemon, son of Creon	Leslie H. Backer
Tiresias, a blind prophet	Ernest Pevelkoe
Eurydice, wife of Creon	Florence White
Antigone, daughter of Oidipus	Angelina Jackson
Ismene, sister of Antigone	Mary Davenport
Messenger	Mabel Quigg
Guard	Leonard Mantz
Attendant on King	Bertha Lindsay
Guide for Tiresias	Mabel Parlee
Elders of Thebes, representing the Chorus in the Original Play	Mary Mair Ethel Daggett Fannie Wolfe Carl Steltzer Lawrence Milne Stanley Fisher Clarence Hand

Every member of the cast made a good impression. Miss Jackson's "Antigone" was strong and Otto Mueck made a very good "Creon." Leslie Backer won particular notice in his "Haemon" and Miss White was particularly good as "Eurydice."

The players were handsomely costumed. Their Grecian dresses were complete and accurate to the smallest detail.

During the progress of the play Miss Waterbury and Miss VanFleet of the faculty, alternated in playing the musical accompaniment that in olden times was sung by the chorus.

Much credit for the success of the production belongs to Miss Snodgrass, who trained the cast.

After the play the entire class arose and sang the senior song, written by Miss Mary Elizabeth Mair. The class yell followed.

The room was cleared and an hour of dancing was enjoyed before the young people dispersed.

The affair was attended by a very large crowd.

J. R. Martin, of Duer street, is entertaining out of town relatives.

SUPURB PRODUCTION OF "NANCE OLDFIELD"

Plainfield Seminary Students Present a Play, the Interpretation Being Excellent.

DELIGHT AUDIENCE

MISS LOUISE SAUNDERS AN ACTRESS OF NO MEAN ABILITY.

After the Performance a Dance is Given—Affair Takes Place at the Seminary Hall—The Cast.

Before a gathering of friends and relatives that completely filled the house, a highly creditable performance of "Nance Oldfield" was given by five of the young women of the Plainfield Seminary Friday. All the parts were extremely well taken, Miss Frances E. Kenyon, who had charge of the affair, having used rare discrimination in alloting the characters.

Miss Louise Saunders, who distinguished herself in last year's production, gained fresh laurels by her interpretation of the title role. She received several bouquets from among the audience in recognition of her ability. The other performers were rewarded in a similar way more than once.

The part of Susan, which was to have been taken by Miss Marion Hall, had to be filled by Miss Nancy West. Miss West gave a finished performance and was complimented highly by those familiar with the circumstances.

Miss Louise Boot, in the part of Robert, the butler, had a difficult task before her and merited all the praise she received. In the other two male characters, Nathan and Alexander Oldworthy, the Misses Edith Burt and Margaret Tracy acquitted themselves perfectly, leaving not the least opportunity for adverse criticism. The whole piece was given with an entire absence of the amateurisms that ordinarily crop out in school theatricals.

After the play a dance was enjoyed which lasted until midnight, bringing the affair to a very pleasant close. Altogether about 170 people were present.

He Disappointed the Judge.

William Wilson, also known as "Packer," arrested Saturday afternoon and released later to appear Monday morning before Judge Runyon, was seen making very unsteady progress through West Fourth street, having apparently forgotten that he already had one drunk to answer for.

A Stag Affair.

An informal stag dinner was enjoyed late Friday night by Sydney Frazee, a few of his comrades in the fire department and some newspaper men. The occasion was his last night on duty previous to going on his annual vacation, and proved a highly enjoyable one.

FUNNY SOUVENIR OF BURLESQUE GAME

The Greatest Hit of the Match Between Doctors and Ministers is Made by Score Card.

SOME SIDE LIGHTS

DR. ZEGLIO'S BASE RUNNING BRINGS DOWN THE GRANDSTAND.

Rev. Mr. Lindholm Has No Liking for the Goods Delivered by Doc Doyle—The Pastors Peddle Souvenirs.

There was lots of fun for the crowd in the score card. It was covered with fake advertisements that roasted, more or less gently, some of the ministers, some doctors and a well-known business man. One of the advertisements read: "Herring & Finn, Fish Dealers. Deviled Crabs a Specialty." Everybody bought one and all of them will be kept as unique souvenirs.

The score cards were sold by an industrious band of "boys" composed of ministers and doctors not in the game. The "boys" were listed on the back of the programme as follows: Tommy Davis Georgie Endicott, Oley Jenkins, Johnny Probasco, Ersky Rodman, Winnie Snodgrass, Alfy Van Horn and Johnny Zelia.

W. H. Runyon, who used to do something or other in the Yale Glee Club, is responsible for most of the programme of foolishness at the game, and for the advertisements on the score card.

Dr. Zeglio stole bases in his own peculiar way. The style ought to be patented. Funny thing about it was that the Ministers couldn't seem to catch him.

Dr. Cregar was a credit to the training of Brother-in-law "Matty."

Rev. Mr. Lindholm was forced into the game at short notice, owing to the sudden defection of Mr. Goodrich. In the seventh inning, desperate over the threatening pile of doctorial runs, he did make one frightened little swipe at the bulb.

The Doctors have a souvenir of the game in the shape of a jet black foul flag on which a glaring white skull and crossbones shows. The flag is the work of Miss Fritts. The Doctors will keep it as the hospital.

Walter Darby to Wed.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Walter Darby, of Alson, and Miss Jennie Drake, of Westfield. The event will be celebrated in the Presbyterian church, Westfield, Tuesday night, June 21, at 7:30 o'clock.

Pupil Work Exhibit.

An exhibit of the pupils' work in painting, pen sketches, drawing and artistic needlework, besides specimens of their regular class work, will be given at St. Gabriel's Academy, the school connected with St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, on June 26 and 27.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Standard Railroad of America.

PROTECTED THROUGHOUT BY THE ELECTRIC AUTOMATIC BLOCK SIGNAL SYSTEM.

On and After May 29, 1904.

Trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

† 2 30 a m—Main Line Express daily, with Pullman Vestibuled Parlor Cars, Harrisburg and Cleveland, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.

† 2 35 p m—Chicago and St. Louis Express, daily, for Nashville via Cincinnati and Louisville, Indianapolis, Chicago and St. Louis; Dining Car.

† 2 52 a m—Cincinnati Express, daily, with Vestibule Sleeping Cars and Dining Car, for Pittsburg and Chicago.

† 3 07 p m—Pacific Express, daily, with Pullman Vestibule Sleeping Cars, for Pittsburg, Toledo and Chicago, daily, for Knoxville, via Shenandoah Valley Route, for Cleveland.

See board All Line Express, † 1 04 p m daily.

FOR RAHWAY AND PERTH AMBOY—WEEK DAYS: 5 45, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00 a m, 12 Noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00 p m and 12 01 night. On Sunday at 12 05, 8 00, 10 00 a m, 12 01 and 4 00 p m.

FOR NEWARK AND NEW YORK—5 05, 5 47, 6 54, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 a m, 12 05, 12 47, 1 05, 1 47, 2 05, 2 47, 3 05, 3 47, 4 05, 4 47, 5 05, 5 47, 6 05, 6 47, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 p m, 12 05 night. Sundays, 5 05, 5 47, 6 54, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 a m, 12 05, 12 47, 1 05, 1 47, 2 05, 2 47, 3 05, 3 47, 4 05, 4 47, 5 05, 5 47, 6 05, 6 47, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 p m and 12 12 night. For Long Branch, 8 47 a m, 4 47 p m week days. For Point Pleasant, 8 47 a m week days.

FOR PHILADELPHIA—1 25, 6 04, 8 05, 9 35, 9 57, 10 35, 10 54, 11 50 a m, 12 05, 1 04, 2 35, 3 35, 4 35, 5 03, 7 05, 8 35, 10 05 p m. Sundays, 1 25, 6 04, 8 05, 9 35, 9 57, 10 35, 10 54, 11 50 a m, 12 05, 1 04, 2 35, 3 35, 4 35, 5 03, 7 05, 8 35, 10 05 p m.

FOR ATLANTIC CITY—Through Vestibuled Express Trains, Buffet Parlor Cars, Passenger Coach, and Combined Coach, 10 10 a m, 2 00 p m week days. Sundays, 10 10 a m, 4 00 p m. Sundays, 1 05 and 9 02 (through Vestibuled Train, Buffet Parlor, Dining and Smoking Cars and wide Vestibule Coaches) a m.

FOR ATLANTIC CITY—Via Delaware River Bridge, 8 30 p m week days; 9 01 a m. Sundays.

FOR CAPE MAY—Express, 9 30 a m (Saturdays only), 5 01 night, daily.

FOR SEA ISLE CITY—Express, 9 30 a m (Saturdays only), 5 01 night, daily.

FOR OCEAN CITY—Express, 9 30 a m (Saturdays only), 5 01 night, daily.

FOR WILDWOOD—Express, 9 30 a m (Saturdays only), 5 01 night, daily.

FOR CAPE MAY, SEA ISLE CITY, OCEAN CITY AND WILDWOOD—Express, 9 30 a m (Saturdays only), 5 01 night, daily.

FOR HOPE—Express, 9 30 a m (Saturdays only), 5 01 night, daily.

FOR NEW BRUNSWICK—3 03, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 9 07, 9 50, 10 50, 11 50 a m, 12 40, 1 04, 2 40, 4 07, 5 10, 6 20, 7 40, 8 50, 10 50 p m. Sundays, 3 03, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 9 07, 9 50, 10 50, 11 50 a m, 12 40, 1 04, 2 40, 4 07, 5 10, 6 20, 7 40, 8 50, 10 50 p m.

FOR TRENTON—1 01, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 9 07, 9 50, 10 50, 11 50 a m, 12 40, 1 04, 2 40, 4 07, 5 10, 6 20, 7 40, 8 50, 10 50 p m. Sundays, 1 01, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 9 07, 9 50, 10 50, 11 50 a m, 12 40, 1 04, 2 40, 4 07, 5 10, 6 20, 7 40, 8 50, 10 50 p m.

FOR BORDENTOWN, AND INTERMEDIATE STATIONS—6 46, 9 07, 11 14, a m, 1 04, 5 11, 6 20, 8 50 p m. Sundays, 6 46, 9 07, 11 14 a m, 6 20, 8 50 p m.

FOR BURLINGTON, MOUNT HOLLY, LUMBERTON, MEDFORD, VINCENTOWN AND PEMBERTON—6 46, 9 07, 11 14 a m, 1 04, 5 11, 6 20, 8 50 p m. Sundays, 6 46, 9 07, 11 14 a m, 6 20, 8 50 p m.

FOR MORRISTOWN AND DOVER—5 05, 7 47, 8 47, 9 47, 10 47, 11 47 a m, 12 47, 1 47, 2 47, 3 47, 4 47, 5 47, 6 47, 7 47, 8 47, 9 47, 10 47, 11 47 p m. Sundays, 5 05, 7 47, 8 47, 9 47, 10 47, 11 47 a m, 12 47, 1 47, 2 47, 3 47, 4 47, 5 47, 6 47, 7 47, 8 47, 9 47, 10 47, 11 47 p m.

FOR HAVE MILLSTONE—7 30 a m, 12 40 and 6,30 p m week-days.

FOR TRENTON—1 01, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 9 07, 9 50, 10 50, 11 50 a m, 12 40, 1 04, 2 40, 4 07, 5 10, 6 20, 7 40, 8 50, 10 50 p m. Sundays, 1 01, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 9 07, 9 50, 10 50, 11 50 a m, 12 40, 1 04, 2 40, 4 07, 5 10, 6 20, 7 40, 8 50, 10 50 p m.

FOR LAWRENCEVILLE, PRINCETON, KINGSTON, LAMBERTVILLE, PHILLIPSBURG, MANUNKA CHUNK AND STROUDSBURG, VIA TRENTON—6 46, 9 07 a m, 12 40 and 6 45 p m. Sundays, 6 46 a m and 6 45 p m Sunday.

FOR FLEMINGTON—10 55 a m and 2 04 p m.

FOR LAWRENCEVILLE VIA MONMOUTH JUNCTION—7 30 a m, 4 40 p m week-days.

FOR PRINCETON VIA MONMOUTH JUNCTION—7 30, 8 50 11 40 a m, 4 40 p m week-days, 9 07 a m.

FOR LONG BRANCH, ASBURY PARK, OCEAN GROVE AND POINTS ON NEW YORK AND LONG BRANCH R. R.—4 36 and 9 06 a m, 12 04, 3 04, 7 12 p m. Sundays—4 36 and 9 06 a m, 12 04, 3 04, 7 12 p m. Stop at Interlaken for Asbury Park and Ocean Grove on Sundays.

FOR BROOKLYN, N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with boats of Pennsylvania Annex, affording direct transfer to and from Fulton and Montgomery ferryhouses and journey across New York City.

For New York only, 5 05, 5 47, 6 54, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 a m, 12 05, 12 47, 1 05, 1 47, 2 05, 2 47, 3 05, 3 47, 4 05, 4 47, 5 05, 5 47, 6 05, 6 47, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 p m, 12 05 night. Sundays, 5 05, 5 47, 6 54, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 a m, 12 05, 12 47, 1 05, 1 47, 2 05, 2 47, 3 05, 3 47, 4 05, 4 47, 5 05, 5 47, 6 05, 6 47, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 p m, 12 05 night.

For Long Branch and Ocean Grove, etc., 8 47 a m, 4 47 p m week days. Sundays—4 36 and 9 06 a m, 12 04, 3 04, 7 12 p m. Stop at Interlaken for Asbury Park and Ocean Grove.

For Newark, 5 05, 5 47, 6 54, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 a m, 12 05, 12 47, 1 05, 1 47, 2 05, 2 47, 3 05, 3 47, 4 05, 4 47, 5 05, 5 47, 6 05, 6 47, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 p m, 12 05 night. Sundays, 5 05, 5 47, 6 54, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 a m, 12 05, 12 47, 1 05, 1 47, 2 05, 2 47, 3 05, 3 47, 4 05, 4 47, 5 05, 5 47, 6 05, 6 47, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 p m, 12 05 night.

For Somerville, 6 05, 7 15, 8 05, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 12 05, 1 05, 2 05, 3 05, 4 05, 5 05, 6 05, 7 05, 8 05, 9 05, 10 05, 11 05 p m. Sundays—6 05, 7 15, 8 05, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 12 05, 1 05, 2 05, 3 05, 4 05, 5 05, 6 05, 7 05, 8 05, 9 05, 10 05, 11 05 p m.

For Flemington—7 15, 11 00 a m, 2 04 p m. Sundays—7 15 a m.

For Phillipsburg, Easton and Bethlehem—7 15, 9 05 a m, 2 04, 5 05, 6 45 p m. Sundays—9 05 a m.

For Bethlehem, Allentown and Mauch Chunk—7 15, 9 05 a m, 2 04, 5 05 p m. Sundays—9 05 a m.

For Quakake Junction—7 15, 9 05 a m, 2 04 p m. Sundays—9 05 a m.

For Long Branch and Ocean Grove, etc.—8 47 a m, 4 47 p m week days. Sundays—4 36 a m, 7 12 p m. Stop at Interlaken for Asbury Park and Ocean Grove.

For Ocean Grove—8 47 a m, 4 47 p m week days. Sundays—4 36 a m, 12 04, 3 04, 7 12 p m.

For Lakewood—8 47 a m, 4 47 p m week days. Sundays—4 36 a m, 12 04, 3 04, 7 12 p m. Lakewood only) 9 07 a m, 1 25, 7 05, 12 04 p m. Lakewood only—Sundays—4 36 a m.

For Toms River—8 47 a m, 4 47 p m week days. Sundays—4 36 a m.

For Tuckerton—8 47 a m, 4 47 p m week days. Sundays—4 36 a m.

For Philadelphia—1 25, 6 04, 8 05, 9 35, 9 57, 10 35, 10 54, 11 50 a m, 12 05, 1 04, 2 35, 3 35, 4 35, 5 03, 7 05, 8 35, 10 05 p m. Sundays, 1 25, 6 04, 8 05, 9 35, 9 57, 10 35, 10 54, 11 50 a m, 12 05, 1 04, 2 35, 3 35, 4 35, 5 03, 7 05, 8 35, 10 05 p m.

For Trenton—1 01, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 9 07, 9 50, 10 50, 11 50 a m, 12 40, 1 04, 2 40, 4 07, 5 10, 6 20, 7 40, 8 50, 10 50 p m. Sundays, 1 01, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 9 07, 9 50, 10 50, 11 50 a m, 12 40, 1 04, 2 40, 4 07, 5 10, 6 20, 7 40, 8 50, 10 50 p m.

For Bordentown, and Intermediate Stations—6 46, 9 07, 11 14 a m, 1 04, 5 11, 6 20, 8 50 p m. Sundays, 6 46, 9 07, 11 14 a m, 6 20, 8 50 p m.

For Burlington, Mount Holly, Lumberton, Medford, Vincentown and Pemberton—6 46, 9 07, 11 14 a m, 1 04, 5 11, 6 20, 8 50 p m. Sundays, 6 46, 9 07, 11 14 a m, 6 20, 8 50 p m.

For Morristown and Dover—5 05, 7 47, 8 47, 9 47, 10 47, 11 47 a m, 12 47, 1 47, 2 47, 3 47, 4 47, 5 47, 6 47, 7 47, 8 47, 9 47, 10 47, 11 47 p m. Sundays, 5 05, 7 47, 8 47, 9 47, 10 47, 11 47 a m, 12 47, 1 47, 2 47, 3 47, 4 47, 5 47, 6 47, 7 47, 8 47, 9 47, 10 47, 11 47 p m.

For Have Millstone—7 30 a m, 12 40 and 6,30 p m week-days.

For Trenton—1 01, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 9 07, 9 50, 10 50, 11 50 a m, 12 40, 1 04, 2 40, 4 07, 5 10, 6 20, 7 40, 8 50, 10 50 p m. Sundays, 1 01, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 9 07, 9 50, 10 50, 11 50 a m, 12 40, 1 04, 2 40, 4 07, 5 10, 6 20, 7 40, 8 50, 10 50 p m.

For Lawrenceville, Princeton, Kingston, Lambertville, Phillipsburg, Manunka Chunk and Stroudsburg, via Trenton—6 46, 9 07 a m, 12 40 and 6 45 p m. Sundays, 6 46 a m and 6 45 p m Sunday.

For Flemington—10 55 a m and 2 04 p m.

For Lawrenceville via Monmouth Junction—7 30 a m, 4 40 p m week-days.

For Princeton via Monmouth Junction—7 30, 8 50 11 40 a m, 4 40 p m week-days, 9 07 a m.

For Long Branch, Asbury Park, Ocean Grove and Points on New York and Long Branch R. R.—4 36 and 9 06 a m, 12 04, 3 04, 7 12 p m. Sundays—4 36 and 9 06 a m, 12 04, 3 04, 7 12 p m. Stop at Interlaken for Asbury Park and Ocean Grove on Sundays.

For Brooklyn, N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with boats of Pennsylvania Annex, affording direct transfer to and from Fulton and Montgomery ferryhouses and journey across New York City.

For New York only, 5 05, 5 47, 6 54, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 a m, 12 05, 12 47, 1 05, 1 47, 2 05, 2 47, 3 05, 3 47, 4 05, 4 47, 5 05, 5 47, 6 05, 6 47, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 p m, 12 05 night. Sundays, 5 05, 5 47, 6 54, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 a m, 12 05, 12 47, 1 05, 1 47, 2 05, 2 47, 3 05, 3 47, 4 05, 4 47, 5 05, 5 47, 6 05, 6 47, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 p m, 12 05 night.

For Newark, 5 05, 5 47, 6 54, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 a m, 12 05, 12 47, 1 05, 1 47, 2 05, 2 47, 3 05, 3 47, 4 05, 4 47, 5 05, 5 47, 6 05, 6 47, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 p m, 12 05 night. Sundays, 5 05, 5 47, 6 54, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 a m, 12 05, 12 47, 1 05, 1 47, 2 05, 2 47, 3 05, 3 47, 4 05, 4 47, 5 05, 5 47, 6 05, 6 47, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 p m, 12 05 night.

For Somerville, 6 05, 7 15, 8 05, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 12 05, 1 05, 2 05, 3 05, 4 05, 5 05, 6 05, 7 05, 8 05, 9 05, 10 05, 11 05 p m. Sundays—6 05, 7 15, 8 05, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 12 05, 1 05, 2 05, 3 05, 4 05, 5 05, 6 05, 7 05, 8 05, 9 05, 10 05, 11 05 p m.

For Flemington—7 15, 11 00 a m, 2 04 p m. Sundays—7 15 a m.

For Phillipsburg, Easton and Bethlehem—7 15, 9 05 a m, 2 04, 5 05, 6 45 p m. Sundays—9 05 a m.

For Bethlehem, Allentown and Mauch Chunk—7 15, 9 05 a m, 2 04, 5 05 p m. Sundays—9 05 a m.

For Quakake Junction—7 15, 9 05 a m, 2 04 p m. Sundays—9 05 a m.

For Long Branch and Ocean Grove, etc.—8 47 a m, 4 47 p m week days. Sundays—4 36 a m, 7 12 p m. Stop at Interlaken for Asbury Park and Ocean Grove.

For Ocean Grove—8 47 a m, 4 47 p m week days. Sundays—4 36 a m, 12 04, 3 04, 7 12 p m.

For Lakewood—8 47 a m, 4 47 p m week days. Sundays—4 36 a m, 12 04, 3 04, 7 12 p m. Lakewood only) 9 07 a m, 1 25, 7 05, 12 04 p m. Lakewood only—Sundays—4 36 a m.

For Toms River—8 47 a m, 4 47 p m week days. Sundays—4 36 a m.

For Tuckerton—8 47 a m, 4 47 p m week days. Sundays—4 36 a m.

For Philadelphia—1 25, 6 04, 8 05, 9 35, 9 57, 10 35, 10 54, 11 50 a m, 12 05, 1 04, 2 35, 3 35, 4 35, 5 03, 7 05, 8 35, 10 05 p m. Sundays, 1 25, 6 04, 8 05, 9 35, 9 57, 10 35, 10 54, 11 50 a m, 12 05, 1 04, 2 35, 3 35, 4 35, 5 03, 7 05, 8 35, 10 05 p m.

For Trenton—1 01, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 9 07, 9 50, 10 50, 11 50 a m, 12 40, 1 04, 2 40, 4 07, 5 10, 6 20, 7 40, 8 50, 10 50 p m. Sundays, 1 01, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 9 07, 9 50, 10 50, 11 50 a m, 12 40, 1 04, 2 40, 4 07, 5 10, 6 20, 7 40, 8 50, 10 50 p m.

For Bordentown, and Intermediate Stations—6 46, 9 07, 11 14 a m, 1 04, 5 11, 6 20, 8 50 p m. Sundays, 6 46, 9 07, 11 14 a m, 6 20, 8 50 p m.

For Burlington, Mount Holly, Lumberton, Medford, Vincentown and Pemberton—6 46, 9 07, 11 14 a m, 1 04, 5 11, 6 20, 8 50 p m. Sundays, 6 46, 9 07, 11 14 a m, 6 20, 8 50 p m.

For Morristown and Dover—5 05, 7 47, 8 47, 9 47, 10 47, 11 47 a m, 12 47, 1 47, 2 47, 3 47, 4 47, 5 47, 6 47, 7 47, 8 47, 9 47, 10 47, 11 47 p m. Sundays, 5 05, 7 47, 8 47, 9 47, 10 47, 11 47 a m, 12 47, 1 47, 2 47, 3 47, 4 47, 5 47, 6 47, 7 47, 8 47, 9 47, 10 47, 11 47 p m.

For Have Millstone—7 30 a m, 12 40 and 6,30 p m week-days.

For Trenton—1 01, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 9 07, 9 50, 10 50, 11 50 a m, 12 40, 1 04, 2 40, 4 07, 5 10, 6 20, 7 40, 8 50, 10 50 p m. Sundays, 1 01, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 9 07, 9 50, 10 50, 11 50 a m, 12 40, 1 04, 2 40, 4 07, 5 10, 6 20, 7 40, 8 50, 10 50 p m.

For Lawrenceville, Princeton, Kingston, Lambertville, Phillipsburg, Manunka Chunk and Stroudsburg, via Trenton—6 46, 9 07 a m, 12 40 and 6 45 p m. Sundays, 6 46 a m and 6 45 p m Sunday.

For Flemington—10 55 a m and 2 04 p m.

For Lawrenceville via Monmouth Junction—7 30 a m, 4 40 p m week-days.

For Princeton via Monmouth Junction—7 30, 8 50 11 40 a m, 4 40 p m week-days, 9 07 a m.

For Long Branch, Asbury Park, Ocean Grove and Points on New York and Long Branch R. R.—4 36 and 9 06 a m, 12 04, 3 04, 7 12 p m. Sundays—4 36 and 9 06 a m, 12 04, 3 04, 7 12 p m. Stop at Interlaken for Asbury Park and Ocean Grove on Sundays.

For Brooklyn, N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with boats of Pennsylvania Annex, affording direct transfer to and from Fulton and Montgomery ferryhouses and journey across New York City.

For New York only, 5 05, 5 47, 6 54, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 a m, 12 05, 12 47, 1 05, 1 47, 2 05, 2 47, 3 05, 3 47, 4 05, 4 47, 5 05, 5 47, 6 05, 6 47, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 p m, 12 05 night. Sundays, 5 05, 5 47, 6 54, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 a m, 12 05, 12 47, 1 05, 1 47, 2 05, 2 47, 3 05, 3 47, 4 05, 4 47, 5 05, 5 47, 6 05, 6 47, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 p m, 12 05 night.

For Newark, 5 05, 5 47, 6 54, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 a m, 12 05, 12 47, 1 05, 1 47, 2 05, 2 47, 3 05, 3 47, 4 05, 4 47, 5 05, 5 47, 6 05, 6 47, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 p m, 12 05 night. Sundays, 5 05, 5 47, 6 54, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 a m, 12 05, 12 47, 1 05, 1 47, 2 05, 2 47, 3 05, 3 47, 4 05, 4 47, 5 05, 5 47, 6 05, 6 47, 7 05, 7 47, 8 05, 8 47, 9 05, 9 47, 10 05, 10 47, 11 05, 11 47 p m, 12 05 night.

For Somerville, 6 05, 7 15, 8 05, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 12 05, 1 05, 2 05, 3 05, 4 05, 5 05, 6 05, 7 05, 8 05, 9 05, 10 05, 11 05 p m. Sundays—6 05, 7 15, 8 05, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 12 05, 1 05, 2 05, 3 05, 4 05, 5 05, 6 05, 7 05, 8 05, 9 05, 10 05, 11 05 p m.

For Flemington—7 15, 11 00 a m, 2 04 p m. Sundays—7 15 a m.

For Phillipsburg, Easton and Bethlehem—7 15, 9 05 a m, 2 04, 5 05, 6 45 p m. Sundays—9 05 a m.

For Bethlehem, Allentown and Mauch Chunk—7 15, 9 05 a m, 2 04, 5 05 p m. Sundays—9 05 a m.

For Quakake Junction—7 15, 9 05 a m, 2 04 p m. Sundays—9 05 a m.

For Long Branch and Ocean Grove, etc.—8 47 a m, 4 47 p m week days. Sundays—4 36 a m, 7 12 p m. Stop at Interlaken for Asbury Park and Ocean Grove.

For Ocean Grove—8 47 a m, 4 47 p m week days. Sundays—4 36 a m, 12 04, 3 04, 7 12 p m.

For Lakewood—8 47 a m, 4 47 p m week days. Sundays—4 36 a m, 12 04, 3 04, 7 12 p m. Lakewood only) 9 07 a m, 1 25, 7 05, 12 04 p m. Lakewood only—Sundays—4 36 a m.

For Toms River—8 47 a m, 4 47 p m week days. Sundays—4 36 a m.

For Tuckerton—8 47 a m, 4 47 p m week days. Sundays—4 36 a m.

For Philadelphia—1 25, 6 04, 8 05, 9 35, 9 57, 10 35, 10 54, 11 50 a m, 12 05, 1 04, 2 35, 3 35, 4 35, 5 03, 7 05, 8 35, 10 05 p m. Sundays, 1 25, 6 04, 8 05, 9 35, 9 57, 10 35, 10 54, 11 50 a m, 12 05, 1 04, 2 35, 3 35, 4 35, 5 03, 7 05, 8 35, 10 05 p m.

For Trenton—1 01, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 9 07, 9 50, 10 50, 11 50 a m, 12 40, 1 04, 2 40, 4 07, 5 10, 6 20, 7 40, 8 50, 10 50 p m. Sundays, 1 01, 6 46, 7 10, 8 06, 9 07, 9 50, 10 50, 11 50 a m, 12 40, 1 04, 2 40, 4 07, 5

SKY PILOTS ARE DEFEATED

Pill Men Swat the Sphere Outclassing the Dominies in Comedy of Errors.

UMPIRE USES HIS GUN

Burlesque on the National Game Is Witnessed by Jolly Crowd Which Doesn't Care a Fig for the Score —Doctors' Higher Criticism of Baseball Dogma.

As a moneymaking venture and an open-air production of farce comedy the baseball game between the Ministers and Doctors for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital, Saturday afternoon, on Alis field, was a great success. As an exhibition of the ball playing it was like the confession of an opium eater.

The Doctors won. Probably that should have been mentioned before, but it really doesn't seem important. 21 to 21 was the score. That doesn't seem important either. Everybody expected it to be that way, and maybe more so. When the way the game went is remembered, the spectator wonders how the score stopped at such low numbers. The game was played so much like a dramatization of a Bill Nye story that the result didn't appear to matter to anybody but the amateur athletes engaged in it. Folly 1,900 people watched the comedy of hits and errors—and vaudeville. They enjoyed the show hugely.

The way the opposing nines marched on to the diamond from the hospital, where they dressed, furnished the keynote of the game. The ministerial athletes came on in single rank, with frock coats and silk hats setting with clerical solemnity above knickerbockers and stockings. They were preceded by the Oakheath Band, fourteen members of the Hillside Golf Club in blue coats and white trousers, who played lustily on pasteboard zobo instruments. Will Rushmore led the band, with a bat for a baton. At the grandstand the ministers turned their backs to the spectators, and disclosed big oilcloth letters pinned between their shoulders, the line spelling M-I-N-I-S-T-E-R-S. Maybe their captain thought the crowd would mistake them for Alis.

While the reverend ball tossers were proudly making themselves known, the ambulance came onto the field with the ball going full tilt. It bore the Doctors, clad in the full white costume of Red Cross nurses. Dr. W. H. Murray, dressed as an ambulance surgeon, and Dr. Norman Pearsoll in the full rig of a feminine Red Cross nurse—topped by a glaring red wig—took their stations near the field to render necessary attendance upon the expected dead and wounded.

There was a grand parade of both nines before the players scattered for practice preliminary to the game. The Ministers shed their frock coats and hits and played in regulation costume, but the Doctors chased the globule in their white rigs. They looked real cute, and caught the feminine fancy as soon. In referring to costumes Umpire William N. Runyon should receive honorable mention. He came on in cowboy rig, with a shotgun and a belt full of cartridges prominently displayed. A regular Roosevelt. And the gun was there for business as he demonstrated in the fourth inning, some of which anon.

How the Doctors won nobody knows—not even "Doc" Doyle, ex-pitcher and captain of the pennant-chasing St. Mary's nine, whose curves and workmanlike playing did more to bring about the result than anything else. They just won, that's all.

To give the players their due, they played a game so evenly balanced that it was interesting. And some of them played what looked like real baseball.

It looked like the Ministers' game at the beginning and considerably beyond. "Doc" Doyle's pitching was the stumbling block that overturned the Ministers. He didn't pitch a star game by even a little bit, but in the last three innings, when the good work was needed, he steadied down and did mighty execution. He passed no seven batters, but he fanned twelve and worked his position for fifteen assists.

It looked like all-day and a part of next week for the Doctors in the fifth. Doyle took the lid off, and the Ministers cavorted around the bases ten times before the spasm ended. The score was then 19 to 10 in their favor.

But the Doctors held a consultation and prepared some bitter pills that the doctor had to take in the next two innings. In the sixth the medicos thanked the Ministers and scored seven tallies. Then Capt. McKelvey killed the Ministers' chances by putting Lovell in the box. His globule nonsense made no impression on the hardhearted Doctors and they took six more runs in the concluding spasms.

As a whole, the fielding on both sides was wierdly funny. Some of the players handled the ball as if it was greased and had wriggly legs all over it, and their throws were very much like the is-to-be-laugh thing. But one or two of them did some fine work. Howard, McKelvey and Stevenson fielded in workmanlike way for the Ministers, and Doyle, Oregar and R. Hodges had a pretty display of goods to offer.

There was some heavy batting on both sides. McKelvey, Mooney and Lovell got some mighty swats, leading their team in batting, and Oregar, R. Hodges and Doyle shone with the willow for the Doctors. Doyle only got two hits, but one was a home run and the other a three-bagger. Oregar got four hits.

In the fourth inning Umpire Runyon showed that he was there for business. McKelvey disputed a decision at second base, and in an insistant both manner, insulting the substitutes, went out to the bag with bats and clubs for an old-fashioned argument with the umpire. The latter jumped back, raised his shotgun, and fired into the riotous players. Dr Pittis dropped dead, shot through his hot-air gland with a very weak blank cartridge.

Ambulance Surgeon Murray and the red-headed "angel nurse" put the body carefully on a stretcher and covered it with a white sheet. The band came up with bared heads, and conducted the corpse from the field, playing a sad, sad dirge. There were no more disputed decisions.

Only one other casualty marked the hitter struggle. Rev. Mr. Herring collapsed on second after a fearful run from first.

Dr. Murray and the red-headed nurse revived him with an air pump.

Although the full returns have not been received by Treasurer Lewis Timpson, it is pretty certain that the game netted at least $700. During the game Umpire Runyon read a challenge to play the winners from the Oakheath Glee Club, the proceeds to go for the same purpose. After the contest Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, captain of the Doctors, said the challenge would be considered. The Doctors know just how badly the hospital needs money, and the game may be arranged.

Batting order and score by innings

Doctors.	H	PO	A	E
Oregar, ss	4	2	2	1
R. Hedges, 1b	1	3	7	1
Adams, 3b	0	0	0	2
Doyle, p	2	2	1	16
Long, rf	1	0	0	0
Ard, cf	3	2	0	0
Zeglio, 2b	5	2	2	0
Browning, c	4	0	12	0
B. W. Hedges, lf	1	0	1	0
Carman, 2b	0	0	2	3
Lafburrow, cf	0	0	0	0
	23	14	24	22

Ministers.	H	PO	A	E
McKelvey, c-ss	3	3	6	2
Lovell, c-p	2	3	8	4
Pearce, p-ss	4	2	2	7
Mooney, lf	3	3	0	1
Stevenson, 1b	2	2	7	2
Howard, 2b	1	2	3	2
Downey, 3b	2	2	1	1
Herring, cf	2	0	0	0
Lindholm, rf	1	0	0	0
	21	17	27	18

Doctors ..1 2 0 3 2 7 2 3 4 x—23
Ministers 2 3 0 3 1 0 1 1 0—21

Three base hits—Pearce, Doyle, Oregar. Two base hits—Lovell, 2; McKelvey. Struck out—By Doyle, 12; by Pearce, 6; by Lovell, 3. Base on balls—Off Pearce, 8; off Doyle, 7; off Lovell, 3. Passed balls—Browning, 2; McKelvey. Hit by pitched ball—Long, Browning. Wild Pitches—Oregar, Lovell.

RAILROAD SUES TOWNSHIP

D. L. AND W. WANTS NEW PROVIDENCE TO PUT UP $35,000.

Papers in a suit involving $35,000 have been served on New Providence township. The plaintiff is the D., L. & W. R. R., which is seeking to compel the township to redeem bonds given thirty-five years ago at the time the old Passaic Valley & Delaware R. R. was constructed.

At that time the township officials voted to give the road $35,000 to assist in the work. Summit, New Providence borough and New Providence township were all in the latter township then, but the two former have gone out since, leaving the big sum upon the little township's shoulders. The township is composed of farmers exclusively, and the payment of the money would bankrupt it completely.

Want Dunellen Streets Sprinkled.

Negotiations are in progress looking to the sprinkling of North avenue, Dunellen, by the trolley company, during the present summer. Howard Bird, the real estate man, has discussed the question with a representative of the Public Service Corporation, and it is probable that a proposition will be made by the latter concern to do the sprinkling if the borough will pay for the water.

ALIS WALKS OFF DIAMOND

Questionable Decision by the Umpire in the Ninth Inning Spoils Fine Exhibition.

ALIS TEAM IN THE LEAD

Local Team Plays Almost Perfect Game — Walton's Sensational Catch—Guarantee Refused —Detailed Score —The Dispute.

After playing one of the finest exhibitions of baseball seen in this vicinity this season, in which Alis clearly outplayed its opponents, the Westfield team, a questionable decision by Umpire Kenzie in the ninth inning, after one man was out, precipitated a wrangle which terminated the game with the score 2 to 1 in favor of Alis. Manager Johnston decided to take his team off the field, and while some condemned his action, believing that he should complete the contest, win or lose, there were many who approved of it. It was announced that the game was given to Westfield 9 to 0, but the umpire was spirited away to a place of safety, and the decision cannot be called official.

The summary:

Alis.	R	1B	PO	A	E
Walton, ss	0	0	4	3	0
Flynn, 3b	0	0	0	3	1
Oregan, lf	1	1	3	0	0
Farmer, c	0	2	3	0	0
McGoey, cf	0	1	1	0	0
Lynch, rf	0	0	1	0	0
Bradley, 2b	0	1	0	7	0
Gauves, 1b	0	1	14	0	0
Davis, p	1	0	0	3	0
	2	6	26	16	1

Westfield.	R	1B	PO	A	E
Goldberg, lf	0	0	2	0	0
Barry, 2b	0	1	0	3	0
Rochford, 3b	0	1	2	2	6
Stallings, 1b	0	0	11	1	1
Connolly, rf	0	1	2	0	0
Hickman, ss	0	0	6	2	0
Mallen, cf	0	0	0	0	0
Burke, c	0	0	8	2	1
McLane, p	0	1	1	3	0
	0	4	27	13	8

Score by innings:

Alis.....0 0 0 1 1 0 0 0 0—2
Westfield.....0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 1—1

Earned runs—Rochford. First base on balls—Off McLane, 6. Struck out—By Davis, 3; by McLane, 2. Left on bases—Alis, 8; Westfield, 6. Double plays—Barry, Hickman and Stallings. First base on errors—Alis, 3; Westfield, 1. Hit by pitcher—Stallings. Time of game—1:45. Umpire—Kenzie.

The trouble started in when Westfield was at the bat for the last time. Rochford made a single, was advanced to second on Stalling's out from third to first and scored the only run on Connolly's single. Hickman then drove a grounder to Bradley and the third baseman threw the ball to Walton, who was covering second, to catch Connolly. Walton caught the ball, touched the bag and the baserunner believing he was out, started to walk away. Rochford told Connolly to return to the bag, declaring he was not out. Then the umpire decided in favor of Connolly. This was too much for Manager Johnston and his team and the crowd thronged the field, many losing their heads and making harsh criticisms, while the players indulged in a war of words.

The fact that Manager Denman threw down his regular umpire Caulfield at the last minute and took on Kenzie, a new man, caused suspicion, and Manager Johnston told Denman that if any rank decisions were made he would take his team off the field. Caulfield received his papers in New York, just before starting for Westfield. He and Umpire Mority watched the game.

Kenzie gave several questionable decisions during the game, but not until the ninth did it become flagrant. Alis was on its mettle and put up almost a perfect game. Flynn at short made the only error, and this was rather excusable. While the team deserves every honor, Davis and Farmer, the battery, were top-notchers. "Lefty" pitched gilt edged ball and his assortment of curves completely puzzled his opponents. In all only five hits were made off his delivery, while Alis touched McLane, the Fordham College twirler, for six safeties.

Walton, who played short, covered himself with glory, making a sensational one-hand catch of a hard-hit ball. He handled himself like a veteran and made good. Gauves was put on first, Rothfuss, failing to appear, and he played a perfect game. He gave entire satisfaction and Johnston will retain him for the initial bag. Lynch, the new right fielder, proved himself equally as fast as McGoey and Oregan and he will continue to play here.

White Westfield hit the ball, the bases could not be so safely. Davis had a perfect control of the leather, McLane pitched a fair game. He gave six bases on balls, and only struck out two men. Bradley took care of third base in great style, accepting eight chances without an error. Captain Lander was not at the game, deciding to stay out of play for awhile. McGoey and Oregan put up the genuine article in fielding and at the bat. Flynn is not a fixture, but Manager Johnston will have a new team for Saturday and the team will then be complete.

Oregan and Davis tallied the runs, one in the fourth and the other in the fifth inning.

SLIM ATTENDANCE ON LOCAL GOLF COURSES

Many Contestants Witness Ball Game Between Ministers and Doctors.

NO SPECIAL EVENTS

H. F. FOX WINS HONORS AT HILLSIDE WITH NET SCORE OF 78.

Weekly Competitions at Park Golf Club Links — Westfield Defeats Cranford in Team Match.

The game of baseball on Saturday between the ministers and physicians had the first call of the local attractions in sports, and in consequence the attendance at the golf links was rather small. There were just seven contestants who posted scores for the Golf Committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club. H. F. Fox won first honors with a net score of 77, while S. D. Lounsbery and Charles A. Stover were a tie for the other honors, making a net score of 78 and receiving a point and a half each. The scores:

H. F. Fox, 97, 20—77; S. D. Lounsbery, 96, 8—78; Charles A. Stover, 98, 15—78; Leighton Calkins, 85, 3—82; E. M. Iremonger, 96, 11—85; T. W. T. Maxwell, 116, 25—91; Frank Raymond, 113, 18—95.

As there were no contestants for the Women's Handicap cup, this competition was not held.

The only event at the Park Golf Club on Saturday was the weekly competition for the President's and Park Golf Club cups. Morgan T. Townsend won first honors for both cups, while George T. Rogers and Samuel Townsend won second and third honors for the President's cup, and J. H. Howell won second honors for the Park Golf Club cup and Mr. Rogers and Mr. Townsend divided the one remaining point for this cup. The scores:

Morgan T. Townsend, 84, 0—84; George T. Rogers, 105, 20—85; Samuel Townsend, 108, 16—89; J. H. Howell, 103, 12—90; J. L. Watson, 121, 30—91; J. B. Bette, 126, 28—98.

The events at the Westfield Golf Club on Saturday were the team match between Westfield and Cranford in the East Jersey Golf Club series, and a ball sweepstakes. Westfield won the team match by 8 points to 2, on the Nassau system. C. E. Halsted won the other event with a score of 88, 10—78.

BRADLEY AS THIRD BASEMAN

LIKELY THAT WESTERNER WILL REMAIN ON ALIS CLUB'S TEAM.

John Bradley, who is now playing third base for Alis, is likely to be a fixture on the team for the season, Manager Johnston being pleased with his work of Saturday. Mr. Bradley is a moulder by trade and today will probably take a position in the foundry in the Pond Machine Tool Works.

Last season Mr. Bradley played third base for the Winnipeg Club, Northern League champions, last season, having been sent there from the Chicago Americans. He led the third basemen in the Northern League with a percentage of .924.

He played in twenty-six games, had a credit of thirty put-outs, fifty-five assists and made only seven errors. His batting percentage was about .600. Mr. Bradley likes Plainfield and his fellow team-mates. In speaking of Saturday's game between Alis and Westfield, he said that it was just as fast as any he ever saw in the major leagues.

Graduated From West Point.

Among the cadets graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point, this week, is Francis W. Honeycutt, of North Plainfield.

For Benefit of Fresh Air Home.

There will be a sale on the lawn of No. 306 Central avenue Thursday, June 23, from 3 to 6, for the benefit of Miss Curry's Fresh Air Home.

VARIOUS CHURCHES OBSERVE CHILDREN'S DAY

Following Annual Custom Exercises Are Held in City and Borough Edifices.

THOSE PARTICIPATING

RECITATIONS AND SONGS BY THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL PUPILS.

In Some Churches the Exercises Form a Part of the Morning Service—Some Handsome Decorations.

Most important among the observances of Children's Day at the Monroe Avenue church Sunday morning was the christening of five little ones by the pastor, Rev. George Mooney, one of them being Mr. Mooney's baby daughter, Faith Emerson Mooney and the others, Sarah Elizabeth Beekman, Russell Fowler Pound, Violet Elizabeth Lindabury and Evelyn May Stine. There were so many present that the church was almost uncomfortably filled. Notwithstanding this fact, the long special song service which constituted the chief part of the programme, was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Miss Avis Aldrich sang a solo, "Roses." The platform was tastefully decorated with wild flowers, palms and ferns. Owing to the length and special character of the services, no regular sermon was preached.

Children's Day exercises at the First Presbyterian church were left almost wholly to the primary department. Special music by the choir and a solo by Elmer Cutting were the features of the service. A considerable number of recitations were delivered by the children. About fifteen children were promoted from the primary to the intermediate division of the Sunday-school.

Special services in observance of Children's Day were held Sunday afternoon at Hope chapel. Beside music and readings from the Scriptures, the following numbers were given by the pupils. Recitation, "Greeting," Jessie Burns; song, "The Bees and Flowers," primary department; recitation, "The Birth of Children's Day," Jessie Duncan; recitation, "Here Where You Stand," Harry Brandt; recitation, "Suffer Little Children," Margaret Mortimer, Florence Taylor, Mary Alice Duncan and Mabel Pearson; recitation, "Listen Dear Mother," Clarence Weber; "How to do it," Harry Dalliet; solo, "Nearer My God to Thee," Mr. Thomas; "Sunshine in the Heart Garden," Josephine Snyder and "Only a Child," Mary Radford. The Crescent Avenue church choir sang "Far From my Heavenly Home." In the midst of a recitation by twelve children, "Climbing Heavenward," the superintendent and school repeated responsively the beatitudes, making a very interesting service. This was followed by seven little girls in a recitation called "Flower Lessons." The address was made by Rev. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church.

Trinity church held elaborate exercises in the morning, the observance taking the place of the regular service. The platform was decorated with flowers. A large congregation was present.

The primary department exercises and recitations were rendered by Lillie Sohlief, Clara Lee, Margaret Hope, Madeline Blair, Etta Evander, Edson Day, Ralph Martin, Miller MacAfee, Walter Fisher, Roscoe VanCamp, Jack Rogers, Harold Storr, Ada Smith, Helen Roberts, E. Tier, R. Rogers, E. Richards, F. Oliver, M. Storr, R. Hoagland, R. Martin, Beatrice Tier, H. Wooley. Mrs. J. M. Tier, the superintendent, was in charge. The following pupils took part in the Junior Department exercises: Jeanette Neal, Annette Wilson, Ida VanArsdale, Ethel Vail, Agnes Mantz, Gertrude Schlief. Mrs. L. R. Schofield, the superintendent, was in charge. The singing by the entire school was led by W. C. Leak.

A feature of the programmes was the playing of an orchestra composed of Mrs. G. W. Saums, Kenneth Stuart, violin; Elmer Wheeler, flute; Edward A. Young, cornet; Miss Lillian A. Force, piano; A. L. Titsworth, organ.

Rev. A. F. Todd made the opening prayer and delivered the closing benediction. Rev. W. T. Griffin, U. S. Consul at Limoges, France, who arrived here to visit his family on Saturday, was among the congregation. At the request of Superintendent Smith, who was in charge of the exercises, he made a short address. He is a favorite with the Trinity church children.

Mr. and Mrs. George Benton Smith and their daughter, Barbara Smith, of India, took part in the Children's Day exercises at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, in the afternoon.

The Sunday-school has contributed toward the support of the missionaries and especially the little girl and dressed in the native costume she appeared before the school. Mrs. Smith gave the school a talk about the children of India and Mr. Smith also spoke. W. D. Murray, superintendent of the primary department, gave each child a small pig bank in which they are to place their spare pennies during the summer months.

Children's exercises at the First Baptist church Sunday-school, Sunday afternoon, included songs and recitations by Elmer and Lawrence French, Augustus VanDeventer, Jr., Lester Chandler and Ralph Smalley, and songs and concert recitations by pupils in the intermediate department. One member of the cradle roll was welcomed into the primary department. After the exercises Rev. Dr. Seymour, of Philadelphia, gave the school an interesting address. Mrs. J. A. Fowlison, superintendent of the primary department, was in charge.

Children's Day exercises at the First M. E. church, in the afternoon in Vincent chapel, were in charge of the kindergarten and primary departments of which Miss Elsie Horne and Mrs. Arthur Crowe are superintendents. The little tots presented a programme of songs and recitations, including two solos by Helen Douglass and Blanche McVey. The chapel was prettily decorated with ferns and daisies. James H. Joy, superintendent of the Sunday-school, was in charge.

At Grace M. E. church the Children's Day service took the place of the regular morning service. The platform was banked with flowers.

Those who took part in the programme of exercises and recitations were Elva Lippincott, Blanche Stevens, Bessie Taynor, Helen Nelson, Mildred Harden, Edna Mantz, Gladys Brokaw, Edna Stewart, Clara Bodenheimer, A. Stewart, Martin, Lewis Conroy, Mabel Winans, Leroy Taynor, Myra Lippincott, E. Nelson, E. Stewart, R. Bodenheimer, B. Pope, Edna Lippincott, E. Johns, H. Story, E. Beeching, E. Taynor.

A special feature was the baptism of five infants. Rev. Dr. Earp preached a short sermon on "Education," reviewing the history of Children's Day.

The committee in charge was made up of Miss Mary G. Steiner and Miss Delia Voehl and Andrew Wilson was the decorating committee.

Children's Day and Flag Day were observed together at the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday morning, the whole service consisting of songs, recitations and special music.

Those taking part were Arline Brown, Florence Smalley, Isabelle VanBrackle, Mildred Odam, Eleanor Stutsman, Autumn DeLany, Edith Lyons, Marjorie Brown, Suzie Whitney, Isabelle Moy and Catherine Randolph, William Pounford, Adelbert Van Brackle, Walter VanWinkle, Rowland Stover, Gordon Moy, Eleanor Stover, Ida Odam, Isabelle Harvey, Hilda VanWinkle, Madeline Moy, Lillian Mattiadge, Chester Chamberlin, Irene Doane, Bessie Giles, C. R. Brokaw, Lillian Hardcastle, Violet Van Winkle, Helen Chamberlin, Louise Harral, Helen Stover, Grace Chamberlin, Mabel Kiss and Lizzie Van Winkle.

Mrs. VanBrackle was in charge of the organ and Miss Mamie Clark at the piano. The committees: Miss C. R. Brokaw was chairman, her assistants being Miss F. G. Hawkins, Mrs. W. S. Lowry, Miss Elmira C. Runyon and George E. Hall.

The customary Children's Day observance was held at Maroonnier chapel Sunday. There were recitations and singing by the children, and flowers decorated the platform. Rev. George Watts, of Dover, spoke.

Besides special carols at Warren chapel, there were two recitations by as many pupils. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, of Grace P. R. church, was the speaker. He was introduced by Superintendent Andrews. Rev. Mr. McKelvey, the pastor, made the prayer. Daisies and white roses were used lavishly, and canaries in cages were hung about the Sunday-school room.

—The graduation exercises of the Whittier School will take place today.

MARRIED.

LOVELL—SEBASEY—Saturday, June 11, 1904, at Taunton, Mass., Beatrice M., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert S. Sebasey, to Harry Borden Lovell, of this city.

CLARK—CLARK—June 2, 1904, at Berkeley, California, Mrs. Blanche B. Clark, of Berkeley, to Frank L. Clark, of St. Louis.

DIED.

MOON—On Thursday, June 9, 1904, Sarah E., widow of Joseph D. Moon, in her 84th year.

HALL—Suddenly, on Wednesday, June 8, 1904, George Frank Hall, of Brooklyn, N. Y., aged 77 years.

TITSWORTH—At Denver, Col., June 7, 1904, Isaac Edward Titsworth, oldest son of the late Dr. Abel S. and Lucy Morgan Titsworth, aged 32 years.

TANNER—On Tuesday, June 14, 1904, Anna M., wife of Frederick Tanner.

FARLEY—On Tuesday, June 14, 1904, Achsah, widow of Richard R. Farley, aged 71 years, 3 months.

HARRIS—At Haddonfield, N. J., suddenly, June 13, 1904, Isaac C. Harris, aged 66 years.

Sanitary Plumbing

Brick and Portable Furnace Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing, Etc., Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class sanitary and workmanlike manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Plumbers Association of New York City, I employ none but first class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business, at all times and in cases.

D. W. LITTELL,

No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Handbook on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

NEW IN EVERY DETAIL

My new barber shop at

143 NORTH AVE.

is now open ready for business. All the latest appointments in the tonsorial line.

EDWIN B. MAYNARD.

CARNEY BROS.,

MADISON AVENUE,

Between Front and Second streets.

Tinners,
Plumbers
Gas Fitters,

Grates and bricks for all kinds of stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your tinware mending to us. The best tinners, the best plumbers, and the best gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction. Keys of all kinds are made here. Tinware made to order. Ranges, brick and portable furnaces. Sanitary plumbing.

DIME

Savings Institution,

Of Plainfield, N. J.,

Is now receiving deposits with interest, allowed on all sums from $5 to $3,000.

J. Frank Hubbard, President.
Wm. F. Arnold, } Vice-Pres
Jeremiah Manning, }
J. C. Pope, Sec'y and Treas.

Money deposited on or before January tenth will draw interest from the first.

Guaranteed Salary $900 YEARLY.

Men and women of good address to represent us; no canvassing; expenses advanced; pleasant position; liberal income and future. New, brilliant lines. Write at once.

STAFFORD PRESS, 23 Church St., New Haven, Conn

W. R. CODINGTON,

Counsellor-at-Law

Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-chancery, Notary Public. Offices Corner of Park avenue and Second street.

ALBERT HEDDEN

Livery & Boarding Stables

FOURTH ST.,

between Watchung and Park avenues. First-class Livery. Horses boarded by week or month. Telephone call No. 114.

Wm. A. Woodruff

Fire and Life

INSURANCE AGENT,

OFFICE,

Corner Front St. and Park Avenue, Plainfield, N. J.

AUTHOR OF HUMOR IN HIS FANWOOD HOME

A Sketch of Charles Battell Loomis, Who Has Made Millions Laugh.

HIS MANY BOOKS

STORY OF HIS CAREER PUBLISHED IN THE NEWARK NEWS.

Threw Up a Job As a Clerk to Write the Funny Things in Life—Has Contributed to Most of the Magazines.

The Newark Evening and Sunday News published the following sketch of Charles Battell Loomis, of Fanwood, in its issue of Sunday, May 29:

"Over in Fanwood lives Charles Battell Loomis, whose humorous writings have found their way at some time or other into almost every household in the land. The other day a reporter sought him out on his little 'farm' and, after a good deal of persuasion, got this doctor of fun to forget his books and tell him something about himself.

"Eighteen years ago Mr. Loomis made up his mind that the life of a clerk in the Nassau Gas Company's office in New York was not to his fancy, and that he could spend his days a good deal more profitably by letting others know of the funny things in the world. He was a graduate of the Polytechnic Institute. While yet a clerk he had sent some contributions to the comic weeklies and his donations found their way to the waste basket. In fact, it was six years before Mr. Loomis saw any of his stuff in type.

"When he threw up his job in the gas office, Mr. Loomis settled on a farm at Torrington, Litchfield county, Conn. He stayed there until five years ago, and during all that time he worked, not on the farm, for agriculture was no more his taste than clerking. He devoted his days to writing up funny things, or rather what he thought were funny things, to everyday life. Some of these got into print and others didn't. According to Mr. Loomis, most of them got no further than a discriminating editor's desk. Anyhow he made enough to live on and found time to give some readings—from other people's work.

"Not noticing anything in his general appearance to denote that he possessed any fund of wit, the correspondent asked him where his gifts came from. It was inherited. Yes, his grandfather, whose chief claim to fame lies in the fact that he was the first minister in Bangor, Me., was known as a man of quaint humor. In the Annals of the American Pulpit is the statement that Rev. Harvey Loomis, pastor of the Congregational church at Bangor during the early part of the nineteenth century, had a strong sense of humor.

"About 1887 many comic papers afforded space for his brightness. In addition to jokes, here and there among the flies of the comic papers, were short sketches from his pen. Since that time there has hardly been a magazine in the country which has not at some period contained more or less writings by the farmer-humorist.

"The newspapers have published a number of Mr. Loomis's articles, and at the present time the New York Herald is running some of his stories in its Sunday supplement. 'Jack's Adventure' appeared in that medium some time ago. 'The Yankee Enchantments' originally appeared in The Sun, and 'Tales of an Ugly Brass Lamp,' which has not been done into book form, came out in the New York Press.

"While grinding out for the magazines, he has found some time to devote to still more lucrative employment. In 1899 'Just Rhymes' was published by the house of R. H. Russell for him. The collection of verses took well, and Mr. Loomis hints that he realized enough to start his boys in the chicken raising business. He says that the little Loomises now raise both chickens and prices, and that he is the victim of their good care of footsteps, most of the birds being consumed at his table.

"A year later 'The Four-mated Cuckoot,' a collection of thirty odd humorous sketches, was issued. The book is named for the first story of the lot, and it, like all the others, is enjoyable to a degree. Although Mr. Loomis has contributed many tales for children to various magazine publishers, including St. Nicholas and The Youth's Companion, his first serious effort in this department of story writing is to be found in 'The Yankee Enchantments.' It appeared in 1900. The volume contains a number of bright little stories, which would captivate the interest of the average youth, and its sale shows that the author has a decided gift of telling children's stories.

"Mr. Loomis again ventured to relate stories for children a year ago, the product of his labor taking the name of 'A Partnership in Magic.' This was a somewhat lengthy tale, and it was proportionately clever. His last work is entitled 'Observful Americans,' a collection of humorous sketches. The material for this consisted of a group of observations by Mr. Loomis while he was abroad several years ago. It has been highly praised by book reviewers, and still commands a large sale. He has another work under way, which is likely to appear in the fall, but he is reluctant to talk about it.

"Like many writers he has reduced his work to a system and follows his schedule day by day. It is his custom to pass four mornings a week at his typewriter. That's where he does all his work, and it doesn't bother him a bit to have his children playing around the study while he is banging away at the keys. It might be mentioned that Mr. Loomis seldom makes any plans beforehand. When he sits down at his typewriter he grabs the machine and an idea about the same time. If the idea goes back on him, the Fanwood man takes his hat and goes out to the road leading past his house and whiles away his time. Then he seeks the company of the typewriting machine again. Usually he writes three or four stories or sketches a week, and, in addition, works up a few jokes just for the fun of it. Two days a week he is in New York. The afternoons he spends in the country, every now and then driving into Plainfield to do some shopping. The summer months are spent in Litchfield County, Conn., and while there he slakes up a bit on his work. He is a quick writer and always rewrites his articles at least once. His 'Partnership in Magic' is a work of 40,000 words, and the correspondent has his statement for it that the 'deed' was done in two weeks.

"In the fall Mr. Loomis intends to take a Southern trip and his time will be devoted to giving readings and recitations, mostly from his works. In the past he has been quite successful in drawing good audiences. He has scored decided hits in addressing the students at Columbia College, University of Michigan and at West Point. But he much prefers to be at home, surrounded by his wife and three children, Bastell, Alfred and Edith, three bright youngsters. His brother, Harvey Worthington Loomis, who lives in New York, has made a reputation as a composer of music. He is devoting his hours to harmonizing Indian melodies and is keeping up his task of composing vocal and instrumental selections."

Endeavor Social.

Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Searing, Jr., of Westervelt avenue, the borough, entertained the Christian Endeavor Society, of the First Presbyterian church, Thursday night, the members enjoying an informal entertainment and social. During the evening there were recitations by Miss Jessica Hill, vocal selections by Mrs. Ralph Miner and instrumental selections by Miss Pelton. Then followed the social and serving of refreshments. The affair was in charge of the social committee of the society, of which Miss Beatrice Miner is the chairman.

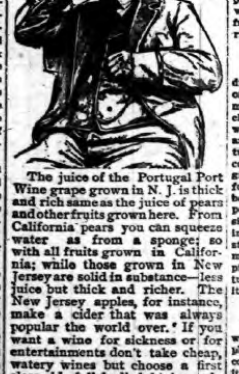
Why go to Coney or other distant points, when the Hotel Waldorf summer garden is running? All the joys of idling are there.

ALFRED SPEER,

THE ORIGINAL

Port Grape Wine Producer in America.

The first native wine sold and used in San Francisco and Sacramento was from Speer's Passaic, N. J., vineyards, was shipped around Cape Horn before there was any railroad to California, and are now being used by physicians and first families there as the richest and best wine to be had



The juice of the Portugal Port Wine grape grown in N. J. is thick and rich same as the juice of pears and other fruits grown here. From California years you can squeeze water as from a sponge; so with all fruits grown in California; while those grown in New Jersey are solid in substance—less juice but thick and richer. The New Jersey apples, for instance, make a cider that was always popular the world over." If you want a wine for sickness or for entertainments don't take cheap, watery wines but choose a first class old, full bodied, high grade wine from Speer's Passaic vineyards." Sold by Druggists.

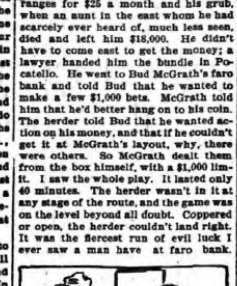
LOST LIKE A PRINCE.

THE GAMEST LOSER THAT EVER STRUCK GAMBLING JOINT.

Got Rid of $18,000 in One Hour and Then Went Back to Herding Sheep on a Ranch in Wyoming.

"There's no way of telling in advance how a man's going to take his complete wiping out in a game of chance," said a Wyoming man to a Washington Post reporter. "I've seen men of long-tested gameness go all to pieces after big losings; seen them suddenly struck speechless, his weak as children, with their lips trembling, like those of women, who are about to cry. On the other hand, I've seen chaps with low foreheads and weak chins and reputations for crawfishing and backing water in tight places, stand fortunes to the finishing wretches of long runs of devilish luck and take their bitter medicine with hearts apparently as brave as their faces were weak.

"The gamest loser I ever saw was a sheep herder, who didn't look to have enough character to stuff a gnat pelt. He was herding sheep on the Idaho edge ranges for $25 a month and his grub, when an aunt in the east whom he had scarcely ever heard of, much less seen, died and left him $18,000. He didn't have to come east to get the money; a lawyer handed him the bundle in Pocatello. He went to Bud McGrath's faro bank and told Bud that he wanted to make a few $1,000 bets. McGrath told him that he'd better hang on to his coin. The herder told Bud that he wanted action on his money, and that if he couldn't get it at McGrath's layout, why, there were others. So McGrath dealt them from the box himself, with a $1,000 limit. I saw the whole play. It lasted only 40 minutes. The herder wasn't in it at any stage of the route, and the game was on the level beyond all doubt. Coppered or open, the herder couldn't land right. It was the fiercest run of evil luck I ever saw a man have at faro bank.



"I'VE HAD MY WHIZZ."

When the herder had lost $13,000, McGrath said to him:

"'You'd better pinch out the remaining $5,000—give yourself a chance.'

"'You hand me out another boxful,' replied the herder. 'When I get enough I'll be broke.'

"The man was perfectly cool and collected, and he laid down his last five $1,000 bills without a tremor. He picked four straight losers. By that time the box was nearly out. The herder put down his last $1,000 note in an effort to call the turn. He lost out.

"'Son,' said McGrath to the sheepherder. 'I'm no hog. I'll just cut it in two with you,' and he began to count half of the money that he had won from the herder.

"'No, you won't,' replied the herder, 'but you can give me a drink and a bottle to put in my pocket.'

"'Better take a couple thousand, anyhow, and run to Frisco or Denver, and have a whizz for yourself,' persisted McGrath.

"'I've had my whizz,' was the man's reply. He wasn't sulky at all, and he didn't try to look abused. He was simply all man and all game.

"'Where are you bound for now?' asked McGrath, after setting out the drinks and a pocket bottle.

"'Back to the old Circle-X,' said the herder, and he started for the ranch an hour later. He had bought three blue flannel shirts, a pair of top boots and a poncho, and he took these things along with him in a bundle. He was found frozen stiff on the bank of the Snake river next winter."

Electro-Magnet in Surgery.

At Salt Lake City, Utah, a nail was drawn from a point close to the heart of Louise Cherry, age 16 months, by means of an electro magnet. The child put the nail in its mouth two weeks ago, while playing on its back, and drew it into one of the bronchial tubes. The exact location was discovered by means of an X-ray skiograph. Dr. A. J. Hosmer, who performed the operation, decided it would be fatal to cut through the chest. Experiments on a dog showed it impossible to extract the nail by ordinary instruments. A long, curved piece of steel, attached to a powerful electro magnet, was pushed down the windpipe. As soon as the current was turned on the nail became attached to it and was withdrawn.

New Way of Dressing Wounds.

Parisian surgeons now dress wounds with silver leaf. The silver is carefully placed on the wound or ulcer, and as cotton soaked in collodion is sufficient it sticks closely to the surface, a little to keep it in place. The effects of this sheet of silver are said to be very beneficial.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week notes of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these selections of more service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

Public Library Notes.

Fifty best books of 1903.

The New York State library gives the results of the vote taken by librarians on its annual list of best books of the year past, in the following list of fifty titles, recommended as the best books for a village library. These titles are given in the order of their popularity as shown by the votes.

Fox, Little shepherd of Kingdom Come.
Wiggin, Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm.
Keller, Story of my Life.
Ward, Lady Rose's daughter.
London, Call of the wild.
Rice, Lovey Mary.
Norris, The pit.
Morley, Life of Gladstone.
Smith, Colonel Carter's Christmas.
Baker, Boys' second book of inventions.
Page, Gordon Keith.
Seton, Two little savages.
Ely, A woman's hardy garden.
Crawford, Heart of Rome.
Kipling, Five nations.
Deland, Dr. Lavendar's people.
Gordon, Reminiscences of the Civil War.
Lang, Crimson fairy book.
Brooks, Social unrest.
Earle, Two centuries of costume in America, 1620-1820.
Williamson, The lightning conductor.
Hoar, Autobiography of seventy years.
Van Vorst, The woman who toils.
Baker, Descriptive guide to the best fiction.
Pyle, Story of King Arthur and his knights.
Allen, Mettle of the pasture.
Kelley, Three hundred things a bright girl can do.
Barbour, Weatherby's inning.
Chapman, Color key to North American birds.
Lee, Dictionary of National biography.
White, The forest.
Trent, History of American literature, 1607 1865.
Garland, Hesper.
Lee, Queen Victoria.
Mitchell, Organized labor.
Parker and Bryan, Old Quebec.
Sturgis, How to judge architecture.
Webster, When Patty went to college.
Bell, Wee Macgreegor.
Keller, Our northern shrubs.
People of the whirlpool.
Abbott, Henry Ward Beecher.
Bostock, Training of wild animals.
Brownbar, Danish life in town and country.
Bryce, Studies in contemporary biography.
Carpenter, John Greenleaf Whittier.
Lothrop, Five little Peppers at school.
Tarkington, Cherry.
Brownell, Heart of Japan.
Clarke, Care of a house.
Clement, Handbook of modern Japan.
Orothers, Gentle reader.
Hammer, Radium and other radioactive substances.
Long, A little brother to the bear.
VanDyke, Meaning of pictures.

The greater number of the above are in the Public Library, or are likely soon to be added.

NO SPECIAL ELECTION NOW

JUDGE LANNING'S SUCCESSOR AS REPRESENTATIVE TO BE CHOSEN.

Governor Murphy has received the resignation of Judge William M. Lanning, of the United States district court, as representative in Congress from the Fourth district.

The resignation brought up the question whether the Governor would have to call a special election to choose Judge Lanning's successor.

The Governor says he does not wish to do so unless it becomes absolutely necessary, as he desires to save the heavy expense it would entail. The matter has been referred to the attorney general.

Attorney General McCarter said that as an offhand impression he does not believe a special election to choose Mr. Lanning's successor is necessary. He takes this view because there is no change in congressional districts as there was in the Salmon case, and therefore no legal necessity to go to the expense of a special election.

Timbo's restaurant on North avenue is the mecca for hungry folks with great big appetites or those who want a simple lunch. The food is always the best and the service is par excellent.

A CONFEDERATE IDOL.

Southern Veterans Pay Tribute to Girl Who Wouldn't Sing "Marching Through Georgia."

The confederacy has a sweetheart. Every veteran who followed the stars and bars vows fealty to a 14-year-old Kentucky girl, Laura Talbot Galt, of Louisville, Ky.

The devotion of confederates to her is one of the notable incidents in the history of the army of the south. For a year now she has been given every tribute the veterans could pay. She has been the guest at encampments throughout the south and has received medals and other tokens of esteem. Nearly every camp in the United Confederate Veterans' association has passed resolutions in her honor, and there is now under way a movement to name her the Daughter of the Confederacy, the title once held by Winnie Davis.

There is one song which grates on southern ears, that is "Marching

LAURA TALBOT GALT.
(Louisville Girl Who Is the Idol of Southern Veterans.)

Through Georgia." To every confederate it sounds like the pean of a triumphant foe.

Consequently, when Laura Talbot Galt last spring refused to sing this song, which somehow or other had crept into the melodies of her class in school, and this refusal caused an official investigation in the Louisville public schools, confederates were greatly pleased. Such a decided method of showing resentment struck their fancy.

Since then it has been impossible for little Miss Galt to accept all the invitations to attend reunions and confederate gatherings. The last reunion she attended was that of the Georgia confederates, at which a movement to have her made "Daughter of the Confederacy" received a great impetus, and some think it likely that this crowning mark of recognition will be hers.

Meanwhile Laura Talbot Galt, unspoiled by the praises she has received, is going to school in Louisville. She lives with her grandmother, Mrs. Ross, in a suburb of the city.

It is worthy to note that through the Ross branch of her family Laura Talbot Galt is related to Betsy Ross, who made the first American flag.

HORACE NEWTON ALLEN.

American Minister to Corea Is Thoroughly Familiar with the Affairs of That Country.

Horace Newton Allen, who is Uncle Sam's minister to Corea, figures to some extent in the troubles that now beset the ruler of the country. Minister Allen is well known in Chicago, having been in charge of the Corean exhibit at the Columbian world's fair. He was a medical missionary of the Presbyterian church before he became a diplomat, and for a time was a physician in the palace at Seoul. Minister Allen brought the first Corean mission to Washington, and was made minister resident and consul general in 1897, being promoted to his present position in 1901. He was born at Delaware, O., April 23, 1859, and was educated in the Ohio Wesleyan university, and at Miami medical college. Emperor Heui-Yi is about 15 years older than Minister Allen. He ascended the throne in 1864 and was satisfied with the title of king until 1897, when he declared himself emperor, and takes great pride in the title. His wife, known as Empress Om, is said to be not a native Corean, but the daughter of a Protestant missionary. The residence of Minister Allen at Seoul, which is now guarded by marines from the gunboat Pittsburg, differs little from other dwellings in the Corean capital. It is one story high, built of brick, with a bamboo roof, but is in a rather exposed position, should a riot or insurrection take place.

HORACE NEWTON ALLEN.
(Minister of the United States at Seoul, Corea.)

CONGRESSIONAL CALIBRE LACKING IN THOMPSON

Former Senator of Somerset County Has Not the Qualifications to Represent District.

STRONG OPPOSITION

STATE GAZETTE OF TRENTON DISCUSSES HIS CANDIDACY.

Intimates That He Puts Personal Interests Above Those of His Party—Not Known in the District.

The Daily State Gazette, Republican, of Trenton, does not think that former State Senator Lewis A. Thompson, of Somerville, is of congressional calibre and consequently it is opposed to any boom which has for its object his selection as successor to Judge Lanning. The Trenton paper says editorially:

"The Times suggests that if Somerset County is disposed to present a man for Congress to succeed William M. Lanning, it thrust to the fore Lewis A. Thompson.

"Mr. Thompson is remembered as a passive member of the Legislature, who has more or less influence in Somerset County but who has not always held the interests of his party above personal interests.

"Mr. Thompson undoubtedly has the character necessary to the office of Congressman, but there is good reason to doubt that he measures up to that position fully.

"He has made whatever success in life he enjoys in the millinery business and no doubt, understands it from a to izzard, but when the Fourth district selects a man to succeed William M. Lanning in Congress, it should be one of force and capable of holding his own with the representatives of any other Congressional district in the United States.

"There are such men in the Fourth Congressional district and they would, we believe, accept the nomination. Mr. Thompson has not an impressive personality. He is not a man who is capable of going among strangers and blazing his way into popular favor. He is undoubtedly a good and conscientious man, but the office of representative in Congress calls for more than that.

"Outside of Somerset County, Mr. Thompson is not known. The Times says that he was for several years engaged in business in Trenton, but we venture the opinion that not one per cent. of the people of Trenton ever heard of him.

"There is nothing in this speculation that should weigh against Mr. Thompson's character, citizenship or ability, so far as the ordinary affairs of business go, but the man nominated for Congressman by the Republican party next fall should be one capable of making votes either by coming in personal contact with voters or by influencing them from the public platform.

"Mr. Thompson would be weak in either position."

HORACE A. WOODWARD WEDS

PLAINFIELDER TAKES PHILADELPHIA GIRL AS HIS BRIDE.

Miss Helen Lee Schiedt, daughter of Mrs. Jacob Arnold Schiedt, of Germantown, Philadelphia, and Horace Arthur Woodward, of this city, were married Tuesday, June 7, at 4 o'clock in St. Peter's church, Wayne avenue and Harvey street, Germantown, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. The ceremony was performed by the assistant rector of the church, Rev. Mr. Hayden.

The bride was attended by her sisters, Miss Alice Schiedt, as bridesmaid and Gladys Schiedt as flower girl. The best man was Percival G. Browne, of this city, and the ushers were Carlos C. Gallup, of this city and Mr. Rees, of Philadelphia.

Following the wedding, a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, 1211 Morris avenue, Germantown, there being over 150 present. The affair was attended by many pleasant features. Mr. and Mrs. Woodward are now enjoying a two weeks' honeymoon and upon their return they will live in New York.

The groom is well-known here, having been employed by Frank W. Rowley, the druggist for several years. He now holds a very responsible position as chemist for G. B. Seely's Sons, 319 West Fifteenth street, New York. The bride is a graduate of Bryn Mawr College, and is an accomplished young woman. They have the best wishes of their many friends. The bride was the recipient of many gifts of value and use. Among the guests at the wedding was a number of friends from this city.

MISS L. F. CHAMBERLIN WEDS MAURICE F. ANSON

Ceremony Takes Place at the Home of Bride's Parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Chamberlin.

TWO HUNDRED PRESENT

MISS KATHARINE BACH, OF NEW YORK, AS BRIDESMAID.

Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey Officiates —George Ianson, of Somerville, Best Man—The Couple to Reside Here.

Beneath a floral bower and surrounded by friends and relatives, Miss Lottie Frances Chamberlin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Chamberlin, of East Third street, was married to Maurice J. Anson at 8 o'clock Wednesday night, June 8.

The parlor was handsomely decorated and the bower, where the ceremony was performed, was draped with one large American flag, while another of fine silk and heavily fringed, formed the back of this beautiful nook, which was completely banked in with a mass of ferns and palms.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel. The bride's gown was of point d'esprit over white silk, while the bridesmaid, Miss Katherine Bach, of New York, wore white albatross and the flower girl, Miss Marion Miller, wore white organdie. When the bride left for the train she was tastefully costumed in a travelling dress of pongee silk.

The bridesmaid and flower girl received hand-painted gauze fans from the bride, while the groom's gifts to the best man, George Ianson, of Somerville, and the ushers, Joseph Stevens and Robert Ianson, of Plainfield, and Clarence Chamberlin, of Westfield, consisted of gold sleeve links in the design of friendship knots.

The bride received a large number of valuable and handsome articles of china, glassware, linen, silver and furniture, among which were a silver service from Old Glory Council, Daughters of Liberty, in which organization the bride stood Councilor, and an elaborate and expensive skirt from her employers factory, made under his personal supervision.

After the ceremony, the guests, who numbered nearly two hundred, were treated to a bountiful collation which Caterer Fred Covely had prepared. After a long and enjoyable evening, the assembly broke up and the happy pair left for Philadelphia and Atlantic City to be gone some time. On boarding the 1:17 train, however, they discovered that some of their friends had come to give them an introduction to their fellow-passengers, which they did by means of posters which they distributed through the train. These posters were printed with the words "We have just been married."

Mr. and Mrs. Anson will return here in two weeks or less and establish their residence here.

MISS E. G. TURNEY A BRIDE

WASHINGTONVILLE BELLE WEDS FREDERICK W. HOSE, OF NEWARK.

Miss Elizabeth Gilmore Turney, of Washingtonville, and Frederick William Hose, of Newark, were married June 8, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs Samuel J. Kuiss, Washingtonville, by Rev. Isaac B. Hopewood, pastor of the Calvary Presbyterian church, Newark. There were many guests present from this city, Washingtonville and vicinity and Newark. The house was attractively decorated with flowers and greens.

The bride and groom were unattended. The bride's wedding gown was of crepe de chine, while her travelling gown was of blue voile over taffeta. After the ceremony a reception was held and supper was served. Later Mr. and Mrs. Hose left for the two months' wedding trip which will be spent at Bar Harbor and in Canada.

The groom is engaged in Newark as a grocer and both he and his wife are popular in a large circle of friends. They received a great many gifts from relatives and friends.

SI DRAKE'S OFFER.

Postmaster of Lincoln Offers Land for Normal School Building.

Silas Dewey Drake has offered a State Normal School site at Lincoln, free of all charge, to the State Board of Education. He has written Judge Scott, head of the Board, that he will give a site as large as is desired. He has requested the committee to inspect the site "before closing deal elsewhere as much expense to the State."

ANNUAL INSPECTION OF CO. K, SECOND REGT.

Col. Bullman and Major Dungan Review Plainfield's Soldier Boys at Their Armory.

EXCELLENT DRILLING

CROWD WITNESSES THE MILITIA'S MANEUVERS.

Col. Bullman Praises Captain Martin's Men—The Company May Get One Hundred Per Cent. for Attendance.

Company K, Second Regiment, N. G. N. J., was inspected at its armory Thursday by Col. Bullman, of Governor Murphy's staff and Major Nelson Y. Dungan, of Somerville.

It is expected that the company will receive a mark of 100 per cent. for attendance last night as the absence were only four in number and two of those had leave.

After the inspection of clothing, the new chevrons for the khaki uniforms were issued to the non-commissioned officers.

A large number of friends of the members were present to witness their execution of the drill manoeuvers and manual of arms. In this portion of the work the men showed up almost like regulars, their motions and step being in perfect unison.

Capt. Martin's command was highly complimented in the remarks of Col. Bullman to a Daily Press reporter after the drill was over.

EXCHANGE'S BIG BUSINESS

WOMEN'S ORGANIZATION PAYS OUT $10,000 TO 140 CONSIGNORS.

The great amount of good accomplished by the Plainfield Woman's Exchange is shown in the annual report of the treasurer, just presented for the past year. It shows that there were about 140 consignors to the exchange during the year and that nearly $10,000 was paid to them for their work. This represents a large amount of work and the members are glad to be able to assist so many persons. Of this sum the exchange receives 10 per cent., which is used to pay rent, salaries and other expenses. A great many times the members are obliged to go down in their pockets to assist, the receipts not being sufficient to meet them. During the past few months several luncheons have been given and in this way money is secured to help in the work.

Thursday afternoon at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Clubhouse, a successful luncheon was held under the auspices of the exchange. There were 108 persons present. Owing to the disagreeable weather the small tables were placed inside. They were in charge of the members of the executive board, including Mrs. C. T. Waring, Mrs. Julia M. VanBuren, Mrs. Hugh Hastings, Miss Elizabeth R. Cook and Mrs. R. M. Stover. The tables were decorated with flowers and made attractive and the luncheon served by Mrs. Hellstrom was satisfactory in every respect.

After the luncheon the afternoon was spent in playing cards, there being an interesting game of bridge whist. It was about 4 o'clock when the women left the clubhouse and all agreed that the affair was one of the best of the series.

Graduated From Normal.

Among those who were graduated Friday from the State Normal School at Trenton, are theen young women from this city and the borough: Miss Nettie L. Banersache and Miss Elizabeth Cameron Davenport, kindergarten, North Plainfield; Miss Daisy May Brossard and Miss Alice M. Brick, Plainfield.

Westfield's Full Schedule.

According to the Elizabeth Journal, Westfield's Saturday schedule is filled for the season, but the team is willing to play a series of Wednesday games with the Elizabeth Y. M. C. A. team on the association grounds and will accept as a guarantee actual expenses.

Touring in an Auto.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Foster, of New Haven, were guests of Mrs. Foster's sister, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Bowen, of Watchung avenue. They made the trip to Plainfield in their automobile. During the summer they will tour about the country in the machine and they will visit Niagara Falls.

Rev. Dr. Karp Returns.

Rev. Dr. E. L. Karp, of the Grace M. E. church, who has been attending commencement exercises at Syracuse University, as the representative of the Newark Conference, returned to his home in Park place, Thursday night.

HELD STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL

TRINITY'S LADIES' CHRISTIAN WORK SOCIETY SCORES A SUCCESS.

Unfavorable weather could not prevent the success of the annual strawberry and ice cream festival of the Ladies' Christian Work Society, of Trinity Reformed church, Thursday. Despite the chill and the forbidding clouds, the affair was well attended. It passed off delightfully, as such a success socially as financially.

Pretty decorations transformed the lecture room of the church, where the affair was held, into a most inviting bower. Flowers, real and paper, were used lavishly with most attractive effect. Garlands hung from all the chandeliers, and palms basked the back of the platform. Jars of cut flowers of various kinds were on each of the nine tables set for the guests. Broad strips of bunting hung from pillar to pillar.

There was a charming programme of entertainment. Miss Etta Maybert and Miss May Randolph played a piano duet; Mrs. Fraser, of Elizabeth, rendered two readings, and Edward Young played cornet solos, accompanied by Miss Randolph. All the numbers were thoroughly enjoyed, and encores were insisted upon.

In addition to the ice cream and berries, there was candy, cake and lemonade to tempt the guests. The candy table was in charge of Mrs. Anna Leggett, assisted by Mrs. G. W. Cole and Mrs. Edward VanWinkle. The cake table was presided over by Mrs. Henry VanName, assisted by Mrs. Julia Williams. Miss Grace Emmons was in charge of the lemonade.

These young women served as waitresses: Misses May VanFleet, Grace Rowland, Elizabeth Davenport, Minnie Wyman, Ada VanDoren, Eva Dunavan, Nettie Kriebig, Jessie Garthwaite, Kate Bodine, Lida Wyman, Florence Bennett.

The general committee on the festival was made up of Mrs. H. B. Paul, chairman; Mrs. Peter Emmons, Mrs. Salmon Baker, Mrs. Seaman Williams, Mrs. G. Q. Dolliver, Mrs. Winfield Schomp. The decorations were placed by Mrs. John VanDyke, assisted by Miss Grace Emmons and A. E. Smith. Mrs. Leggett arranged the programme.

The reception committee consists of Mrs. Mary Disborough, Mrs. B. D. Newell, Mrs. E. A. Parse and Mrs. M E Karshaw.

MISS L. A. CLAWSON A BRIDE

SHE BECOMES MRS. ASA F. RANDOLPH AT A CHURCH WEDDING.

Before a large gathering of friends and relatives, Miss Louella A. Clawson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Clawson, of West Seventh street, and Asa F. Randolph, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Randolph, of Park avenue, were married Thursday in the Seventh-Day Baptist church, at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. George Shaw, the pastor, performed the ceremony. The church platform was decorated with smilax, dalsies and ferns.

The bride was given away by her father. She was attended by Miss Dora Tomlinson, of New York. Charles M. Dolliver was best man. The ushers were Orra S. Rogers, Dr. Marc Clawson, of this city; Henry L. Maxson, of New York, and Alfred Holmes, of Brooklyn. Holmes Clawson and Witter Clawson, youthful nephews of the bride, carried a basket of flowers in the bridal procession. They strewed flowers down the aisle as the party retired after the ceremony.

The bride was dressed in chiffon, with a tulle veil, caught up with a spray of orange blossoms. The bridesmaid wore mousseline de soie, with applique trimmings.

A small reception, for the relatives and out-of-town guests, was held at the home of Dr. Frank Clawson, of West Seventh street, after the marriage. At 10 o'clock the bridal couple left for an extended trip. Their destination has been kept a secret.

MARTIN ACT SALE TODAY

COLLECTOR SMITH TO DISPOSE OF TEN DELINQUENT PROPERTIES.

There are about ten delinquent properties remaining to be sold by Collector Frank H. Smith today under the provisions of the Martin Act. In connection with these sales a strange fact is noticed. At the first sale the bids amounted to about $3,100 over the amount of the city's claim, something unexpected. When the owner wants to redeem his property he will be obliged to pay this extra sum. In Newark recently the bids were run up so high that it startled the officials and they are helpless in the matter, there being no law to prevent it. At Camden the collector is selling such properties by wards.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

June 19: "Rising Above Discouragement."—II Cor. iv, 7-18—Salvation Through Suffering.

Freedom from difficulty cannot be secured in this life. Nor is it the course of wisdom to seek to escape from the burdens and cares common to all. Pain must be the lot of one endowed with nerves. To use anaesthetics whenever a twinge of pain is felt is to deprive oneself eventually of all experience of pleasurable sensation as well as of the suffering.

Strength, fortitude, endurance, the sterner qualities of nature, are as essential as the milder virtues. Nothing so develops robustness in soul as well as in body as the necessity for grappling with troubles and mastering them. Softness and needless self indulgence unfit us for the enjoyment of life as well as for its tasks.

The sources of our perplexities are manifold. Some arise from the necessary constitution of things, some from our own makeup and some from the actions of others. Some can be cured; a few can never be wholly removed.

Our strongest temptation is to become discouraged. This is disastrous, since courage and confidence are indispensable elements of success in any operation. The discouraged soul is two-thirds defeated. It is a wanton which is more to be feared than any outside opposition. It is a foe within the stronghold opening the gates to the enemy without. It may lead to fatal panic from which there is no recovery.

Oftentimes our depression of spirits is the result of overwork, mental or bodily, and simply means low nervous vitality. Then the remedy is to build up the body and brain and use all the resources at hand to be full of courage. To imagining ourselves as unspiritual and evil of heart. The strength of Christian Science lies in a truth which has been unfortunately neglected by Christians too largely. Rescue this and the fanaticism which does do much harm. Many a discouraged pastor will do wisely if, when he finds everything turning dark to his vision, he will take that long deferred vacation and rest himself. When he gets his strength back to normal he will find the trouble was in the way he looked at things.

We are to bear things in this world. We are to learn patience through the things we suffer. Companionship in suffering is better than shielding another from all pain. Even Jesus did not bear all life's anguish for us. Paul glories in being able to fill up that which was lacking and to "know the fellowship of His suffering."

We faint not because we know our Father is bringing many sons to glory made the Captain of their salvation perfect through suffering," and He purifies by suffering every son whom He receives. In every time of trial we can be assured that all is working for us the very best possible results.

We need not say that pain is sweet, but we can say exultantly "we would rather suffer with Christ than enjoy all things without Him."

Our strength and hope lie in getting and keeping close to Him. He knows the way we take, and after we have suffered awhile may He bring us into Himself—serene, deep, full, abiding.

"God is in His heaven; all's right with the world."

The Chariots of God.

I have not a shadow of doubt that if all our eyes could be opened today we should see our homes and our places of business and the streets we traverse filled with the "chariots of God." There is no need for any one of us to walk for lack of chariots. That cross lineman or telegraph boy who has hitherto made life a burden to you and who has been the Juggernaut car to crush your soul into the dust may henceforth be a glorious chariot to carry you to the heights of heavenly patience and peace through suffering. That mis-understanding, that mortification, that unkindness, that disappointment, that loss, that defeat—all these are chariots waiting to carry you to the very heights of victory you have so longed to reach. Only remember, then, with full faith, hearts and base sight of all second causes in the shining of His love, who will carry you in His arms safely and triumphantly over it all.—H. W. Smith.

"Peace."

There is no respite to the Lord's soldiers, but in their hearts all through the war there is peace which passeth all understanding. It is grace, mercy and peace to each forgiven soul. They are in the kingdom which is righteousness and peace and joy even when fighting in the whole panoply of God, and when for them the fighting is over, their bit of victory accomplished, the victor's crown in sight and only death, the last enemy to be conquered easily and without effort, conquered for them by their Saviour, what peace that passeth understanding fills their souls! They look back on the old years of struggle and forward to the new and timeless year of the Father's eternal presence.—Independent.

Our Only Assurance.

A covenant or promise of God is our only assurance for the future life. In our straits, in trial or affliction, under the cop's number. That was the end of the chase.

"What's it all about?" asked Haggerty of the breathless bride.

"He struck me," she said, "and we quarreled, and we've only been married since November. He struck me because I asked him for some money to buy clothes."

"You do need clothes, madam," interrupted Haggerty, holding his helmet before his eyes as he spoke.

White Elephants Are Scarce.

Only 24 white elephants have been captured since the beginning of the Christian era. This is the declaration of a noted elephant catcher of India.

BRIDE AFTER HUBBY

EXCITING CHASE WHICH DARED ALL BEHOLDERS.

Young Wife, Sans Gown, Pursues Her Husband Up the Side of a Cliff —Patrolman Haggerty Is Balked.

There was an open exhibit of lingerie at New York the other morning that beat anything the dressmakers' show charged half a dollar to see, and it was free to all Harlem.

A domestic quarrel which began in an apartment house at 14 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street was adjourned to the sidewalk so quickly that Mrs. Martin Spiehler, a bride, didn't have time to put on all her clothes without losing a few words on her side of the argument.

She didn't lose a word, but chased her young husband down three flights of stairs and into the street just as she was. Although, according to a member of the Kingsbridge Yacht club, the bride was quick in stays, she could not catch her husband, and gave it up after a run of three blocks, and after the cop who joined her had tried to drag the wrong man off a Madison avenue car, thinking that he was the fugitive husband.

Spiehler, the bridegroom, wore a long rain coat buttoned all the way down. What he had on or didn't have on under that nobody seemed to know, but up to a late hour last night he had not returned for more clothes.

Mrs. Spiehler wore a straight front corset, a short white petticoat with three or four ruffles, which served the purpose of insertion, black stockings and high button shoes. For further details see any department store advertisement of bargains in muslin goods.

Spiehler plunged down the high stoop of the apartment house and dodged round the corner into Fifth avenue, with his wife in close pursuit. She was dressed just right for sprinting, and would have caught up if her husband hadn't dodged into Mount Morris park and taken to the path that winds round and round to the top of the big rock elevation. The road wasn't built for a bridal path, and that may have helped Spiehler.

BEGINNING OF THE CHASE.

By this time there was an audience and a host of voluntary pursuers led by Policeman Haggerty.

"I'm no cop," said Haggerty, as the chase led up the steep face of the rock. "I'll surround the bowlder and wait for the lady and gentleman to come down."

The citizens of Harlem helped Haggerty surround the rock and watched the meeting bridegroom and the sprinting bride as they appeared and disappeared in their spiral ascent.

"They'll throw each other from the precipice," shouted a man who was getting late for work, but didn't seem to care.

"Officer, you must form a human chain at once," said a woman.

"What for?" said Haggerty.

"Didn't you ever go to the theater? Did you ever see a piece where the gentleman throws the lady from a rock without the police forming a human chain?"

Just then the bridegroom reached the summit, dodged through a little pavilion up there, and started down the path again just as the wife reached the summit on the other side. She stopped to get her breath, and that lost her the race, for on the trip down the bridegroom beat her by two laps and a half around the hill. He also eluded Policeman Haggerty and dodged through the crowd in the park to Madison avenue, where he boarded a car.

"He got on a car," yelled some one as Haggerty came up.

The policeman jumped aboard the wrong car (there was a string of them), and nabbed a man who looked like the young husband.

He had persuaded his prisoner to come as far as the rear platform when Mrs. Spiehler, standing on the curb in her short petticoat, said that that wasn't her husband at all.

Haggerty let go, and the man who had been disturbed got so interested in the chase and the bride that he forgot to take the cop's number. That was the end

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning June 19.

Topic—What Paul teaches about rising above discouragement.—II Cor. v, 7-18.

Few lives, perhaps no life, have ever been lived into which discouragement did not come. Sometimes the discouragements are temporal, and sometimes they are spiritual. The mere obtaining of a livelihood is to thousands beset with discouragements. If every person now living and every one remembered of even the necessities of life—home, food and raiment—for all the days of his life, to how many discouragement would give place to hope and joy! The struggle for existence is such a bitter one that, directly and indirectly, it brings discouragements to many. And when we strive to do more than exist, to accomplish a great work in life, to realize a fond and cherished dream, how often discouragements beat thick and fast upon us! The same conditions exist in the spiritual realm of life. No child of God ever tried to serve Him without meeting with discouragements. "The natural heart is enmity against God," and it is hard to go against nature. The environments of life are not favorable conducive to spiritual growth. "Is this poor world a friend of grace to help us on to God?" No one has ever found it so. Nor shall we. Christianity is a struggle. It is following Christ, who traveled a steep and rugged road; it is taking up the cross even as He took it up and carried it to Calvary.

But in spite of the varied and manifold discouragements of life we need not despair, for we can rise above them. Some think not and fall beneath them without making an effort to rise above them. Others try to do so in their own strength and do not meet with signal success, but Paul teaches us that there is a way by which we may rise above the discouragements of life. In the apostle spoke from an abundant experience. He had demonstrated his theories in his own life. He was no pessimist preaching optimism; he was no novice, declaring in ignorance that which he knew nothing about. He knew from experience, and therefore he spoke. For he says that he was "troubled on every side, yet not distressed; perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed." What an array of discouragements—troubles, perplexities, persecutions and depressions—and yet the apostle arose above them all. His troubles were not allowed to distress him; he did not despair because of his perplexities; he was persecuted, but did not for his sake him, nor did he succumb to depression, whether it was mental or spiritual. He arose triumphantly above all adversities, and so may and should we.

But Paul also teaches us how we may arise above our discouragements. (1) By the power of God. Prayerful trust in God is absolutely essential to success in this life. "We can do nothing only by "leaning on the everlasting arms." (2) By keeping in mind that if we suffer with Christ we shall also reign with Him. "We are always delivered unto death for Jesus' sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh." (3) By remembering the relations between the temporal and eternal. Our afflictions are light in comparison to the eternal joys they work out for us. Too many of us only see the temporal. Paul kept his eyes upon the eternal and was supported by looking "not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal."

BIBLE READINGS.

Josh. i, 1-7; Ps. xxvii, 1-6; xlvi, 1; cvii, 1-8; Isa. xxvi, 1-4; Matt. vi, 25-34; John xiv, 1-3, 27; I. Cor. xv, 57, 58; Gal. vi, 9; Rev. ii, 10.

In Brazil.

The Brazilian Christian Endeavor union publishes a monthly bulletin of its work. In addition to many pages of news and notes it has a concise exposition of the weekly prayer meeting topic, the same topics being used as by the societies in English speaking countries. The past year has seen an increase of 100 per cent in the number of Christian Endeavor societies in Brazil, and they now have over 2,000 members.

With Foreign Flavor.

Rev. Carey Bonner is drilling a choir of 1,200 voices for the coming British Christian Endeavor convention in London.

The Kensington Baptist Endeavorers of Liverpool, England, recently took more than 200 waifs on a river excursion and gave them refreshments and toys.

Items That Interest.

The three live Endeavor societies of the First Presbyterian church, Colorado Springs, Colo., are carrying on a mission Sunday school in a tent. The Juniors and Intermediates recently distributed more than sixty baskets of fruit and flowers, the result of a harvest home festival, in the hospitals, sanitariums and sickrooms of the city. The church has been without a pastor for months, but not one feature of the work has lagged, and the pastor who goes will find 200 loyal Endeavorers ready to do his bidding.

The Samoan union of Christian Endeavor now has 31 societies and 2,066 members.

The 1,700 English Baptist Endeavor societies are asked to take up as their special work the providing of a new missionary steamer for the upper Kongo, at a cost of $35,000.

A Christian Endeavor society of 100 members has been organized at the Italian Presbyterian mission, Tenth street, above Washington, Philadelphia.

BABE'S BODY FOUND IN LOT

Boy Picks Up Bundle Containing Remains of An Infant Weighing 10 Pounds.

INDICATES AWFUL DEED

Supposed That Child Was Born Alive, and Was Then Thrown in a Field on Grove Street, Where It Was Discovered by the Lad.

While playing ball in the lot at the corner of Grove street and Greenbrook road, on June 8, twelve-year-old George Benson, son of Andrew Benson, of Duer street, found a bulky parcel, carefully wrapped in paper and containing the body of an infant of normal size and weight.

The lad and his mates took the package to the edge of Stouv brook and opened it, and ran to tell their elders.

The Benson boy spoke to his grandfather, Martin Benson, of 218 Grove street, and he saw where the object lay, as it lay exposed on a roughly made sort of cheesecloth quilt padded with cotton and newspapers. As indications pointed to a serious crime, he despatched one of the boys to notify Chief Marshal George Weiss. Mr. Benson believes the child to have been born alive.

Chief Marshal Weiss heard nothing of the matter until 9 o'clock Wednesday evening, when Herman Klinsman, son of Herman Klinsman, of Harrison street, told Chief Weiss of the discovery.

Chief Meiss hastened to the spot and found that the water rats infesting the brook had made a clean sweep of the remains and even started to devour the quilt.

No clue has been afforded thus far to lead to the identity of the person who left the bundle at the place where it was found.

DESIGN FOR NEW SCHOOL

ARCHITECTUALLY STRUCTURE IS TO CONFORM WITH OLD BUILDING.

Architect A. L. C. Marsh laid rough plans for the new school house before the borough School Board at a special meeting Friday. The plans, while not at all complete, were detailed enough to show the general plan of the structure, and enable the board to arrive at a definite idea of what the building is to look like.

In design the structure is to be exactly like the present building, harmonizing thoroughly with its lines. The main entrance is to be what is known architecturally as a "tower entrance." There are to be seven class rooms and one large room for use as a library. This library room may be used as a reception room. In addition to the eight large rooms there is to be an office for the principal.

The board ordered $500 into Collector George F. Brown's hands for the first payment on the lot. The balance, $5,000, will not fall due until July 13.

It is expected that Architect Marsh will submit complete plans and specifications in two weeks. As soon thereafter as possible actual work on the building will be started, and the contract will be rushed to a finish.

One of the board members said last night that he expected to see the building open to use by early spring next year.

Suit on Contract.

Mrs. Jane De Mott, of Somerset street, has been sued on contract by W. H. Abbott, for money alleged to be due on fire insurance. The case will be heard before Justice Smalley tomorrow at 10 o'clock a. m. W. L. Hetfield, Jr., Esq., of the law firm of Hetfield & Hetfield, will appear for the plaintiff.

Bishop Vincent to Speak.

Many Plainfielders will be interested to learn that Bishop Vincent, well-known so nearly everyone here, preached the baccalaureate sermon at Yale Sunday, and on Sunday, June 26, he will preach the baccalaureate sermon at Wesleyan University.

Alex. Kane has what you want in the second hand lumber line, no matter what it may be. He makes it his business to.

USE ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE,

A powder to be shaken into the shoes. Your feet feel swollen, nervous and damp, and get tired easily. If you have aching feet, try Allen's Foot-Ease. It rests the feet and makes new or tight shoes easy. Cures aching, swollen, sweating feet, blisters and callous spots. Relieves chilblains, corns and bunions. At all pain and shoe stores and druggists, 25c. Don't accept any substitute. Trial package FREE. Address Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N. Y.

QUAKER CITY BRIDE FOR HENRY B. DRAKE

Miss Edna Pusey Williams, of Philadelphia, is Wedded to a Well-Known Boroughite.

FRIENDS' CEREMONY

GEORGE A. HORNE, OF NORTH PLAINFIELD, AS BEST MAN.

Marriage Takes Place at Richard D Williams' Home on Darrow Avenue—Miss Elizabeth A. Williams As Bridesmaid.

Miss Edna Pusey Williams, daughter of the late Henry B. Williams, of Philadelphia, was quietly wedded to Henry Baldwin Drake, of 34 Duer street, Wednesday, June 8, at 6 o'clock. The ceremony was held at the residence of a cousin of the bride, Richard D. Williams, of 600 Darrow avenue. Owing to the recent death of the bride's father, the guests were limited to members of the two families and a few intimate friends.

As the bride is a member of the Philadelphia Society of Friends, the Friends' service was followed. It was presided over by overseers appointed by the Race Street Meeting House, Philadelphia. The overseers present were Mr. and Mrs. George D. Miller and Miss Mary E. Dunham.

Simplicity and impressiveness were happily combined in the ceremony. The bride was gowned in white chiffon and wore a tulle veil caught up at the forehead with a sprig of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and sweet peas. Her attendant was Miss Elizabeth A. Williams, a sister, of Philadelphia, who was gowned in white mousseline de soie over green taffeta. Her bouquet was of marguerites. The best man was George A. Horne, of Willow avenue, a classmate of the groom in the borough and city high schools.

The parlor, where the ceremony was performed, was effectively decorated with daisies and ferns. After the guests, who numbered fifty in all, had signed the marriage certificate according to the custom of the Friends, the bridal supper was served. The table decorations were green and white.

Early in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Drake departed on a week's outing after a reusing send off from their friends. On their return they will take up their residence at 34 Duer street, where they will be "at home" after October.

The bride has frequently visited here and has a large circle of friends in city and borough. It was while a guest at the home of her uncle, E. P. Williams, of West Seventh street, that she first met Mr. Drake.

Mr. Drake is a native of Plainfield. He was graduated from the North-Plainfield public school in 1903 and from the city High School in 1895. He completed a course at the Philadelphia Textile School and is now on the selling force of the American Woolen Co. He is a member of the First Baptist church.

Among the beautiful gifts for the young people was a complete silver service from the employes of the American Woolen Company.

MISS CARRIE E. MEHL BURIED

HANDSOME FLORAL TRIBUTES AT THE SERVICE HELD THURSDAY.

Funeral services over the body of Miss Carrie E. Mehl were held Thursday afternoon at the home of her parents, on West Second street. Rev. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, officiated in the absence of Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, of which Miss Mehl was a member.

The house was crowded with friends and relatives, many of the former being those with who Miss Mehl had worked for a long time in church and charitable affairs.

From the Sunday-school friends of the dead woman came a large bunch of cut flowers and among the other floral pieces, which were so numerous as to require a separate carriage, was a large initial "C" in sweet peas.

During her illness of about a year, Miss Mehl was a great sufferer so that recently she had longed for release from her constant pain. No matter what her sufferings might be, however, she was patient and uncomplaining.

Two brothers, John and George Mehl and two brothers-in-law, Charles F. Dudley and George R. Schlereth, were the pall-bearers.

Interment was made in Hillside

Minister Must Rest His Voice.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, has been advised by his physician that he cannot preach for a few weeks. He must rest his throat during that period.

PRINCETON HEROICS BY M'CREADY SYKES

Poe's Run and Other Poems the Title of a Bright Little Volume Just Published.

HIS BOOK DESCRIBED

GREAT DEED OF ARTHUR POE IS DONE INTO POETRY BY '94 MAN.

Author a Scotch Plains Resident Who Was Popular at Old Nassau—Something About His Work.

Valorous deeds of mighty sons of Old Nassau as recorded by M'Uready Sykes are presented to the public in a little volume just issued by The Chosen Press, of Princeton. The collection is entitled "Poe's Run and other Poems," being, as the author explains, "the true and authentic narration of certain notable games wherein are set forth many marvelous good deeds wrought by the Princeton team; all done into verse in the valgar tongue." To this collection is appended The Book of the Chronicles of the Elias, a somewhat unique and exceptionally clever series of stories on the battle of Old Yale. Boson Tarkington has made the volume all the more prized by a collection of illustrations. William H. Fell and Harold Imbrie, equally Princeton grads, have also contributed their artistic efforts.

M'Uready Sykes, who slumbers mightily in the dreary village of Scotch Plains, and plods away at the law by day in busy New York, is a Princeton man known far and wide for his bright sayings and brilliant writings. The tales he narrates in "Poe's Run and other Poems" all relate to strenuous contests on the diamond and on the gridiron, which have been fought since the author carried away a sheepskin and a pile of prizes from tiger town. In a confession of responsibility for the collection, Mr. Sykes says "It is perhaps superfluous to point out that this small book is put forth with no serious purpose on the part either of the author or the artists."

The first of the heroics are verses on the famous run of Arthur Poe, which brought victory and excessive joy to Princeton men, in the memorable contest between Nassau and Yale on the twelfth of November, 1898. Poe's spectacular dash down the field is vividly portrayed. The historian

"Kynge Hillebrand hys myghtye Eode
Hath mustered on ye Playne;
Palmer and Wheeler, Ayres and Booth,
And More I cannot name.
"Edwards was there, and Crowdis too,
Among ye valiante Knyghtes;
Crowdis, whom all ye classes calle
Ye Manne of Seventye Fyghtes.
Suddenly little Poe gets the ball on a fumble and "saunters down ye Fields" while "From Eli's Lyne a Crye of Rage
Both rande ye quyverynge Ayre,
All ye Teame with one Accourde
Fourseeth him for fayre.
* * * * *
"Ye Multitude doth yelle and shoute;
Ye Tumulte tyles ye Ayre;
And Gabriel noteth on hys Sleeve—
"Ye Welkin needs Repayre."
"Ye Elis tear in fierce Pervuite;
But Poe eludes them alle:
He rushes twixte ye quyverynge Posters,
And sitteth on ye Balle."

Following this narrative is one entitled "Poe's Kick; being ye Ballade of Ye Holye Manne and ye Sorrouginge Youthe." It recalls the battle between the two ancient foes on November 25, 1899, when in the last thirty seconds of play, Yale was jubilant

"But Arthur Poe hathe kycht ye Balle
"(Oh, woefulle, woefully Daye!)
"An straighte as myghtie Dewey's Gynnes Upon ye tyrane of Maye."

And "Princetowne wonne ye Game."

In a much different style the victory of Princeton over Yale on the diamond on June 23, 1896, is told under the title of "Kelly's hit." Kelly's home run in the eleventh inning when the score stood three to three is the theme of the poet. This is followed by the tale of "Steinwedder's catch in the game on June 7, 1902.

The Book of the Chronicles enfolds the tale of the great battle between the "children of Nassau" and the children of Eli" on the gridiron on Nov. 14, 1903, which resulted in a victory for the former house by a score of eleven to six. This was in accordance with the prophecy of "Hell-devil Skillman" who declared:

"Lo! it shall come to pass that there shall be a mighty fight between the children of Nassau and the children of Eli;

"And the children of Nassau shall prevail, and the score shall be eleven to six."

At the end of the first half the score was six to six and in the second Captain DeWitt made a place kick

"And the ball went through the air, over the heads of the children of Eli, even between their goal-posts;

"So the children of Nassau overcame the children of Eli that day."

Chronicle XLIV concerns a football game between Harvard and Yale on Soldiers' field, which resulted in a victory for the blue.

Mr. Sykes is a '94 man and possesses marked literary talent. During his college days he was managing editor of the Nassau Literary Magazine and was one of the editors of The Tiger. He took part in college dramatics to some extent as well. It is commonly said that he captured more prizes during his college course than any other man who ever attended that institution. After receiving the degree of bachelor of arts, he took up the practice of law in New York, having been admitted to the bar before entering Princeton. He is a member of the firm of Goldsborough, Warner & Sykes. Wherever the sons of Old Nassau gather, M'Uready Sykes receives a hearty welcome. He has a peculiar way of talking at a public gathering which throws his audience into convulsions of laughter, his tales being extremely bright and invariably original.

HOLZWASSER & CO

SPECIAL DISCOUNT THIS MONTH OF 10% ALLOWED ON ALL CASH PURCHASES.

We Also Furnish a Flat 'at $65.00.

Write for Our New Catalogue. Mailed Upon Application.

$1.00 a Week Opens an Account.

We Also Carry a Complete Line of CLOTHING For Men, Women and Children.

Freight and R. R. Fare Allowed on All Out-of-Town Orders.

1417 TO 1423 3D AVE. BETWEEN 80 & 81ST

Open Evenings until 9 o'clock. NEW YORK, N. Y.

See the Great St. Louis Fair With the New York Sunday World

Artist Biederman, of The World's staff, was commissioned by The World to paint the most beautiful vistas of the universal exposition. He has completed his task, and now The World offers splendid color reproductions of ten great paintings to its readers. One a week for ten weeks. The pictures are free. You only have to buy The Sunday World, America's greatest newspaper, with its Colored Magazine, its Comic Weekly, its Metropolitan Section and other remarkable features.

You Get the Pictures —FREE!—

These superb paintings will be reproduced in all the beauties of their original colors, and in them you will see as reflected, as in a mirror, superb Architecture, Palaces of Nations and States, Plazas and Waterways, Vistas, Monuments, Promenades, Gardens, Cascades, Triumphs of Sculpture and Art, and a wonderful variety of curious scenes and people never before seen in this country or at any previous exposition.

Order the New York Sunday World from Your Newsdealer for Ten Weeks in Advance and Get the Series. Each Dealer's Supply Limited.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

First Baptists of New Market-Hold Celebration.

Children's Day exercises of an interesting character were held in the First Baptist church, New Market, on Sunday. The programme included recitations by Rena VonMinden, Hazel Piddington, Fred Coriell, Miss Lyrathia Nelson, Grace Coriell, Emile Nelson, Mildred Meeker, Hilda Johnson, Edith VanNuis, Maud Johnson, Mary Conover, Hannah Nelson, Iva Dayton, Bertha Nelson, exercises, three girls; flower drill, eight girls. There were two songs by the school and an address by Pastor Fletcher.

These committees were in charge of the affair: Music, Miss Bessie Tappen, organist; Miss Cora Dayton, assistant; decoration, Mrs. F. Sofield; programme, Mrs. Dr. Nelson, Mrs. Walter Clawson, Miss Cora Dayton, Miss Estelle Sofield.

MR. DAY WANTS HIS SALARY

COLLECTOR BELIEVES DUNELLEN COUNCIL SHOULD PAY HIM AS CUSTODIAN.

Considerable talk has been caused in Dunellen by the report that Collector Day would push his claim for back salary due him in his capacity of custodian of the Dunellen school monies. What Mr. Day really did say was that according to the State school law of 1900, the Council was obliged to fix upon, and pay to him, a salary for his service as custodian of the school funds. The matter was referred to the committee on laws and ordinances.

Nothing was said regarding extra compensation for the collection of school taxes, which are collected always in any municipality as all the other taxes are collected, even where, as in the present case, the collector holds the office of borough treasurer and custodian of the school monies.

A Clever Newspaper Plan.

The attention of the people all over the United States just now is centred on St. Louis and its universal Exposition. Realising the hundreds of thousands of dwellers in the East will not get one-third of the way across the continent to see the big show, the New York World has devised a plan to bring the Fair home to its readers. This is to be effected by a special series of color pictures, reproductions of paintings made for this purpose by one of the principal members of its art staff. In another column is the World's advertisement of its plan, in which details are given. The pictures are free to all purchasers of the Sunday World.

Enters Religious Journalism.

James B. Joy, of Washington Park, has been appointed assistant editor of the New York Christian Advocate to succeed Rev. Dr. Stephen J. Herben. Dr. Herben is well known to a number of Plainfielders, having spoken several times at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church.

Fire Department Uniforms.

Regulation blue uniforms have been issued to the members of the North Plainfield Fire Department. Harry Werner, of West Front street, made the clothing.

CONFEDERATES MEET

Veterans of Southern Army Reunite at Nashville.

SOW HONOR ONE COUNTRY, ONE FLAG

"In Less Than Thirty-five Years Commercial Freedom Has Been Obtained For the South, the Garden Spot of This Fair Land."

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 15.—Under every condition tending to a successful reunion, Nashville has officially welcomed the United Confederate veterans and their friends, constituting a host conservatively estimated at 30,000 people. The exercises took place in the Tabernacle, and every bit of space was taken long before the veterans were called to order by General George W. Gordon of Memphis, commander of the Tennessee division.

It was the first convention in the history of the organization that the Sons of Veterans sat with their fathers. California is represented on the floor from Arroff Montana a delegation was sent and Ohio was on hand with four delegates.

After General Gordon had called the veterans to order, Chaplain Jones delivered the invocation. Governor J. B. Frazier welcomed the delegates to Tennessee in a splendid address. Twice he started to his seat only to be recalled. Governor Frazier said in part:

"When that grand, that patriot, that noble Christian soldier, General Robert E. Lee, surrendered at Appomattox he spoke with a heart too full for deceit, in that no southern mother swore her son to bitterness; she swore him to love and honor. All accepted the finality. When you saw furled for the last time the stars and bars you had followed for four years you sealed a solemn pledge that from that day on you would know but one country and but one flag.

"You came back to take up your old work, to build a new civilization, to redeem a land that had almost maliciously been given to the negro. In less than thirty-five years, unaided by anything except a fertile land and energy, you have attained commercial freedom for the south. The south has already snatched from New England the hitherto unchallenged record of cotton manufacturing. The south is destined to become the garden spot in this fair land.

"We welcome you to the warm hospitality and sunshine of the south, and if that is not warm enough, we welcome you to some of our good homes."

After Colonel A. S. Williams, mayor of Nashville, had extended the city's welcome, General Gordon brought forward General Stephen D. Lee as the permanent presiding officer and commander in chief. General Lee's appearance was the signal for a wild outburst of enthusiasm.

MASTERS SURRENDER.

Great Lakes Traffic Tie-up Is at an End.

CLEVELAND, O., June 15.—After six weeks of tie-up on the great lakes that has directly involved only a couple of thousand men, but indirectly more than 100,000, who have been idle because of its existence, a cessation was declared to the strike last night by the surrender of the masters, who, with the pilots, have been holding out for a more uniform scale of wages this season than was offered by the Lake Carriers' association, whose boats were most affected by the difficulty between the vessel owners and their employees.

The strike was declared off last night by Paul Howell, district captain of the Masters and Pilots' association, who gave out the following statement:

"The Masters and Pilots' association has concluded that it would be good policy at this stage of the game owing to existing conditions over which we have no control to advise our captains to go to work and make the most of a bad situation. Our mates will meet at the earliest possible opportunity and make arrangements along the lines of their own ideas and present them to the Lake Carriers' association for acceptance. In the meantime the mates will remain where they are until this arrangement is made and agreed upon by the two associations."

It is understood that the Lake Carriers' association was willing to pay last year's scale of wages, but this was not agreeable to the masters and pilots.

The strike has been one of the most costly in wages and time lost and stagnation in business that has occurred in recent years.

Roosevelt Shows Mercy to Officers.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Executive clemency has saved two young officers of the army from dismissal. They are First Lieutenant Henry L. Harris, Jr., Twenty-second infantry, stationed in the Philippines, and Second Lieutenant Samuel H. Fisher, Twenty-eighth infantry, stationed at San Francisco. The court martials, however, united in a recommendation for clemency, and the president has commuted their sentences.

Governor Odell at New York.

NEW YORK, June 15. — Governor Odell was taken off the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse last night by the revenue cutter Calumet and landed at the foot of Twenty-third street.

Weather Probabilities.

Fair and warmer; south winds.

BASEBALL SCORES.

Results of Yesterday's Games in National and American Leagues.

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

At New York—
St. Louis	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	0	1—1
New York	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0—0
Batteries—Nichols and Zearfoss; Taylor and Bowerman.
At Boston—
Chicago	0	2	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0—2
Boston	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0—0
Batteries—Corridon and Kling; Pittinger and Needham.
At Brooklyn—
Cincinnati	0	0	0	0	0	0	2	0	0	0—2
Brooklyn	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0—0
Batteries—Kellum and Peitz; Poole and Ritter.
At Philadelphia—
Pittsburg	0	0	0	0	4	0	0	1	1	0—6
Philadelphia	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0—0
Batteries—Flaherty and Smith; Mitchell and Donlin.

TABLE OF PERCENTAGES.

Clubs.	W.	L.	P.C.
Chicago	30	15	.667
New York	30	16	.652
Cincinnati	29	17	.630
Pittsburg	24	22	.522
St. Louis	22	23	.489
Brooklyn	19	28	.396
Boston	17	29	.369
Philadelphia	15	30	.333

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

At Detroit—
Washington	2	0	0	3	0	0	0	0	0	0—3
Detroit	2	0	0	0	1	0	0	2	0	0—5
Batteries—Townsend and Drill; Kitson and Buelow.
At Cleveland—
Philadelphia	0	1	2	0	0	1	0	0	0	0—4
Cleveland	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0—0
Batteries—Bender and Schreck; Bernhard and Abbott.

Game called on account of rain.

TABLE OF PERCENTAGES.

Clubs.	W.	L.	P.C.
Boston	33	15	.688
Chicago	28	21	.571
New York	27	20	.540
Philadelphia	26	20	.565
Cleveland	23	21	.523
St. Louis	21	23	.477
Detroit	19	27	.413
Washington	7	37	.159

Land of Clover Got the Duke Cup.

BROOKLINE, Mass., June 15.—Robert C. Hooper of Boston, racing under the name of Mr. Chamblet, won the permanent ownership of the Duke cup with his champion steeplechaser Land of Clover at the opening of the three days' meet at the Country club. Mr. Hooper himself offered the Duke's cup twelve years ago. Land of Clover was pushed so hard over the entire course of two and a half miles by Mr. Cottins' St. Jude, finally winning by a head, that the record made two years ago by Thomas W. Lawson's Filon d'Or was lowered a full second and now stands 5 minutes 1 1-5 seconds.

Hermis Takes the Brookdale.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Hermis, backed from 3 to 5 to 10 to 20, easily won the Brookdale handicap, one mile and a furlong, at Gravesend. Hermis' race was a public trial for the Suburban, and the Thomas horse was in great form, covering the distance in 1:52 4-5. He was within four-fifths of a second of the track record. Redfern sent Hermis to the front and, making all the running, won by two lengths from Dainty. Africander was third. E. R. Thomas bet $10,000 on Hermis. Reliable, carrying 140 pounds, won the first race easily. He was favorite at 13 to 10.

Jeffries Will Be Ready to Fight.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 15.—The managers of the Yosemite Athletic club, before which Jeffries and Munro are to fight on June 30, declare that there will be no further postponement and that if Jeffries is not in condition by that time he must lose his forfeit of $2,500 and the title of champion. Jeffries' trainers do not anticipate any further trouble with his injured knee.

Racing at Harlem Track.

CHICAGO, June 15.—The third race, a handicap, and the fourth, a condition affair, both at a mile, divided interest at Harlem. Felipe Lugo, "Lucky" Baldwin's American Derby candidate, started in the former, but finished outside the money, while Prince Silverwings, another American Derby colt, finished second to Miss Crawford in the latter.

Icewater at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, June 15.—Icewater, favorite; Big Ben, third choice, and Autumn Leaves, an outsider, finished in front in the feature of the Fair association's card. Big Ben led to within ten feet of the finish, where Icewater got up just in time to beat him in the last jump.

Jealousy Caused Two Deaths.

LEWISTON, Pa., June 15.—William E. Sheaffer, aged thirty-four years, shot and killed his mistress, Flora Wagner, formerly of Harrisburg, last night and then blew out his own brains. Inmates of the house say that the cause of the tragedy was jealousy on the part of Sheaffer. The latter, who was formerly a saloon keeper in Slingsville, O., came here six months ago with the woman. The Wagner woman had been corresponding with a man living in Three Springs, Huntingdon county, Pa., to which Sheaffer objected. She received another letter, and a quarrel followed, which ended in the shooting.

Found Dead in Hallway.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., June 15.—Julius Klotz, whose father was at one time German minister to the United States, was found dead in the hallway of a State street block, where he boarded, in this city, at 9 o'clock last night. The other tenants of the block had seen him sitting there since late in the afternoon and had passed him carefully so as not to wake him, supposing that he was asleep. He had been dead all the time.

Italian King's Decision.

ROME, June 15.—King Victor Emmanuel has handed to the British ambassador and the Brazilian minister his decision as arbitrator between Great Britain and Brazil in the Guiana frontier question.

Killed Under a Tree.

GENESEO, N. Y., June 15.—Daniel Riordan of Piffard, N. Y., has been killed by lightning here while seeking shelter under a tree during a heavy storm.

ENDEAVORERS HOLD THEIR ANNUAL MEETING

J. W. DeGroff, of Dunellen, is President of the Union County Union.

AWARD THE BANNER

REV. W. S. LUMBAR, OF NEWARK, MAKES AN ABLE ADDRESS.

Several Local Societies Withdraw From Union—Rev. B. H. Rankins Remarks—Election of Officers.

Interesting reports, election of officers, the awarding of the banner for the largest attendance of members and an able address by Rev. W. S. Lumbar, of Newark, were features of the annual meeting of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union held in Trinity Reformed church, Friday. There were about one hundred and fifty Endeavorers present, representing the various societies in the county and the meeting was a helpful and inspiring one.

The retiring president, Rev. B. H. Rankin, of Bethany chapel, Elizabeth, presided. After the Scripture reading by Rev. Dr. W. B. Hamilton, of Hope chapel, Elizabeth, Rev. A. E. Finn, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, offered prayer. In the absence of the retiring secretary, James Angus Knowles, of Cranford, George B. Clark, of Westfield, filled that position.

Under the direction of Horace J. Martin, Sr., there was a song service in which the church choir assisted. Arthur L. Titsworth, organist, presided at the piano.

In the report of the district secretary, Miss Nellie K. Foote, of Elizabeth, it was noted that the Seventh-Day Baptist Church Society, of this city, had contributed $146.75 toward the work and the intermediate department, the only one in the county, gave $13. The Warren chapel society also received mention for its giving, as did also the society of the Congregational church, the members having contributed nearly $70. It was regretted that the societies of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Hope chapel, First Baptist church, as well as the one of the Summit M. E. church have withdrawn from the Union to form other societies. In all there are forty Endeavor Societies in the Union.

Then followed the roll call of societies for the purpose of determining the number of active members in each and the number present so that the county banner could be presented to the one having the largest attendance. The society at Washingtonville, winners of the banner two years ago, again secured the prize, having an active membership of fifteen, ten of whom were present. The Park Avenue Baptist church society was second with thirty-seven active members and fourteen present. The Trinity Reformed church society reported one hundred active members and sixteen present. The other Plainfield societies reported as follows: First Presbyterian church, thirty-five members and five present; Warren chapel, fifty-six members and one present; East Third Street chapel, twenty-eight members and one present. The other local societies not mentioned were not represented. There was a little dispute about giving Washingtonville the banner, it being a question as to whether the society was in the Union. The question was settled quickly in the affirmative.

Mr. Rankin then conducted an open parliament in which many perplexing problems were answered in a helpful way. The questions referred to the Lost way to raise funds, keep societies alive, times for holding consecration services and many others of a similar character. In conclusion it was announced that the annual State convention of the society would be held in the Central Baptist church, Elizabeth, in October.

Rev. W. S. Lumbar, of Newark, was introduced as the speaker of the evening and this well-known divine, who was the former President of the State Union, gave a soul-stirring and helpful talk on the subject of "How We May Best Build Up Our Societies." He directed the attention of the Endeavorers to the crucifixion and in an eloquent manner he pictured the impressive scenes on that occasion. He referred to the things that led up to Christ taking his journey to Calvary and how he was tried and put to death on the cross and the final triumph over sin and death. In closing he urged all to see that divine spirit of Christ to live close to Him so that when the last race is run all might say in the words of Christ "It is Finished."

The services were closed with a word of prayer, the offering and a hymn.

Mrs. M. L. Green is visiting her son, William D. Green, of Madison.

THAT WIDE OUT DROP OF "FARMER" SMITH

Plainfield High School's Rattling Good Pitcher and His Wonderful Curves

LAD OF SEVENTEEN

IN TWELVE GAMES HE STRIKES OUT 134 BATTERS.

Promising Player Equally Good With the Stick—What He Has Done in Some of the Games Recently.

One of the big surprises of the baseball season so far is the form developed by Philip "Farmer" Smith, the High School pitcher. Smith came into prominence after the glittering game with the Pingry School cranks, on Tuesday, when he held the fast youngsters from Elizabeth down to one hit, and since then the fanatics have been asking about him. All they have learned indicates that the South Plainfield lad is a 14k phenom, and is fine material for big work with the globule a year or two hence.

Smith came up as a pitcher something like the impetuous mushroom. He is only seventeen and a freshman, and until last year nobody, himself included, knew that he could play ball in any way out of the ordinary school-boy style. Last year Smith played third base for the school scrub team, and went into one or two regular games. When Fred VanAuken left school for Annapolis, the team was left without a pitcher. Smith had shown some interest in pitching, and he was supposed to have a curve or two that might be developed. Nobody was very hopeful of making him into a real pitcher, but he was the only thing in sight, and the team managers asked him to get himself into shape.

Smith settled down to steady, hard work. Every day at recess, as regularly as the days themselves rolled around, he went out into the school yard and practiced his curves. When the season opened Smith's work astonished his team mates.

The best batters on the strongest teams of the High School met this year, Rutgers Prep School and Montclair, fell down before his twists. He has a wide out drop that is the worst thing for hitting that most of the local batters ever saw. In twelve games Smith has a record of 134 strike-outs. And in addition to all this he fields and bats well, particularly the latter—notable for a pitcher. Although the averages have not been made up yet, it is believed that Smith leads his team in swats.

At present Smith is plenty fast enough for any of the minor teams here, in a year or two, when he has developed his full strength and learns the head work that must go with good pitching, he will be in the semi-professional class.

HORSE SHOW BIG ENTRIES

ALTOGETHER 168 FOR PLAINFIELD EXHIBITION, 68 MORE THAN LAKEWOOD.

Everything augurs well for the complete success of the horse show. Entries have been practically completed, and the list is so large as to make it certain that the event will outclass similar shows in other suburban towns by a good deal.

Altogether there are 168 entries. This is sixty-eight more than the Lakewood show attracted, and is much better than most neighborhood shows on record.

Prominent New York and Long Island horsemen have entered horses in the different classes, and there are many Plainfield, Westfield, Somerville and Elizabeth entries. Mr. and Mrs. Ladew, of Glen Cove, the Horse Exchange, of New York, George Watson and H. G. McIlwaine and other prominent horse dealers and breeders are represented.

HARRY B. LOVELL IS MARRIED

A TAUNTON, MASS., BELLE IS PLAINFIELDER'S BRIDE.

Harry Borden Lovell, the son of Leander N. Lovell, of this city, was married in Taunton, Mass., Saturday afternoon, to Miss Beatrice W. Swaze, of that place. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred S. Swaze.

Only relatives of the groom were present from this city. His sister, Miss Jessie B. Lovell, was one of the bridesmaids. The best man was a Chicagoan, Thomas Mundy.

The couple are on a honeymoon trip. They will reside in Plainfield for the summer, but plans for permanent home have not yet been determined. The groom is in business in New York with his father.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, JUNE 23, 1904. NO. 25.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Center the Union, as Well as Its Limitations as to Its Authorities."—Madison.

PLAINFIELD LIBRARY'S COLLECTION NOW 29,052

Additions During Year Just Closed Far Greater in All Departments Than a Year Ago.

MISS ADAMS' REPORT

DIVISIONS AS ARRANGED IN ORDER OF THEIR POPULARITY.

Public School Deposit Stations—Number of Visitors During Last Year 55,723—Many Periodicals Available.

According to the report of the librarian, Miss Adams, the Plainfield Library contains 29,052 volumes, and it is the third largest public collection in the State. The total additions was 2,842 for the year. During the last year, 488 more books were given to the institution than during the preceding year. In fact for the year just closed, 1,347 more books were added to the collection than a year ago.

In the circulating use, the large increase of 2,548 over last year is noted, the total number of books loaned for home use being 49,151. This report sents an average of three and one-fifth books for every inhabitant, it also shows that of the 22,604 circulating volumes, each volume circulated two and seventeen-hundreds times.

The fourteen main divisions arranged in order of popularity are: Fiction, juvenile, general literature, travel, biography, history, natural science, general works, fine arts, sociology, useful arts, religion, philosophy, philology. Adult fiction forms but forty-six per cent. of the whole circulation.

Perhaps the chief matters of interest brought out in the circulation statistics are: The decided preference shown for English over American literature; the effect of the Russo-Japanese war on library statistics, making Japan by far the most read about of any country this past year, with Russia next; the extensive use of Nature books; the wide use of the library by teachers, the appreciation of the library's collection on engineering, and the popular preference for the practical side of religion and philosophy as evidence by the large circulation of their subdivision of Christian life and ethics. Growing use is noted of the standard writers of fiction, when these are supplied in good editions.

Of the school deposit station, the largest circulation was at the Lincoln, where 715 Public Library books were distributed among the pupils. Bryant followed with 544, and the Irving school with 469. Of this work Miss Petrie, of the Irving school, says: "Through the circulation of the books a desire to read has been cultivated, and as the books are classified to the work of each grade, we find them a great help in adding information to the study of geography and language," and Miss Griffin, principal of the Lincoln and Bryant schools, says: "Pupils who have shown little desire for reading—pupils who have very little reading matter in their homes, have become interested in good reading." Through the Potter Press deposit station, there were circulated 205 books. Books which have been in quarantined families are either destroyed or disinfected by the health inspector before being received back at the Library.

Of the reference and reading room use, statistics are not available, readers and students having access to shelves, but observation here shows their use to be very large. The approximate number of persons visiting the building was 55,783, 1,630 of whom came on Sundays.

The number of periodicals supplied for readers now reaches 170, of which thirty-nine are presented.

Among other recommendations made by the librarian are the building up of a department of French and German, the demand for which is in excess of the supply; the formation of a small apprentice class; the appointment of a special assistant for delivery work; and the extension of work with the schools.

Col. Mason W. Tyler recently gave to the institute 304 volumes of the Reports of the New York Supreme Court, and of the New York Court of Appeals.

—Wm. Mills, of the borough, has gone into the hog raising business. He received two fancy western hogs the other day and will start his breeding from that stock.

W. C. T. U. PARLOR MEETING

ENTERTAINMENT AT THE HOME OF MISS CAIRNS IN WEST FIFTH STREET.

Under the auspices of the social department of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, a parlor meeting and musical was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Cairns, 444 West Fifth street. Mrs. Frank Bowley, as chairman of this work, was in charge of the programme. There was a large attendance of members and friends and the affair brought two new members to the local Union.

The programme included vocal selections by Miss Bertha Willis, instrumental selections by Miss Edith Cairns, Miss Elsie Knowlton and Miss Lena Bohan and a reading by Mrs. Clarence Holman, of Pittsfield, Mass., a former member of the Union. Each number was well received, after which there was a social time and refreshments were served. A silver offering was received at the door, and through this method a satisfactory amount was contributed to the Union.

SERVICES OVER C. B. SCOTT

OBSEQUIES AT HOUSE ATTENDED BY IMMEDIATE RELATIVES AND FRIENDS.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity church, Tuesday afternoon, at 4 o'clock over the body of Charles B. Scott. The services were held at his home, 736 Grant avenue and were attended only by the immediate relatives and friends. Numerous floral pieces were sent to the house in token of the respect and affection in which Mr. Scott was held.

The pall bearers included Principal I. W. Travell, of the Stillman High School; J. D. Macnab, commandant of the High School battalion and a Mr. Palmer, of New York. The body was placed in the receiving vault at Hillside cemetery to await interment at Shawangunk, Ulster County, N. Y.

MISS MABEL GANO'S PARTY

LARGE GATHERING OF FRIENDS MEET TWO GUESTS FROM ANNANDALE.

Honoring her guests, Miss Stella Emmons and Miss May Hockenbury, of Annandale, Miss Mabel Gano entertained a large gathering of friends at her home on Grove street last night. Card games were the principal feature of the affair. The house was prettily decorated.

Progressive pit was played, and flinch and euchre were also enjoyed. The winners were Miss Mabel Hand, Miss Bessie Bennett, Miss Edith White, Albert Yaeger, Harry Matthews, Frank Erbeck.

Piano selections were played by Miss Gano, Miss Coddington and Miss Hand. At midnight supper was served. After supper the guests enjoyed an hour of dancing.

Among the many guests were the following: The Misses Stella Emmons, May Hockenbury, Anna Bodine, Edith Squier, Irene Hope, Jessie Matthews, Kate Bodine, Tilly Coddington, Nora Schenck, Nettie Thompson, Florence Conroy, Anna Matthews, Grace Fenner, May Fenner, Grace McAfee, Sadie Hyler, Bertha Manning, Mabel Gano, Cora Gano, Edith Caleen, Edith White, Mabel Hand, Bessie Bennett, Monroe Squier, Howard Bose, Frank Erbeck, Ray Gwinn, Robert Crane, Linden West, Lloyd VanMiddlesworth, Arthur Caleen, Harry Matthews, Albert Yaeger, Elijah Matthews, Fred Barrop, Harry Soper, Bert Gray, William Huff, Fred Koechlien.

Several guests were present from Annandale, Bound Brook, Somerville, Westfield and Elizabeth.

A New Creamery.

John I Brokaw, for some years a resident of Plainfield, will open a creamery, equipped with the latest improved machinery, about July 15, at the MacDonald store on East Front street. A feature of the place will be the carrying on of the operations of separation and churning, as well as cheese-making, right in the store, in plain view of the public. A concrete floor is being laid to accommodate the machinery.

Ivamy Gets Judgement.

After being strongly contested, the contract case of Fred Ivamy against A. B. Rosell, has resulted in judgment being entered for $44.42 in favor of the plaintiff.

—At breakfast, lunch or tea what is better than good strawberry jam in preserve" Strawberries are just right for preserving now, and Neuman Bros. have the right berries.

MISS GRISWOLD BRIDE OF DR. GUY H. HILLMAN

Ceremony at Home of Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Macintyre is Performed Before Many Friends

MANY HANDSOME GIFTS

REV. CHARLES FISK, OF ST. JOHN'S CHURCH, SOMERVILLE, OFFICIATES.

Miss Mary Buckle as Bridesmaid and Dr. R. S. Scovil, of New York, Best Man—The Bride's Gown —Couple to Reside Here.

Beneath a bell of daisies and ferns, Miss Mary Griswold and Dr. Guy H Hillman, both of this city, were made man and wife Tuesday at 7 o'clock, by the Rev. Charles Fiske, rector of St. John's Episcopal church, Somerville. The ceremony took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Macintyre, 969 West Seventh street. William J. MacBride, of New York, an uncle of the bride, gave her in marriage.

Miss Mary Buckle, of this city, was the bridesmaid. Dr. R. S. Scovil, of Johnstown, N. Y., was best man. Dr. Scovil is a classmate of Dr. Hillman's, having graduated with him from the University of Buffalo in 1901. The bride was, for several years, a teacher in the city schools.

The bride was gowned in white crepe de chine over white taffeta, trimmed with tucked chiffon and applique and carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas and asparagus fern. The bride's maid were pink figured white net, and carried a similar bouquet of pink sweet peas and asparagus fern.

The house was a mass of flowers, on the lower floors, great care and good taste having been lavished on this feature. Roses, honeysuckle, daisies, ferns, palms and oak-leaves were all used with exquisite taste in decking the house for the joyous occasion.

Guests were present from Cleveland, O., Yonkers, Johnstown, Gansevoort, New York city and Somerville. A large quantity of gifts was received, consisting of china, cut glass, silver, linen, furniture and rugs, some of the latter being particularly fine specimens of the product of Oriental looms.

After the wedding supper, Dr. and Mrs. Hillman left for a short trip. The bride wore a travelling dress of blue voille and a hat of Tuscan straw, champagne color, trimmed with black velvet and chrysanthemums.

On their return, Dr. and Mrs. Hillman will make their home at 951 West Seventh street, corner of Hobart avenue.

Father Miller at Maloney Wedding.

Among the priests in the sanctuary at the wedding of Miss Margaret Maloney, the daughter of the well-known Catholic philanthropist, at Spring Lake this morning was the Rev. Father Miller, of St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield. The ceremony was performed by Cardinal Satolli, who came from Rome for that sole purpose. Cardinal Gibbons, two archbishops, five bishops and a dozen or more priests were present.

Condemn Court House Figures.

The figures of Justice and Liberty, under the entablature on the facade of the new court house at Elizabeth, are not satisfactory, either to the officials or Albert R. Ross, the designer of the figures. They will be cut out and removed. The figures were not cut to model, as reported and they are out of proportion. New ones will be carved by sculptors and mortised into place.

Delegates to St. Louis.

It has not been decided when the New Jersey delegates to the Democratic National Convention will start for St. Louis, but they may go Saturday, July 2. The convention opens Wednesday, July 6. The headquarters of the New Jersey delegation will be at the Lindell House.

Opening Date for Camp.

It was decided at the meeting of the committee in charge of the baby camp on Johnston's drive, to open the camp Thursday, June 30. Stages will be run from every alternate trolley car to the camp for the benefit of the public.

Mr. and Mrs. Asa Randolph have returned from their honeymoon. They are living in the Lincoln flats.

Charles W. Eoff and son, C. W. Eoff, Jr., of Crescent avenue, leave tonight for Niagara Falls and Canada.

Miss Ada Besurd, of Orange, has returned home after a visit to Mrs. A. J. E. Clement, of Central avenue.

HOPE Y. M. A. SOCIAL

AFTER SHORT BUSINESS SESSION ORGANIZATION HAS A MERRY TIME.

Owing to the absence of President William N. Runyon, the chief business of last night's meeting of the Hope Y. M. A., the rehabilitation of the bowling alley and probable construction of an additional alley, did not come before the association. A committee of members of the Y. M. A. have made certain recommendations regarding the alleys, which the Board of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church has had under consideration for some time past. This business was laid over for a week.

A programme, chiefly of songs by a quartette consisting of Messrs. John Coss, James Penny, E. C. Firstbrook and Edward Textor, was enjoyed, and was followed by refreshments. In charge of the affair were John Coss, E. C. Firstbrook and Fred Wharton.

ARCANUM 27 YEARS OLD

FRATERNAL ORDER TO OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY OF ITS ORGANIZATION.

The twenty-seventh anniversary of the Royal Arcanum will be celebrated throughout the country today.

The grand regent, of the supreme lodge, issued orders to the above effect to every council.

The following notice has been sent out by one of the regents:

"Royal Arcanum Brothers, Attention:

"Thursday, June 23, will be the twenty-seventh anniversary of the birthday of the Royal Arcanum. The grand regent, James M. Washburn, requests the writer to notify all members to this effect, and further asks us to make this day, June 23, a day long to be remembered, and that it shall be known as Flag day.

"In observing Thursday as Flag day he asks us to display in our homes the grand old Stars and Stripes, no matter what else.

"To this call, we should all respond, and while 'tis a little thing to do perhaps, yet it will help to remind us of the birth of one of the grandest and noblest organizations in the world."

MEEKER ROADS.

State Supervisor Returns to St. Louis to Inspect Model Highways.

State Supervisor of Public Roads Robert A. Meeker, of this city, will today start on a trip to St. Louis to visit the New Jersey State roads exhibit building at the fair. While there on a previous occasion he supervised the construction of a section of road built at the fair showing the advancement New Jersey has made in this direction. The work has been highly praised and it is said that there is nothing like the road in that section. It is 100 feet long and 16 feet in width.

As the result of Mr. Meeker's supervision of this specimen road, he has been made engineer of the National Good Roads organization. He will go today to inspect the roads of that section and to superintend an addition to the State road building which contains maps, roads materials, photographs of New Jersey roads and other exhibits.

SPEAKEASY CASES.

Three Plainfield Defendants Plead Non Vult, Following Example of Two Others.

Two of the defendants on trial at Elizabeth, charged with keeping speakeasies in this city, Thomas Barbarioci and Anthonio Obiarello, having entered pleas of non vult, were released today, under suspended sentence.

Three others, James Brown, Charles A. Bosso and John Bonnet, also made pleas of non vult. Their cases will come up for trial next Wednesday.

Thompson for Congress.

The name of ex Senator and Clerk in Chancery Thompson is being prominently mentioned as the Republican nominee for Congress in this district. It is far from a cock-sure thing that our next Representative will be of the Republican faith, but if we are to continue to be thus "afflicted" we know of no one we would rather see in the seat than L. A. Thompson. The name was seen on the district with a fine-tooth comb and not find a more worthy candidate.—Somerville Messenger.

Thomas Buckley, of the Potter Press Company's plant, has returned home from setting up several web presses in the government printing office at Washington, D. C.

SECOND BAND CONCERT IS THIS EVENING

Bandmaster Ben LaVere Announces Programme for the Open Air Production.

IN NEED OF FUNDS

FREE MUSICAL FEASTS PROVE TO BE POPULAR WITH MASSES.

John J. Nestor to Sing "My Lonely Little Lonesome Maid," by Request—The Concert Begins at 8 o'Clock.

The second in the series of band concerts by Benj. LaVere's band will be given on Chatham street, tonight, and the same high-class programme as presented at the first concert will be given. There is no doubt but what the public appreciates these musical treats, their popularity being attested a week ago. Mr. LaVere has gotten together a band of musical experts second to none. Every man is a soloist and the rendition of the various numbers is all that is to be desired.

If the public want the concerts continued a substantial way of proving it is by contributing liberally to the enterprise. Mr. LaVere has a limited fund on hand and when that is gone he says he will discontinue the concerts, unless more money is forthcoming.

In making up his programmes Mr. LaVere takes great care in selecting the numbers. He gives a few classical selections, interspersing the other numbers with those of a lighter vein including the popular compositions of the day. The grandstand was liberally patronized last week, the improvement being a great convenience to those wishing to sit down through the concert. There were also many present in automobiles, carriages and on wheels and the general opinion was praiseworthy of Mr. LaVere's efforts.

The concert will begin at 8 o'clock and this excellent programme will be given:

March, "The Competitor," Head; overture, "Poet and Peasant," Suppe; concert waltz, "Charmense," Eugene; cornet solo, "Sea Flower Polka," Bloch, Mr. L. R. Anderson; selection, "Babes in Toyland," Herbert; (a) intermezzo, "Salambo," Morse, (b) characteristic, "The Sun Dance," Friedman; vocal solo, (a) "I Wish the Band Would Play," (b) "My Lonely Little Lonesome Maid," by request, Mr. John J. Nestor; descriptive, "A Knotting Scene," Bucalossi; medley, "A Gleam of Heaven," Harris; finale, "Sergeant Kitty," Sloane.

Station Robbery Trial On.

The trial of the three young men indicted for robbing the Jersey Central Station at Westfield on the night of April 20 of $1,000 and in which crime the night ticket agent and operator at the station is implicated, was to take place at Elizabeth yesterday, but owing to the absence of an important witness it was postponed until Friday of this week. It is rumored that one of the defendants, who is a prisoner in the county jail, he being unable to get bail, intends to turn State's evidence.

Working on Sewer Extension.

Stone & Grossert, the successful bidders for the construction of the 1,900 feet of sanitary sewer in the East End of the city, began work yesterday afternoon. Mr. Grossert, who is here superintending the work, expects to complete the same within seven weeks. He has placed a gang of about twenty-five men on the job. The materials are now arriving so that there will be no delay on this account.

Miss Callahan's Wedding.

Invitations have been issued by Thomas Callahan, of Richmond street, to the marriage of his daughter, Miss Minnie A. Callahan, and John F. Owens, Esq., to be celebrated on Wednesday morning, June 29, at St. Mary's church. Father Glennon, a classmate of the groom, will officiate, assisted by Father Egan, rector of the church.

Parochial Pupils in Operetta.

The pupils of St. Mary's Parochial School who will present an operetta on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights of next week, will hold public rehearsals this afternoon and tomorrow and Friday afternoon under the direction of the Sisters.

Mrs. Colby Has a Daughter.

Mrs. Everett Colby, nee Miss Edith Hyde, of this city, has just become the mother of a girl at her home in Orange.

MISS JENNIE FOWLER WEDS

CEREMONY IN WESTFIELD WITNESSED BY PLAINFIELD FRIENDS OF COUPLE.

Miss Jennie Fowler, of Westfield, and Walter Darby, of Alton, were married in the Westfield Presbyterian church, Tuesday, by the pastor of the church. Among the large number of guests present were Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Potter, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar P. Sheppard, Mr. and Mrs. Will F. Williams and William A. Woodruff, of this city.

Mrs. Arthur Pierson, a sister of the bride, was matron-of-honor, and Arthur Pierson was best man. Another sister of the bride was one of the bridesmaids. Alfred Kilmer and W. J. Alpers were ushers. Following the wedding, a reception was held at the home of the bride, and after a wedding trip, the couple will live at Westfield in a new house recently built by the groom. The groom is well-known here and he is engaged in the electrical business in New York.

RENAME IT FAITH CHAPEL

EAST THIRD STREET MISSION TAKES A NEW TITLE.

Having grown far ahead of the "mission" stage, the people of the Baptist chapel that has been known as the East Third Street mission have begun a determined effort to displace the old name for one more befitting its size and stability. They have hung a new sign reading "Faith Chapel," over the chapel entrance, and want their place of worship to be called by that name. The name was given to the chapel several years ago, but it has never been used generally.

Now the chapel has a regular pastor, however, and the membership and average attendance have come up to the figures of regularly established churches here, and it is felt that the old name gives a wrongful impression of the work that it is doing and the place to which it has attained.

MR. ALBERTI, AGED 93, DEAD

FORMER PLAINFIELD JEWELER DIES AT HIS HOME IN NEW BRUNSWICK.

Thomas Shipley Alberti, who was a resident of this city for many years, being at one time engaged in the jewelry business here, died yesterday afternoon at his home in New Brunswick, at the age of ninety-three years. He was unusually active for one of his years, only recently visiting this city, unattended and showing a lively interest in affairs. He was the owner of valuable property here. He was for years a member of the Seventh-Day Baptist church.

The funeral services will be held at the home of his son-in-law, A. A. Titsworth, 230 George street, New Brunswick, Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Wanted to Sleep on R. R. Track.

Laboring under a heavy load of rum, Patrick Sexton, a homeless laborer, tried to go to sleep on the railroad track, near the Richmond street bridge last night about 8 o'clock. He was arrested by Patrolman Myers and put in a cell, where he would at least be safe from freight trains. Sentence was suspended on him this morning by Judge Runyon.

Leal's Boys Danced.

As usual after commencement, John Leal tendered a dance to the graduate of his school at the Casino last night. The affair was largely attended, and passed off delightfully. The hall was decorated with flags. Mrs. Leal, Mrs. C. F. Abbott and Mrs. Frances Martin received.

October Convention.

The New Jersey State Convention of the Boys' Department of the Y. M. C. A. will meet at the local Y. M. C. A. building, October 26 and 30. The delegates will number about 300. Arrangements are under way for their accommodation while here.

Thieves Break Into Butcher Shop.

Thieves broke into the butcher shop of Jolin Storm, on Liberty street, last night, and stole a small sum of money. Entrance was gained through a rear window. There was only a few dollars in the till.

To Sue P. S. C. for Damages.

Mrs. Anna Hill, of Paterson, who was hurt by a trolley car at the North avenue depot several weeks ago, has retained F. J. Blatz, Esq., to secure damages.

Stephen Caboose and family, of Watchung avenue, left this week for their summer home in Jamestown, R. I.

FAITH'S CONGREGATION WELCOMES NEW PASTOR

Reception in Honor of Rev. John W. Musson Attended By a Delightful Programme.

SOME HAPPY REMARKS

L. W. RANDOLPH ENTENDS GREETINGS ON BEHALF OF THE FLOCK.

Letter From Rev. Dr. Yerkes is Read—Clifford Braider Renders a Piano Solo—The Decorations Handsome.

Warm welcome was extended by the people of Faith chapel, on East Third street, to their first permanent pastor, Rev. J. W. Musson, last night. The affair was a delightful one, full of cordial spirit that gave a most auspicious tone to the start of Mr. Musson's ministry. Mrs. Musson was present, and the hearty greeting tendered to the pastor included her. The attendance was very large, every available chair being occupied.

Elaborate decorations transformed the chapel. Palms and flowers were used with attractive effect, and a big banting sign, "Welcome, Pastor," hung above the platform. Over the sign a big star, studded with electric bulbs, glowed brightly, symbolic of the spirit that moves the chapel membership.

There was a delightful programme of entertainment. The exercises opened with a piano solo by Clifford Braider, organist of the First Presbyterian church, which was followed by a selection by the chapel orchestra. Rev. Mr. Musson read the 103d Psalm, and offered a prayer. The congregation, rising, sang "Blessed Be the Tie That Binds."

Greeting and regrets from Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor emeritus of the First Baptist church, the parent church, were read. L. W. Randolph, who has been at the head of the chapel work from its start, delivered a happily phrased address of welcome. His remarks were so worded as to obviate the necessity of a response from the pastor. Two handsome bouquets were presented to Mrs. Musson.

The programme was rounded out by a vocal duet by Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Lockwood, solo by Elmer Cutting, violin solo by Frank Malin, and recitations by Miss Hazel Grant and Miss Lizzie Frank.

After the programme a period of informal sociability was enjoyed, during which the chapel folk and their friends greeted Mr. and Mrs. Musson personally. Cordial expressions of support in his work were numerous.

Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served by a number of the younger people.

The committee in charge of the affair was made up of L. W. Randolph, chairman; Mrs. John Mackey, Miss Ella Mackey, Mrs. Edward Baker, Miss Charlotte Myers, Miss Florence Randolph, Mrs. W. C. Lane, Mrs. Dora Oblinger.

Wedding at Somerville.

Miss Laura Mabel Durland, daughter of the late Dr. W. D. Durland, and Walter Percival VanCamp, both of Somerville, were married at that place last night. Ralph Willis, of this city, was the best man. The affair was one of the leading social events of the season at the Somerset County seat. A number of guests were present from here. Rev. Dr. Woods, of the First Baptist church, Somerville, tied the knot.

W. C. T. U. Meeting Tomorrow.

Several prominent State workers of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will attend the meeting of the local Union to be held in the rooms on Madison avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 3:30. Among those expected are Miss Barker, State organizer, and the organizer of the local Union, and Mrs. E. B. Surler, chairman of the State flower mission. The members and friends are urged to attend.

Trolley Men's Baseball Game.

The Staten Island trolley men have challenged the P. S. C. employes to a baseball game. The pick of the Plainfield Giants and the Junction Giants, who fought a mighty battle on the Westfield diamond recently, will be sent to Staten Island next Wednesday to trim the aspiring Islanders. Plainfield players will be prominent in the lineup.

Mrs. I. V. Smalley and daughter, Miss Florence Smalley, of Jackson avenue, have gone to Philadelphia to spend a few weeks with relatives.

GROUP PLAN OF BUILINGS OF THE "GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY."

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

MEN AND HAPPENINGS AT THE NATIONAL CAPITOL.

PLANS OF THE PRESIDENT

How the Chief Executive Proposes to Spend the Summer—A Scotch Gardener Who Dares Defy Congress.

Washington.—The "George Washington University" is to be the somewhat cumbersome title of the institution now known as the Columbian university, which is preparing for an enlarged sphere of educational usefulness by the purchase of a new site and the erection of new buildings in Washington.

For many years Columbian university has been one of the institutions of the national capital. It has been better known on account of its school of law than for any other reason, but some other of its departments have been doing memorable things in various lines of scientific research. The members of its faculty are men of national reputation and they have added the luster of distinguished names to the record of the university. It is now proposed that the undergraduate department of the university shall become more conspicuous and that the institution shall take rank among the great institutions of learning which hitherto have been magnets for the ambitious youth of the country.

In order that this mission may be fulfilled the name of the university will be changed, not because there is any inherent objection to the present title, but because of the confusion which necessarily arises between the Washington institution and the Columbia university of New York with older traditions and greater achievements.

The new site for the university is to be on the banks of the Potomac not far from the Washington monument and very near the place which Washington himself selected over 100 years ago as the site for the national university which he believed should have its home in the national capital. Washington felt forth his ambition in several letters as well as in his will. His motive was one of patriotism rather than personal sentiment or local pride. "It is my ardent wish," he wrote, "to see a plan devised on a liberal scale which would have a tendency to spread systematic ideas through all parts of this rising empire, thereby to do away with local attachments and state prejudices as far as the nature of things would or indeed ought to admit from our national councils." To this university he planned that the youths from all parts of the union might be sent "for the completion of their education in all branches of polite literature, in the arts and sciences, in acquiring knowledge in the principles of politics and good government" and "as a matter of infinite importance in my judgment by associating with each other and forming friendships be enabled to free themselves in a proper degree from those local prejudices and habitual jealousies which carried to excess are never failing sources of disquietude to the public mind and pregnant with mischievous consequences to this country."

The Presidents Plans.

President Roosevelt expects to spend about two months at Oyster bay this summer, and the furniture at the white house are already planning for the flitting back and forth. The president will leave Washington about July 1, remaining here until the Chicago convention shall have done its work. Then he will go to Oyster bay for a month or so; return to Washington about August 1, which is the time usually set for the beginning of the active work of the campaign and remain here long enough to receive visiting delegations and confer with party leaders. After that he will return to Oyster bay again for a stay of another month and come back to Washington as the weather begins to grow cool. He will receive the news of the election at the white house.

All this is giving the workers in the executive office a good deal of worry. A great quantity of office stationery, records and implements will have to be carried back and forth every time the president changes base and to effect the transfer smoothly and expeditiously will call for all the executive capacity which Secretaries Loeb and Barnes possess.

Secretary Cortelyou for years under McKinley and Roosevelt managed these presidential marches with a skill almost amounting to genius and Secretary Loeb thus far has displayed equal talent. But all the same he does not relish two flittings within a short time.

The president does not expect a great many people at Oyster bay. The facilities there for entertaining strangers are very meager and it is both the regard for his own comfort and for that of the people who wish to see him that he has decided to make his headquarters during a good part of the campaign right here in Washington.

Dares Defy Congress.

There is one reservation in Washington which is to all intents and purposes outside of the jurisdiction of the United States government. The National botanic garden just at the foot of the capitol where Pennsylvania avenue runs up against the capitol grounds, is presided over by William R. Smith, superintendent, who is a law under himself.

Smith is a Scotch gardener with a pronounced burr, who got his early training in the Kew gardens in London and he has been in command in his little domain for so many years that members of congress, who are nominally his superiors, would not think of interfering with the old man's wishes. So it happens that with the exception of the white house grounds the botanic garden is the only public reservation in Washington which is now enclosed by a fence.

Years ago high iron fences surrounded every park and public place in the national capitol, but by order of congress they were taken down one by one. Congress finally landed on the botanic garden and somebody thoughtlessly considered in an appropriation bill a provision for tearing down the fence., Smith calmly ignored the law. When the officials came to him to carry the law into execution he ordered them off and informed them that so long as he remained superintendent of the botanic garden it was going to be inclosed by a fence as it had been ever since he was put into control. When congress came back they received the old man's ultimatum with amused tolerance and he received assurances that he would never be annoyed again.

But a few years later somebody else absent-mindedly inserted a second provision for tearing down the fence and again the canny Scotchman ignored the law of congress. This time the thing went so far that the members of the appropriation committee who were responsible for the slip came down to the botanic garden and apologized for their mistake.

The Botanic Garden.

There is no more interesting spot in Washington than this same botanic garden which Superintendent Smith guards so jealously. There is a flavor of old time about it which makes it different from any other spot and which the fond superintendent protects with all of his might.

Every tree in the place has a history. Most of them were set out by distinguished people to whom the old Scotchman has taken a fancy. One magnificent water beech was planted 35 years ago by John A. Bingham of Ohio, nearby it are two poplars, one of which was set out by Edwin Forest, the tragedian, the other by his friend, John W. Forney. The wife of Jefferson Davis dedicated one tree still standing when Davis was secretary of war. In short there are not many men who have gained great distinction since Smith has been superintendent of the gardens who have not been flattered by him with an invitation to plant a tree.

Of equal interest with the garden itself, as may be imagined, is the old Scotchman who is its presiding genius. Not only is he a horticulturist of rare devotion, but he is religiously attached to his national songster, Robert Burns, and he possesses the finest collection of editions of Burns' works which can be found in the United States.

To the mind of Superintendent Smith the greatest of all public men within his memory was William Pitt Fessenden of Maine. He ranks Fessenden on a level with Lincoln as one of the two men who saved the union in the time of the civil war and he has a standing grievance against every other native of Maine because none of them has yet shown sufficient devotion to Fessenden's memory to write his life.

In Smith's mind the greatest achievement of the Maine statesman was in securing an appropriation for erection of the conservatories in the garden, which are the apple of Smith's eye. Fessenden was chairman of the library committee in the senate just at the close of the war. When Smith went before the committee timidly to get a small appropriation to begin the work, the Maine senator bluntly asked how much it would cost to complete the job and then insisted on making the entire appropriation of $35,000 at once.

LOUIS A. COOLIDGE

FAITHFUL TO DEATH.

AMERICAN MISSIONARIES TRUE TO THEIR TRUST.

Will Not Leave Korea, in Spite of All the Dangers of War, Because the Converts Need Their Services.

Boston (Mass.) Special.

Americans in northern Korea were recently approached by the United states gunboat Cincinnati, and offered conveyance to a place of safety. Twenty-three refugees embraced the opportunity, but nine missionaries decided to remain, with their wives and children. This fact has led to some hostile criticism of "missionary zeal," and suggests an inquiry into the real duty of missionaries in war time. The Boston Congregationalist says:

"Why do the missionaries stay at their posts at such times? Sometimes because the danger to their personal safety is no greater than they would meet by withdrawing. Often their departure or the sending away of their families on a warship would be interpreted by the people in their care as a sign of far greater perils than really exist. A missionary of the American board in Macedonia lately said that if he and his colaborers should flee in response to the warning of our government, the whole district would be thrown into a panic. Many of the people were coming to sleep at night on the missionary premises, but kept at their work by day, and the continued presence of the missionaries was a strong assurance of safety to them. In some cases the abandonment by missionaries of their fields in time of danger has caused severe loss, not only of property, but of prestige, which it requires many years to recover. In the recent Boxer troubles in China the American board cabled to its missionaries to use their own judgment as to remaining in a certain district. Another board sent imperative instructions to its missionaries to withdraw, and they obeyed reluctantly. Our missionaries decided to remain, and the wisdom of their choice is now conceded by all acquainted with the facts.

"The warning sent by our government in such a case as this, is not necessarily an expression of the judgment of its officials that missionaries or other Americans ought to remove from the exposed regions, but is an act in the way of its duty, and shifts the responsibility from itself to those who are warned. It is not the government which assumes to decide when the missionaries ought to leave their fields, but certain newspapers, which, if the missionaries followed their advice, would quite quickly be the first to charge them with cowardice and neglect of their duty."

REV. ARTHUR J. BROWN.
(Secretary Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions.)

Rev. Dr. Arthur Judson Brown, of New York, who discusses "The War and Our Devoted Missionaries," in the Missionary Review of the World, has this to say:

"It seems to us that for all the missionaries in Korea to be withdrawn at this time would be calamitous. The property abandoned would probably be looted, if not destroyed. Even in America abandoned buildings are apt to suffer from thieves, and in such a country as Korea it is probable that little would be left. Moreover, the missionary is urgently needed for safeguarding the interests of the work and for moral effect upon the Koreans. As we are going on with our work, it is desirable to avoid, if possible, a demoralizing interregnum.

"Consider, too, the lot of the poor Koreans. Neither Russians nor Japanese are apt to concern themselves particularly about the unhappy people who are between the upper and the nether millstones of contending armies, while at such a time lawless and turbulent men are almost certain to find their opportunity. Even in Christian America, when a destructive fire was raging in Baltimore, thieves and scoundrels took such advantage of the general panic that the police were unable to cope with the situation, and strong military force was called out. What, then, is to be expected in such a country as Korea in time of war? Those poor Koreans in this hour of need will look to the missionary as to their only friend and counselor, and if he leaves them very will be scattered abroad as sheep having no shepherd. Now is the time for the missionary ministry in Korea. To leave the field to the politician, the soldier and the trader would be to dishonor Christ, to fail to utilize an unprecedented opportunity, to abandon the helpless native Christians in their hour of sore need, and to prejudice missionary influence at home and abroad for a generation."

THE SIGN BOARD EVIL.

Governor of New Jersey Says Beautification of State Are Hidden Completely by Advertisements.

New Jersey is to be made beautiful if Gov. Murphy can have his way. It is his hope to disentangle the scenery of the state from the mass of advertising signs which now hide it from the view of the public.

The governor considers the evil of sufficient enormity to demand special attention in his message to the legislature. He makes the following statement regarding the signs of the times:

"I venture with some confidence to call the attention of the legislature to the increasing number of advertising signs located on various lines of railway throughout the state, and I hope some means may be devised not only to prevent their increase but to remove those already in existence.

"New Jersey is a beautiful state, with an attractive and varied landscape. This gradually is being shut out from the view of the traveler. On the leading line of railway between Jersey City and Trenton there were in the early part of December, by actual count, 1,601 signs.

HON. FRANKLIN MURPHY.
(Governor of New Jersey and Arch Enemy of Billboards.)

"They are of all kinds and sizes. They are disfigured by all sorts of effigies of impossible men and women; they advertise remedies for all ills that human flesh is heir to, as well as all sorts of foods, drinks and various contrivances born of human ingenuity.

"If they continue to increase it is not difficult to imagine the day near at hand when the traveler will have the beautiful hills, vales, trees and flowers shut completely from view, and will pass through a continuous and unbroken lane of signboards that will trouble his nights and his days with suggestions of things that are disagreeable.

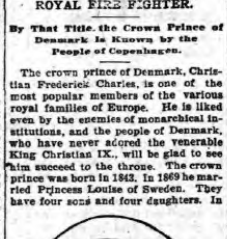
"I am told by lawyers the problem is difficult, but perhaps the solution might be through taxation, made so high as to be ineffective.

"In the interest of the suffering and indignant public I present the subject to the legislature in the hope it may be able to find a remedy."

ROYAL FIRE FIGHTER.

By That Title the Crown Prince of Denmark Is Known by the People of Copenhagen.

The crown prince of Denmark, Christian Frederick Charles, is one of the most popular members of the various royal families of Europe. He is liked even by the enemies of monarchical institutions, and the people of Denmark, who have never adored the venerable King Christian IX., will be glad to see him succeed to the throne. The crown prince was born in 1843. In 1869 he married Princess Louise of Sweden. They have four sons and four daughters. In



CROWN PRINCE OF DENMARK.
(Known in Copenhagen as "The Royal Fire Fighter.")

Copenhagen his highness is known as the royal fire fighter, because on two occasions he commanded a bucket brigade when flames threatened the Auralleenborg palace. When fire started in the apartments of the crown princess recently he summoned the servants and organized a bucket brigade, standing himself in the blazing room and throwing water on the flames. He is going about with his right hand bandaged as the result of slight burns, but his injuries are trivial.

Frescoes in German Schools.

The committee of the Berlin town council in charge of the primary schools have taken a novel decision with regard to school decoration. The proposal is to spend 10,000 marks every year for eight years, with the object of painting frescoes on the walls of classrooms and corridors. These pictures will be simple in character, and will represent for the most part scenes in German history. Before, however, the plan can be carried out, experiments will be made in three selected schools.

ANARCHY HIS HOBBY.

JOHN TURNER, SPOKESMAN OF THE BRITISH REDS.

Is a Mild-Mannered Chap and Has a Poor Opinion of Our Government, Which He Considers a Joke.

Chicago Special.

In an anarchist hotbed on the West side a small, mild mannered and highly intelligent man sat the other day, and said to a Chicago Inter Ocean reporter he believed in the destructive principles of anarchy.

The man was John Turner, an Englishman, who is one bundle of startling contrasts. Turner is as gentle as a woman in his manner, but he condones all the outrages which anarchists have committed in the wronged name of liberty. He is not a vindictive man, yet he preaches the anarchical practices for the sake of the principle. He will sympathize with a man in distress in one breath and in the next will speak sympathetically of men whose self-assigned duty is to kill kings and overthrow governments.

Last October John Turner left England to come to America. He got as far as Ellis island and there he went to a cell with a Scotch anarchist. Until the first week of March he remained in prison, while the federal government was trying to decide whether he should be deported, for it is notorious that John Turner is not only an anarchist, but a leader of anarchists.

When this at least superficially mild mannered man came to Chicago a week ago he did so with the understanding that he must surrender himself to the government authorities if it is decided he has no right in this country. But he never will surrender, for he declares he will be on his way to England before the United States supreme court can hand down its decision in his case.

On the other side of the Atlantic John Turner is known as a labor leader. Through his wonderful tact, his keen judgment and his unusual executive ability he has been able to form an organization among the retail clerks of England that has for several years been a power.

In this country John Turner is known best as an anarchist. His speeches and JOHN TURNER.

(English Anarchist Who Is Now Lecturing in United States.)

his writings are anarchistic sermons. Like all men of his class, he talks all the while of the evils of government, of oppression, of persecution, of the social and economic uselessness of what he calls the ruling classes. While he is an anarchist, it is indisputable that he is a man of sense and culture.

It has been said that it is not surprising that John Turner is an anarchist. When he was a boy of 18 he was a free thinker. Later he became associated with William Morris, and about that time became a socialist. In 1886 he switched from socialism to anarchy, as a result of his close study of the events leading up to and following the Haymarket outrage in Chicago.

In changing from free thinker to socialist and from socialist to anarchist Turner naturally became, through each change, much more radical in his belief and his teachings, and his radical utterances brought him to his present position.

Until 1889 Turner was the manager for a company in Liverpool. After the dock strike there he formed the first union among the retail clerks. During the last six years he has been the chief executive of that organization.

"My visit to America has been a sort of opera bouffe affair," he said the other day as he put aside a letter he was writing to his family in England. "Only Gilbert and Sullivan or some one else engaged in writing comic operas could fittingly tell the story of my coming to this country. This is a most stupid government, and it is as far behind England in permitting free speech and the ordinary liberties as the benighted lands are behind the United States. You have laws which prevent an anarchist from landing in this country. I am an anarchist. I cannot, therefore, come here to visit my brothers or to speak to them, nor can they have communication with me. The whole machinery of this government seems to be run for a huge joke."

Some Facts About Manchuria.

Manchuria's latitude corresponds with that of Manitoba, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota and Nebraska. Its area of 362,310 square miles is only 10,600 square miles less than the combined area of these great grain states.

Disease Lurks in Masks.

A medical journal asserts that disease is spread by the lending of masks, which are used at fancy dress balls. Forty-two masks were examined, and on eight of them were discovered bacilli of various diseases.

HORSE KNEW LAND WAS NEAR.

Detected Odor at Sea from Pasture Lands Two Hours Before Coast Was Sighted.

When Thomas McGuiness, a well known horseman of Philadelphia, went to Europe some time ago, he took a blooded horse with him. The animal was in a specially prepared stall on the deck and enjoyed the trip despite the rough weather. When Mr. McGuiness thought land would soon be sighted, says the Philadelphia Telegraph, he asked the captain how far the ship was from the Irish coast. The commander of the steamer, in his usual gruff manner, replied: "Your horse will tell you; watch him."

The owner of the animal could not understand what the captain meant, and he was not particularly pleased with the answer. Finally, however, a couple of hours before land was observed, the horse, which was a magnificent bay, poked his head through the grating, and, stretching his neck, whinnied loudly. "There you are," said the captain to Mr. McGuiness; "your horse smells the land." The horse was like a different animal thereafter until the coast loomed up.

The captain, in explaining the odd occurrence, said that the thoroughbred detected the odor from the pasture lands that was wafted far seaward, and that horses on board ocean steamers always give the first signal when land is near.

STOCK RAISING IN ALASKA.

Northern Plains Well Adapted for the Industry—Aleutian Islands to Be Converted Into Ranges.

Next to the production of gold the most profitable industry in Alaska promises to be the raising of live stock. Within a very few years it is predicted that regular shipments of cattle for export will be made. The extensive areas of rich growths of grass and the absence of storms in the winter make so many sections of the country ideal places for ranching. The winters of Alaska are more hospitable than those of the great plains of Wyoming, Montana and some parts of Nevada, and in the dead of winter horses and cattle can be worked without fear of being frozen. The temperature frequently is very cold, but there are no storms.

Several large stock growers of Washington state are planning to convert the Alaskan peninsula into cattle and sheep ranges, which will surpass in extent the rapidly diminishing ranges of Montana and Texas. One company has begun the shipment of 25,000 sheep and 5,000 head of cattle to the Aleutians, a first consignment of 8,000 head of sheep having recently been sent from San Francisco. The company had demonstrated previously that sheep will thrive there, living throughout the winter solely on the grass of the islands, by having landed 1,000 head there about a year and a half ago.

STOVE IN HIS POCKET.

Chinese Ward Off Winter's Rigors by Carrying Hand Furnaces When Mercury Is Low.

The contented smile of the "heathen Chinee" may be partially accounted for by their indifference to the coldness of the winter months. For in the north of China, says the New York Herald, they care not whether they be indoors or out; they always have a stove with them in the shape of a hand furnace. Instead of the fire being placed in the house it is carried about the person, beneath the thickly padded cotton garments or in the hand; at times it is placed beneath the chair on which the celestial is seated. The discovery of this unique method of avoiding winter's rigors was made by a traveler in Fu-kien province, whose attention was attracted to the universal and peculiar deformities of the inhabitants. Strange swellings projected from the most unaccountable places on the anatomy of the villagers. Speculations were set at rest by an old gentleman, who removed his coat and disclosed a small copper furnace secured around his waist by a band and neatly covered with basket work. This artificial mode of warming the body is only resorted to in time of extreme cold, as on ordinary occasions the people deem their thick clothing a sufficient protection during winter.

FACTORY RUN BY WIND.

Air Motors Supply Power to Two Plants in Germany for Generating Electricity for Lighting.

For more than two years two small factories, one near Leipsic, the other near Hamburg, have been driven successfully by windmills, which are also used as a means of generating electricity for lighting purposes, says the Elektrotechnischer Anzeiger.

The windmills have a diameter of about 15 feet and are mounted on the roof of the works.

To insure reliability, the wind wheel itself has no moving parts, the speed regulation being obtained by turning the windmill so as to vary the angle under which the wind impinges upon the sails, which are built of steel sheets.

This is performed by a small auxiliary wind wheel, and is said to be done so quickly and accurately that the voltage of the dynamo remains practically constant throughout the range of ordinary wind pressures.

An automatic switch cuts out the battery connected in parallel with the dynamo as soon as the wind falls below a certain point.

American Patents.

Last year there were 50,156 applications for patents at the patent office in Washington. Of these 29,882 were granted. The receipts of the office were $1,500,000. The patent office is the only government bureau that is operated at a profit.

THE GAME COUNTRY

Sights to Be Seen Along the New Uganda Railway.

Wild Animals That Are Visible from the Car Windows—Home of His Majesty, the Lion—Some Experiences.

In the days when the first railroads were built across our western plains one of the sights of a journey across the continent was the herds of buffalo, and other game, that might be seen from the car window, and these sights induced many a scenic-loving tourist to make the trip from the Mississippi to the Pacific. In this country these sights have disappeared, but something of the same kind may be found along the line of the Uganda railway in Africa.

To travelers by this new railway the most interesting sight to be seen is that of the great herds of game, from the tiny "pan" that trots unconcernedly out of the way of the cowcatcher, to the lumbering rhinoceros, with the by no means rare appearance of a family of lions, or perhaps the head of the family tearing a lately killed hartebeest or zebra, while circling above on the nearest trees are the vultures, ready to descend on the carcase when his majesty has eaten his fill. Since the alteration in the limits of the East Africa game reserve, the line runs through it for about 230 miles. During this part of the journey, Tsavo river to Kikuyu escarpment, it forms the boundary of the reserve, and no shooting is permitted to the south, or left side of it going up.

The game has in consequence become very tame in that district, and as long as the train does not stop, few animals take any notice of it. Notwithstanding the large number of lions about the line, apparently but few become man-eaters, the Tsava and Kimas cases being notable exceptions. Several deaths have been caused by wounded lions attacking sportsmen, but, as a rule, when discovered, the king of beasts prefers to seek safety in flight. The writer well remembers chasing six for some distance up a rocky nullah close to a railway station.

FROM THE CAR WINDOW.

Their numbers caused a reward to be given for them, within certain limits of the line, during its construction, as the coolies naturally did not work while lions were near. All camps in certain districts had to be surrounded with thorn fences, and on one occasion a lioness springing over a fence happened to alight on the sharp end of a broken branch, and, being impaled by it, died by an inglorious death where she fell. Not long ago a hartebeest was pulled down close to the railway headquarters, while in March last, when Sir John Kirk and Sir George Whitehouse were traveling down the line, a telegram was sent up to warn their engineer to approach the next station with caution, as the switches could not be put over owing to the presence of four lions in the station yard. The writer, passing down the line last April, saw a hartebeest lying close to Athi river station which had been killed in the night, and the stationmaster reported "many great roarings in the night time."

All the camps on the line and the staff at the stations have huts of corrugated iron, which give them perfect safety at night. Very fair fishing can be got in the Athi river, but it is as well to carry a rifle with one as the banks of the river are often visited by lions, a sportsman having once met five lions close to where he had been fishing all the afternoon, the Nairobi bungalows being in sight at the time. Leaving camp early next morning a rhinoceros broke out of the bushes close by, while eight ostriches and several herds of hartebeest and zebra, with another "rhino," were passed on the way home.

The site of the town of Nairobi was, in pre-railway days, a great hunting ground; a line of game pits extended for a great distance round the base of the hills that overlook the station, in which natives lay while the game was driven over them. Most of these pits are now filled up, as they became a danger to passers-by, but the lines of them will be still visible in the grass for some time to come.

At Port Florence, the lake terminus, passengers staying in the dak bungalow close to the shore can often hear the blowing of the hippopotamus at night, and their three quick grunts as they call to each other, while many can be seen during the forenoon rising and sinking in the shallow water off the shore some little distance outside the station. As many as 25 have been counted together, while great numbers can be seen in less frequented parts of the coast to the south. From the steamers which now run regularly across to Entebbe there are several spots to be seen which are certain finds for crocodiles, a hoot on the syren always causing them to scramble hastily into the water.

B. WHITEHOUSE.

FASHION NOTES.

Simple Foulard Dresses—Black Hats Trimmed With Gold or Silver.

Morning and street gowns made of foulard silk are very smart. They are very little trimmed, mostly with bands of plain silk or fancy buttons. Tiny pipings of contrasting silk are sometimes used, and very often the waist blouses, both back and front. Many of the newest evening frocks have a lace net or lingerie bertha around the decolletage.

Tape lace is very effective used as a trimming for handsome gowns. It is made especially for the gowns with which it is used, being dyed to match and softened with a lining of chiffon.

BLACK FRENCH HAT.

Black hats trimmed with touches of silver and of gold are very smart, especially in the tricorne shapes.

Messaline is a new silk which is being employed for every garment, from the morning shirt waist to the most elaborate evening toilet. It has a satin surface, while its suppleness makes it an ideal fabric for the ruchings so popular at present.

The flounced skirt is one of the striking features of this year's fashions. Many skirts show from three to five flounces, and dressy frocks show even many more.

Very fine muslins called painted mousselines are ultra fashionable for smart warm weather gowns. This thin material is invariably made up over lustrous silk or satin.

The picture shows a black hat made of straw chantilly, and large ostrich plumes are placed partly above and partly below the brim.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

COLORS AND MATERIALS.

Tobacco Colored Cloths—Blue Much Worn—Fruits on Hats.

Tobacco colored cloths are much worn, and these are trimmed with Persian trimmings or pipings of silk or satin.

A great deal of fruit is being used on hats, especially those of the Breton shape. Apples, currants, cherries and grapes are all sometimes seen on one hat.

A great deal of blue in all the brighter shades is being worn this season, and this is becoming alike to blonds and brunettes. Blue linen costumes embroidered in white are particularly chic, and with these are worn large ecru or white sailor hats relieved with a touch of blue or vivid green.

PEAU DE SOIE GOWN.

On many large hats one notices a touch of black, and where it is possible the inner brim is of black. This was especially noticeable on a white hat seen recently. The top of the brim was of white straw, and the trimming was of white roses, while there were a few lush facing of black straw and touches of black velvet among the roses.

Pompadour muslins with large flowered patterns are combined with yellowish insertions and laces.

French heels, even for ordinary wear, are being used more than ever. They are even seen with the walking skirt.

The coral shades of red are especially smart when combined with tan and brown.

The new summer shirts are cut away slightly from the throat at the sides and in a shallow V or square in front, where unlined lace or embroidered chemisettes are inserted. The neck and front are finished by a band of embroidery or lace medallions, the same trimming appearing on the cuffs and girdle.

The picture shows a peau de soie gown trimmed with soft white lace. The waist has a novel bertha of folds of the silk and of the lace.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

SEEN HERE AND THERE.

Petticoats of Alpaca For Summer, Taffeta Gowns Here to Stay.

For hot weather collar bands and small yokes will be left transparent, but lined, of course, with chiffon or net to veil the transparency. Little touches of oriental embroidery are used on neutral tinted gowns, especially those of burnt orange tints on gowns of soft beige or tan.

Practical petticoats of alpaca are very smart for summer wear with many frills and embroideries of heavy twist in buttonhole design. Skirts of mercerised batiste are also charming for wearing under linen and muslin gowns.

Mull and soft mousseline are both used a great deal for summer evening frocks. They are trimmed with white Irish lace or silk laces of yellowish tints.

BLUE MULL DRESS.

The smart toques and hats are trimmed with fruits and flowers at the same time. So far very few flowing veils have been seen, but lace drapings of every description are used on hats.

Taffeta gowns are here to stay for the season. They are inlet with lace, and the wide sleeves are filled in with dainty lace ruffles, which take away much of the stiffness of the silk.

Bias bands are seen even on very thin materials. They are particularly dainty when carried out in dotted effects.

The picture shows a blue mull gown trimmed with lace insertion. It has a cape effect made of folds and insertions, and the bottom of the skirt is made full by the addition of wide ruffings.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

ACCESSORIES OF DRESS.

The Floral Sunshade a Smart Parisian Novelty—Lace Shawls.

The floral sunshade is a smart Parisian novelty, the design of lace which ornaments the same being outlined with small flowers such as banskia roses, pansies or violets.

Lace shawls and fichus promise to be very popular, and the wide cape of lace inlet with pieces of pongee is worn with the embroidered pongee skirt.

A new material which is being exploited in Paris just now is a soft variety of cloth in flesh pink, decorated with black spots. It is hardly heavier than crepe de chine and is very supple.

Silk coutil is now being used for petticoats, and these are much more durable than those of silk. A charming example in pale pink had wide frills composed of a latticework of tucking and diamond shaped applications.

EVENING GOWN.

A stock of coarse linen, embroidered in the color of the suit with which it is worn, is the latest French novelty for morning wear.

The straight front is slowly disappearing in favor of the more curved outline.

The picture shows an evening gown. The waist is trimmed with a wide berth having scalloped edges, and the entire gown is ornamented with waved ribbon ruchings.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

THE LATEST FROM PARIS.

Embroidered Cottons and Linens the Rage—Novelties in Laces.

Embroidered cotton and linen goods promise to be all the rage for warm weather wear. The less transparent muslins are also delightful for afternoon wear, specially in white. These dresses are trimmed with embroidery and valenciennes insertion. Batiste in light tan shade is very pretty embroidered in white.

Valenciennes lace is used on the thin muslins. The other dress materials, even the veilings, are trimmed this season with quite heavy laces and embroideries. Detachable medallions play also quite an important part among the season's trimmings, and scallops and detachable figures ornament the edges of the full sleeves.

ECRU STRAW HAT.

Embroidered and dyed laces are among the novelties, and a palm leaf design seen recently was enriched by pink roses embroidered in the center of each of the large leaves. This was to be used to trim a pink veiling gown. The long shouldered effect is in evidence more than ever, and the linings of transparent yokes are cut out off the shoulder instead of round, as formerly, in order to give this wide sloping effect.

Collarless waists are not to be worn as much as formerly, although a few are seen.

Among the season's novelties are suede buttons overlaid with metal, the color of the suede harmonizing with the shade of the gown. Perfectly exquisite are those of orange suede with design in steel. Suede buttons with just a rim of metal will also be much in evidence.

The picture shows an ecru straw hat faced with pink tulle. It is trimmed with a ruching and an ostrich feather.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

IN FASHION'S REALM.

Dainty Fronts For Linen Costumes. The New Summer Shirt Waists.

The new fronts to wear with the tailor made linen costumes are models of smartness. They are made of lace ruffings, of pale blue or pink muslin trimmed with ruffings of narrow valenciennes, or of dotted mull. They have plain foundation sleeves reaching to the elbow, but from there down the sleeve is composed of a multiplicity of ruffings which show below the short bolero sleeves of the linen coat.

Very attractive shirt waists are of the lingerie order. Coarse linen ones look well with frocks of the more severe description, and these are enriched with French knots and heavy embroidery done in white or pale blue linen thread.

VEILING SUIT.

For warm weather nothing, however, can be prettier than the blouse of fine Persian lawn trimmed with flower application done in lace, combined with handwork embroidery.

A smart taffeta frock in an odd shade of green seen recently had a very full skirt eased in at the waist. The bolero was quite full and was trimmed with tiny suede buttons and gray cording of the same shade.

Crepe marquise is a pretty new summer fabric that may be washed. It has a background of monotones with embroidered dots. Crepe armazine is similar to crepe marquise, having, however, silk stripes instead of dots. Very lovely, too, is the new cotton material, crepe princesse. Pompadour crepe is a new dress material combining the softness of crepe with the luster of silk and printed in Pompadour designs.

The cut shows a veiling suit trimmed with guipure lace and made up over lustrous white silk.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

Some Women Who Paint

One Makes Miniatures of Cats and Dogs

A FEW American women have made a specialty of animal painting. The most distinguished is Mattie A. Lotz, not widely known in her own country because she lives out of it for commercial reasons, like so many other gifted American artists. Miss Lotz goes to Egypt in winter, among the native villages, where she paints camels, Kabyle dogs and other animals of that region. She comes nearer being a second Rosa Bonheur than any other animal painter at present living. She loves animals and casts a spell of friendship over them.

Another gifted American woman painter of animals is Georgia Timken Fry. Mrs. Fry makes a specialty of sheep, and many a lifelike painting of these animals has appeared with her modest signature in the corner of it. She has also made some vivid pictures of the vanishing remnants of the Navajo Indians in the southwest.

One woman who lives in Chicago has made her own the hitherto unoccupied field of animal miniature painting. She is Mrs. Eva Webster Russell. Her special branch of work is at present reproducing in miniature the animal pets of persons who desire portraits of their favorites. She has also painted numerous pedigreed prize winners. There are those who actually wear as brooches the painted miniature of a dog or cat for all the world as if it were the picture of a baby.

In the delineating of pet cats and dogs Mrs. Russell is unrivaled. She has naturally that first requisite of a successful animal painter, a genuine love of the animals themselves. To her they are a never ending study as well as a source of income. She finds that animals associated with human beings come in time to display humanlike traits, as love, dislike, jealousy.

Dogs are notably jealous creatures, and once Mrs. Russell obtained the portrait of a dog she much desired to paint solely by working on his jealousy. Dogs and cats are the most restless of animals, and when you wish them to remain still dogs are as bad as cats. The dog Mrs. Russell wished to depict was an eminently tough subject. If she petted him he danced all over her; if she stopped petting him he slumped down and ceased to take an interest in things. He simply would not sit up and look alive.

Finally she began to paint the portrait of another dog in the lazy one's presence. That brought him to time instantly. He sprang up in a flash and from that moment was alive all over. It was as if he said to Mrs. Russell: "You shan't paint that other measly pup and leave me out. Here I am. Look at me!" After that the artist had no trouble in getting the portrait.

EVA WEBSTER RUSSELL.

In general men want pet dogs, women pet cats, painted. Women seem to take to cats in preference to dogs, while cats decidedly like women better than men, probably on account of woman's softer touch and gentler ways. It could not perhaps be because of that old libel which says cats and women are alike, could it?

Mrs. Russell has painted President Roosevelt's terrier Jack. One of the best subjects the artist has had is Maxine Elliott's Boston terrier Sport. Unmistakably Sport shows what an advantage it is to be educated. He has been trained to appear in some of his mistress' plays and does what he is told. All that had to be done with Sport was to get him upon a chair and tell him to stay there. Occasionally during a sitting he was petted, and something he liked was fed to him just to show he was appreciated because of being a good doggy.

One cat of mixed blood, Lucy Claire caught sight of her own partly finished portrait upon Mrs. Russell's easel and from that moment could not again be made to face it. Ella Wheeler Wilcox is a lover of cats and the owner of three, one of which Mrs. Russell has made miniatures.

Dogs have more vanity than cats. They are also more destructive. Some of the creatures painted by Mrs. Russell were so restless their pictures could only be had by means of photographs, from which the artist worked.

DORA DELLE DENISON.

MILLINERY NOTES.

Straight Brimmed Hats Are Returning to Favor—Net Blouses.

There is a tendency toward straight brims this season in millinery. These straight brims are seen especially in tiny sailor hats with exaggerated crowns. They are trimmed with wreaths of roses and smart bows.

The French sailor also comes in for its share of popularity. It is trimmed with roses, geraniums or other bright colored flowers.

Green is a very smart millinery tint, both in the vivid grass green shades and in the paler nile tints. A smart hat seen recently had a ruching of two shades of nile green ribbon going around the crown, and on the left side this was joined under a white owl's head.

The baby hat, which was so loudly heralded at the beginning of the season, has fallen into disfavor on account of its many limitations.

The black hat seems to have given way entirely to the hat of lighter tone, burnt straw especially. This, when trimmed with white lace or ostrich tips, is particularly becoming and goes with a great number of gowns.

YELLOW NET WAIST.

Blouse coats are now being made to pouch both back and front, and the wide girdle prevents the outlines of the figure from being entirely concealed.

Braids of all sizes and description are used both on tailor made and on dressy gowns, and these are worked into attractive patterns and combined with lace figurings.

Net blouses are very fashionable. In the picture we have a shirred blouse of yellow net. It has the long shouldered effect and deep yoke which are so fashionable.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

WHAT TO WEAR.

Costumes For Horseback Riding and Automobiling—Street Gowns.

A very dark shade of gray whipcord is the smart thing for horseback riding at present.

Gray and drab are also the favorite tints for automobile wear, for they show the dust least. Pongee and linen make admirable dust coats, particularly when relieved by a touch of red. The automobile cap to match generally has a curtain at the back.

The round walking length has been so generally adopted for street wear that costumes for the country do not differ materially from those intended for town wear. These ankle length skirts are now entirely made of the thinnest materials, such as veiling, pongees and embroidered linens. Mohair also plays an important part in the season's tailor mades, both for the dressier costumes and those intended for rough wear.

PONGEE GOWN.

The loose swinging jacket is the favorite mode, as it is even more generally becoming than the blouse.

Among the season's novelties are suits of black heavy meshed linen embroidered in white.

One of the modifications of the Napoleon hat has four sections turning upward, giving a hollow at the back a little to the right.

Bolero effects are here to stay and are to be seen on every hand. The new bolero, however, is very wide and quite without any attempt at being fitted. Quite often there is no visible shoulder seam, shoulder and seam being in one, after the fashion of a cape.

The picture shows a pongee gown trimmed with ecru applique worked in red. The hat is of ecru straw trimmed with cherries.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

A HOME PROBLEM.

Women Themselves Will Settle the Question of Domestic Service.

The Chicago Women's club held recently a conference on "Woman In Modern Industrialism." It is a good sign that much of their discussion concerned the home and work in the household. Wise observations also many of the ladies made, not merely "shooting off their mouths," after the too frequent manner of women.

The home department of the club had sent this question to sociologists and housewives all over the country: "How Can the Servant Girl Problem Be Solved?" The sum and substance of the answers is as follows:

Recognize that they are working at a trade.

Pay the experts by the hour.

Give them share in the family life.

Give them the best labor saving inventions.

Clearly define their duties. Don't order suppers after the hired girl has ended her day's work.

Eliminate the talk about social superiority and recognize the servant as a human worthy of consideration.

DOMESTIC UNIFORM.

Teach ignorant mistresses that caprice is not popular with the women who sell their time for specific duties.

Perhaps the best suggestion of all is that we must look on housework as a trade, thus taking it out of the department of mere rough labor. The fool contempt for manual labor which has prevailed even in this country is happily vanishing and we are learning the truth that work with the hands is exactly as honorable as that with the mere head and at the same time much more healthful.

The lack of training of the servant girl has done much to bring her trade into obloquy, but that is now being remedied in the numerous schools of housekeeping that club women and others are conducting. The raw, ignorant girl is taken and taught that the very foundation of her trade is to be immaculately clean and tidy in her person, in her kitchen and about her work. Uncleanliness in these respects is the first of the unpardonable sins in housekeeping, and the next is wastefulness. On the part of the one hiring the maid an unpardonable sin is to treat the sister woman who works for her as an inferior, belonging to a lower order of flesh and blood than herself. Another unpardonable sin of the employer is to "nag" the domestic worker day and night and to demand of her more than any woman can perform.

The elevation of housework to the rank of a trade, in which certificates of proficiency are given by the domestic science schools, will go far to remove the social ban that now hinders so many fine girls from entering domestic service.

A regular uniform, made shirt waist fashion, has been suggested for the houseworker. In Great Britain such a dress has already been largely adopted. There it is black and white, black sateen or alpaca, with, of course, voluminous and oft changed aprons for work. The waitress and nurse on duty have dainty white aprons, with plain white collars and cuffs. For this country a uniform of very dark blue, with the white apron, collar and cuffs, has been suggested.

Such a uniform for domestic workers will come into vogue if the next step of progress which has been planned be taken. It is that all domestic laborers, while classed as expert workers, as much as the plumber or house painter, shall have, like these, regular hours of employment. In order that this may be achieved the houseworker will usually live outside her employer's residence in a home of her own, going on duty at an hour fixed and going off when her day is done. Lodging houses specially for domestic workers will give them the advantages of the independent existence enjoyed by the shopgirl and other feminine day workers. Some of the great fat districts of the large cities this plan is already in operation.

One organization of women in the United States is helping to bring harmony and system into the chaos of problems that vex the modern home maker. It is the Women's Domestic Guild of America. In New York these ladies maintain a housekeeping school, an employment agency and recreation rooms for domestic workers who are off duty. The organization investigates both mistress and maid before sending a woman to service. It is now placing regularly 100 workers daily.

MARCIA W. CAMPBELL.

SUMMER STYLES.

Warm Weather Suits of Linen and Silk—Foulard Not Dressy.

Linen suits heavily appliqued with lace are the smart thing for warm weather wear. These costumes are made jacket and skirt fashion, and the little coats are very short and full, with equally short and full bell sleeves. Both skirt and jacket are embroidered and ornamented in a variety of ways, so that little of the original linen shows. None of the handsome linen and cotton gowns of this season are made with a view to the washtub. They are invariably sent to the cleaners to be dry cleaned.

Taffeta in a much softer weave than used formerly makes delightful little tailor mades. These have coats made blouse fashion, the sleeves having wide cuffs filled in with lace. Often to add a quaint touch little embroidered waistcoats of linen or pique are added to these blue or red taffeta costumes.

GRAY VEILING GOWN.

Every season sees some novelty in laces. This year it is the tiny knotted effects like the pin dots in veiling, and lace of this sort is in great vogue for sleeve frills and bands of insertion.

Foulard is not used so much this season as formerly. It is made up largely into shirt waist suits and general utility dresses. For dressy wear there are the plain surfaced materials, such as veiling and pongee, which last comes now in all the attractive colorings.

The illustration shows a costume of gray veiling trimmed with bands of a darker shade. With this is worn a white hat trimmed with crimson wings.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

COTTON COSTUMES.

Spots and Lozenges of Contrasting Shades For Trimmings.

Spots and lozenge shaped disks are ultra smart used in the way of trimming. Spotted fabrics of every kind are also considered very chic. Some of the spotted cottons make admirable trimming bands, or large spots are worked in ingrain cotton on stitched bands or on fancy cotton braid.

Unlined blouse costumes made of fine gingham or linen have the skirts eased in at the waist line, clearing the ground all around and finished at the bottom with from three to five large tucks. The waists are bloused both back and front and are worn with a lace or tulle bow under the chin and pretty frills in the sleeves.

WHITE LINEN WAIST.

Some of the best summer hats are of very fine dead white or black legborn. The newest show the high crown trimmed with bands of colored ribbon and a single huge rose with its foliage.

Scarlet linen makes an admirable tailor made or shirt waist suit, especially when relieved with crimson and white embroideries. A rich deep cream is a favorite in linens of the coarser weaves. This is very smart trimmed in royal blue or grass green.

Walking suits are tucked in clusters and the skirts are allowed to flare from the knees down.

The illustration shows a white linen waist trimmed with embroidery and bonlton lace.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, June 23, 1904.

Comparing Cities.

Plainfield is only a quarter of a century behind the age. Elizabeth, New Brunswick and other New Jersey cities about thirty years ago tried the experiment of having wooden pavements, which proved to be a signal failure and have everywhere been abandoned. But Plainfield is about to pave Watchung avenue with wooden blocks, and the newspapers there have neglected to inform the City Council of the utter worthlessness of such pavements for general use. — New Brunswick Home News.

It is but natural that New Brunswick and Elizabeth should be jealous of Plainfield, a model city with more improvements probably than any other town of its size in the United States. Over thirty miles of well kept macadamized street, an up-to-date paid fire department, a large and efficient police department, an unexcelled health bureau with a chemist and inspector always on the alert, the third largest free library in the State, a big hospital and an isolation hospital, underground storm sewers, a complete sanitary sewage disposal system with an filtration plant that challenges comparison, and a public school system that is considered by educational authorities in the East as a standard, and less saloons and a higher license than any place of its size in the State—these are some of the improvements that go to make Plainfield the queenly city of New Jersey.

Some of the things we have not got are horrible streets badly kept, noisy, some alleys, houses of ill-fame, an antiquated volunteer fire department, over a hundred saloons, many being of the disreputable type, shady hotels, corner-loafers, and a board of aldermen said to be controlled by saloon-keepers and politicians, street walkers, and a ragged police department. A finer class of citizens and better looking women are other proud boasts of Plainfield.

As for being twenty-five years behind the times when the Common Council plans to lay wooden pavements, that is the product of an ill informed editor who wastes his time writing rot and nonsense. The kind of wooden pavements which New Brunswick and Elizabeth had was not fit for anything short of kindling wood. The wood was of poor grade and it was merely soaked in tar and laid on planks in the streets. The type that Plainfield is considering is made of hard wood, Georgia pine, which is thoroughly dried and then treated with twenty-two pounds of preservative mixture to the cubic foot. This mixture is of creasote and rosin. The wood will not rot. The blocks are laid on a solid bed of concrete—not on planks. Boston, Lowell, Providence, Hartford, New York, New Rochelle, Baltimore, Jersey City, Newark, Pittsburg and Grand Rapids are using the wooden pavements with excellent results and on the recommendation of its able street commissioner, Plainfield is likely to follow the example of these cities in its business section.

A filthy city like New Brunswick has lots to learn from progressive Plainfield.

A Philadelphia declares that he will soon be able to make radium for less than the present cost, $500,000 a pound. He's apt to be a little slow, but we'll wait.

AMUSEMENTS.

Oscar Hammerstein has a dozen cats on his hill this week. They have come over from Europe in the care of their trainer, Tochow, especially to appear at the Paradise Roof Gardens this summer. This "Mysterious Face" is still making grimaces every night at 9:15, and "Parsifalia," the burlesque by Mr. Hammerstein himself, is yet in the ring. Other features are Spadoni, Young and DeVoie, the Gasch Sisters, Charles T. Aldrich, Rice and Prevost, Collins and Hart, Kartelli, and Willy Zimmerman. A goat has been added to the live stock exhibits.

The New York Roof Show has been re-arranged. Harrigan, the tramp juggler, is the chief addition. "Ned Wayburn's Girls," the deadline act, is now in the middle of the performance. The Giannini has shortened its programme. Various eliminations, suggested by the defects of the opening performance, have been made. Dukes, the man of phenomenal memory, will appear tomorrow night.

Trolley to Dunellen P. O.

The P. S. C. local trolley cars from Plainfield now run to the Dunellen postoffice without change. Ever since the trolleys have run from Plainfield, Dunellenites have been obliged to walk to the Plainfield line to catch the car. At postoffice connections is now made with the Round Brook cars.

HIGH SCHOOL POLISH ON 45

Board of Education Presents Diplomas to a Bright Lot of Young Men and Women.

DR. MACARTHUR SPEAKS

Distinguished Divine the Orator of the Evening—Valedictory by Miss Annie Broadnax, a Young Colored Woman, and Salutatory by Miss Anna Coriell Randall.

That Plainfield is deeply interested in its public school system was shown by the great crowd that attended the commencement exercises—better than ever—of the High School Thursday. An enthusiastic reception was given the forty-five graduates at the exercises held in the First Baptist church, which was handsomely decorated for the occasion.

As usual there was great interest manifested, not only in the graduation, but in the awards of prizes for special work. During the evening an attractive programme of music was rendered by Frank's New York orchestra, and in addition to the salutatory and valedictory, there were orations by VanWyck Brooks and Harold Chamberlain Fenno, and an exceedingly able address by Rev. Dr. Robert Stuart MacArthur, of the Calvary Baptist church, New York.

There was an innovation in the way the graduates took their seats on the platform. Instead of entering the edifice from the rear of the platform, they approached from the front of the church and preceded up the two main aisles two by two, while the orchestra rendered an appropriate march. As they took their positions, together with the members of the Board of Education and others who took part in the programme, several minutes' applause followed. The platform was tastefully decorated with palms, flowers and potted plants.

The programme was opened with an overture by the orchestra, followed with the invocation by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel. Another selection by the orchestra preceded the salutatory by Miss Anna Coriell Randall. This address was most creditable. Greetings were extended to the Board of Education and superintendent for their special thought and labor in making gifts of the most value to the pupils. Referring to the new High School, Miss Randall said: "We appreciate the efforts they have put forth to secure for us a commodious building. We are sorry that their plans could not have been accomplished during our course in school, but we are glad that in the near future their efforts promise to meet with the success which they so greatly deserve."

The young woman then referred to the gifts included in this school life as being three-fold. First the help and guidance of the teachers, next the comradeship of schoolmates and lastly the most permanent gift of all, that of the inspiration of books. Due credit was given to the principal and teachers as directors of intellectual development and for their sympathy and friendship.

"The Mission of American Art" was the subject of an oration by Van Wyck Brooks. In this the young man declared that no other phase of National life so generally embodies and so accurately expresses the National characteristics and ideals as the Nation's art. He then reviewed the part that Italy, Germany and Spain has taken in the world of art and spoke of the famous artists who have helped in the great work of education. He also referred to the work of art as carried on in this country and which has become a very part of education.

In glowing words of tribute Harold Chamberlain Fenno depicted in John Hay "The Ideal American," which was the subject of his oration. He told of his humble beginning and his steady but rapid rise to his present position as Secretary of State, where he exerts a world-wide influence in every affair of National importance as this country becomes one of the great world powers. He saw in John Hay the height to which a humble American citizen may reach even through luck, nor through double dealing, but by plain, honest, hard work.

In the opening part of the evening given by Dr. MacArthur, which followed, he took occasion to refer to the orations on art and John Hay and he declared that Mr. Hay was the foremost diplomat tonight beneath God's stars in the world. He then spoke on the "Elements of Success in Life," in his characteristic forcible manner.

He divided his subject into three parts indicating these elements: First, the possession of good health; second, the selection of high ideals and lastly, the performance of tremendous hard work. In speaking on the first element he said that it is not a privilege to have good health, that some people ought never to be sick, and if they are it is a reflection on themselves. He believed that the majority of people should be strong and well and to this face he attributed the success of many. Where one man is exhausted in making one blow, another one after striking twenty-five blows will be ready for another twenty-five.

He then briefly referred to Daniel Webster, Robert Browning and Robert Hall, the great preacher, showing in their characters that physical force so essential. He said that men who sin against their bodies sin against God, for their bodies are intended to be the temple of the Holy Ghost.

Coming to his second point, he urged the graduates to select high ideals and to study lofty specimens, whether it be in art or any other branch of education. "The trouble," the speaker said, "was that a person would often imitate the poorest elements in ideals. It was easier for persons to imitate Plato's defects than his good traits." In referring to a very poor opening delivery of Thomas Chalmers, the great preacher of Scotland, it was found that students found themselves imitating him in that respect. The speaker held Jesus Christ up as the one ideal to be followed and imitated.

Dr. MacArthur deplored the elements of genius in a boy and especially so if his mother thought likewise. He said that men who have attained success have worked hard. He then cited illustrations in Noah Webster, who was thirty-six years compiling a dictionary and in Daniel Webster, whom he considered the greatest parliamentary orator of the time. He said that he was a fiend on the subject of the dictionary and if he was going to be banished all he would ask for would be the Bible and a good dictionary. By getting a first-class dictionary and learning how to pick out the words and put them together he argued that anyone can become a Shakespeare or a Milton.

In conclusion Dr. MacArthur spoke of the possession of old character. "Reputation is seeming, but character is being," declared the speaker. "Put sixty years of pure life behind a lawyer, politician or a preacher, and he has power for good. You can but have a clean life. Be loyal to your country, your church and your God."

Following the address, Leander M. Lovell, of the Board of Education, presented the various prizes, each recipient receiving hearty applause.

More than usual interest was shown in the valedictory which followed. Miss Anna Frances Broadnax, the only colored member of the class, was given this honor, through meritorious work during her four years' work. She was given a cordial reception and for the excellence displayed in her composition and delivery, unstinted applause was received by her. Her essay appears in full in another column of today's issue.

The graduates are the Misses Harriett Mae Batchelor, Anna Frances Brodnax, Jean Douglass, Helen Robins, Evelyn May Berg, Bessie W. Bond, Martha Klein, Anna Coriell Randall, Mary Harriet Dunham, Dorothy Fleming, Mary Amerman Griggs, Elsie Harvey, Lucie Alice Burt, Marie Louise Pinch, Winifred Hayes, Helen Annetta Munro, Margaret Anne Pearce, Mary Alice St. John, Laura Estelle Bent, Antoinette Paine Moodey, Mary Daisy Shimer, Anna Louise Wenzel, Elizabeth Terriberry Wilson, Elizabeth Townley Ulrich, Augusta Wolfers Rugen, Bessye Rispah VanEyck, Frances Ludlow VanDeventer, Winifred Grace Wilcox, Margaret Frances Kenney, Wilhelmina McKie Patton, Martha Adelaide Robert, Jean Geraldine Hayman, Jessie Katherine Stevens, Mildred Josephine Spicer and Abbie Louise Lewis, and Francis Ketcham Anderson, VanWyck Brooks, Joseph Lord Tweedy, Charles Elliot, Lucius Tilghman Kooke, Frank Harding Lock, Monroe Hyde Long, Charles Fisher Neagle, Harold Chamberlain Fenno and Louis Book.

Of the young men who were graduated, Joseph Lord Tweedy will continue his studies at Princeton, Van Wyck Brooks will go to Harvard and Frank Harding Lock will go to Stevens. Miss Harriett Mae Batchelor will go to Wellesley. A small percentage of the graduates will go to college, a majority of the young men having planned to go to business and the young women will remain at home.

In conclusion the diplomas were awarded to the graduates by Dr. J. B. Probsco, president of the Board of Education.

After the commencement, the reception and dance to the graduates was held at the Casino under the auspices of the Alumni Association.

Operatic Singer Sails.

Miss Josephine Schaeffer, the former Plainfield girl who has come into prominence as an opera singer, sailed for Paris last Friday. It is said that she is to sing in an opera company there.

ALIS IS DEFEATED IN FINE EXHIBITION

Crack Hoboken Aggregation Wins the Game by a Score of 9 to 5.

BADGLEY'S POOR WORK

GOOD STICK HANDLING AND BRILLIANT FIELDING AS FEATURES.

Walton, Quinby, Davis and Farmer Carry Off Honors—Two Thousand Fans Present—The Scores in Detail.

Inability to hit at opportune times, together with the poor showing made by Badgley, the Lehigh University pitcher, in the opening two innings, tells the story of the second defeat of the Alis team on Saturday. The local team put up a good exhibition against the crack Hoboken aggregation, and it is believed by many that had Davis pitched the entire game the score would have been much closer, and possibly 5 to 4 in favor of Alis. However, it was a fine game and the nineteen hundred fans present were pleased, although they would have preferred to see Alis win.

It was a fast exhibition from start to finish, the coaching of Tiernan, of the visiting team, being a feature. Badgley, the college twirler, had a most unfortunate opening and many felt sorry for him. He was a trifle wild, and Hoboken netted a total of four runs while he stood on the firing line. In the first inning Kiernan got a double, Shortell was hit with the ball, Wall and Heckman singled, scoring two runs. In the second inning Kiernan was hit, Shortell singled and Lamar doubled, bringing in two more runs. This was a good lead, while in the first three innings Alis drew blanks. Badgley was relieved by Davis in the third inning and he kept the hits well scattered.

In the sixth inning Walton started a merry go round for four runs. The short-stop, Quinby and Creegan each singled. These hits with a base on balls and an error by Shortell resulted in four runs. Alis got its first run in the fourth. Quinby doubled, Oregan sacrificed and McGoey singled, bringing Quinby home. In addition to his excellent pitching, Davis distinguished himself with a three bagger, only to be left on base.

Farmer, who has been hitting the ball hard, kept up his good work by making a three bagger and a single. He was a trifle slow in running bases, previous experiences making him exercise more care in this matter. Behind the bat he maintained his clever work.

Bradley, at third, was not up to his standard, either in stick work or in the field, much to the disappointment of his friends. Quinby played his same snappy game, giving a fine exhibition in the field and in base stealing. He touched McKenna for a double and two singles. In all Alis got ten hits, against thirteen for Hoboken. In the fourth inning Farmer, Walton and Quinby made a pretty double play, and in the seventh another double was made by Davis, Farmer and Quinby.

The contest was marked by plenty of hitting, brilliant fielding and few errors. The visitors made a good impression, and when they return here next will be greeted by even a larger crowd.

The score in detail:

ALIS.

	R	1B	PO	A	E
Walton, ss	1	1	1	3	1
Quinby, 2b	2	3	5	3	0
Oregan, lf	0	1	1	0	0
Farmer, c	1	2	5	3	0
McGoey, cf	0	1	2	0	0
Lynch, rf	0	1	2	1	0
Conven, 1b	0	0	13	0	0
Bradley, 3b	0	0	0	1	0
Badgley, p	0	0	0	1	0
Davis, p	0	1	0	4	0
	5	10	27	15	1

HOBOKEN.

	R	1B	PO	A	E
Kiernan, ss	2	1	2	4	0
Shortell, 3b	1	1	2	3	1
Wall, rf	1	1	1	0	0
Shakelton, lf	0	2	3	0	0
Heckman, 2b	0	0	3	2	0
Orland, 1b	1	2	9	2	1
Andeberg, cf	0	0	2	0	0
Lamar, c	1	2	9	1	1
McKenna, p	0	0	1	1	0
	9	13	27	11	3

Score by innings:

Alis	0	0	0	1	0	4	0	0	0	—5
Hoboken	2	2	0	0	1	2	0	2	—9

Earned runs—Kiernan, Shakelton, Quinby, 2; Walton. Two-base hits—Kiernan, Lamar, Quinby, Shakleton. Three-base hits—Farmer, Davis, Heckman. First base on balls—Off Davis, 4; off McKenna, 1. Struck out—By Badgley, 1; by Davis, 2; by McKenna, 6. Left on bases—Hoboken, 4; Alis, 4. Double plays—Walton, Quinby and Conven; Davis, Farmer and Quinby. Passed balls—Farmer, 1; Lamar, 2. First base on errors—Hoboken 1; Alis, 1. Hit by pitcher — By Badgley, Shortell and Kiernan, by Davis, Driscoll. Time of game—1:50. Umpire—Merity. Attendance—1,900.

GOLF ENTHUSIASTS FOLLOW ANCIENT GAME

Miss VanBoskerck and Willard Wadsworth Win at Hillside Course.

LIVELY COMPETITIONS

REV. DR. CARROLL WINS FIRST HONORS AT PARK GOLF CLUB.

Team Match With Colonia Golf Club Postponed—Westfield Defeats Westchester Team in a Closely Contested Match.

While the horse show attracted many who would otherwise play golf, there was a good field at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, on Saturday, to take part in the several events. In the morning Miss Maude VanBoskerck won the Gilbert cup, in the finals played in the morning, with a score of 102, 12—90. Other scores were Mrs. N. P. Rogers, 92, plus 6—110; Miss Edith Tracy, 114, 10—104.

Play for the Golf Committee and Men's Handicap cups were the chief events of the afternoon. Willard Wadsworth won a leg on the Men's Handicap cup and he also won first honors in the weekly competition, while H. B. Shoemaker, J. A. Tompkins and H. L. Hall divided the remaining three points with a net score of 76.

These scores were posted for both cups:

Willard Wadsworth, 78, 5—73; E. B. Shoemaker, 89, 13—76; J. A. Tompkins, 90, 14—76; H. L. Hall, 100, 24—76; C. B. Morgan, 87, 9—78; W. L. Glenney, 79, 0—79; S. D. Lounsbery, 88, 8—80; Leighton Calkins, 85, 3—82; C. A. Stover, 97, 15—83; H. D. Hibbard, 92, 9—86; A. E. Barclay, 110, 25—85; F. A. Clark, 99, 12—87; Olaf Sangstad, 100, 8—92; F. H. Andrews, 114, 20—94.

There was a goodly number of contestants at the Park Golf Club on Saturday, the events being the weekly competition for the President's and Park Golf Club cups. By request of the Colonia Golf Club, the East Jersey Golf Club team match was postponed, the date to be fixed later.

Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, G. T. Rogers, Herbert Rogers, Arthur Peck and Rev. J. O. McKelvey won the honors for the President's cup, while Rev. Dr. Carroll, Arthur Peck and Herbert Rogers won the points in the scratch competition. The scores:

Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, 100, 19—81; George T. Rogers, 101, 16—85; Herbert Rogers, 96, 11—85; Arthur Peck, 98, 7—86; Rev. J. O. McKelvey, 99, 13—86; Samuel Townsend, 104, 15—89; Morgan T. Townsend, 89, 0—89; Charles A. Reed, 99, 8—91.

The Westfield Golf Club team defeated a team from the Westchester Golf Club on Saturday by 5 points to 1, on the Nassau system. The competition was close throughout. After the match the visiting team was entertained at dinner by the home club. The summary:

Westfield—M. Whitlatch, 0; R. I. Townley, 1; E. D. Floyd, 1; W. M. Townley, 0; F. P. Condit, 1; J. A. Woodward, 0; W. J. Rogers, Jr., 0. Total, 3.

Westchester—A. D. Compton, 0; M. R. Palmer, 0; D. L. Manson, 0; D. E. Walker, 1; E. E. Foley, 0; F. S. Keeler, 1; A. Yauch, 0. Total, 2.

Y. M. C. A. MEETS DEFEAT

WESTFIELD A. C. U. W. NINE WINS BY SCORE OF 8 TO 3.

Fear that a hoodoo of some sort, is pursuing them, is beginning to chill the hearts of the baseball players of the local Y. M. C. A. since the Westfield A. C. U. W. nine put it over them to the tune of 8 to 3, Saturday afternoon.

The game took place at the Myrtle avenue grounds.

The lineup and score follow: Plainfield Y. M. C. A.—Whitley, p; Overton, c; Jackson, 1b; Cooley, 2b; Marsh, 3b; Conover, ss; Smith, lf; Armstrong, Humble, cf; Woodland, rf. Westfield A. C. U. W.—Hagerman, p; Carey, c; Flagg, 1b; Irwin, 2b; Smith, 3b; Carpenter, ss; Miller, lf; Tobin, cf; Kelley, rf.

Westfield ..... 3 0 0 1 2 0 1 0 8—8
Plainfield ..... 1 0 0 0 2 0 0 0 0—3

McVey, umpire.

Call Men Want Office.

Considerable rivalry for the captaincy of Hose Company No. 2, of the borough fire department, left vacant by the dismissal of William Barry, convicted last week of ringing in a false alarm, has developed among the call men. The appointment rests with the Mayor, subject to confirmation by the Council. Jerry Foss is apparently the leader among the candidates, and he is generally regarded as the appointee.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Standard Railroad of America.

PROTECTED THROUGHOUT BY THE ELECTRIC AUTOMATIC BLOCK SIGNAL SYSTEM.

On and After May 29, 1904.

Trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

7 a m—Main Line Express daily, with Parlor and Passenger Coaches for Philadelphia, Pittsburg and Cleveland, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.

7 a m—Chicago and St. Louis Express, daily, with Pullman Vestibule Parlor, Sleeping and Dining Cars for Louisville, Indianapolis, Chicago and St. Louis; Dining Car.

7 a m—Pittsburg Express, daily, with Vestibule Sleeping Cars and Dining Car, for Pittsburg and Chicago.

12 p m—Pacific Express, daily, with Pullman Vestibule Parlor Cars, for Pittsburg, Toledo and Chicago, daily; for Knoxville and Shenandoah Valley Route, for Cleveland, Sandusky and Put-in-Bay.

4 p m—Accommodation for Red Bank, daily except Sunday.

4 p m—Express for Philadelphia, Atlantic City, Washington, Pittsburg and Chicago, daily.

5 p m—Pacific Express, daily, with Pullman Vestibule Parlor, Dining and Observation Cars for Pittsburg, Chicago and St. Louis; Dining Car.

For Newark and New York—5 28, 6 07, 6 44, 7 15, 7 45, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 15, 9 30, 9 45, 10 00, 10 15, 10 30, 10 45, 11 00, 11 15, 11 30 a m, 12 00 (Limited) noon, 12 15, 12 30, 12 45, 1 00, 1 15, 1 30, 1 45, 2 00, 2 15, 2 30, 2 45, 3 00, 3 15, 3 30, 3 45, 4 00, 4 15, 4 30, 4 45, 5 00, 5 15, 5 30, 5 45, 6 00, 6 15, 6 30, 6 45, 7 00, 7 15, 7 45, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night. Sundays, 5 28, 6 07, 6 44, 7 15, 7 45, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00 a m, 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night.

For New York only, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a m, 12 00 noon, 1 00, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m. Sundays, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 a m, 12 00 noon, 1 00, 2 00, 3 00, 4 00, 5 00, 6 00, 7 00, 8 00, 9 00, 10 00, 11 00 p m.

For Philadelphia, 1 05, 5 45, 8 05, 8 38, 9 07, 9 38, 10 07, 11 07 a m, 12 00, 1 04, 2 04, 3 04, 4 04, 5 04, 6 04, 7 04, 8 04, 9 04, 10 04, 11 04 p m, 12 01 night. Sundays, 1 05, 5 45, 8 05, 8 38, 9 07, 9 38, 10 07, 11 07 a m, 12 00, 1 04, 2 04, 3 04, 4 04, 5 04, 6 04, 7 04, 8 04, 9 04, 10 04, 11 04 p m, 12 01 night.

For Somerville—6 28, 7 15, 8 00, 9 05, 11 09 a m, 12 09, 1 09, 2 09, 3 09, 4 09, 5 09, 6 09, 7 09, 8 09, 9 09, 11 09 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m, 5 09 p m.

For Bound Brook and Ocean Grove, etc.—8 11, 11 24 a m, 3 09, 5 09 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m, 5 09 p m.

For Lehigh Valley and Allentown—7 17, 8 51, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

"Chancy" cars at Bound Brook.

J. R. WOOD, General Manager. E. M. BUNT, Vice Pres. & Gen. Mgr. Gen. Pass. Agent.

Lehigh Valley Railroad

Time Table in Effect Nov. 22, 1903

LEAVE SOUTH PLAINFIELD: 8 03 a m, daily (except Sunday) local to Manchester.

9 03 a m, daily for Easton, Wilkes-Barre, Rochester, Buffalo and principal intermediate stations, connects at Depew Junction for Niagara Falls and Suspension Bridge.

1 57 p m, daily local for Easton, Wauchunk, Allentown, Portsville and Manchester.

6 06 p m, daily (except Sunday) "Wilkes-Barre and Scranton Express" Solid vestibule train for Easton, Harrisburg, Parlor Car via D. & H. R. R. to Scranton and Carbondale.

8 01 p m, daily (except Sunday) local to Easton.

8 40 p m, daily solid vestibule train to Buffalo, Toronto and Chicago and principal intermediate stations, connects at Manchester.

FRANK BOWLBY, City Ticket Agent, 258 West Front Street, Plainfield, N. J. Telephone 114-2.

Arrival and Departure of Mails.

PLAINFIELD POSTOFFICE.

Office open on Sundays, closed on Mondays. On Saturday's closes half hour later.

NEW YORK MAILS.

Arrive—7.30, 8.40, 10.30 a. m., 12.30, 2.30, 5.30, 8.30 p. m.
Close—7.30, 8.40, 10.30 a. m., 12.30, 2.30, 5.30, 7.45 p. m.

SOMERVILLE and BASTON.

Arrive—8.40 a. m., 12.30, 5.30 p. m.
Close—7.30 a. m.; 1.30 and 4.30 p. m.

ELIZABETH—Direct.

Arrive—8.40 a. m., 12.30, 5.30 p. m.
Close—7.30 a. m.; 1.30, 4.30, 6.30 p. m.

PENNSYLVANIA—West of Easton.

Close 12.30 p. m.

NEWARK—Direct.

Arrive—8.40 a. m.; 2.30, 5.30 p. m.
Close—7.30, 10.30 a. m.; 1.30, 4.30 and 6.30 p. m.

PHILADELPHIA and WESTERN.

Arrive—7.30, 8.40, 11.30 a. m., 2.30 and 7.30 p. m.
Close—7.15, 7.30, 8.30 a. m., 12.30, 4.30, 7.45 p. m.

Through fast mail for the West and South close 4.30 and 7.15 p. m.

Through fast mail for East close 1.30 and 7.30 p. m.

WATCHUNG, WARRENVILLE & GALLIA (Mt. Bethel)

Arrive—1.30 p. m. Close—8.00 a. m.

Watchung—Arrive 9.45 p. m. Close 5.30 p. m.

SUNDAY MAILS.

Office open from 9.30 to 10.30 a.m.

Mail closes at 6.15 p. m.

E. H. BIRD, P. M.

SHERIFF'S SALE.—In Chancery of New Jersey. Between William M. Stillman, assignee, etc., complainant, and Mary S. Myrick et al., defendants. By virtue of the above-stated writ of fi. fa. to me directed and delivered, I will expose for sale at public vendue, on WEDNESDAY, THE TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY OF JULY, next, between the hours of twelve and five o'clock in the afternoon of the said day, that is to say at two o'clock p. m., at the sheriff's office, in Elizabeth, in the county of Union, and State of New Jersey.

All the right, title and interest of the said defendants, Mary S. Myrick et al., being or belonging to the City of Plainfield, in the county of Union, and State of New Jersey.

Which is bounded and described as follows, viz: All that certain tract or parcel of land and premises situate, lying and being in the City of Plainfield, in the county of Union, and State of New Jersey.

Beginning at a stake at the intersection of the centre line of Grant avenue, with Pemberton avenue, and running thence (1) westerly in the middle of Pemberton avenue, two hundred and eighty-five feet to a stake; thence (2) at right angles in the line between lands of (formerly) Fish thence northerly along said line one hundred and eighty feet to a stake; thence easterly and parallel with Pemberton avenue two hundred and fifty-four feet and three inches to a stake in the centre line of Grant avenue; thence in the middle of Grant avenue, southerly one hundred and eighty feet to the place of beginning.

H. FRANK CORNELL, Sheriff.

Asa F. Randolph, Solicitor.
Dated June 23, 1904. Fee $6.30 6 23 5

Junior Tennis Tournament.

The junior tennis tournament at the Y. M. C. A. is completed except the final game which will be between Caldwell and Freeman, Caldwell having defeated Morris, 6-1, 6-1, and Freeman having vanquished Pindetson, 6 0, 6 1.

Capt. Tieman Hors. Engaged.

The engagement is announced of Captain Tieman Horn, of Fort Hamilton, and Mrs. Mabel Prettyman, of Highwood, N. J. Captain Horn was a former Plainfielder, having spent his boyhood days here and later was graduated from West Point.

Motor for Pipe Organ.

The vestry of the Church of the Holy Cross has placed an order for a Roberts' Duplex Gem Organ Motor and the contract let for making the proper water connections and placing the machine on a foundation.

William Shaw, of Newton, Sussex County, is visiting his brother, Druggist H. J. Shaw.

Reading System

New Jersey Central.

Stations in New York foot of L berty, and South Ferry, Whitehall Streets.

TIMETABLE IN EFFECT MAY 15, 1904.

For New York—5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 6 45, 7 00, 7 15, 7 30, 7 45, 8 00, 8 15, 8 30, 8 45, 9 00, 9 15, 9 30, 9 45, 10 00, 10 15, 10 30, 10 45, 11 00, 11 15, 11 30 a m, 12 00 noon, 12 15, 12 30, 12 45, 1 00, 1 15, 1 30, 1 45, 2 00, 2 15, 2 30, 2 45, 3 00, 3 15, 3 30, 3 45, 4 00, 4 15, 4 30, 4 45, 5 00, 5 15, 5 30, 5 45, 6 00, 6 15, 6 30, 6 45, 7 00, 7 15, 7 30, 7 45, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night. Sundays—5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00 a m, 12 00 noon, 12 30, 1 00, 1 30, 2 00, 2 30, 3 00, 3 30, 4 00, 4 30, 5 00, 5 30, 6 00, 6 30, 7 00, 7 30, 8 00, 8 30, 9 00, 9 30, 10 00, 10 30, 11 00 p m, 12 01 night.

For Plainfield—5 15, 11 00 a m, 5 09 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m.

For Bethlehem, Allentown and Mauch Chunk—8 45 a m, 5 09 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m.

For Easton—8 45 a m, 5 09 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m.

For Lambertville and Trenton—7 15, 8 45, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 5 09 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m, 5 09 p m.

For Lower Branch and Ocean Grove, etc.—8 11, 11 24 a m, 3 09, 5 09 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m, 5 09 p m.

For Long Branch and Intermediate points—9 27 a m, 1 18, 5 09 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m.

For Philadelphia and Intermediate points—5 15, 7 15, 8 45, 9 05, 11 00 a m, 5 09 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m.

For Tom's River and Barnegat—9 27 a m, 1 18, 5 09 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m.

For Bethlehem, Allentown and Mauch Chunk, via Easton—8 45 a m, 5 09 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m.

For Monmouth Beach—9 27 a m, 1 18 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m.

For Asbury Park—9 27 a m, 1 18, 5 09 p m. Sundays—8 45 a m.

For Trenton—7 17, 7 32, 7 45, 8 45, 9 05, 10 51, 11 00 a m, 12 01, 1 18, 2 45, 5 09, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

"Chancy" cars at Bound Brook.

For Trenton—7 17, 7 32, 7 45, 8 45, 9 05, 10 51, 11 00 a m, 12 01, 1 18, 2 45, 5 09, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Philadelphia—7 17, 7 32, 7 45, 8 45, 9 05, 10 51, 11 00 a m, 12 01, 1 18, 2 45, 5 09, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Bethlehem, Allentown and Mauch Chunk—7 17, 8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Easton—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Reading—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Harrisburg—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Pittsburg—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Chicago—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Cincinnati—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For St. Louis—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Louisville—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Indianapolis—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Cleveland—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Toledo—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Detroit—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Buffalo—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Niagara Falls—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Rochester—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Syracuse—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Albany—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Boston—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Portland—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Montreal—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Quebec—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m. Sundays—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2 45, 6 45, 7 57 p m.

For Halifax—8 45, 9 05, 10 51 a m, 2

HORSE SHOW A TRIUMPH

As on Friday Twelve Classes Are Judged on Saturday at the Supurb Exhibition.

SOCIETY THRONGS PARK

Everyone is Well Pleased Over Initial Effort, and It is Planned to Produce a Bigger and Better Show Next Year—Those Who Aided in the Affair.

Favored again with ideal weather, the horse show closed Saturday afternoon at the Plainfield Driving Park in the blaze of glory born of unqualified success. The attendance was double that of the opening day, fully 1,000 people witnessing the display of horseflesh and horsemanship. The grandstand was almost filled with society people, not only of this city but from the leading suburban towns of the metropolitan district, and fashionable rigs lined the rail.

As on Friday, twelve classes were judged. The special feature was a hurdle race for four-year-olds and upward. The prizes were awarded as follows:

Class 2, pairs of roadsters, any height, to wagon: Sadie MacGreagor, ch m, and Edmund Medio, b m, E. R. and H. L. Ladew, Glen Cove, L. I., first; Miss Banahan, b m, and Little Elsie, b m, W. J. Buttfield, this city, second; Vapo, ch m, and Cresolene, ch m, A. L. Page, Madison, third. Four entries. First prize, cup.

Class 27, (local), ponies in harness: Pilot Boy, b g, R. E. Hallock, first; Bo-Peep, skewbald g, Miss Blanche Buttfield, second. Three entries; Lady Boss, Miss Annie Fisk, scratched. First prize, cup.

Class 6, pairs in harness: Black Pattie, blk m, and Virginia Coon, blk g, J. T. Spratley, New York, first; Katzenjammer Kid, blk g, and Buster Brown, gr g, Mrs. Edward Ladew, Glen Cove, L. I., second; Town Talk, ch g, and Bobby Burns, ch g, G. D. King, Springboro, Pa., third. Four entries. First prize, $40; second, $10.

Class 14, combination harness and saddle horses: Harriette, br m, George Watson, Jr., New York, first; All Ablaze, ch m, H. G. McElwaine, New York, second; Ebony, blk m, J. G. Lewis, New York, third. Three entries, five scratched, all Plainfield horses. First prize, $40; second, $10.

Class 26, (local) ponies in harness, 13. or under, children driving: White Queen, gr m, Master Edward Wallace, first; Maxie, ch m, Master Marion S. Ackerman, Jr., second; Daisy, piebald m, n, Miss Dorothy McCutcheon, third. Five entries. First prize, cup.

Class 22, jumpers: Buck, ch g, Mrs. A. E. Dietrich, New York, first; Nimble, ch m, Charles Pfizer, Bernardsville, second; Rifle, b g, Fair Acres Farm, Westfield, third. Four horses entries. First prize, $40; second, $10.

Class 11, horses and runabouts: Katzenjammer Kid, blk g, Mrs. E. R. Ladew, Glen Cove, L. I., first; Baby Wilks, ch g, Thomas Dickson, Morristown, second; Buster Brown, gr g, Mrs. E. R. Ladew, Glen Cove, L. I., third. Eight entries, two scratched. First prize, $40; second, $10.

Class 16, saddle horses: Corine, ch m, J. T. Spratley, first; All Ablaze, ch m, H. G. McElwaine, New York, second; Ebony, blk m, J. W. Lewis, New York third. Seven entries. First prize, saddle; second, $10.

Class 1, roadsters to wagon: Sadie MacGreagor, ch m, E. R. Ladew, Glen Cove, L. I., first; Miss Banahan, b m, W. J. Buttfield, this city, second; Elsinore Medio, b m, H. S. Ladew, Glen Cove, third. Nine entries, two scratches, one A. C. Blair's Tray of Diamonds. First prize, cup.

Class 34, (local) horses in harness: Ragsey, br m, Mrs. P. H. Stewart, first; Messenger Boy, b g, Mrs. R. A. Fairbairn, Westfield, second; Toby, b g, Mrs. Lewis E. Waring, third. Seven entries, two scratched, Lady Boss, Miss Annie Fisk, scratched.

Class 17, saddle horses: Black Diamond, blk g, Charles Holloway, Hempstead, L. I., first; Harriette, br m, George Watson, Jr., New York, second; Glasgow Belle, b m, H. G. McElwaine, third. Eight entries. First prize, $40; second, $10.

Class 7, harness horses, over 15 2: Marvel, b g, George Watson, New York, first; Flower King, br g, Tonzo Sauvage, Newark, second; Archer, br g, G. D. King, Springboro, Pa., third. Seven entries, one scratched, A. C. Blair's unnamed chestnut horse. First prize, $40; second, $10.

The hurdle race completed the programme. It was for one and a half miles, over nine flights of hurdles, at 145 pounds. Yelp, owned by L. Trowbridge Mastin, of New York, took the race from the other three entries without straining himself, in the Yeast Meadow Lark, owned by Louis Dolger, Elizabeth, was an easy second. Hiawander, owned by S. VanShaick, Garden City, L. I., came in third. The stake amounted to fifty dollars.

Every measure of success hoped for by the management has been attained by the show. Financially as well as otherwise, the event has been completely successful, a good deal more than the expenses having been cleared.

This one show has put Plainfield in the front rank of open-air show towns. Lakewood, where the palm for fine shows outside of the New York and Philadelphia exhibitions, has rested, was discountenanced by the local show. There were more entries here, and the other features were just as good. The exhibitors were highly pleased with the way in which the show was conducted. Most of them declared that they had been treated better here than anywhere else.

All these things mean that the perpetuation of the show as an annual event is assured. Next year the show will be conducted on even a larger and more thorough scale. All the exhibitors have determined to return here, and the majority of them have promised to bring others into the show. The management will erect its own stables near the track.

Credits for the success of the show belongs to the executive committee of the general committee, and particularly to one or two of its individual members. Lewis E. Waring, notably, worked hard to make the affair go, and he was ably seconded by Lewis G. Timpson. The full executive committee is as follows:

J. Herbert Case, George A. Beaton, William J. Buttfield, Robert A. Fairbairn, Charles C. Fisk, Daniel F. Gimbel, Francis DeL. Hyde, J. Wesley Johnson, Dr. M. O'Malley Knott, Edward H. Ladd, Jr., George P. Mellick, Henry A. Talmadge, 2d., Orville T. Waring, Lewis S. Waring.

The general committee, which included the most prominent men on both sides of the brook, comprised Marion S. Ackerman, George A. Beaton, Harry A. Bourne, Paul T. Brown, William J. Buttfield, William A. Coddington, S. A. Crunkshank, Martin I. Cooley, H. B. Condit, T. S. Davis, M. D., Robert A. Fairbairn, Edward L. Finch, Charles J. Fisk, Charles D. Freeman, John E. Greene, Jabez Gilbert, Daniel F. Ginna, George D. Hallock, John I. Holly, B. VanD. Hedges, M. D., Francis DeL. Hyde, DeWitt C. Ivins, Henry C. Irons, O. L. Jenkins, M. D., J. Wesley Johnson, William T. Kirk, Edward H. Ladd, Jr., Edward F. Lowe, Henry W. Lowe, George P. Mellick, Charles D. McCutcheon, Craig A. Marsh, Arthur L. Otterson, John W. Pearle, Joseph W. Reinhart, David H. Rowland, Robert Rushmore, Charles A. Reed, Harry G. Runkle, Percy Stewart, S. W. Sharp, Joseph M. Shellabarger, Alfred H. Sreull, Augustus D. Shepard, Jr., Rutherford M. Shepard, Newton B. Smalley, David C. Smalley, J. P. Stevens, William P. Smith, Henry A. Talmadge, 2d., Lewis G. Timpson, Evarts Tracy, Thomas R. VanBoskerck, George T. VanBoskerck, P. V. R. VanWyck, Edward M. VanBuren, Anthony G. Vail, Orville T. Waring, William F. Williams, J. V. N. Willis, Theodore D. Wilson.

L. E. Waring was chairman of the committee; Dr. M. O'M. Knott, secretary; J. Herbert Case, treasurer; and W. S. Blitz, a professional horse show man, assistant secretary. T. R. VanBoskerck, Evarts Tracy, L. G. Timpson and G. T. VanBoskerck were the grounds committee. Mane Edwards had charge of the ticket-taking and the gate attendants.

Plainfield horses were prominent in all but one or two of the classes. They won several blue ribbons, and a gratifying share of the other prizes, and that in competition with some of the best horseflesh in this section of the country.

Twelve classes and a pony race were on the programme. The judges were Dr. F. C. Grenside, Louis Haight, James G. Marshall, all of New York; and George Willing, of Philadelphia. They discharged their duties carefully, and popular opinion agreed with them in every decision.

The show opened at 2:30 o'clock. It was timed to bring the last class on at 5:55, but the schedule dragged for various reasons—none of which were tiresome, however—and it was not until 6:30 that the programme for the afternoon ended.

The classes came up in the following order. The number of horses and the ribbon winners, and the prizes offered, are noted.

Classes 23 and 26 were local, the entries being confined to horses owned in Union, Middlesex and Somerset counties

Class 4, pacers, any height, to wagon: Lizzie H, ch m, owned by J. Girard Keenan, Elizabeth, first; Ned Davis, b g, owned by D. C. Smalley, Plainfield, second. Four entries. A. C. Blair's Rex and G. P. Mellick's Lady Jane scratched. First prize, cup.

Class 8, pairs in harness over 15.2: Archer, br g, and Jim Crow, br g, owned by G. D. King, Springboro, Pa., first; Dunbeau, b m, and Duke, b g, owned by H. G. Runkle, this city, second; Maud, br m, Mary, br m, Ballentine Rose, Bernardsville, third. Four entries. First prize, $40; second prize, $10.

Class 19, ponies under saddle, 14 2 or under: Lady Rose, b m, Miss Annie G. Fisk, this city, owner, first; Pilot Boy, b g, Ralph E. Hallock, this city, second; Bo-Peep, skewbald g, Miss Blanche Buttfield, North Plainfield, third. Five entries. First prize, $25; second, $10.

Class 5, horses in harness, over 14.2, under 15.3: Mignonette, ch m, John T. Spratley, New York, first; Katzenjammer Kid, blk g, Mrs. Edward R. Ladew, Glen Cove, L. I., second; Buster Brown, gr g, Mrs. Edward R. Ladew, Glen Cove, L. I. Eight entries. First prize, $40; second, $10.

Class 15, ladies' saddle horses, ladies riding: Corine, ch m, John T. Spratley, first; Black Diamond, blk g, Charles Holloway, Hempstead, L. I., second; All Ablaze, ch m, H. G. McElwaine, New York, third. First prize, $40; second prize, $10.

Class 21, jumpers, performances over fences only counting: Buck, ch g, Mrs. A. E. Dietrich, New York, first; Freelance, gr g, S. J. Holloway, Hartsdale, N. Y., second; Rifle, b g, Fair Acres Farm, Westfield, third. Fourteen entries, two scratched, one belonging to J. O. Cooley. First prize, $40; second, $10.

Class 13, tandems: Buster Brown, gr g, and Katzenjammer Kid, blk g, Mrs. Edward R. Ladew, first; Flower King, br g, and Flower Girl, br m, Tonzo Sauvage, Newark, second; Master Claude, b g, and Miss Earle, b m, Miss Luella Day, South Orange, third. Three entries. First prize, $40; second prize, $10.

Class 33, pairs in harness: Duke and Duchess, H. G. Hyde, J. Wesley Johnson, Dr. M. O'Malley Knott, Edward H. Ladd, Jr., George P. Mellick, Henry A. Talmadge, 2d., Orville T. Waring, Lewis S. Waring.

The general committee, which included the most prominent men on both sides of the brook, comprised Marion S. Ackerman, George A. Beaton, Harry A. Bourne, Paul T. Brown, William J. Buttfield, William A. Coddington, S. A. Crunkshank, Martin I. Cooley, H. B. Condit, T. S. Davis, M. D., Robert A. Fairbairn, Edward L. Finch, Charles J. Fisk, Charles D. Freeman, John E. Greene, Jabez Gilbert, Daniel F. Ginna, George D. Hallock, John I. Holly, B. VanD. Hedges, M. D., Francis DeL. Hyde, DeWitt C. Ivins, Henry C. Irons, O. L. Jenkins, M. D., J. Wesley Johnson, William T. Kirk, Edward H. Ladd, Jr., Edward F. Lowe, Henry W. Lowe, George P. Mellick, Charles D. McCutcheon, Craig A. Marsh, Arthur L. Otterson, John W. Pearle, Joseph W. Reinhart, David H. Rowland, Robert Rushmore, Charles A. Reed, Harry G. Runkle, Percy Stewart, S. W. Sharp, Joseph M. Shellabarger, Alfred H. Sreull, Augustus D. Shepard, Jr., Rutherford M. Shepard, Newton B. Smalley, David C. Smalley, J. P. Stevens, William P. Smith, Henry A. Talmadge, 2d., Lewis G. Timpson, Evarts Tracy, Thomas R. VanBoskerck, George T. VanBoskerck, P. V. R. VanWyck, Edward M. VanBuren, Anthony G. Vail, Orville T. Waring, William F. Williams, J. V. N. Willis, Theodore D. Wilson.

L. E. Waring was chairman of the committee; Dr. M. O'M. Knott, secretary; J. Herbert Case, treasurer; and W. S. Blitz, a professional horse show man, assistant secretary. T. R. VanBoskerck, Evarts Tracy, L. G. Timpson and G. T. VanBoskerck were the grounds committee. Mane Edwards had charge of the ticket-taking and the gate attendants.

Plainfield horses were prominent in all but one or two of the classes. They won several blue ribbons, and a gratifying share of the other prizes, and that in competition with some of the best horseflesh in this section of the country.

Twelve classes and a pony race were on the programme. The judges were Dr. F. C. Grenside, Louis Haight, James G. Marshall, all of New York; and George Willing, of Philadelphia. They discharged their duties carefully, and popular opinion agreed with them in every decision.

The show opened at 2:30 o'clock. It was timed to bring the last class on at 5:55, but the schedule dragged for various reasons—none of which were tiresome, however—and it was not until 6:30 that the programme for the afternoon ended.

The classes came up in the following order. The number of horses and the ribbon winners, and the prizes offered, are noted.

Classes 23 and 26 were local, the entries being confined to horses owned in Union, Middlesex and Somerset counties

Class 4, pacers, any height, to wagon: Lizzie H, ch m, owned by J. Girard Keenan, Elizabeth, first; Ned Davis, b g, owned by D. C. Smalley, Plainfield, second. Four entries. A. C. Blair's Rex and G. P. Mellick's Lady Jane scratched. First prize, cup.

Class 8, pairs in harness over 15.2: Archer, br g, and Jim Crow, br g, owned by G. D. King, Springboro, Pa., first; Dunbeau, b m, and Duke, b g, owned by H. G. Runkle, this city, second; Maud, br m, Mary, br m, Ballentine Rose, Bernardsville, third. Four entries. First prize, $40; second prize, $10.

Class 19, ponies under saddle, 14 2 or under: Lady Rose, b m, Miss Annie G. Fisk, this city, owner, first; Pilot Boy, b g, Ralph E. Hallock, this city, second; Bo-Peep, skewbald g, Miss Blanche Buttfield, North Plainfield, third. Five entries. First prize, $25; second, $10.

Class 5, horses in harness, over 14.2, under 15.3: Mignonette, ch m, John T. Spratley, New York, first; Katzenjammer Kid, blk g, Mrs. Edward R. Ladew, Glen Cove, L. I., second; Buster Brown, gr g, Mrs. Edward R. Ladew, Glen Cove, L. I. Eight entries. First prize, $40; second, $10.

Class 15, ladies' saddle horses, ladies riding: Corine, ch m, John T. Spratley, first; Black Diamond, blk g, Charles Holloway, Hempstead, L. I., second; All Ablaze, ch m, H. G. McElwaine, New York, third. First prize, $40; second prize, $10.

Class 21, jumpers, performances over fences only counting: Buck, ch g, Mrs. A. E. Dietrich, New York, first; Freelance, gr g, S. J. Holloway, Hartsdale, N. Y., second; Rifle, b g, Fair Acres Farm, Westfield, third. Fourteen entries, two scratched, one belonging to J. O. Cooley. First prize, $40; second, $10.

Class 13, tandems: Buster Brown, gr g, and Katzenjammer Kid, blk g, Mrs. Edward R. Ladew, first; Flower King, br g, and Flower Girl, br m, Tonzo Sauvage, Newark, second; Master Claude, b g, and Miss Earle, b m, Miss Luella Day, South Orange, third. Three entries. First prize, $40; second prize, $10.

Class 33, pairs in harness: Duke and Duchess, H. G. Runkle, this city, first; Star, ch g, and Snip, ch g, Mrs. D. F. Ginna, this city, second; Lady Tot, br m, and Lady May, br m, C. J. Fisk, third. Six entries; L. E. Waring's pair scratched. First prize, cup.

Class 9, horses in harness, to lady's carriage, ladies driving: Katzenjammer Kid, blk g, Mrs. Edward R. Ladew, first; Richmond, b g, Miss Elizabeth VanHeusen, Greenwich, Conn., second; Ragsey, br m, Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, this city, third. Four entries. First prize, $40; second, $10.

Class 3, roadsters, rig counting 40 per cent: Sadie MacGreagor, ch m, Edward R. Ladew, Glen Cove, L. I., first; Elsinore Medio, b m, H. S. Ladew, Glen Cove, L. I., second; Miss Banahan, b m, W. J. Buttfield, North Plainfield, third. Five entries; A. C. Vail's Kenelm scratched. First prize, cup.

Class 30, saddle horses, 14.2 or over: Grace O'Malley, ch m, Dr. M. O'Malley Knott, this city, first; The Nominee, blk g, A. C. Vail, this city, second; Handsome Jim, b g, Ralph L. Vail, this city, third. Fourteen entries; I. W. Clark's Princeton scratched. First prize, saddle.

Class 15, ponies in harness: Baby Wilks, ch g, Thomas Dickson, Morristown, first; Richmond, b g, Miss Elizabeth VanHeusen, second; Lady Rose, b m, Miss Annie G. Fisk, third. Four entries. First prize, $25; second, $10.

Between Class 9 and Class 8 The Watchung, a sweepstakes for ponies, half mile at catch weights, was run. Copper King, a long-limbed flier that exceeded the height limit but was allowed to run by vote of the owners of the other entries, ran away from the field of eight ponies. He is owned by J. T. Jarvis, of Hampstead. Simper, owned by S. VanSchaick, Garden City, L. I., got the place after a game try for the lead. Nemesecona, owned by Dr. M. O'M. Knott, of this city, ran third. The stake amounted to $90.

HON. WM. RUSSELL HERE.

Former Secretary of Legation at Venezuela, is the Guest of Henry H. Bowen.

Hon. William W. Russell, who has recently been appointed United States Minister to Colombia, is the guest of Henry H. Bowen at Watchung avenue. He has been in Washington during the last few days and stopped here to visit Mr. Bowen on his way to New York. Minister Russell was formerly secretary of the legation at Caracaes, Mr. Bowen's brother, Herbert W. Bowen, being the United States Minister in Venezuela. In September, the new minister will sail for Bogato.

Operation on Boy's Nose.

Edson Gardner, twelve years old, of Orange place, who was operated on by Dr. F. C. Ard, at the hospital, for the correction of a distorted nose, Monday afternoon, is improving nicely, the operation having been perfectly successful. The organ was fractured by a fall three years ago and had been giving trouble for the past six months.

Methodists' Excursion.

The First M. E., Grace M. E., and Monroe Avenue churches have decided upon Thursday, July 28, as the date for their annual excursion to Asbury Park.

PYTHIAN KNIGHTS HONOR THEIR DEAD

Memorial Day Observances Here in Which Members of the Order Participate.

DECORATE THE GRAVES

VISIT OF SIR KNIGHTS TO THE CEMETERIES HERE AND SCOTCH PLAINS.

Gen. Hitchcock, Past Grand Chancellor Commander Shanley, Grand Chancellor Laws and Other High Officers of Order in Parade.

Delegations of Pythian knights from half a dozen cities came to join with Crescent Company, No. 13, Uniformed Rank, in observing the annual ceremony of the Pythian Memorial Day. The graves of knights in North Plainfield, Evergreen, Hillside and Scotch Plains cemeteries were decorated, the prescribed ritual of the order being gone through at each place, by Captain J. E. Flannery, David Bowen, O. R. Pearson, Charles McGinley, J. P. Hall, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of this city and Captain Hale, of Brooklyn, the latter having charge at the North Plainfield Cemetery.

Rathbone Company, at Brooklyn; Black Prince Company, of Newark; Ethio Company, of Kearney and Dover Company, of Dover, turned out in full strength. Delegations from companies in Elizabeth and Washington, New Jersey, were on hand also. All the foregoing are of the uniformed rank of the order and in addition to them, delegates from Perrichester Lodge, Perchester, New York, were in line. The total number of knights, including those belonging in this city, Crescent Company, Uniformed Rank and Perseverance and Unity lodges, was about 800, making the largest affair of the sort yet held here. Of this number, 100 were members of the lodges, the others being of the Uniformed Rank.

On arriving at the North avenue depot, the sir knights were met by Crescent Company with the Independent Fife and Drum Corps. Afterward the visits were made to the various cemeteries, finishing at Scotch Plains, where a supper was given in Excelsior Hall. The line of march was made from Evergreen Cemetery to Hillside and from there to Scotch Plains, by stage.

In addition to the presence of Col. Howell, of New York, the gathering was honored by the attendance of Past Grand Chancellor Commander P. Frank Shanley, of Jersey City, Grand Chancellor Commander Lewis, Gen. Hitchcock and Grand Outer Guard John Main, all of Newark, officers on the executive staff of the State.

The committees were as follows: Crescent Company—David Bowden, William Young and Robert Good. Perseverance Lodge—William N. Runyon, John H. Cose, Alex. Muir, Robert Lee and J. Stephen Higham. The auxiliary committee in charge of supper arrangements consisted of A. D. Pope, W. H. Schorb, M. D. Sweeney, Phillip Jahn, R. C. Firstbrook, V. W. Nash, Jr., E. D. Cushing, Frank Putnam and I. C. Vannatta.

MRS. E. D. EMMONS DEAD

MOTHER OF JOHN P. AND PETER A. EMMONS PASSES AWAY IN BOTH YEAR.

Mrs. Elizabeth D. Emmons, mother of Peter A. and John P. Emmons, of the borough, was found dead in her bed at her home in South River, near New Brunswick, yesterday morning. She had been ill two weeks, heart failure being the cause of death.

Mrs. Emmons was born in South River and she had lived there all her life. She was in her eighthieth year. She is survived by a husband, who is 91 years old, three daughters and two sons, two of whom are Peter A., and John P. Emmons. The funeral services will be held at her late home tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Jr. O. U. A. M. Gathering.

All of the State officers of the Jr. O. U. A. M. have promised to attend a union meeting of Juniors to be held at Bound Brook tomorrow night. There will be representatives from all of the Councils in this vicinity and a big time is promised. The Juniors in this city have arranged to go to Bound Brook by special trolley cars, leaving Watchung avenue at 7:20 o'clock Friday night.

Yale Club's Dinner.

The Yale Club will hold a dinner at Pedefious Friday night. It will be an informal affair. There are about forty Yale graduates in this city.

Saturday's Golf Programme.

The only event at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Saturday will be the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup.

ATTORNEY GENERAL UPSETS SCHOOL PLANS

Fanwood Township and Borough Must Hold Another School Meeting.

WHAT CAUSES HITCH

RESOLUTION AS PASSED IS DECLARED TO BE DEFECTIVE.

Must Hold Another Election to Legalize Act — The Attorney General Reverses His Predecessor.

Because Attorney[General McCartez differs in opinion from his predecessor, Attorney General Stockton, upon a point of law, the action taken by the voters of Fanwood Township and Borough several weeks ago, when they authorized the erection of a new schoolhouse, goes for naught. A new election will have to be held, to legalize the erection of the school.

When Attorney General Stockton was in office he passed favorably upon a resolution providing for a school in another district of Fanwood, this resolution allowing the School Board to select by lot each year the school bond to be paid off. The resolution offered to the voters for the proposed school was identical in provisions and phraseology.

Now Attorney General McCartez says the lot-drawing clause is illegal, and formal notice to this effect has been served on the Board. Another election will be held tonight. The objectionable clause has been changed to provide that the Board shall "determine" what individual shall be paid.

The method of paying off the bonds for the first school will be continued.

The State Schools Close a Successful Term.

The New Jersey State Normal and Model Schools at Trenton have had one of the most successful years of their history. The enrollment of the Normal School was 506. About seventy-five per cent. of these were graduates of high schools of four years' courses before entering the Normal. Twenty-five per cent. represented those coming from the rural county and town districts and taking the longer course at the Normal. The Normal School has been unable to meet the demands for its graduates as teachers. The class graduated in February were practically all engaged before the middle of that month, and more than half the class graduated in June were engaged before they received their diplomas. The salaries received were in advance of those of previous years, ranging from $15 to $75 per month. The Normal School has felt an increased demand for male teachers. It has already filled with its graduates many of the prominent principalships and superintendencies of the State at salaries ranging from $1,200 to $2,500. It feels that the demand is such as to encourage young men to take up the work of teaching, the work offering even a financial advantage to many young men, especially those from the more rural sections, and a professional advantage to still many more. The enrollment in the Model was 580. This school has graduated one of the largest classes in its history, a class numbering nearly forty. A great majority of these students enter upon the college courses, being represented in nearly all of the leading Eastern colleges, both for men and women. The strength these students have shown in their college entrance examinations, where examinations have been required, was very complimentary. The certificate of the school is received for admission in all of the colleges that accept certificates from any school. The prospects of the schools for the coming year are very flattering. A large, new dormitory is under process of construction. The buildings during the summer are to be put in first-class repair, and every arrangement made that the schools shall offer not only a high class of professional education for teachers, but also —in the Model—an academic training for those desiring to enter the higher professional schools, that is second to none.

Tennis Doubles Schedule.

In the Y. M. C. A. doubles tournament, at tennis, the following schedule has been arranged by Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood: Case and Hinchcliffe against Heywood and Robbie, Thursday, June 23, at 6 in the afternoon; Denton and Neal against the Rogers brothers, Friday, June 24, at the same hour; Mundy and Ashbolm against Miner and Koons, 5:30 Tuesday afternoon, June 28, and Lange and Collier against Gaynes and Strong, 5:30 Wednesday afternoon, June 29. The prizes in this tournament will be silver fobs for the two winners, and silver clasp pins for the team making the next best record.

OSCAR A. DOUGLASS, OF DUNELLEN, IS DEAD

Aged Newspaper Man Succumbs to Heart Disease After Five Years Illness.

A MASONIC BURIAL

CELEBRATION OF WEDDING ANNIVERSARY ON FRIDAY.

Born in Newark Seventy-Five Years Ago and a Newspaper Man All His Life — Connected With Various Fraternal Orders.

Oscar A. Douglass died at his home in Front street, Dunellen, Monday afternoon, heart disease being the cause. He was a well known newspaper man and a prominent citizen of the borough. Mr. Douglass had been ill for the past five years but had borne up well until Thursday when he suffered a serious attack.

Friday was the twenty-fifth anniversary of Mr. Douglass' marriage. He lived to greet a large company of his friends who came from Staten Island to celebrate the occasion with him. He lingered on until yesterday afternoon when he quietly passed away.

Mr. Douglass was born nearly seventy-five years ago in Newark. He comes from an old New York family. He had been interested in newspaper work all his life and for some time was editor of the Staten Island Star, of which paper he was the founder. He finally sold his rights to a syndicate but did not abandon newspaper work. For the last six years he had been associated with the Dunellen Call.

Mr. Douglass was much interested in politics as well as in literary work. He was at various times clerk of the State Legislature, Secretary of the Dunellen Board of Health and clerk of the Dunellen Board of Education. He was a member of Richmond Lodge, No. 66, F. and A. M., of Port Richmond and was also a member of the Order of the Eastern Star, Beacon Light Chapter No. 75, which organization was founded by his wife fifteen years ago. He was also a valued member of the Dunellen Literary Society. Mr. Douglass was an earnest member of the Dunellen Presbyterian church and was loved and respected by every one who knew him.

The dead man is survived by his wife, Mrs. M. A. E. Douglass, a brother, Rev. Charles Douglass, of New York, and two sisters, Mrs. Anna Bell, and Miss Mandy Douglass, both of Newark.

REORGANIZATION OF O. F. C.

MEETING FRIDAY NIGHT TO PLAN FOR FOOTBALL SEASON.

Plans for re-organizing the Orange Field Club football team for the coming year and the election of a manager will be the principal business at a meeting of the club to be held at the home of Manager H. C. Smith, at Scotch Plains, tomorrow night.

All young men wishing to try for the crack eleven are asked to be present. The club did well last season, losing only one game, that being with the Norwood A. C., by a score of 6 to 0, but the aggregation made up for this defeat by winning from the same team twice later on by scores of 19 to 0 and 18 to 0. The club has the strength to put even a better team in the field this season and the boys are much hearter. The reason for holding the meeting now is that within a short time most of the members will be out of town on their vacations, and by organizing now it will give the management plenty of time to arrange for games.

Circled the Globe.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. McGee, of North Plainfield, are home from a trip around the world. Accompanying them home were Mrs. Corliss, of Steile avenue, and her father, Mr. Wright, of New York.

Holstein Wins Suit.

Judgment for $196.26 and costs has been entered in Justice Huff's court for the plaintiff in the case of A. L. Holstein against Michael Armstrong.

E. Stine Gets a Patent.

Among the patents recently issued to Jerseymen was one to E. Stine, of this city, for an electrotype or type carrier for printing forms.

DIED.

PYATT—At Dunellen, N. J., June 18, 1904, Cornelia Pyatt, in her 80th year.

MEEKER—At New Market, N. J., June 16, 1904, Joseph Edgar Meeker, aged 9 years, 10 months, 6 days.

BENNETT—Suddenly, in this city, June 16, 1904, Frederick, son of Harry and Ellen Bennett, aged 7 years, 9 months, 11 days.

ALBERTI—In New Brunswick, N. J., on Tuesday afternoon, June 21, 1904, Thomas Ridgley Alberti, in the 63d year of his age.

Sanitary Plumbing

Brick and Portable Furnaces

Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing, Etc., Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Members Association of New York City, I employ none but first class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business, at all times and in cases.

D. W. LITTELL,

No. 113 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Handbook on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

NEW IN EVERY DETAIL!

My new barber shop at

143 NORTH AVE.

is now open ready for business. All the latest appointments in the tonsoria line.

EDWIN B. MAYNARD.

CARNEY BROS.,

MADISON AVENUE,

Between Front and Second streets,

Tinners, Plumbers Gas Fitters,

Grates and bricks for all kinds of stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your tinware mending to us. The best tinners, the best plumbers, and the best gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction. Keys of all kinds are made here. Tinware made to order. Ranges, brick and portable furnaces. Sanitary plumbing.

DIME

Savings Institution,

Of Plainfield, N. J.,

Is now receiving deposits with interest, allowed on all sums from $5 to $3,000.

J. Frank Hubbard, President.
Wm. F. Arnold, } Vice-Pres
Jeremiah Manning, }
J. C. Pope, Sec'y and Treas.

Money deposited on or before January tenth will draw interest from the first.

Guaranteed Salary $900 YEARLY.

Men and women of good address to represent us, some to travel appointing agents, others for local work looking after our interests. $900 salary guaranteed yearly; extra commissions and bonus; steady advancement, old established house. Grand chance for earnest men or women to secure pleasant, permanent position, liberal income and future. Now, brilliant lines. Write at once,

STAFFORD PRESS,
23 Church St., New Haven, Conn

W. B. CODINGTON,

Counsellor-at-Law

Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-chancery, Notary Public. Offices Corner of Park avenue and Second street.

ALBERT HEDDEN

Livery & Boarding Stables

FOURTH ST.,

between Watchung and Park avenues. First-class Livery. Horses boarded by week or month. Telephone call No. 114.

Wm. A. Woodruff,

Fire and Life

INSURANCE AGENT,

OFFICE,

corner Front St. and Park Avenue, Plainfield, N. J.

CHANGES ANNOUNCED IN TEACHERS' CORPS

Many New Faces to be Seen Among the Group of Pedagogues When School Opens.

WHO NEW ONES ARE

COMPLETE LIST OF TEACHERS IN THE CITY'S PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Miss Ellen E. Niles to Return to Her Duties—Miss Ariadne Gilbert to Take Charge of English in High School.

Miss Grace Burroughs will spend some months in rest at her home and in special study for a position in the vicinity of Boston. Her place will be filled by Samuel H. Howe, Jr., who is now principal of the high school at Saugerties, N. Y. Mr. Howe was a classmate in Union of Henry Pearce, Plainfield High School, '98.

Miss Minnie Santee will spend the first part of the year at her home in Mooresville, N. Y., in rest and study and will then take a position in one of the New York high schools. Her place will be filled by Mary Ethel Perry, a graduate of Smith College, who is now assistant principal in the high school at Matteawan, N. Y.

Miss Ellen E. Niles, who has been taking a year's rest, will return to the school in the fall with restored health. As an additional teacher to take charge of some of the work in English, Miss Ariadne Gilbert has been chosen. Miss Gilbert was a member of the class of 1898, of Plainfield High School, who has had long and successful experience in Plainfield in the Bryant School, but for the last two years has been doing special work in Johns Hopkins University and at Radcliffe College, in preparation for this position.

At the Whittier School there are no changes. In the Franklin School, Miss Charlotte C. Merrill, Miss Lottie B. Strong, Miss Geraldine McCauley and Miss Edna G. Potter have resigned. Miss Potter goes to Brookline, Mass., the most desirable school system in N. E. Their places will be filled by Miss Caroline M. Shaver, a graduate of New Paltz Normal School, now teaching at Northampton; Miss Alice C. Miller, Miss Mary Bannister, and Miss Mary L. Searle, of the Westfield Normal, and Miss Helena Huber, of the Cortland Normal School.

At the Washington School, Miss Elizabeth R. VanderVeer, a graduate of the Framingham Normal School, with many years experience, takes the place of Miss E. Adelia Beebe, who goes to the Brookline, (Mass.) schools.

The Bryant School loses Miss Marion M. Morton, whose place is filled by the appointment of Miss Mary L. Marsh, of the Brockport Normal School, now teaching at Holley, N. Y.

In the Irving School, there are three changes. Miss Jessamine R. Granger, of the Potsdam Normal School, now teaching at Gloversville, N. Y., takes the place of Miss Elsie M. Kattelle. Miss Georgia Ricker has been transferred from the Lincoln School to take the place of Miss Mary M. Griswold, who is soon to marry Dr. Guy Hillman. Miss Anna Goosman, of the Trenton Normal School, takes the place of Miss Helena M. Huber, transferred to the Franklin School.

At the Lincoln School, Annie E. Minnihin, of the Westfield Normal School, now teaching at Westfield, takes the place of Miss Agnes B. Freeman, who goes to Greater New York. Annie T. Wood, of the Rhode Island Normal, now teaching at Providence, takes the place of Miss Georgia Ricker, transferred to the Irving. Myrtle S. Reynolds, of the New Paltz Normal School, now teaching at Saugerties, takes the place of Miss Angela Mooney, who has resigned to go West and reside with her brother.

This is a complete list of teachers for 1906-1905:

High School—I. W. Travell, E. W. Miles, Samuel B. Howe, Jr., S. L. Bew, E. K. Cumming, P. D. Lovell, E. F. Ball, Mary E. Ferry, Lindsey Best, J. D. Macnab, M. E. Benedict A. J. Bennett, drawing, C. L. Lewis, music, Ariadne Gilbert.

Whittier School—Anna M. Day, K. Louise Dillon, Alice W Lansing, Rita C. Pond, Dorothea E. Bull, Lillian Sharp, Eleanor T. Wilber, Alice R. Barlow, Addie P. Jackson, Phy. training.

Franklin School—Noel J. Bullock, Clara J. Chariton, Caroline M. Shaver, Alice C. Miller, Emma Force, Mary Chevalster, Florence Charlton, Gertrude Huber, Helena Huber, Charlotte B. Tennant, Caroline A. Barber, Elizabeth T. Angell.

Washington School—M. E. Humphrey, Anna W. Boorsem, Lila M. Shell, Eva M. Vincent, Mary T. Draper, Eliz. B. VanderVeer, Mabel A. Powell, Lallie Duckworth.

Bryant School—Flora Griffin, Kate A. Romer, Edith K. Smythe, May B. Williams, Frances E. Bryant, Jessica L. Brighouse, Mary L. Marsh, Gertrude H. Rand, Kate M. Marsh, Louise B. Runyon, Cora F. Cadmus, Mrs. LeVerne Lewis.

Irving School—Genevieve Petris, J. Lois Skinner, Frances E. Corey, Lottie W. Stillman, Jessamine R. Granger, Alice A. Lee, Ada H. Clark, Mary J. Dennis, Louise Egan, Lucia N. Wood, Hattie Plimer, Katherine B. Kellom, Georgia Ricker, Elisabeth E. White, Lillian T. Glen, Ethel L. Fiescher, Anna Gosman.

Lincoln School—Carolyn B. Lee, E. Grace Hatch, Myrtle S. Reynolds, S. Louise Wood, Annie T. Wood, Annie E. Minnihin, Mary E. Brooks.

METHOD OF IDENTIFICATION

JERSEY CENTRAL POLICE DEPARTMENT TO USE FINGER PRINT SYSTEM.

Chief of Police Dougherty, of the New Jersey Central, who has just returned from the St. Louis Exposition, where he attended the annual convention of police chiefs, was favorably impressed with what is known as the finger-print system in police circles and he intends introducing it in his department on the railroad. It may prove of benefit to him, and at the same time assist the various departments along the line of the road.

This system is considered by the chiefs of the big cities to be a valuable addition to the Bertillion system, which has been in use for a long time. The finger-print system to be effective must be accompanied by a photograph of the person whose finger-prints are kept as a record. The remarkable feature about it is that it is claimed that the fingers never change and that the prints made a year or more from now would be just the same as those made at the present time. The prints are made by the use of ink, the fingers being placed on an inked plate and then on a sheet of paper to be kept as a record. There is space for each finger and also for the fingers collectively.

In tracing a criminal through the use of the prints a powerful magnifying glass is used. It is claimed that two facts are noticeable in the examination of fingers. One is what is known as the whirl and the other the loop, that is the prints will either show circular lines or a loop. These statements were made at the convention by officers who have used the system for years.

Chief Kiely has stated that without the use of photographs the system is worthless. A criminal's face and general makeup is likely to change frequently, but not so with the finger-prints. The two combined is said to be a sure way of identification. The strongest testimony in favor it was given by representatives of the Scotland Yards, who attended the convention.

If Chief Dougherty adopts the system for the railroad, it is possible that Chief Kiely may do the same here, when the Bertillion system is in use. It is said that he was also favorably impressed with the finger-print system.

J. H. Staats, of Chatham, is visiting his son, J. A. Staats, of the Hotel Kensington.

Mrs. G. B. Smith, of Trenton, is the guest of Mrs. O. M. Greer, of Putnam avenue.

ALFRED SPEER,

THE ORIGINAL

Port Grape Cultivator in America.

The first native wine sold and used in San Francisco and Sacramento was from Speer's Passaic, N. J., vineyards, was shipped around Cape Horn before there was any railroad to California, and are now being used by physicians and first families there as the richest and best wine to be had

The juice of the Portugal Port Wine grape grown in N. J. is thick and rich same as the juice of pears and other fruits grown here. From California pears you can squeeze water as from a sponge; so with all fruits grown in California; while those grown in New Jersey are solid in substance—less juice but thick and richer. The New Jersey apples, for instance, make a cider that was always popular the world over. If you want a wine for sickness or for entertainments don't take cheap, watery wines but choose a first class old, full bodied, high grade wine from Speer's Passaic vineyards. Sold by Druggists.

WILL GO TO NEVADA.

SENATOR STEWART TO RETIRE FROM PUBLIC LIFE.

National Capital Will Soon Lose One of Its Most Picturesque Figures —Identified with Mining Interests.

Washington (D. C.) Special.

Senator William Morris Stewart, probably the most picturesque figure in the capital, has announced that he will retire from the senate when his present term expires, March 13, 1905. The venerable senator—he will be 77 years old in August—has had enough of public life and intends to retire to his farm, in Nevada, where he has a fine estate of 1,500 acres and a large dairy.

Senator Stewart, with his sweeping snow-white beard that hides his collar and necktie and much of his vest, is often likened to Santa Claus. Despite his age he is straight and strong and has a fine, ruddy complexion. He surprised his friends in October of last year by marrying Mrs. May Agnes Cone, a widow, of Georgia, who is at least 30 years his junior. The senator is said to have been attracted to her when he first saw her photograph a few months previous. She was invited to his fine country place, Ashburn farm, near Washington, and amid rural surroundings the courtship progressed quickly. The present Mrs. Stewart is the senator's second wife.

No man has left a more indelible mark of his influence upon the mining interests of the Pacific coast than Mr. Stewart. He was born in New York state, but his parents moved to Ohio when he was a small boy. He worked on his father's farm until he was 13 years old, when he was allowed to start in the world for himself. After accumulating $48 he went to school and managed to support himself and attend an academy for three years. He worked during school vacations and during term times boarded himself, cooking his own meals and doing chores to gain pocket money. Later he went to Aurora (N. Y.) and there he worked on neighboring farms for wages during vacation.

Then he obtained employment as a teacher and prepared for college, finally entering Yale college. He remained there until 1848, when the entire current of his life was changed by the discovery of gold in California. When he started for the Pacific coast via Panama his capital consisted principally of a stout heart, a determined spirit and a sound mind in a sound body. He took up the pick and shovel of a miner and worked the "coyote diggings" of Nevada county. He was the discoverer of the celebrated Eureka diggings, which have been worked continuously ever since.

WILLIAM M. STEWART.
(Nevada Senator Who Will Retire from Public Life in 1905.)

Later he went to Nevada City and studied law. He was appointed district attorney and in 1854 was named attorney general and moved to San Francisco. Here he married a daughter of ex-Gov. Foote, of Mississippi. Becoming wearied of metropolitan life, he returned to Nevada City, and thence removed to Downieville, in Sierra county, then one of the most important and popular mining camps in the state. There he devoted himself to the study and practice of laws relative to mining, ditch and water rights, etc., a most important and lucrative branch of legal practice.

He continued in this business until April, 1860, when the great "rush to Washoe" took place, and Mr. Stewart was drawn into the maelstrom of surging humanity which flooded Washoe in that memorable year. The rival Spanish theories were a prolific source of contention, while the ignorant or intentional inaccuracy in defining the boundaries of claims and the neglect to make proper records or to record locations at all were equally certain to result in expensive litigation.

It was no wonder that lawyers flocked to Washoe, for the prospect of a rich harvest was unmistakable. Into this litigation Mr. Stewart entered with all the zeal and earnestness of his vigorous nature, and he was retained in almost every suit of importance brought before the higher courts of the territory and subsequent state of Nevada. To his legal acumen, sagacity and influence is mainly due the permanent settlement of titles of nearly all the mines on the great Comstock lode. His fees were large and his surplus funds being invested in the development of the mines, he soon became one of the leading operators on the Comstock.

Mr. Stewart has served three terms in the senate.

Suggestion for Advertisers.

An American astounded a rival in business. He opened a store in Birmingham, England, next door to an Englishman in the same line of business. Thereupon the Englishman put up a placard reading, "Established 50 Years." The American responded with one reading thus: "Established Yesterday; No Old Stock."

MIND CONTROL OF HUNGER.

Power Resident in Every Individual Enabling Him to Subdue Cravings for Sustenance.

The sensation of hunger can be modified by mental effort. By promptly refusing to entertain the mind with thoughts and images of food and its relish, the gastric secretion will receive no stimulation, and hence the hunger be kept in abeyance, says the Medical Record. The "posthumous notations" of Antonio Viterbi—a Corsican lawyer—who, in the year 1821, was sentenced to death for some political reasons, furnish some very valuable arguments in favor of this view. In order to escape the death on the scaffold, for which he had an uncontrollable aversion, he resorted to death by starvation, and while awaiting a slowly approaching dissolution, took notes of the rise and fall of the feelings coursing through his consciousness.

From these notes we learn that on the third day of his death fast the sensation of hunger disappeared. His head was clear, his thoughts sharp and lucid, and his eyesight extraordinarily keen. As the days went by he felt the coming and going of sensations of thirst, but not of hunger. His consciousness remained alert and rational to the last. On the eighteenth date he died, self-imposed starvation he died. Neither thirst nor hunger had seriously annoyed him, and his last moments were calm and painless.

The calm intelligence and full realization with which Antonio Viterbi approached his fate materially held his thoughts and imagination away from representations of food. Hence the reflexes transmitted from the gastric nerve endings to the brain failed to elicit a conscious response. Hence no flow of gastric juice and no sensation of hunger.

The same physiological principle is manifested in the behavior of demented and hysterical persons, whose minds being busy with subjective images of fright and horror, have been found to starve for days without ever making known any sensation of hunger.

On the other hand, if we inquire into the mental conditions of starving sailors, straying travelers and other unfortunates who have been forced to face starvation with their bodies in full health, and their minds bound with chains of torturing fascination to the imagery of a riotous appetite, we will find that their sufferings have been truly indescribable. Like a Tantalus in the tale, who, surrounded by all the sumptuous foods and highly wrought and morbid imagination, which he found himself unable to seize and to enjoy, so these unfortunates, with their gastric juice flooding the walls of their stomach, and with storms of irritating impulses raging through their brain, have suffered untold agonies of hunger and thirst. In most cases of this kind the victims lose their senses before they lose their lives.

By the strength of the arguments we are entitled to the conviction that there is a power resident in every individual, enabling him to control and subdue, more or less successfully, his morbid cravings for food and drinks. The secret of breaking a habit or a passion lies in the simple rule, hands off! Keep the mind off the entire subject. Refuse promptly the idea of its gratification by removing the image from the field of consciousness. The undue secretions of the gastric glands will soon cease and with them the morbid cravings.

A study of the physiology of hunger may thus furnish us a powerful lever in the upbuilding of character and manhood. Indeed, the only real value to be found in the study of any science, philosophy or religion, lies in the bearing such a study may have on the elevation and purification of the thoughts and motives of men.

THE COOK WHO GUESSES.

Different from the One of To-Day Who Measures Everything She Uses.

"I'd give a dollar," said the man who coddles his stomach, according to the New York Press, "to find a cook who doesn't measure. She would gladden my soul. The cook who does things by guess is a rare bird nowadays. She has genius, else she could not dispense with the vast number of what temperate modern cookery, and geniuses are seldom indigenous to the flat house kitchen.

"But there used to be plenty of them. Why, I remember the time when half the kitchens in the land gloried in a guesswork cook. I did a fellow's eyes and his whole internal organization good to watch her. She would take a pinch of this, a handful of that and a dash of something else and mix them all together, and the result would be the most delectable exhibit that a fellow ever put in his mouth.

"Lord, Lord, but eating was a pleasure in those days. It isn't so now. In these whirligig times everything has a machine-made taste. That's because the cooks measure so much. Instead of trusting to inspiration, as the unwritten cook is bound to do, the kitchen queens of to-day measure even the salt they put in the porridge. No wonder such cookery lacks individuality, and is all the same dead level of mediocrity. Merciful heavens, what ails these biscuits? They're as heavy as lead."

"Possibly the cook made a mistake," said the man's wife. "I got a new cook yesterday—one that doesn't measure. I am afraid she didn't put enough baking powder in the biscuits."

Not a New Discovery.

One of the young war correspondents has discovered that exploding shells are likely to hurt the people whom they hit. This was the way they acted in this country 40 years ago.—Chicago Chronicle.

BOY DROWNED IN THE BROOK

Freddie Bennett Fell From Tree and Met Death in Two Feet of Water.

STUNNED BY THE FALL

Harry Bennett, of Elm Place, His Father—Body Found by Parent After an All Night Search—Boy Only Eight Years of Age.

Lying in Green brook, just above the Norwood avenue bridge, where he had fallen from an overhanging cherry tree, Thursday night about 5 o'clock, the body of eight-year-old Freddie Bennett was found at 9 o'clock this morning, by his father, Harry Bennett, of Elm place, after an all night search for the missing lad.

The boy left home in company with Eddie Drake, also of Elm place, at noon yesterday and no more was seen of him by his parents until his body was taken from the water, where it had lain since the fall, which is supposed to have stunned him and thus made it possible for him to drown in water less than two feet deep.

After being together all the afternoon, the boys separated shortly before 5 o'clock in the evening. Young Drake returned home, leaving the Bennett boy eating cherries in a tree which overhung the brook, near the Norwood avenue bridge. A passerby, named Knight, says that about 5 o'clock he crossed the bridge and noticed a slight commotion in the brook, but paid no heed, thinking that some boys might be swimming there.

At supper-time, Mr. and Mrs. Bennett, becoming anxious about the boy, questioned Eddie Drake and learned that their son had not returned with him. The father then set out to look for him, going all the way to the mountain and back without getting any trace whatever. Finally, after searching all night, he got the Drake boy to show him just where his son was last seen and noticing the fact that the branches stretched over the water he looked in the brook and saw what he had been dreading for hours.

When found, the little fellow had some cherries in his mouth. He was fully dressed, showing that he had fallen into the water from the tree.

This fatality is the third or fourth within the last few years, to take place along the stretch of Green brook between Norwood avenue and Elm place.

GROOM IS A WESTERLY MAN

MISS ANNA UNDERHILL MORRISON WEDS W. A. EELLS.

Miss Anna Underhill Morrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Morrison, of 718 South avenue, and Walter Adelberg Eells, of Westerly, R. I., were married Wednesday, June 15, at 1:30 at the bride's home. The affair, while very quiet, was one of the prettiest of the season's home weddings, it being attended by the relatives and intimate friends of the couple.

The parlor was decorated with flowers and greens, the combination of colors lending a pretty effect. Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, officiated, using the Episcopal ceremony.

The bride was gowned in white silk, trimmed with old point lace and she carried a bouquet of bride roses. She was given away in marriage by her father. Miss Florence May Morrison, cousin of the bride, was the maid-of-honor. Her gown was also of white silk, trimmed with lace. She carried pink roses.

The wedding march from Lohengrin was rendered on the piano by Miss Ethel Guldberg, of South avenue, while the bridal party entered the parlor. There it was met by the groom and best man, Clarence Sopher. The party took its position beneath a floral bower, where the ceremony was performed.

Afterward a wedding dinner was served at which the bride and groom received the congratulations of the guests. Mr. and Mrs. Eells left during the afternoon for a two weeks' tour through the New England States. Upon their return they will reside for the present with the bride's parents. The couple received a number of handsome gifts, including silverware, cut-glass and bric-a-brac. The bride's gift to her maid-of-honor was a pearl stick pin.

The groom is an employee of the Walter Scott Printing Machine Company, and both he and his wife are well-known and popular among a large circle of friends.

LITERARY.

Time has worked a change in Boston until it is no longer an American city. I am told that other cities are stratified, class above class; Boston's compartments are mainly on the same level, each with an ideal of its own. Other cities divide along lines of wealth, or so at least Harry Thurston Peck would have us believe. Boston divides along lines of congeniality, which is, as it seems to me, rather a decent arrangement. (From "The Social Side of Boston," in the July Atlantic's.)

There are two complete novels, and the first installment of a new serial in the July Popular Magazine. The authors of this interesting trio are Francis Lynde, whose book, "The Grafters," is attracting so much attention in this presidential year; Louis Joseph Vance, one of the most promising of the younger set of American authors, and Richard Marsh, an English writer of note. In addition, there are numerous short stories, embracing a variety of subjects, and also seven little stories of the stage by famous actors and actresses. The July number, as usual, contains 104 pages, making it the biggest magazine on earth at any price. (Street & Smith, New York. 10 cents.)

The June number of the Architectural Record Magazine (New York) is one of the richest in the department of illustrations that we have seen. It contains no less than one hundred and four plates. Nearly fifty are given in connection with the description of the Hotel St. Regis. For the third time in the history of the Astor family one of its members has had built a hotel that in its way is better than any other hotel in the country. Before the war, the Astor House, on lower Broadway, was the boast of New York; much more recently the Waldorf-Astoria became a great metropolitan hotel, and now, the St. Regis on Fifth avenue, which is being completed for Colonel John Jacob Astor, fulfils once gain the family tradition of possessing the most distinctively metropolitan hotel of its day. The idea of making another new standard of excellence runs through all the details and dispositions of the building. Just wherein this superiority of quality consists is made clear in the extended article in the June number of the Architectural Record. As the St. Regis is considered the finest modern hotel, a wide circle of people will be interested in reading and seeing what it is like.

A. O. U. W. HAS A BIG TIME

COLUMBIA LODGE ENTERTAINS STATE OFFICERS OF THE ORDER.

Columbia Lodge, No. 58, A. O. U. W., entertained a number of the State officers of the order last night in its lodge rooms on Park avenue. Several members of Central Lodge, No. 48, were present. A number of speeches were made by the visitors and replied to by officers of the local lodges.

The guests included Grand Master Wood and Grand Foreman Sutton, of Camden; Grand Overseer Fowler, of Irvington, and M. F. Tomlinson, of Elizabeth. These officers made speeches which were replied to by Past Master Workmen Salmon C. Baker, F. O. Lounsbery, J. H. Buchanan, W. A. Woodruff, James Foristel, Henry Liefke, R. R. Kinney, Master Workman F. Merton Lunger, of Columbia Lodge, and Henry Nischwitz. Grand Trustee Mosher, of this city, was present also.

The speechmaking was interspersed with violin and piano selections by Dr. J. H. Buchanan and Martin A. Korff. Clarence Leland, organist of Columbia Lodge, rendered piano selections.

Refreshments were served by W. W. Warnock, a member of Columbia Lodge.

The meeting was presided over by Past Grand Master V. W. Nash, of this city, who together with Past Master Workmen Bauersachs and Loughlin arranged the entire affair

---

Mrs. Carbone Acquitted.

Mrs. Carrie Carbone, the Park avenue fruit dealer, was on Thursday acquitted of the charge of selling liquor in her place. She and Davis Ramezetti, also of Park avenue, and who was acquitted the same day, were represented by W. G. DeMeza, Esq.

Herbert Munro, formerly of this city, now a resident of Philadelphia, is visiting relatives here.

Miss Anastasia Taylor, of West Second street, has entered a training school for nurses in Newark.

The home of E. H. Hanigan, of 91 Duer street, was made happy yesterday afternoon by the birth of a son.

Miss Maude Sibbald and Miss Howlett, pupils at Muhlenberg Hospital, are enjoying a two weeks vacation. Miss Sibbald is to Meadowvale, Ontario, and Miss Howlett at Toronto, Can.

—The Ladies' Auxiliary of the A. O. H. will continue its festival tonight in T. A. B. Hall.

WINNERS OF PRIZES AT THE HIGH SCHOOL

Complete List of Awards in Various Competitions Among the Pupils As Announced.

SOME CHOICE BOOKS

ALEXANDER GILBERT AND ERNEST R. ACKERMAN THE PRINCIPAL DONORS.

Babcock and Stillman Prizes to the List—L. N. Lovell's Offer—They Are Well Distributed.

Special interest was centered on the announcement of the prize winners at the Plainfield High School graduating class exercises Thursday. The complete list of awards is as follows:

English composition—The Geo. H. Babcock prize, given by Mrs. Geo. H. Babcock. First prize—Fiske's American Histories, 9 vols. Motley's Dutch Republic, 3 vols., Howard G. Lapsley. Second prize—DeQuincey's Works, 14 vols., VanWyck Brooks. Honorable mention—Frank H. Lock, O. Fenno.

Mathematics—The Dr. C. H. Stillman prize, given by Mrs. J. K. Myers and Mr. William M. Stillman. First prize—$15 in gold, George L. Bentley. Second prize—$10 in gold, Caroline L. Palmer. Honorable mention—Cora E. Ricketts.

Translation prizes—For the best translation of assigned passages, a first prize of three dollars, and a second prize of two dollars, to be expended in books chosen by the receiver of the prize. Modern languages—Given by Mr. Ernest R. Ackerman. Senior French — First prize — Shakespeare's works, 8 vols., Lulu M. Surykor. Second prize — Tennyson's poems, Mary A. Griggs. Honorable mention—Eloise Haven. Junior French—First prize—Shakespeare's works, 8 vols., Carol A. Bird. Second prize—Shakespeare's works, 8 vols., Winifred Haven. Honorable mention—Anna L. Runyon, Edith L. Jarvis. German—First prize—Shakespeare's works, 8 vols., Augusta W. Rugen. Second prize—Lowell's poems, Helen Robins. Honorable mention — Anna Frances Brodnax. Latin prizes, given by Mr. Alexander Gilbert. Vergil — First prize—Shakespeare's works, 8 vols. Anna F. Brodnax. Second prize—three books: Vanity Fair, The Newcomes, Henry Esmond, Augusta W. Hagen. Honorable mention—Helen Robins. Cicero—First prize—Tennyson's poems, Aimee F. Conant. Second prize—Shakespeare's works, 8 vols., Ada A. Westphal. Honorable mention—Edith L. Jarvis. Caesar—First prize—Shakespeare's works, 8 vols., Gertrude L. Hunter. Second prize—Tennyson's poems, Elizabeth C. Winter.

Commercial prizes—Given by Mr. E. R. Ackerman. A first prize of three dollars and a second prize of two dollars, to be expended in books. Stenography — First Prize — Shakespeare's works, 8 vols., Ross V. Droll. Second prize — Tennyson's poems, Juita Downing. Honorable mention —Emma J. Yaegar. Typewriting—First prize — Four books: Henry Esmond, David Copperfield, Nicholas Nickleby, Domby & Son, Ross V. Droll. Second prize—Shakespeare's works, 8 vols., Emma J. Yaegar. Honorable mention—Florence Marie Cooney. First year bookkeeping—First prize—Shakespeare's works, 8 vols., Leslie E. Palmer. Second prize —Tennyson's poems, Edith A. Calese. Honorable mention — Frances C. Ayers.

American history. Given by L. N. Lovell. Greene's history of England, 4 vols. The standing of two pupils was so nearly equal that the judges could not determine between them. A prize was therefore given to each, Eva Corsa Kelly, Donald Cameron Mortimer. A prize of five dollars in gold, offered by James D. Macnab, to the student in any of the four classes in bookkeeping who does the largest amount and best grade of work, awarded to Leslie E. Palmer.

R. W. Barnes, the Park avenue grocer, is detained at home by illness.

Miss Anna T. VanFleet, of Somerville, has been the guest of friends here.

Miss Wheeler, from out of town, is a guest at the home of Joseph Phillips, of Netherwood.

T. J. Mumford, of East Ninth street, entertained a party of friends at Saltmarsh yesterday.

Miss Graves, of Baltimore, has been visiting her friend, Mrs. Thomas U. Dudley, of Park place.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Shotwell, of Fairview avenue, are at the Windmere, Asbury Park. They will return after the Fourth of July.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Jones, of Mountain avenue, start Monday for St. Louis, where they will visit the Exposition. They will return by the way of Niagara Falls.

FINISHED AT LEAL'S AND READY FOR COLLEGE

Private School for Boys Turns Out Eight Sturdy Young Graduates.

THEIR FUTURE PLANS

YOUNGER PUPILS GIVE A PROGRAMME OF ORATORY.

Donald Greenleaf Wins the First Honors, While Howard Underhill Captures Second Place—Who the Graduates Are.

Prize speaking and the award of honors marked the closing exercises at Leal's School for Boys, Friday morning. The parents and friends of the young men were present, the affair terminating one of the best years in the history of the institution. Prof. Leal, assisted by Prof. E. B. Smith, was in charge.

In the prize speaking contest, Donald Greenleaf won first honors, and Howard Underhill the second. The contest was among the younger boys. This programme was given:

"Nathan Hale," Henry Fullerton; "The Chambered Nautilus," Channcey Haughey; "Ultimate America," Russell Lawrence; "An Appeal to Arms," Louis H. Strong; "Opportunity," Kenneth Runyon; "Puritanism," Donald Greenleaf; part of Swiss' speech in the Forum, Harold Underhill; "Joussaint L'Ouverture," William Wilson; "A Brother's Complaint," John Uhler; "Abraham Lincoln," Tom Foote; "Is a Turtle a Fish," Kenneth Browne.

The graduates and their future plans are: Robert Abbott and Richard L. Lovell, Yale; Henry G. Babcock, Columbia; Charles C. Perkins, Harvard; DeWitt P. Brokaw, John D. Haughey, Lawrence C. Haughey and Elmer W. Snyder, Princeton; William H. Doane, business.

These awards were announced by Prof. Leal:

Geometry, P. A. Chapman, Grenville Strong, Robert Abbott; Caesar, Elliot Rowland; algebra, W. Glenney, Elliot Rowland, R. Vanderveer, P. A Chapman; solid geometry and trigonometry, H. Babcock; arithmetic, Otis Averill, Donald Greenleaf, Chauncey Haughey, Norman Averill; physics, H Babcock; French, John Haughey, English Grammar, Norman Averill, Haughey, Otis Averill, Donald Greenleaf, Russell Lawrence; English composition, Norman Averill, Otis Averill, Donald Greenleaf, Russell Lawrence, Percy A. Chapman, Frank Curtis, Ralph Vail; history, Norman Averill, Chauncey Haughey, Otis Averill, Russell Lawrence; Greek, first year, Elliot Rowland.

SCORES JOHNSTON.

Deaman, Westfield's Manager, Has Something to Say About Plainfield's Manager.

Manager Deaman, of the Westfield baseball team, in speaking of the recent decision in the Westfield-Alis dispute, says: "It isn't necessary to quote a precedent regarding the Alis-Westfield game and its standing to Westfield's credit legally, but to show Manager Johnston's clearness and knowledge of what ball is, the Scotch Plains-Acolian game of last year is mentioned. In the ninth inning," he continued, "the umpire quit the game disputing the umpire's decision. Scotch Plains held this as their game rightly and, further, it is the statement to me by Manager Lenz, of the Acolians, that Scotch Plains never paid them the guarantee. Alis has no leg to stand on in demanding that our game be considered as nothing."

Rev. Mr. Francis to Preach Here.

Rev. James H. Francis, recently pastor of the Clarendon Street Baptist church, Boston, will occupy the pulpit of the First Baptist church, tomorrow morning. The service will begin at 10:45. Sunday-school will be held at 9:30 in the morning.

Impersonator at Church Affair.

Mrs. Fenetta Sargent Haskell, a talented reader and impersonator, will appear at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church on Friday night, June 24, under the auspices of the Epworth League.

New Pastor to be in Charge.

Rev. John W. Masson, pastor-elect of the East Third Street chapel, will take charge of the services tomorrow for the first. Children's Day exercises will be held at the chapel.

To Enter Cornell.

Robert N. Crane, of East Second street, has been graduated from the Rutgers Preparatory School, New York, and will probably enter Cornell Law School in the fall.

Mr. and Mrs. David M. Runyon, of Arlington avenue, are expected to arrive home tonight from a pleasant vacation.

CROWD ENJOYS MUSIC AT OPEN-AIR CONCERT

First Free Musical Feast a Signal Success Judging From the Popular Demonstration.

EXCELLENT PROGRAMME

SOME FINE TENOR SOLOS BY JOHN I. NESTER.

L. R. Anderson's Superb Cornet Solo—The Ten Members Are All Heartily Applauded—Mr. LaVere the Leader.

Under conditions that could not be more auspicious with municipal aid witheld, the public concert series was begun by LaVere's Band Thursday in the new location near Thor's lake. Every feature surrounding the concert was admirable, and the programme and attendance were all that these interested in the success of the series hoped for.

The size of the audience effectually dispelled the fear that the change in location might affect the attendance. Fully 2,000 music lovers were gathered about the new bandstand, and a good many people loitered in Watchung avenue to listen to the strains of the band.

Concert Park, as Bandmaster LaVere has formally dubbed the scene of the concerts, proved to be admirably adapted to the purpose for which it has been set aside. There is ample space for all the people who may attend the concerts, and paths of easy approach and travel lead to it.

Leader LaVere's innovation, the grandstand, proved to be as popular as he had predicted. It was filled with music lovers who gladly paid ten cents in preference to standing up through the programme, and comment on it indicated that it will be used just as largely all through the series. The money received from this source will be a substantial contribution to the music fund, and insure one or more additional concerts. The stand faces directly on the bandstand. Both stands are roped in, to prevent grafting at the seats, and to keep the space before those seated clear. Tickets for seats were sold at an entranceway near the foot of the stand.

Printed programmes were distributed. These will be a feature of every concert, the local newspapers having agreed to furnish them.

Chief Weiss had officers patrolling the park, and there was none of the rowdyism by youthful hoodlums that marred the concerts given over the brook last year at Grandview avenue.

The band played splendidly, and LaVere led it with his old time grace and skill. Hearty applause followed each number. This is the programme in full:

March, "Uncle Sammy," Holsman; overture, "Schauspiele," Bach; concert waltz, "Sweet Remembrance," St. Clair; cornet solo, "Columbia Polka," Rollinson, L. R. Anderson; medley, "Swanee River," VonTilzer; vocal solo, (a) "The Man with the Ladder and Hose," (b) "Lonely Little Maid," John J. Nester; intermezzo, "Ascona," Gray; selection, "Prince of Pilsen," Luders; descriptive, "Dance of the Skeletons," Allen; finale, "The Sentry," Hasklus.

At usual, the vocal solos scored the hits of the evening. Nester has a voice exceptionally fitted for outdoor work, and the numbers he had last night were very catchy.

GUESTS ENJOYED EUCHRE

THE MISSES BALL HAD A PARTY IN HONOR OF TWO PROSPECTIVE BRIDES.

A card party was given yesterday afternoon by Miss Ball and Miss Adelaide Graybiel Ball, of Myrtle avenue, in honor of Miss Ruth Berry and Miss Eleanor D. VanDeventer, two prospective brides. The tables, ten in number, were arranged on the piazza and in the parlor and during the afternoon the guests played euchre. The prize winners were Miss Laura Long, Miss Hattie Shreve and Mrs. Frank French. After the game, refreshments were served and Miss Frances Weir entertained the company with piano selections finely rendered, one of them being a minute of her own composition, in process of publication in Germany at the present time.

Miss Berry will be married on Wednesday at Holy Cross church, to William Rowley Faber, of Rockview avenue, and two hours later, Miss Van Deventer will be married at the same place to George Herbert Whittingham, also of the borough. A large number of invitations have been issued for both weddings.

In Place of Westfield Games.

Manager Johnston will like to fill the Westfield dates with games with Hoboken, Chatham, Madison and possibly Trenton Y. M. C. A.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

June 22: "Problems in Africa's Civilization and Redemption."
Rev. Mr. Hyde, 19-21.

The need of Africa now, as in the times of Isaiah, is Jehovah. It is not more of forms of worship, but a purer God to worship; not more devotion, but a better idea of Him whom they should serve.

It has been repeatedly pointed out, since the work of David Livingstone opened the land to our fuller knowledge, that the three curses of Africa are slavery, polygamy and witchcraft. No form of government, no commercial intercommunication, no industrial training and no merely secular education can remedy this condition of affairs. Slavery lives because of greed and lust. The Christian nations have almost stamped out the trade overseas. No colors can paint the horrors of this traffic in the years past. But the raiding of peaceful villages, the slaughter of many, the chain gangs on their long marches, with frequent deaths and barbarous cruelties for the surviving, still go on in the interior and will only cease when the whole land is under the strong domination of civilized Christian states. The tales of unutterable oppression which horrors recently perpetrated in the Kongo states by agents of European governments cannot long go unnoticed. However men may regard it in general, the clear eyed Christian can scarcely doubt that the wiping out of the Boer republics of South Africa was due in the providence of God to their disregard of the rights of the natives and their failure to recognize in the black a brother needing in his weakness and heathen superstition the strong hand of a fellow man to help.

Polygamy can only be cured by a pure Christianity. Mohammedanism and even Mormonism only foster the debasing and corrupting institution. Woman in many parts of Africa is but a higher grade of beast, and her worth and price are fixed in cattle. She is bought and sold. She has rights and power, but so have the cattle for whom she is exchanged. Love and purity can never exist in such circumstances. To raise woman to her true level. Rather, he must, with her, ascend to the higher plane of life.

No one dies a natural death in Africa, at least in the opinion of the natives. Death is the result of some bewitchment. Then the witch doctor must by his arts find out the guilty party. Then the evil one must with tortures be put to death. Demons dominate all the affairs of life, and devil worship becomes the prevailing form of religion, for one cannot exist unless the malignant spirits are appeased.

Railroads and trade will do somewhat to carry the arts of civilized lands into the savagery of Africa, but unless the missionary with the gospel be there to Christianize the black man he will be only more hopelessly debased and cursed. Give him the vices of civilization to add to the vices of savage, and how can the earth endure such a race! Jehovah is the only hope of Africa.

How Christ Answers One Call.

Jesus "came unto His own." To men forgetful of their godlike nature He came to tell them that they were the sons of God, and to men who could not do without Him He came because they needed Him. Oh, my dear friends, by what high warrants does the Saviour claim us for His own! Because we are His Father's children, and because we are so needy, therefore our Divine Brother comes. He says to you and me, "You have called Me." And you look up out of your worldliness and say: "Oh, no! I did not call. I do not know you." But He says calmly: "You did, although you know it not. That power of being godlike which is in you, crushed and unsatisfied—that summoned Me, and that need of being forgiven and renewed which you will not own—that summoned Me. And here I am! Now will you receive the whole? Is my despised belief, all things are possible to him that believeth." — Phillips Brooks.

Faithfulness In Little Things.

Whether we do little or great things is comparatively a minor matter. But whether all that we do is done as in God's sight and at God's appointment and command is ever a mighty matter. Few of us are set at mighty undertakings, but all have the opportunity of giving a cup of cold water to a little one in God's kingdom in the spirit which will be recognized as a gift to the King of kings. As St. Augustine expressed it, "Little things are little things, but faithfulness in little things is something great."—Sunday School Times.

The Best Law.

The best law for Bible study is the law of perseverance. Application to the word will tend to its growth within the and its multiplication without thee. Methods are good, but motives are best. In studying the book be not like the cold blooded vivisectionist. Seek thou the warm vivifying power of the witnessing Spirit.—Episcopal Recorder.

Trust.

The clouds hang heavy round my way.
I cannot see.
But through the darkness, I believe,
God leadeth me.

'Tis sweet to keep my hand in His
While all is dim,
To close my weary, aching eyes
And follow him.

Through many a thorny path He leads
My tired feet.
Through many a path of tears I go.
But it is sweet

To know that He is close to me.
My Guard, my Guide,
He leadeth me, and so I walk
Quite satisfied.
—Christian Work and Evangelist.

SETTLING IN THE SOUTH

Primitive Business Methods Employed in the Mountainous Part of Tennessee.

"I have just completed my first business trip through the south," said a New York commercial traveler, whose territory heretofore has been the northwest, relates the Sun. "Except in the larger cities I found merchants doing business by the old methods.

"In some of the mountain towns the old credit system still prevails. I do not know just how they do it, but I think it is on some system of reciprocity.

"I was in a store in eastern Tennessee when an old family doctor came in to settle his account. The merchant owed him for professional services, and he owed the merchant for dry goods and groceries. After they had compared accounts the merchant owed the doctor something over a dollar.

"Shall we settle up now or let it go over on next year's account?" asked the merchant.

"I reckon we'd better settle now," was the reply. 'I have a patient up the creek that needs some cod liver oil, and as I haven't any, and you have, you can square by giving me the difference in cod liver.'

"The cod liver is only a dollar, Doc, and I still owe you something over. Do you think of any little thing you'd like to make it even, or how?'

"The merchant's stock was general merchandise, including druggist's sundries. The doctor looked around for a few minutes and then said:

"'You might make the balance in a porous plaster. I've got to put one on Jim Hoffington, who sprained his back yesterday in trying to pry his wagon out of the mire.'

"The merchant got out the article and handed it over. Then he figured and said:

"'That leaves me five cents in your debt, Doc. How'll you have it?'

"'You might give me a nickel's worth of court plaster to make it even. I've got a case about a mile out where it'll come handy.'

"And so the account was squared.

"Another thing I noticed in the southern towns that I never saw in the north or northwest. Most of the newspapers print a chapter from the Old Testament in each issue. If not a chapter, they print a verse.

"I was told that in some of the settlements these chapters or texts were cut out by the subscribers and put into scrapbooks. They may have been stringing me about that."

PINE FORESTS CUT AWAY.

Timber Cleaned Out of Northern Michigan and Lumbering Concerns Moving On.

The pine in northern Michigan is rapidly disappearing. A few more years and the end of the once mammoth forests will have been reached. The cut has been going on for the past half a century, many fortunes have been won, many lost, cities and towns have been given employment and lumbering has been the main support of a considerable number of thriving cities and towns. There is but little data on which to approximately estimate what the total cut has been—it can be stated, however, that it runs well into the billions of feet.

At first only the choicest white pine trees were taken, but now practically everything goes to the mill, even the standing dry or dead trees having their uses. With the pine have also gone the Norway pine and hemlock, and now little is left except the hard woods and the poplar, cherry and a variety of other timber, together with low growing trees of no use to manufacturers. The swamp cedar, the spruce and the jack pine have been pretty well taken, the spruce and hemlock finding ready market in the manufacture of paper.

As illustrative of the change in the character of the timber during the century season just closed, the pine and hard wood timber banked on the Menominee and its tributaries together measure only about 150,000,000 feet, while in addition there are about 50,000,000 feet of cedar ties, poles and poles piled along the banks of the streams in readiness for the annual drive, now about to start. In past years several hundred million feet of pine alone would be on the banking ground and there would be but little other timber.

Love and Royalty.

The proposals of royal personages are generally far more commonplace than those of ordinary people, though there is often more love behind them than one would suspect from an arrangement which is really a matter of statescraft. The proposal of the czar to a czarina in public he was still czarevitch, he met and fell in love with Princess Alix of Hesse, who was staying at York cottage. His proposal was made in correct form. "My father, the czar," said he, "desires me to offer you his hand and heart." "My grandmother, the queen, has commanded me to accept the offer of your hand," said the princess, but, she added, "and your heart I take of my own accord."

It was a love match, and, in spite of the trials and troubles that have befallen them, it is a thoroughly happy marriage.—Chicago Daily News.

Effigies in Westminster Abbey.

It was formerly the custom at the funeral of a great man to dress up an effigy representing him while in life, and then to carry it before the hearse to the grave. After the burial it was set up in the church, sometimes under a temporary monument, to which a laudatory poem or an epitaph was affixed. The royal effigies in the Abbey can be traced back to the fourteenth century, but the oldest original one is that of Charles II. From George F. Parker's "History by Camera," in Century.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning June 23.

Topic.—Signs that India is becoming Christ's.—Ps. xxii, 27-31.

India has been for many reasons one of our most difficult mission fields. It was the birthplace of Brahmanism and Buddhism and has been a chief center for Mohammedanism, there being today 62,000,000 Mohammedans in the empire. In fact, King Edward VII. of England rules today over more Mohammedans than does the sultan of Turkey or the shah of Persia. The Brahman caste system has also been a great stumbling block to Christianity. In addition to these things, the character of the people, their national customs and methods of living have formed barriers to the progress of the Christian religion. Yet there are not wanting signs that India is becoming Christ's and that some day this beautiful and fascinating land will be a diadem in the crown of the Saviour.

Some of the signs that India is becoming Christ's are as follows:

1. The great work among the outcasts of India. The outcasts are the millions of Asia who are beneath all castes. They are scarcely looked upon as human beings. For centuries they have lived hopeless, despairing lives, but now they see hope in Christianity and for the past thirty years have been turning to Christ in large numbers. The work among them was begun by the Methodist church in northern India thirty years ago, but has since spread over the empire, for the outcasts are everywhere.

2. The reformed movements from within Hindooism itself. Important reform movements have been introduced among the Hindoos themselves. These are not distinctively Christian, but they were born of Christ in large measure of Christianity and are therefore a sign of Christianity's increasing influence.

3. The movement among the educated of India. Under the influence of eastern teaching and customs the educated men of India are becoming dissatisfied with their native religions. This will not immediately make them Christians. It may even for a time tend to drive them to infidelity and atheism, but it gives Christianity an opportunity to reach them since it is more apt to bring them under its influence. That this is the case is illustrated by the vast audiences that have listened to the lectures of Dr. John Henry Barrows and Cuthbert Hall delivered in the great cities of India under the Haskill foundation, which provides for such lectures every two years. They are generally aware of prejudice against Christianity. From one India mission field it is reported: "A marked change is noticeable in the treatment of the Christians by the people. They are no longer held in such contempt as they once were. Their testimony was considered polluting. But now many * * * enter into friendly conversation with them, and some even go so far as to shake hands with them. We mention this simply to show how the light of the gospel has begun to dispel the thick darkness of prejudice that has enveloped their minds for centuries."

4. The results of famine relief. In the recent famines in India Christians have been of great assistance in relieving the great distress. From 50,000 to 100,000 children in the famine districts have been placed in Christian orphanages, where they will be under the influence of Christianity. And, more than this, such Christian philanthropy cannot but break down prejudice and win the hearts of the people.

5. The gradual weakening of the caste system of India. This has been a great barrier, but it is breaking down. There is as yet nothing like intermarriage, and yet the line of demarcation is gradually becoming less distinct. Only recently at a college reunion the students, composed of Hindoos, Mohammedans and Christians, ate at the same table. Such fellowship a few years ago would have been absolutely unknown in India.

6. The constant extension of Christ's kingdom. New converts are being made every year. The Bible is being more widely circulated and more faithfully studied. The workers are being increased. Still many more could be used. "The field is ripe to the harvest," and some day "India's coral strands" shall have responded to the claims of Jesus Christ, their Saviour.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. lxxii, 8-17; xcvi, 1-13; Isa. xliii, 1-7; lii, 7; Zech. vii, 7, 8; Matt. ii, 1-12; xxviii, 19, 20; Rom. i, 16-25; x, 12-15; Rev. xxii, 17.

Some Things Needed.

Most of you need to give more attention to the associate members and provide more attractive privileges for this class of membership. Practically all need to strengthen the link between the Junior and the older society and be more tender and thoughtful for Junior graduates and other young members. For the few weak: Closer touch with your pastor; study of our literature and action on it. For the strong: Completeness in daily devotions, for the wave redouble the energy; many untasted blessings are beyond.—Von Ogden Vogt, General Secretary United Society.

Missouri State Convention.

The Missouri state gathering is to be held in St. Louis June 23 to 27. So many visiting Endeavorers will be at the world's fair at this time that the convention is expected to assume the proportions of an international one.

The Ohio State Union.

The Ohio state union now numbers 2,300 societies, with a membership of over 150,000. It is a bond of fellowship among nearly thirty denominations in the state. Last year Ohio organized 335 new societies.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week classified lists of all the books added by take the form of book lists, such as those of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to show the characteristics of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

Public Library Notes.
Lbs for Teachers.
Recent Books on Education.

With but few exceptions books on this list may be taken on the summer extension plan.

Education.

Aldridge, John Henry, Child education from a scientific point of view. 1900.

Briggs, LeBaron Russell, School, college and character. 1901.

Butler, N. M., ed., Education in the United States; a series of monographs. 2v. 1900.

Creighton, Mandell, Thoughts on education; speeches and sermons. 1903.

Hadley, A. T., Education of the American citizen. 1901.

Hanus, P. H., Educational aims and educational values. 1900.

Herbart, John Frederick, Outlines of educational doctrine. 1901.

Knight, William, ed., Rectorial addresses delivered at the University of St. Andrews. 1894.

Search, P. W., An ideal school; or, Looking forward. 1901.

Shinn, John Hastley, Pastor agnorum; a schoolmaster's afterthoughts.

Psychology and Child Study.

Adams, John, Herbartian psychology applied to education: being a series of essays. 1900.

Barnes, Earl, ed., Studies in education; a series of ten numbers devoted to child-study. 1902.

Harris, William T., Psychologic foundations of education: an attempt to show the genesis of the higher faculties of the mind. 1898.

[James, William, Talks to teachers on psychology, and to students on some of life's ideals. 1899.

Jastrow, Joseph, Fact and fable in psychology. 1901.

Munsterberg, Hugo, psychology and life. 1899.

Titchener, Edward Bradford, Experimental psychology: a manual of laboratory practice. v. 1, part 1. 1901.

Kindergarten.

Blow, S. E., Letters to a mother on the philosophy of Froebel. 1900.

Froebel, Friedrich, Mottoes and commentaries of his mother play, mother communings and mottoes rendered into English verse. 1900.

Harrison, Mrs. Elizabeth, Study of child-nature from the kindergarte standpoint. 1900.

Poulsson, Emilie, Love and law in child training: a book for mothers. 1900.

Wiebe, Edward, Paradise of childhood: a practical guide to kindergartners. 1901.

Wiggin, Mrs. K. D. S., and Smith, N. A., Republic of childhood. 8v. 1900.

Miscellaneous.

Adams, Oscar Fay, Some famous American schools. 1902.

Arnold, S. L., Reading: how to teach it. 1899.

Bolton, Frederick, E., Secondary school system of Germany. 1900.

Canfield, James Hulme, College student and his problems. 1902.

DeGarmo, Charles, Ethical training in the public schools. 1899.

Dewey, John, School and society, being three lectures supplemented by a statement of the university elementary school. 1900.

Hibbs, Charles William, More money for the public schools. 1903.

Hughes, J. L., Dickens as an educator. 1901.

Ostermann, Wilhelm, Interest in its relation to pedagogy. 1900.

Ware, Fabian, Educational foundations of trade and industry. 1901.

Young, James Thomas, Administration of city schools. 1900.

MISS BRISCO A BRIDE.

Plainfield Girl Becomes Wife of a Newark Man.

Miss Julia Brisco, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Brisco, of 941 West Second street, and Laurence Tourse, of Newark, were married in St. Mary's church Wednesday, June 15, by Rev. Andrew M. Egan, rector of the church. Miss Mamie Connelly, of Newark, was maid-of-honor, and Joseph Gray, also of Newark, was the best man. The bride was gowned in a traveling costume. After a honeymoon, the couple will live in Newark, where the groom holds an excellent position.

Dr. Frank C. Ard, of Park avenue, is planning to take a trip to Europe this summer.

USE ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE.

A powder to be shaken into the shoes. Your feet feel easy at once. It cures all pains and aches in the feet. If you have sweating feet, try Allen's Foot-Ease. It rests the feet and makes new or tight shoes easy. A certain cure for sweating, hot, tired, aching, smarting feet. Allen's Foot-Ease makes walking easy. Relieves corns and bunions. Try it today. Sold by all druggists, 25c. Don't accept any substitute. Trial package FREE. Address Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N. Y.

MISS EMMA L. NELSON WEDS CHARLES S. DAY

Ceremony Takes Place at Home of Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Nelson, the Bride's Parents.

EPISCOPAL CEREMONY

TWO MINISTERS OFFICIATE AT THE NUPTIAL SERVICE.

Frank Nelson Best Man—Miss Anabel Wilcox, of This City, Maid-of-Honor—Many Relatives Present.

Beneath a bell of bluish roses overhanging a white altar, Miss Emma Louise Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Brown Nelson, of Dunellen, was married Wednesday, June 15, by Charles Stanley Day, of New Market. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents, corner of Prospect avenue and Walnut street, Dunellen, and was attended by about one hundred relatives and near friends of the bride and groom.

As the Lohengrin wedding march was played on the piano by Miss Irene Day, the bridal party entered the parlor and advanced to the altar where they met the officiating clergymen, Rev. Frank Fletcher, pastor of the New Market Baptist church, and Rev. A. S. Phelps, pastor of the Bound Brook Episcopal church, who performed the Episcopal ceremony.

The bride wore white chiffon voile, trimmed with duchesse lace and carried a white prayer-book. She also wore a handsome diamond and pearl pin, the gift of the groom, her maid of honor, Miss Annie Wilcox, of this city, being costumed in white cotton silk and carrying a bouquet of pink roses.

The best man was Frank Nelson, who has been a life-long friend of the groom. Alfred Osmun, a nephew of the bride, and Robert Relf, of Bethlehem, Pa., were the ushers. A large number of valuable presents were received.

The whole house was tastefully decorated with roses and daisies and was completely filled by the throng of well-wishers, some of whom came quite a distance, there being present guests of both parties from Yonkers, Bloomfield, Atlantic Highlands, South Orange, Bessenhurst, Roselle, New York, Dunellen, Plainfield and Bound Brook.

Later in the evening the couple left for a six-weeks or two months trip through Canada, where the groom's sister will entertain them for a time and finally to St. Louis to visit the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, after which they will make their home in this vicinity.

BUILDING SPECULATOR GONE

HOUSES UNFINISHED AND LOCAL MEN IN A HOLE.

Without leaving any instructions regarding the continuation of the work, Frank C. Cook, who ordered the erection of four houses on Madison avenue, near Randolph road, and four brick flats on New street, near Fourth street, left town last Saturday and has not been here since. It is said that he has decided not to complete the buildings, and his departure has worried Seaman Williams, who had the contract for mason work, and Herman Hansen, who held the contract for carpenter work, on all the houses.

Cook came to town in February. He bought the four lots on Madison avenue from Clifton & Campbell, and the property on New street from Bacon & Whitaker, executors for the Corbright estate. From Clifton & Campbell he secured a loan of $10,000, on bond and mortgage, $2,500 on each house, for the erection of the Madison avenue row.

The money was to be paid at regular periods, 70 per cent. to go to the contractors, and 30 per cent. to be held. Up to last Saturday Clifton & Campbell paid out $1,500 on each house. The contractors received their money under the contract up to last week and gave releases for the full amounts due to the end of the current period. Saturday, it is said, there was a payment of $1,500 by Clifton & Campbell, but the contractors declare that they did not receive what was due them.

Cook is said to have written to E. M. Bacon, his former agent here, announcing his decision to give up the erection of the houses. He is said to have sent deeds covering the properties to two men here, and that in consequence litigation, to establish the exact status of those deeds, will ensue.

—Samuel Humpston, of West Front street, is having his house painted and the property otherwise improved.

—The sale of property under the auspices of the Martin Act was postponed Thursday by Collector F. H. Smith for four weeks.

YOUNG COLORED WOMAN AS THE VALEDICTORIAN

Bright Essay on the Revival of Interest in Hand Industry is Given by Honor Graduate

MISS ANNA BROADNAX

HER REMARKABLY GOOD ADDRESS REPRODUCED IN FULL.

Value of Manual Arts in Developing Character—Points Out the Good Work Being Done at Hampton and Tuskegee Institutes.

Much favorable comment was expressed at the Plainfield High School commencement exercises Thursday over the valedictory address of Miss Anna Frances Broadnax, the fact that she was the only member of the colored race in the class of forty-five pupils making the essay all the more marked.

Her address was entitled "The Revival of Interest in Hand Industry" and is reproduced in full:

"Within the last few years great progress has been made in the development of hand industry. Many years ago, before man's ingenuity had fashioned the great inventions which we have today, much of the work now performed by machines was done by hand. But after the inventions came into use, hand industry glided into the background and became of secondary importance. Now the work of the hand is assuming its place decreed by nature. Now men are beginning to see the value of the hand arts.

"If we try to trace the revival of hand industry to its source, we shall find that there are various causes which have led to this great movement. There are a few, however, which seem to stand predominant. First, a wide spread interest is now being manifested in the handicrafts, and this interest has led to a great demand for hand-made articles. Again, the place that this new industry is taking in our national life is due not only to the realization of the intrinsic value of hand work, but also to the understanding of the educational discipline and economic value of the hand arts.

"In the first place, men have begun to realize that works of the hand are truly productions of art and have a peculiar value that no machine-made goods can possess. The work that is being done in Deerfield, Mass., furnishes a striking example of this revived interest in hand work. Hand industry gives pleasant employment to many of the inhabitants. The women sew, embroider, weave baskets, make carpets. The men make and carve furniture, as has been said, 'with the nicety of a Chinese puzzle.' A personal achievement is that of Mrs. Wynne. She invented various ways of decorating copper and silver with enamel, and has lately embellished it with semi-precious stones, opals, and even pretty pebbles. The demand for the articles made in Deerfield by these deft fingers is always in advance of supply.

"Again, we might devote an entire essay to the work of the Indians. Many have become interested in these semi-barbarous tribes, and are eager to possess their work. The blankets, pottery, and lace made by these people are sold almost as fast as they are made. The finely woven baskets are especially highly prized. They are delicate in weave, beautiful in design. They give evidence of patience and endurance, and almost constitute an Indian literature. Old myths, religious beliefs, and even the lives of some designers are woven into the baskets.

"Aside from the interest felt in hand-made work—an interest which shows that now men appreciate the superiority of hand-made articles to those made by machine—lies the far most important reason for the revival of interest in industrial work. This is the realization of the value of the manual arts in developing character and mind and in training for life, the true aim of all education.

"The value of the work of the hand was first realized in the South where it began to bring about wonderful results among the colored people. This work has proved so valuable that it has extended to all sections of our own land and even to lands across the sea. In Georgia a Massachusetts model school was started not long ago for the benefit of the poor whites of that state. In the highlands of Tennessee, industrial training is bringing about a marvelous change among the natives. The industrial arts have been introduced into the public schools of Boston. In Manhattan, industrial training will form one of the main features of the curriculum this fall.

"To go across the sea—this same work is going on in Ireland, and it is thought that it will greatly benefit the Irish nation. These arts have also been introduced into the schools of England with remarkable results. But far away from either of these two countries, we find this work carried on. In India we see the value of this discipline among the orphans and others made wretched by famine. In Turkey the industrial training is bringing forth good fruit among Armenian women and children left destitute by the massacres of eight years ago.

"To understand what this work is accomplishing, it may be well to give the testimonial of one who stands in a position to know the fruits of the industrial work in education. The Rev. James Smith, of India, in an article devoted to this subject, says in substance:

"'It is believed in Industrial Training because for nine years I have tried it, and found that in general my most intelligent and resourceful pupils are those who have had a simple course in manual training in addition to their other work; because it fits my boys and girls for life; because it seems to develop faithfulness and truthfulness better than arithmetic and spelling and other forms of mere book-work in which cramming and whispering make deception and superficiality so easy; because it makes my boys more self-reliant; because it makes them more manly; and lastly, because working men and boys must have education suited to their future.'

"In speaking of the economic and educational value of hand industry, we are at once reminded of the grand work that is being done at Hampton and Tuskegee Institutes. In both schools the manual arts are taught with admirable results. In both schools are found dress-making, tailoring, weaving, blacksmithing, millinery and other industries. As great stress is laid on these trades as on arithmetic and English. For it has been observed that this training teaches the students to think and to develop originality; it teaches them the beauty, dignity and honor of labor.

"It may be said here that industrial education alone will not bring about desired results among the colored people. Education of the head as well as that of the hand is necessary. One with the exclusion of the other is not sufficient. Let those who are capable and who wish, pursue the higher education, that they may become wise, intelligent leaders and teachers fitted to lead their people aright. Although this be so, it cannot be denied that industrial education has been and is the most potent factor in elevating the masses. It enables them to gain a better living. It helps to develope the all-around manhood and womanhood by calling forth skill of hand as well as power of head.

"These results are known to be true. Students who go to Hampton and Tuskegee from log cabins leave school no longer content to live as before, but desirous of entering the world with higher aspirations and nobler ideals. They build good homes and earn their living through some skilled trade which they learned at school. The officials of such institutions as Hampton and Tuskegee keep a careful record of all who leave their schools, and it is found that these students lead pure, noble lives, and that they live up to the high moral standard which they followed in school.

"These are some of the advantages of hand industry. And are these not valuable? It would certainly mean peace and happiness among all citizens, if, while we are striving to wipe out all illiteracy, we should, at the same time, prepare every future citizen for life. When we consider that the dominant tendency in the world today is toward industrialism, when we consider that a large share of the prosperity and progress of our nation depend upon the efficiency and intelligence of our workmen, we can see the necessity of promoting these arts and can realize the value of this new phase of education.

"There is no man perhaps who has not the done more to emphasize the value of manual training than has Mr. Booker T. Washington. He has given himself up wholly to the work which he believes to be the salvation of his people. His is a life of unselfishness and of love for his fellowmen, for his country. From the life of one who has done so much, surely something may be learned. Even as Mr. Washington has served and is serving his race, his country, may we, too, as we use our strength in brain, crews and boats in the sport of the waves. In a few days there shall be assembled here nearly all the flags of the civilized world. Alongside our colors will wave the star spangled banner, the British flag and the tricolor united in peaceful rivalry.

"I certainly believe that there is none among you who does not share the opinion that during Kiel week solidarity will be fostered, cultivated and more firmly welded."

The emperor concluded by proposing the health of the German Regatta union, all the yacht clubs and the city of Hamburg.

LANDING PARTIES READY.

Conference Held at Tangier by British and American Officials.

LONDON, June 22.—A Tangier cablegram says:

"Two conferences have been held between the American and British ministers, which were attended by the American admiral and the captain of the British battleship Prince of Wales.

"All the ships in the harbor have landing parties ready day and night.

"Quiet now prevails in the town, but reports from all parts of the country are to the effect that the tribes are growing more restless."

A dispatch from Tangier says that Raisuli has agreed to accept $70,000 of the ransom for Perdicaris and Varley in cash and the remainder in bills of exchange.

Satolli Visits Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Cardinal Satolli has been received by the president at the White House. Cardinal Satolli presented to the president a felicitous address in which he refreged to in most kindly way to the United States and its people. In responding to the address the president said: "It is a pleasure to me to welcome so distinguished a visitor. I thank you most heartily for your kind words about the United States, and in return I greet you in my capacity as chief executive of a government which has as its root principle the doctrine of treating with impartial justice all men without regard to creed or birthplace. It gives me pleasure to welcome you."

Army Command Changes.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Secretary Taft is authority for the statement that Major General Wade, now commanding the Philippine division, probably will relieve Major General Corbin of command of the Atlantic division when General Corbin goes to the Philippines, provided Major General MacArthur, commanding the Pacific division at San Francisco, and Major General Bates, commanding the northern division at St. Louis, desire to retain their present commands in preference to assuming command of the Atlantic division.

Lightning's Fatal Work.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 22.—During a heavy rain and electrical storm here Mrs. Ora Bradley, wife of W. B. Bradley, a street car conductor, was killed by lightning, and in another part of the city lightning struck the home of T. O. Jones, an instructor in the Georgia School of Technology, and both Mr. and Mrs. Jones were rendered unconscious for some time, but soon recovered. The street car system was rendered ineffectual during the storm.

Medina (N. Y.) Bank Failed.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—The comptroller of the currency has received word of the failure of the Medina National bank. Robert Lyon has been placed in charge of the bank, which is insolvent.

Big Batch of New B. A's.

WELLESLEY, Mass., June 22.—One hundred and sixty-eight students have received the degree of bachelor of arts at Wellesley college. Ten candidates received the degree of master of arts.

Weather Probabilities.

Fair; northwest winds.

HOLZWASSER & CO

SPECIAL DISCOUNT THIS MONTH OF 10%
ALLOWED ON ALL CASH PURCHASES.

We Also Furnish a Flat at $65.00.

Write for Our New Catalogue. Mailed Upon Application.

$1.00 a Week Opens an Account.

We Also Carry a Complete Line of

CLOTHING

For Men, Women and Children.

Freight and R. R. Fare Allowed on All Out-of-Town Orders.

1417 TO 1423 3D AVE BETWEEN 80 & 81 ST

Open Evenings until 9 o'clock. NEW YORK, N. Y.

ST. GABRIEL'S ACADEMY CLOSING EXERCISES

Many Pupils Take Part in a Pleasing Programme of Recitations and Songs.

AN ADDRESS IN LATIN

A BOUQUET IS PRESENTED TO REV. WILLIAM MILLER.

Seventy-Five Guests—Public Exhibition of Work Done to be Given on June 26 and 27.

In the artistically decorated parlors of St. Gabriel's Academy, the pupils of this select institution, held the closing exercises of the term Friday afternoon. About seventy-five friends of the institution were present.

Those taking part in the programme were the Misses M. Clark, D. Bullard, A. Pedefleus, I. Deschesne, Bernadette Duchesne, M. Boehn, Mary Keaney, A. Jaeger, S. Lee, H. Pedefleus, E. Voshl, A. Williamson, M. Clark, L. Jacot, E. Willoughby, M. Berkhan and Lucy Traynor, who delivered the Latin address. Two little girls, only one year at the academy, S. Moskovits and R. Weinberger, made a particularly fine showing in a piano duet.

Other features deserving special mention were the recitations by Miss Mary Keaney and Morton Kapp. There was an arrow drill by some of the junior girls. The May drill was the original idea of Miss Hortense Smith, instructor in elocution and vocal training. Miss Smith rendered a vocal solo. John Pedefleus gained applause by a recitation.

At the close of her Latin address, Miss Traynor handed a bouquet to little Clara Windham, who presented it to Father Miller, pastor of St. Joseph's church.

Among the guests were people from Brooklyn, New York, Saratoga, Philadelphia, Jersey City and Round Brook, Rev. Father Dietrich, of the latter place, being present.

A public exhibition of the work done during the past year will be given Sunday and Monday, June 26 and 27 at the academy.

Flower Thieves at Work.

Councilman Arnold, of the borough, has been troubled by thieves with a penchant for flowers. The marauders have made a practice of cutting the blooms from potted plants on his porch. Mr. Arnold and his wife are amateur horticulturists of more than a little enthusiasm, and the thief will be prosecuted vigorously if captured.

Baseball Player Hurt.

Fred K. Armstrong, of the Y. M. C. A. baseball nine, who injured his right hip in Saturday's game against the Westfield A. C. U. W. team, is laid up with a partial rupture between the ligaments and the muscles

PEACEFUL RIVALRY

Emperor of Germany at Cuxhaven For Regatta.

BANQUET ON BOARD DEUTSCHLAND

Kaiser Spoke of Advance Made in Solidarity by Various Means, by Congresses, Political Discussion and Competitive Sports.

CUXHAVEN, Germany, June 22.—At a banquet on board the Hamburg-American line steamer Deutschland last night on the occasion of the distribution of the regatta prizes, which was attended by Emperor William, Prince Henry of Prussia, Count von Bulow, the imperial chancellor; Adjutant General von Plessen and many other distinguished personages, the emperor responded to the toast to his health delivered by the burgomaster of Hamburg. He thanked those present for the welcome accorded him and for the opportunity of spending a few hours among them as a comrade and fellow yachtsman.

Alluding to the advance made in the sport and to the advance in other institutions in the empire, the emperor said that one idea must have forced itself upon the minds of every independent observer of world events—namely, that solidarity was making gradual and undeniable headway among the peoples of civilized countries. Continuing, his majesty said:

"This solidarity may be nourished by various means—by congresses, by serious political discussion or by competition in sports. In this latter connection it may well be said that there is deep wisdom in childish play.

"We have assembled here to test our strength in brains, crews and boats in the sport of the waves. In a few days there shall be assembled here nearly all the flags of the civilized world. Alongside our colors will wave the star spangled banner, the British flag and the tricolor united in peaceful rivalry.

"I certainly believe that there is none among you who does not share the opinion that during Kiel week solidarity will be fostered, cultivated and more firmly welded."

The emperor concluded by proposing the health of the German Regatta union, all the yacht clubs and the city of Hamburg.

LANDING PARTIES READY.

Conference Held at Tangier by British and American Officials.

LONDON, June 22.—A Tangier cablegram says:

"Two conferences have been held between the American and British ministers, which were attended by the American admiral and the captain of the British battleship Prince of Wales.

"All the ships in the harbor have landing parties ready day and night.

"Quiet now prevails in the town, but reports from all parts of the country are to the effect that the tribes are growing more restless."

A dispatch from Tangier says that Raisuli has agreed to accept $70,000 of the ransom for Perdicaris and Varley in cash and the remainder in bills of exchange.

Satolli Visits Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Cardinal Satolli has been received by the president at the White House. Cardinal Satolli presented to the president a felicitous address in which he refreged to in most kindly way to the United States and its people. In responding to the address the president said: "It is a pleasure to me to welcome so distinguished a visitor. I thank you most heartily for your kind words about the United States, and in return I greet you in my capacity as chief executive of a government which has as its root principle the doctrine of treating with impartial justice all men without regard to creed or birthplace. It gives me pleasure to welcome you."

Army Command Changes.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Secretary Taft is authority for the statement that Major General Wade, now commanding the Philippine division, probably will relieve Major General Corbin of command of the Atlantic division when General Corbin goes to the Philippines, provided Major General MacArthur, commanding the Pacific division at San Francisco, and Major General Bates, commanding the northern division at St. Louis, desire to retain their present commands in preference to assuming command of the Atlantic division.

Lightning's Fatal Work.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 22.—During a heavy rain and electrical storm here Mrs. Ora Bradley, wife of W. B. Bradley, a street car conductor, was killed by lightning, and in another part of the city lightning struck the home of T. O. Jones, an instructor in the Georgia School of Technology, and both Mr. and Mrs. Jones were rendered unconscious for some time, but soon recovered. The street car system was rendered ineffectual during the storm.

Medina (N. Y.) Bank Failed.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—The comptroller of the currency has received word of the failure of the Medina National bank. Robert Lyon has been placed in charge of the bank, which is insolvent.

Big Batch of New B. A's.

WELLESLEY, Mass., June 22.—One hundred and sixty-eight students have received the degree of bachelor of arts at Wellesley college. Ten candidates received the degree of master of arts.

Weather Probabilities.

Fair; northwest winds.

TRACK MAY BE ABANDONED.

Mayor Harrison's Edict Against Betting to Close Washington Park.

CHICAGO, June 22.—There will be no more horse racing at Washington park this year, and a report is in circulation that the track where so many American Derbies have been decided will be abandoned.

The stand taken by the city authorities preventing betting in any form at the track is responsible for the closing of the present meeting.

With the elimination of the bookmaker racegoers refused to patronize the track. During the last two days not enough money was taken in at the gates to pay the employees of the track, to say nothing of the purses, which amounted to an average of $5,000 a day.

The directors of the club have held a meeting to consider the advisability of continuing the meeting for the full twenty-five days and decided to close the gates for the present meeting at least. The announcement was made by Secretary Howard that all stakes left to be decided had been declared off.

A proposition was made to Secretary Howard to run some of these stakes at the other tracks, but this was refused.

BASEBALL SCORES.

Results of Yesterday's Games In National and American Leagues.

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

At Boston—
New York	0	2	0	0	1	0	0	0	3	—6
Boston	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	—0
Batteries—McGinnity and Warner; Willis and Moran.
At Brooklyn—
Philadelphia	0	2	0	0	1	1	0	0	3	—4
Brooklyn	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	—0
Batteries—Mitchell and Doon; Cronin and Bergen.
At St. Louis—
Pittsburg	3	0	0	5	0	0	0	0	2	—9
St. Louis	0	0	3	1	1	0	0	0	0	—5
Batteries—Lynch and Phelps; Corbett and Sugden.
At Cincinnati—
Chicago	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	6	—6
Cincinnati	0	1	0	0	0	0	2	0	0	—3
Batteries—Weimer and Kling; Walker and Bergen.

TABLE OF PERCENTAGES.

Clubs.	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
New York	36	14	.692
Cincinnati	34	19	.642
Chicago	31	21	.596
Pittsburg	28	23	.528
St. Louis	25	25	.500
Boston	21	32	.396
Brooklyn	20	32	.385
Philadelphia	13	37	.260

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

At Washington—
New York	0	0	0	0	0	3	0	1	3
Washington	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0
Batteries—Chesbro and McGuire; Patten and Drill.
At St. Louis—
Detroit	1	0	0	0	0	0	2	0	3
St. Louis	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0
Batteries—Mullen and Buelow; Siever and Sugden.
At Chicago—
Cleveland	0	0	1	0	0	0	0	0	1
Chicago	0	0	1	0	0	0	0	0	1
Batteries—Donohue and Abbott; Owen and Kahoe.

TABLE OF PERCENTAGES.

Clubs.	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Boston	34	17	.667
New York	33	17	.660
Chicago	29	20	.592
Cleveland	26	22	.542
Philadelphia	25	23	.500
St. Louis	21	24	.472
Detroit	20	26	.435
Washington	9	40	.184

Stalwart Won Swift Stakes.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Stalwart, at 10 to 1 in the betting, won the Swift stakes for three-year-olds, seven furlongs, on the futurity course at Sheepshead Bay. He won by a short head from Bryn Mawr, who gave the winner nineteen pounds. Two lengths back came the favorite, Broomstick. Witchcraft made the running to the bend and into the stretch, where Stalwart moved out and won. Sparkling Star, the even money favorite, easily won the Surf stakes. Ben MacDhui in the last race broke the track record for one mile and a furlong on the turf by covering the distance in 1 minute 53 1-5 seconds.

Tennis at Bay Ridge.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Two exciting matches and one unfinished four set affair provided good sport in the continuation of the round robin doubles tournament on the courts of the Crescent Athletic club at Bay Ridge. The team composed of the Harvard veterans, H. Ward and R. C. Wright, defeated C. Hobart and A. Wright in straight sets by the score of 6—2, 6—3, 6—3. The Harvard men won at every point with comparative ease.

Polo at New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 22.—The Rumford Polo club of Providence has defeated the Taconic club of Hartford in the first match of the tournament under the auspices of the New Haven Polo club here.

Shot Three Men, Pike Now Barred.

ST. LOUIS, June 22.—As a result of his shooting three men on "the Pike" at the world's fair grounds Zach Mullan, live stock agent of the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad, has been, by order of the world's fair officials, excluded from further appearance in the show where the trouble took place. This action was taken, it was explained, to avoid the possibility of a possible repetition of the indiscriminate firing that endangered the lives of visitors to "the Pike."

Jury in Mooney Case Disagreed.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 22.—The jury in the case of the people against Dr. E. L. Mooney of Syracuse, indicted for bribery, the charge being that while a member of the board of education he entered into an agreement by which a teacher was to get a place in the high school on the payment of $300, has been discharged, having been unable to reach an agreement. The jury was out a little over twenty-four hours.

Soldier's Slayer Sentenced.

BOSTON, June 22.—A term of from nineteen to twenty years in state prison was imposed on William Morray, who had pleaded guilty to a charge of manslaughter. Morray shot and killed Sergeant Wilson, a United States soldier stationed at the Watertown arsenal, during a quarrel in a barroom in this city.

MINOR TRANSACTIONS OF COMMON COUNCIL

Report as Received From the Public Library Shows Receipts for Year to be $13,600.

NO FREE GAS FOR CITY

P. S. C. NOT TO FURNISH ILLUMINATING GAS FOR MUNICIPAL DEPARTMENTS.

More Electric Lights—Error in Assessment Referred to Committee—The Trees to be Trimmed.

Aside from the business of receiving bids for the construction of the extension of the sanitary sewers, matters of a minor nature occupied the attention of the Common Council at its adjourned meeting, Friday.

Walter Whittlesey, of East Orange, communicated with the Council regarding the assessment in error of a property owned by him in Watson avenue. The assessment has been erroneously made on property owned by J. F. Daggett, the tax bills having been transposed. The matter was referred to the proper committee for adjustment.

Mason W. Tyler, treasurer of the Plainfield Public Library and Reading room, submitted the annual report. In the general fund the total receipts were $7,316.05 and the balance, $1,060.62. The total receipts for the Babcock Fund were $6,283.63, the disbursements, $5,376.73 and the balance, $2,907. There are 27,887 books in the library and the total circulation was 49,781.

In accordance with resolutions offered by Mr. Gloak, the sum of $300 was appropriated for the purpose of caring for the East End dump at the gravel pit and $200 was appropriated for the work of trimming trees during the coming season.

Mr. Randolph reported on the matter of free gas at police headquarters, stating that the Public Service Corporation will continue to furnish the gas free until July 1 next, after which a charge will be made if it is used. The same is true at fire headquarters.

Mr. Murphy reported still further on the matter and presented a letter from W. B. Casebrook, of the company, in which he set forth the facts as stated by Mr. Randolph and Mr. Lee. However, he said that if the city would have police and fire headquarters wired the company would furnish the current for electric lighting free. This will probably be done.

In view of this statement, on Mr. Murphy's motion, the bills of the Public Service Corporation held up at the last meeting, were ordered paid.

Mr. Murphy moved that in response to a request that one electric light be placed on Lee place, and two more, one midway between Hillside and Woodland avenue and the other between Woodland and Evergreen avenues. The motion prevailed.

BURIED WITH MASONIC HONORS

FRANK B. READ LAID AT REST AND MAUSOLEUM TO MARK SPOT.

Funeral services of the late Frank B. Read, who was killed in an automobile accident in New York, on Sunday, were held at the Hotel Endicott, New York, Wednesday, June 13, and in the afternoon the interment took place in Hillside Cemetery.

Masonic services were held under the auspices of Bedford Lodge, No. 74, F. and A. M.; Orient Chapter, No. 138, R. A. M.; Clinton Commandery, K. T., and Kismet Temple, of Brooklyn. Mr. Read was thirty-seven years old and was a brother-in-law of Mrs. W. T. Kaufman, of West Seventh street. He was engaged in business in New York as a paper manufacturer. It is planned to erect a costly mausoleum at Hillside Cemetery to mark the resting place.

—There is no slackening of the notable vegetable showing at Neuman Bros. Everything is there, in the finest quality.

Choral Club's Affair.

The first musicale of the Hope Chapel Choral Club, Saturday night, proved highly successful in every respect. Beside the chorus of about thirty-five mixed voices, there were a woman's chorus, two piano duets by Miss Kaltenbeck and W. T. Schneider, of New York. Miss Kaltenbeck furnished the piano accompaniment. Fred A. Ballantyne sang three bass solos.

Didn't Pay for Dogs' Release.

A. L. Carney, of Lincoln place, declares he did not pay the dog catcher to release his canines. He acknowledges that he gave the dog catcher a dollar, but says it was on his own initiative and not because the borough asked it. He says the borough forthriedly returned his dogs when he made it plain that suit would be started the next day.

CONTRACT AWARDED FOR SEWER EXTENSION

Stone & Grossart, of Philadelphia, the Successful Bidders Among the Competitors.

WORK TO COST $7,166.30

THIRTEEN PROPOSALS FILED WITH THE COMMON COUNCIL.

C. M. Hooker & Co., of This City, Offered to Do the Work for $7,576.05—Checks Returned to Unsuccessful Ones.

There were thirteen bids received on the proposal for the extension of the sanitary sewer, at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, and Walter B. Stone, Charles W. Grossart and J. Thompson, contractors doing business under the firm of Stone & Grossart, of Philadelphia, were the successful bidders. This firm's price for constructing the proposed 13,000 feet extension to the sewer in the eastern end of the city, was $7,166.30. Accordingly, after a recess, Mr. Gloak, chairman of the street and sewer committee, offered a resolution accepting the bid and awarding the contract to the concern, after the contracts are signed. By resolution checks were returned to the unsuccessful bidders.

C. M. Hooker, of this city, was the second lowest bidder, his price being $7,576.05, while Conan J. Ferederici, of Orange, was third lowest, his bid being $7,890.45.

This is the entire list of bidders:

Stone & Grossart, Philadelphia; B. F. Sweeton & Son, Camden; Schimel & Hill, Easton, Pa.; Bolton G. Coon, Wilkesbarre, Pa.; Matt Wade & Jacob Jacquer, Elizabeth; James Maybury & Son, Passaic; J. T. Abel & Co., New York city; Antonino Maglio, White Plains, N. Y.; Donato Tozzo, Montclair; Cosmo J. Ferederici, Orange; C. M. Hooker, Plainfield; H. Spinich & Son, Rosebank, Newgranck, Conn.; Wilkesbarre Construction Company, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

The city officials seemed well pleased with the lowest bid. There were an unusually large number of bids in which contractors from distant points took part. This is not usually the case. Mr. Grossart, of the successful firm, is well-known here. His brother supervised the construction of the Pedrick-Ayer works.

WESTFIELD TEAM SHUT OUT

THE AEOLIAN NINE PUTS IT ALL OVER DENMAN'S AGGREGATION.

With Doesher, of the Brooklyn Nationals, again in the box, the Aeolians gave the Westfields another dose of shut-out Saturday. Aeolian yanked in four runs.

Westfield had a guilelul gentleman named Wilson in the box, but it was no go for she long end. Not even with Mr. Raisuli Kenzie, cheered on and applauded by Capt. Diogenes Mallos, as the umpire person. Close decisions wouldn't have mattered anyway. Westfield was the mark in one of those taking - candy - from - a - baby things.

Aeolian only got one more hit than Westfield, but the belts counted. Westfield five swats were scattered drearily along the way.

Score by innings:

	R	H	E
Westfield	0	0	0
Aeolian	3	0	0

Batteries: Wilson and Burke; Doesher and W. Poole.

STOCKING DYE POISONED HIM

RALPH SCHOONMAKER LAID UP BY SINGULAR ACCIDENT.

Ralph Schoonmaker, of Central avenue, a student at Columbia, met with a peculiar accident several days ago, at the university. While engaged in sprinting on the track he sustained a slight injury to his big toe.

At first he thought little of it, but in a few days there was signs of blood-poisoning, brought on, it is thought by the dye in the stockings he wore. Prompt treatment was secured and no serious results are now anticipated. Mr. Schoonmaker was brought to his home last night.

Young Recovered Judgment.

In the district court at Newark, yesterday, Fred J. Huff, representing the plaintiff in the case of Orlando B. Young against Frederick Chase, secured judgment in the amount of $352 and costs. The case was tried before Judge Lintott.

'Squire Huff's Auto.

First among the justices of the peace in this city to purchase an automobile, is Fred J. Huff. He has a Mobile Stanhope machine.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, JUNE 30, 1904. NO. 26.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Corner the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

ST. MARY'S GRAMMAR DEPARTMENT EXERCISES

Sixteen Pupils Are Graduated, Programme Being Given in the Parochial School Hall.

FATHER EGAN SPEAKS

MISS ELIZABETH BROWN IS THE VALEDICTORIAN.

Salutatory by Miss Mary McCarthy —An Operetta is Presented—It's Title "An Irish May Day"— Singing by the School.

The closing exercises of the grammar department of the parochial school of St. Mary's parish was held in the school hall last night. There was a large attendance, and the audience enjoyed a most delightful programme, in which tuneful music was prominent.

Sixteen children graduated: Mary McCarthy, Christine McEachen, John Canfield, Cornelius McCarthy, Elizabeth Brown, Mary Murray, John Mc Eachen, Harry Forristel, Ada Flatley, Annie Callahan, Elizabeth Casey, Jeanette Hand, Warren Seaman, William Summers, Thomas Kennedy and John Casey. The first four named doubled their studies during the past year and will graduate with the commercial department pupils tomorrow night.

Miss Mary McCarthy delivered the salutatory. Her address was happily worded. The valedictorian was Miss Elizabeth Brown. She spoke upon "The End Crowns the Work," her main theme being that labor conquers all. The essay was cleverly handled.

Certificates admitting the graduates to the commercial department were presented by Father Egan, the rector. He made a striking address to the graduates, urging higher ideals of study and living in their advanced schooling.

The principal feature of the entertainment was the presentation of the operetta, "An Irish May Day." The cast was as follows:

Mrs. Carew, Miss Elizabeth Casey; Mary, Nora, Sheia, Mrs. Carew's daughters, Miss Elizabeth Brown, Miss Loretta Walsh, Miss Mary Murray; Eileen, Mrs. Carew's nomsiie, Miss H. E. Hanrahan; Captain Miles Fitzgerald, Master James Buckley; Daisy, Captain Miles' daughter, Miss Nora Callahan; Maurice, Mrs. Carew's son, Master John McEachen; Gerald, Mrs. Carew's son, Master Harry Forrestel.

The operetta was full of merry jingles and dances. It was well acted and cleverly sung. All the young actors and actresses were roundly applauded, and deservedly. James Buckley and Nora Callahan were particularly clever.

There were four brilliant dances in the operetta, and a chorus of 100 children's voices supported the principal members of the cast. The first of the dances, the Shamrock Dance, was tripped by Mary Connally, Josephine Rock, Madaleine Daly, Madaleine Seaman, Mabel Schuck, Ella Lappan, Mary Crosby, May Kennedy, Mary Traynor, Katherine Powers, Anna Callahan and Ada Flatley. In a Gypsy Dance the following children took part: Nora McCarthy, Margaret Brown, Florence Buckley, Regina Brady, Theresa Murray, Mary Sullivan, Earl Moran, John Motley, Patrick Powers, Edward Hanrahan, William Sullivan, William Colvin. The following took part in a minuet: Thomas Kennedy, George McCusker, William Summers, Warren Seaman, John Casey, Edward Carty, Helen Mullen, Jeanette Hand, Katherine Galbraith, Emma Killoran, Lillian Fennessy, May Huntington. As a grand finale a Country Dance was stepped by Katherine Kelly, Mary Kyle, Emma Killoran, Ella Lappan, Lillian Fennessy, Bridge Hepner, Helen Mullen, Katherine Galbraith, Mary Crosby, Margaret Conway, Mary Conway, Katherine McCuley.

Sister Mary Esther and Madam Mansell Bartlett, the physical culture teacher, trained the children in all their parts and dances.

In addition to the operetta there was a piano solo by Miss Smith, the church organist; a recitation, "Robert of Sicily," by Miss Blanche Skinner, and the singing of Poe's "Bells" by the school.

Miss Mary E. Lewis to Wed.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Lewis, daughter of Mrs. George Lewis of this city, and Henry Clifford Riley, of Bishopville, Md., will be married on Tuesday, July 12, at the Lewis homestead, Bishopville.

SEATS FOR 575 AT PARK

GRANDSTAND ENLARGED AT BAND CONCERT PARK.

Additional seating capacity sufficient to accommodate 100 people, has been arranged for, at the Band Concert Park grandstand. This will allow accommodations for 575 persons. It has been stated erroneously that the grandstand, which was erected as a cost of over $100, was donated. This notion was caused by the donation of the small stand used as a bandstand, which did not cost the management anything.

Bandmaster Ben LaVere said last night, that because of a report to the effect that no collections would be taken on the stand, the receipts from that source had been so light that it will take two more concerts, at the same rate, to bring the receipts up to the expenditures. In case no income takes place in the collections it is likely that the concert set for July 14, will be postponed.

GUARDSMEN AT SEA GIRT

PRACTICE OF NEW JERSEY SOLDIERS FOR 1904 HAS BEEN BEGUN.

Practice for the season of 1904 on the State rifle range at Sea Girt has been begun by the National Guard of New Jersey, and for two months the sharp crack of the Krag-Jorgensen rifle will resound over one of the finest rifle ranges in the world. Plans have been formulated, which will enable the men of the Second and Third Regiments and the regiments in the First Brigade as well, to get plenty of practice this year without interference in any respect.

Arrangements were made last summer for the "regulars" stationed in New York harbor to practice for their qualification on the rifle range, as they did not have any range in the vicinity of the harbor where they could camp and shoot convenientely. There was an improvement on this last year that the presence of the "regulars" prevented the Jersey guardsmen from having free access to the targets. This was erroneous since the "regulars" manned the targets and provided their own scorers. As they seldom took possession of more than a score of targets, and there are 125 on the range, it is evident that the practice of the Jersey guardsmen was not interfered with.

BISHOP ON CHURCH MUSIC

GREGORIAN CHANT MUST BE USED EXTENSIVELY IN CATHOLIC CHURCHES.

Half of the priests of the Diocese of Newark, including Father Egan, of St. Mary's church, were on retreat last week at Seton Hall College. At the concluding conference of the retreat Friday, Bishop O'Connor addressed the clergy on the subject of church music.

He said nothing to the effect that boys would be substituted for women in the church choirs, nor that women will be eliminated from the choirs. Whether the women will remain in the choirs will depend upon a decision of a commission appointed in New York recently. The bishop said the recommendations of the commission will be followed in Newark diocese.

The bishop informed the priest, however, that operatic features must be abolished from the church music, and the Gregorian chant used more extensively. Palestrina music and that recommended by the Cecilian society will be permitted.

To Sell Newspaper Plant.

By virtue of a chattel mortgage executed by Henry A. Alsal and the Fret Presse Printing Association, of Elizabeth, bearing date March 24, 1903, upon which default in payment has been made, all the goods and chattels of the said Fret Presse Printing Association will be sold at public auction at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon at No. 1177 Wasnington street, Elizabeth.

In Justice Huff's Court.

Two contract suits have been brought in Justice Huff's court against Thomas J. Walsh; one by the A. A. Griffing Iron Co., and the other by J. A. Murray. Papers in both cases are returnable July 6. Execution has been issued in the cases of Samuel Werner against Wm. A. Shoemaker, and Chas. Holstein against Michael Armstrong. Both are contract suits.

—An examination of the stock of UnXld fireworks at Harper's, 411 Park avenue, will convince you that his prices are low and his stock fresh.

PRIZES ARE AWARDED AT L. T. L. EXERCISES

Young People Participate in a Speaking Contest for a Silver Medal at Closing Meeting.

MISS ETHEL VAIL WINS

REWARDS ARE ALSO GIVEN FOR ATTENDANCE AND DEPORTMENT.

Session in W. C. T. U. Rooms—Miss May E. Howlett in Charge—Songs Rendered and Speeches Made.

Presentation of a silver medal in a prize-speaking contest and other prizes for good attendance and deportment, together with interesting addresses, marked the closing exercises of the Loyal Temperance Legion last night. The entertainment was held in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union's rooms in Madison avenue, and there was a large number of persons present. The Legion will not meet again until next fall.

Miss May E. Howlett, superintendent of the Legion, was in charge of the programme. Miss Ethel Vail won the silver medal, her selection being "I'll Take What Father Takes." Other contestants and their selections were "No Drunkard Enters There," Miss Sadie Stelle; "The Moose and the Boy," Miss Lulu Rockafellow; "Since Papa Doesn't Drink," Miss Hilda Bennett; "Dolly's New Dress," Miss Anna Vail.

In addition to the prize speaking there were these songs: "The Bird With the Broken Wing," Miss Hilda Bennett; "Spirit of Water," Miss Julia Lamatty; "What Would Mother Say," and "I Use to Kill Birds," by the Legion. Miss Kizzie Neagle presided at the piano as the accompanist.

Other features of the programme were the address of welcome by Lena Legion and a written address on the contest by Mrs. Elizabeth A. Parse. The judges of the contest were William Lenger, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Parse and Mrs. Ira West. While they were deciding the question as to who should receive the medal, there was an address by Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, county president. Afterward Miss Keron, county secretary of the Legion, addressed the band and presented the medal to Miss Ethel Vail. Mrs. Parse then made a short address.

Mrs. P. H. Bennett presented a white flower to Miss Mabel Field for excellence in department, while Miss Field, Miss Ethel Vail, Miss Elsie Clark and Miss Elsie Parrine also received prizes for excellence in attendance and department.

Drunken Women in Court.

Martha Parkinson and Mary Moore, both of 693 West Fourth street, were in the city court this morning, charged with being drunk and disorderly. The Parkinson woman was sentenced to pay $5 fine, or spend twenty days in jail. As she had not succeeded in raising the necessary cash at noon, it is likely that an enforced vacation at the county's hotel will fall to her portion. The Moore woman was subjected to a severe lecture by Judge Runyon, who wound up by suspending sentence on her.

K. G. E. Election.

Freedom Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle, elected officers at its meeting last night. The elections were as follows: Noble chief, William Allen; vice chief, Albert Lovers; high priest, W. T. Banks; venerable hermit, L. A. Hummer; sir herald, John Bicknell; trustee, William Day. Installation will take place next Tuesday night. The ceremonies will be followed by a collation.

Charged With Non-Support.

To answer to a charge of non-support, preferred by his wife, John Burgess, colored, of 214 Plainfield avenue, was arraigned this morning before Judge Runyon. He was arrested yesterday by Detective McCarthy. The defendant promised to do his duty and was released under suspension of sentence.

Alleged Robbers Not Guilty.

John McGilvary, Timothy McCarthy and Daniel J. Curry, the three men accused of robbing the Central Railroad station at Westfield, were acquitted yesterday, their trial being held before Judge Vail in Elizabeth. They were released.

—Eat fruit and cool your blood. Fine fruits, in great variety, at Neuman Bros. Juicy plums and peaches, wine-like cherries, black and red raspberries, blackberries, huckleberries, strawberries.

DR. EDWARD MOLDENKE BORNE TO RESTING PLACE

Last Sad Rites Over Lutheran Minister, Who Died From Grief Over Disaster.

FUNERAL EULOGIES

SERVICES IN NEW YORK ATTENDED BY BIG CONGREGATION.

Prof. Spath, of Philadelphia, Makes Funeral Address—Floral Tributes Magnificent—Interment at Watchung Today.

Funeral services over the remains of the late Rev. Dr. Edward F. Moldenke, senior pastor of St. Peter's Lutheran church, at Lexington avenue and Fifty-fourth street, New York, were held last night in the Beekman Hill M. E. church, in Fiftieth street near Second avenue, in that city.

Dr. Moldenke, who was sixty-eight years old, died at his summer home, "Elsinore," Watchung, on Saturday, and it is believed that the Slocum disaster was indirectly the cause of his death. Twenty members of his congregation were lost in the burning of the steamboat.

Pastor Moldenke was, perhaps, the best known Lutheran minister in New York. His congregation numbered 3,000 families. So great was the crowd at the services last night that the reserves from one of the police stations were called out. Hundreds were unable to get into the church.

Prof. A. Spath, president of Mount Airy Seminary, Philadelphia, a lifelong friend of Dr. Moldenke, made the funeral address. Rev. D. W. Peterson, president of the New York Lutheran Conference, and Rev. Dr. J. Heischmann, president of the New York Ministerium, also made addresses.

The platform and altar rail were literally covered with floral pieces. Among them were eight huge wreaths, four crosses, three harps and a half dozen broken columns, as well as six "Gates Ajar." The casket had for a foundation a mass of roses and carnations.

This morning the remains were brought to this city for interment in Watchung cemetery near Dr. Moldenke's home at Watchung.

The 12:56 train from New York had a special car attached, bearing the remains of the dead minister and a party of friends and relatives from the city. Eighteen coaches met the train and took the party to "Elsinore," the late home of the clergyman, where the services were held, the body being interred in a family vault on the property.

FAREWELL DINNER FOR CLASS

L. H. BIGLOW, JR., ENTERTAINS SUNDAY-SCHOOL PUPILS.

Louins H. Biglow, Jr., who, with his family, will leave for Long Island tomorrow to spend the summer, entertained his Sunday-school class of boys last night at the Park Club. It was a farewell dinner and no pains were spared in making it enjoyable. In all there were twelve persons seated at the table. The table was appropriately decorated in true Fourth of July style, there being an arrangement of flags, bunting and favors representing firecrackers and skyrockets.

After the dinner, the young men spent the remaining part of the evening in bowling, playing pool and billards and have a general social time. In the fall Mr. Biglow and his family will move to Montclair. While in this city Mr. Biglow has been very active in the work at the First Baptist church and there he will be greatly missed.

Those persons were present at the dinner: L. H. Biglow, Jr., A. W. Day, H. H. Woodland, Fred Armstrong, Everett Hartley, Herbert De Cou, Chester Mollinson, Kenneth Bebbie, George Egel, Jr., DeWitt Brokaw, Allen Vanderhoef and Harry Joseph.

R. E. Victim's Relatives Heard From.

George W. Cole, the undertaker, has received telegrams from the wife and brother of J. P. Lomavoy, of Brockton, Mass., asking for particulars of the death of their relative and promising detailed instructions immediately.

It's Awful to think you will buy a poor cigar when you can obtain a good one for a nickel at Kirby's, 106 Park avenue.

6 29 5 eod.

SILVER HOSE CART TO LEAVE PLAINFIELD

Relic of Volunteer Days May be Loaned to Rahway Firemen for Safe Keeping.

FORMAL OFFER MADE

NO PLACE TO KEEP IT PROPERLY IN THIS CITY.

Brightening Up the Valuable Cart Costly—Plainfield to Retain Proprietory Rights — To Consider Proposition.

After many years in dusty and unsafe quarters, the old Amity hose cart, the silver mounted treasure of the Exempt Firemen, may very shortly find proper housing. The Rahway Exempts, to whom the carriage has been loaned for their Fourth of July celebration, have made a formal offer to the local Association to store the priceless relic in its building, which has ample and perfect facilities for sheltering it.

For a great part of its stay in this city the cart has stood in dirty, and more or less exposed quarters. When the cart was driven from the rooms over Gazolo Engine house on Second street by the organization of the paid department there was no particular or proper place for storing it, and since then it has dragged out a very humble existence in barns and other unsatisfactory places, its only bright moments being at the time it has gone to Elizabeth or other towns to be shown in parades or celebrations.

Disfiguring tarnish has been threatening the magnificent filligree work on the silver mountings for lack of cleaning, but the way in which it has been stored hitherto has made it impractical to have the necessary polishing done. At least $20 would have to be spent in cleaning and polishing the silver work properly, and the Exempts have not felt that the expenditure would be justified as long as the cart must go back into the conditions that made the cleaning necessary.

These considerations have led to a serious consideration of the Rahwegians' offer. It is very probable that the Exempts will vote to accept it, being careful to retain every proprietary right in the machine.

JOHN E. KEELY WEDS SECRETLY

MISS MARIE M. GARRY BRIDE AT A CEREMONY AT NOON TODAY.

Stealing away without the knowledge of their relatives, Miss Marie M. Garry and John E. Keely were married at noon in St. Mary's church, Father Egan officiated.

The young people were engaged and their relatives were aware of their intention of marriage, but today's ceremony proved a complete surprise to their relatives and friends.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Keely left for a wedding trip.

The groom is the owner of the Keely Livery Co., and is proprietor of a coal yard. He is the Plainfield street sprinkling contractor.

BOYS' CAMP TO OPEN.

Jersey Y. M. C. A. Lads at Lake Wawayanda, Sussex, Tomorrow.

The Jersey Boys' Camp will be conducted under the auspices of the State Executive Committee of the Young Men's Christian Associations at Lake Wawayanda, Sussex County, opening tomorrow, and continuing for four weeks. One hundred or more boys will be in each party for a period of two weeks. The advance party started for the camp last week under the leadership of Charles R. Scott, State secretary of boys' work, and have spent several days in preparing the camp for the summer campaign.

This is the fourth year that the State committee has conducted the camp, and over five hundred boys throughout the State have enjoyed the privileges at this beautiful lake. The camp has been a success from the beginning, and the committee have every reason to believe that this year will be the best in its history.

—Another new typewriter and the latest improved mimeograph have been purchased this week by the Plainfield Business College.

—Mrs. H. O. Drake has ordered a big plate glass show window for her store on North avenue, to match the window in the Estelle piano store.

DESCRIBED HER SLUM WORK

MRS. DIEHL TALKED TO METHODISTS ON HER MISSIONARY LABORS.

Mrs. J. D. Diehl, the field agent of the Church Extension and Missionary Society, of the Methodist Episcopal church, of New York city, delivered an address on the church settlement work of the Methodist church in the slums of the metropolis at Grace M. E. church last night. Her talk was profusely illustrated with stereopticon slides, showing the houses of the slum denizens before the society workers come among them and the improvement that follows the advent of the missionaries.

There was a large audience, in which the congregations of the First and Monroe Avenue M. E. churches were represented. The lecture was delivered under the auspices of the Grace church Epworth League.

A good sized silver collection for the benefit of the work was taken.

TAX LAW IN EFFECT FRIDAY

COLLECTORS REQUIRED TO SELL LANDS ON WHICH TAXES ARE IN ARREARS.

The State Board of Taxation is calling attention to the fact that the last Legislature passed an act requiring tax collectors of all municipalities in the State to begin proceedings for the sale of lands on which the taxes for the proceeding year are unpaid. The new law becomes effective July 1.

Under the old act it was necessary for municipal bodies to issue warrants for the sale of lands bearing delinquent taxes, and the original owners had twenty years in which to redeem the lands so sold. This made it unprofitable and risky for any one but the municipal authorities to pay the tax on the lands, and so secure them.

The new act makes a radical change, and provides that persons buying the land the conditions mentioned may proceed after two years so sold in the Court of Chancery for a settlement or a deed.

For several years past bills have been presented in the Legislature providings for the publication of the assessment lists so as to enable the taxpayers to compare their assessments with others. The new act provides that assessors must file a copy of the assessments with the clerk of the municipality, and this list must be kept open at all times for inspection by taxpayers.

MISS PHILLIPS' PUPILS RECITAL

MUSICAL AT FAITH CHAPEL BEFORE AN ENTHUSIASTIC AUDIENCE.

Miss Frances L. Phillips and her pupils gave a pleasant recital at Faith chapel, last night, before a large and appreciative audience. The programme was an excellent one and well rendered by pupils from the first grade to those nearing perfection. The numbers given by the Misses Katharine Bonn, Elizabeth Snyder, Irene Day, Margaret Stryker and Louise Davis with the remarkably fine work of the young pupils, Irene Stoffel, Margaret Lair, Lena VanZandt and Sadie Davis, deserve special mention.

The violin selections by Mrs. George W. Sands were up to her usual excellence and the vocal selection by Miss Bertha VanN. Willis was a treat. In Miss Phillips is found the rare combination of pianist, vocalist and teacher, as exemplified in her pupils. Her touch is pleasing and her vocal work was appreciated by the audience. Miss Florence Randolph, an amateur in vocal, work possesses a high soprano and promises to develop into a singer of merit.

Others who gave piano selections were the Misses Florence Nichols, Katie Stoels, Irene Stoffel, Mary VanCleef, Lillian VanDerVoort, Edna Magaw, Louise Daily, Louise Sconce, Jennie Robertson, Clara Weber and Mrs. E. E. Mamie Phillips. All of the pupils received handsome bouquets of flowers from relatives and friends.

Graduation Tonight.

The graduates of the commercial department of St. St. Mary's Parochial School will hold commencement exercises tonight. As at the previous graduations, a class play will be the chief feature of the programme of entertainment. Following the commencement, the alumni will hold a reception and dance in the hall. Prof. Eugene O'Reilly will furnish the music.

Miss Anna Daley has started upon a five-weeks' vacation.

YOUNG LAWYER WEDS MISS MINNIE CALLAHAN

John P. Owens the Groom at a Solemn Nuptial Mass in St. Mary's Church.

THE BRIDAL PARTY

MISS MAMIE CONNOLLY AS THE MAID-OF-HONOR.

William Owens as Best Man—Four Priests Officiate—Mr. and Mrs. Owens Off on Wedding Trip.

With the splendor of the solemn nuptial mass, Miss Minnie A. Callahan was made the wife of John P. Owens, the popular young lawyer, yesterday morning, at 10 o'clock. The ceremony took place at St. Mary's church, being performed by Rev. Michael J. Gleason, assisted by Rev. J. A. Westman, of Cranford, as deacon of the mass and Rev. Charles Boone, of this city, as sub-deacon. Rev. A. M. Egan was master of the ceremonies. Father Gleason is a classmate of the groom's, both having graduated from Seton Hall College in the class of '98.

The church was decorated with pink and white flowers and the sanctuary was a mass of palms and ferns. The regular quartette of the church, consisting of Miss Annie Daly, Miss Lizzie Day, Joseph O'Keefe and Albert Mathews, rendered the musical portion of the service, accompanied by Miss Mary Smith on the organ. The bride was given in marriage by her father, Thomas Callahan, of Richmond street. The little flower girls were Nora Callahan, a sister, and May Troy, a cousin of the bride, dressed in white and carrying baskets of lillies of the valley.

The bride looked charming in a gown of pean d'oie, trimmed with chiffon and lace, and wearing a veil. She carried a white prayer-book, the gift of the groom. Miss Mamie Connelly, the maid of honor, wore white mull and carried pink sweet peas. The four bridesmaids, Miss Helen F. Callahan, a sister of the bride, Miss Anna Ryan, Miss Katherine Leahy and Miss Mary Leahy, were blue mull and carried shower bouquets of roses. William Owens, a brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were Jeremiah Callahan, a brother of the bride, Jeremiah Callahan, Jr., a cousin of the bride, Maurice Owens, a brother of the groom and John Coan, of South Amboy, a classmate of the groom.

Each of the bridesmaids received from the bride a handsome hand-painted gauze fan, as did the maid of honor. The flower girls received pearl necklaces from the bride. The groom's gifts to the best man and the ushers were gold cuff links in the friendship knot design.

A wedding breakfast, at which about fifty guests gathered, was served at the bride's home after the service. After the breakfast, Mr. and Mrs. Owens left for a fortnight's trip, their destination being kept a deep secret.

COAL AT $6.25 ON FRIDAY

PRICE TO ADVANCE TWENTY-FIVE CENTS A TON ON JULY 1.

According to the announcement made some time ago, the local coal dealers will on July 1 raise the price of anthracite to $6 25 per ton, which will be twenty-five cents more a ton than at present. This will probably be the prevailing price for several weeks and when another jump is made to $6.50 it is quite likely that it will remain there for some time.

Some time ago the local dealers complained about the way the operators withheld their supply of coal, claiming that this was done for the purpose of getting an advanced price. Since then the operators have been more generous and they have been keeping the retail dealers well supplied with coal of the various sizes.

The quality of anthracite being received here now is excellent, in fact, the dealers claim it is the best they have handled for some years, being very clean and free from slate. Last year many complaints were heard because the coal contained so much slate and in some instances was very dirty.

—Blank cartridges, pistols, firecrackers, cannons, caps, flags, and everything to make the Fourth a merry one can be had at Freché's, 224 West Front street.

TRAPPING THE EAGLE

HOW THE TRICK IS DONE BY MOQUI INDIANS.

A Peculiar Tribe with Many Points of Interest—Denizens of the Arizona Desert for Centuries.

The Moqui Pueblo Indians of northern Arizona are probably at the present time the most interesting and unique tribe of aboriginess inhabiting the American continent. They live in villages located upon the summits of several detached, flat-topped, sandstone mountains that rise up from a broad, wind-swept plain, like great monuments. The sides of these lofty, flat-topped remains of what was once, doubtless, an extensive mountain range, are quite precipitous, and the top in each case can only be reached by means of a tortuous path excavated along the breast of the mountain. Up this path, stones from the plains, and timbers from the forests, many miles away, have been carried for the construction of buildings, year after year, century after century, for an unknown period of the past.

Coronado, the Spanish explorer, in his quest for the city of Cibola, about the middle of the sixteenth century, found these people living on the tops of the mountains they now occupy. Some anthropologists claim that they are a remnant of the once powerful Aztecs, and that their villages on the Arizona "mesas" are at least as old as the conquest of Mexico by Hernando Cortes in the fifteenth century.

The occupation of these mesas for even a brief period seems remarkable, in view of the fact that the surrounding country is a sandy desert, and the water supply barely sufficient for the daily needs of the people. Indeed, bathing of the person and washing of clothes are almost unknown practices, a fact quickly made evident to the American visitor at the villages, or by the chance meeting of a wandering Moqui.

Once, it is said, a couple of these people made their way to the Rio Grande valley, and impelled by curiosity visited the Montezuma hotel, near Las Vegas. Their presence was markedly offensive, and the manager would have speedily turned them out, but they afforded an attraction for eastern visitors and in consequence were permitted to prolong their visit. After much persuasion they were permitted to indulge in a bath.

SEIZED THE EAGLE BY THE LEGS.

"Ah!" exclaimed the younger Moqui, when the bath was over, "the water you washed in is dirtier than mine."

"Yes," replied his companion, "but you must remember I am a year older than you are."

Like most American Indians, the Moquis delight in ornamenting their hair with the feathers of the hawk and the eagle, the latter being especially prized for the purpose. At each of the villages hunters of these birds watch throughout the year for the appearance of broods from the nests on the neighboring inaccessible mountain peaks. One day, not long ago, Hultani, a young Moqui hunter, observed an eagle with a brood just from the nest, hovering over the summit of a neighboring mountain searching for food. Taking a companion with him he hastened in the night to the mountain, and just before dawn secreted himself in a narrow fissure in the rock. His companion then covered him over where he lay with twigs and cedar bark, on which he placed the dead body of a freshly killed rabbit, and hurrying away hid himself nearby.

Soon after daylight the eagle again appeared with her brood, hovering over the mountain, and finally, catching sight of the rabbit, swooped down upon it and seized it in her claws. Hultani instantly thrust his hand through the covering above him and seized the eagle by her legs. The great bird at once spread her broad pinions and rising in the air carried the young savage bodily out of the fissure. She beat him over the head and shoulders with her wings, and pounded him in the face with her strong beak. Once or twice she ceased to fight and extending her pinions sought to escape, dragging her captor for some distance over the stony surface of the mountain. In the meanwhile the companion of the young man had crept to his assistance, and casting a sheepskin bag over the great bird ended her struggle for freedom.

Satisfaction.

It is all right to go to law for the purpose of getting satisfaction if you can stop when you're satisfied.—Chicago Record-Herald.

THE MYSTERY OF SLEEP.

Imperative as the Demand for Food and There Is No Substitute for It.

Sleep, with its strange phenomena, remains, after the passage of thousands of years, as much a mystery as it was in the beginning of the race, says the Boston Post.

Whence it comes? How produced? We as little know the answer to these questions as Adam when the deep slumber fell upon him in the garden.

The craving of the body for a rest is as imperative as its cry for food. This blessed loss of consciousness is the best general medicine known. There is neither substitute nor rival for it.

Sleep is the off-duty period of consciousness. It is during this time when the entire system is in a quiescent state, that the final processes of assimilation take place and that the body is really nourished.

This assimilation is said to go on much better and more rapidly before midnight than afterward, because of the more thorough circulation of the blood, which carries the new material and removes the waste.

Oxygen, too, is consumed in greater quantities before midnight than after it, according to the scientists, and oxygen is necessary to this nutritive process.

The heart decreases in force from midnight until after sunrise the following day, and nightmare, dreams, convulsions, relapse—even death—occur more frequently after this hour.

Those who burn the midnight oil should make a note of the fact that there are good physiological arguments in favor of the "early to bed" advice.

One excellent reason why early sleep is preferable to late is that the cells of the brain and other nerve centers can recuperate more quickly before reaching a point of strain or exhaustion than they can afterwards do.

It should be remembered that the nutrition of the body goes on very slowly unless plenty of oxygen is consumed at the same time.

As the consumption of oxygen is less during sleep than in working hours, there is the greatest necessity for plenty of pure air in one's sleeping room.

The intimate connection of sleep and bodily nourishment is strangely illustrated in the hideous "six-day races" and similar feats.

The men engaged in these eat tremendous quantities of food—five times what the ordinary workman can possibly consume in a like number of hours.

Yet the end of the test finds them frightfully emaciated, with vitality spent.

Physicians explain this as a result of the lack of sleep, which has made it impossible for the digestive system to transform the food into tissue.

Sleep is a life-giver as well as a life-saver.

The coming of natural slumber is gradual. The general repose would seem to be made up of many little sleeps, which are premonitions of nature's approaching control of the body. These little sleeps take each sense separately and absorb it.

They take the physical organs one by one and shroud them slowly till all are quiescent.

Of the five guardian senses that protect us from danger while awake, the eyes are the most important.

But normal sleep comes with darkness; sight is useless in the dark; therefore, in sleeping the eyes close first of all.

Next after sight, taste is lost; then the sense of smell. When "half asleep" one's sight, taste and smell are gone. Hearing is the next to succumb, the sense of touch deserting us last of all.

The same slow approach of sleep is noticed in the muscles and sinews. Drowsiness begins at the feet, and spreads slowly upwards until the brain is reached.

In waking the process is the same, but it is reversed.

The quickest way to arouse a sleeper is to touch him. The next best is to shouting. Taste remains last of all.

Specialists say that never before was there a time when such long and profound sleep was needed as now by the average man and woman.

Our tense and noisy living requires it in generous quantities to repair the daily ravages.

They add with truth that there has never been a time when civilized man was so little about to sleep as he now is, thanks to the very conditions which make repose so necessary.

A man can go 40 days without solid food and survive.

He can exist seven days, sometimes longer, without food and water.

He can drag through seven days, at most, without sleep.

Musical Snails.

A German scientist recently pointed out that snails are able to draw immense weights, and how a Finnish naturalist claims that there are few, if any, animals which have a higher appreciation of music than snails. This naturalist is M. S. Jourdain, and his statements are to be found expressed at length in a paper which he has addressed to the French Biological society. Place some snails on a pane of glass, he says, and you will find that as they move over it they will make musical sounds similar to those which a person can produce by wetting his finger and then rubbing it around a glass tumbler. Complete airs, he points out, have been played on tumblers in this way, and he expresses the opinion that quite as good results can be obtained by using snails instead of fingers.

Literary Tip.

Meandering Mike—Say, Lew, I've got a notion to write a novel.

Lazy Lew—Don't youse do it. De productions uv litterry fellers is call'd "works."—Indianapolis Sentinel.

CRICKETERS ARE SERIOUS.

Do Not Indulge in Skylarking and Horse-Play as in Old Times.

Never was cricket more commented on than it is nowadays, and never was cricket taken more seriously than it is both by the players and by the spectators, says London Tit-Bits. There seems to be no player just now who attempts the pantomimic quips and cranks—understood by the whole field —that were so common with players like "Johnny" Briggs and "Tom" Emmett, who used to relieve the tension of keenly-contested games by setting the field in a roar.

Who that ever saw him playing for Yorkshire can forget how Emmett, who always began his bowling turn by sending up a wide or two, used instantly to spread his arms asunder in imitation of the umpire signalling a wide to the scorers? And he would, at a critical point in the game, affect a broken-hearted way to walk away from the wicket at which he was batting when he had been caught off a "dumb" ball, and then, as though he had suddenly recollected himself, he would turn back to the wicket and go on batting. Small jokes enough, but they vastly relieved the monotony of first-class cricket.

And it was the same with Briggs. When he had fielded at a point in the most marvelous way, he would pretend to look behind him, as if to see where the ball had gone, and then he would affect to feel himself all over in search of it, ultimately producing the ball apparently from the back of his neck. Once, on the occasion of a most important match, Briggs and Emmett both took the field at the beginning of each innings, wearing white top-hats, as though it were their intention to play in these, and neither man abandoned his huge topper to the umpire till the match actually began.

During what might be called an "exhibition" day, at which thousands of Bank Holiday spectators were present, Briggs, on one occasion, after being given out "leg before wicket" by the umpire, walked up to the latter and pretended to assault him. The spectators sent up a yell, for Briggs's feeling to be in a frightful rage, making great lunges at the umpire. And then, suddenly, the little man made a profound obeisance to the umpire, shook him by the hand, and expressed in pantomime that the two would soon drink together. How the Bank Holiday trippers screamed with childish delight! After all, cricket is far too serious a business nowadays.

THE GIRLS OF JERUSALEM.

See But Little of Men and Know Nothing Much Beyond Their Household Duties.

Whatever may be said of Jerusalem as a city sacred to religious history, the girls of this country know little of their lucky stars that they were not born in Jerusalem. It may be a good thing to make a pilgrimage to Jerusalem as a matter of experiment and recreation but our free and happy maidens could scarcely be persuaded to dwell there, says Medical Talk.

The girls of Jerusalem know absolutely nothing of what is known as social life. According to the United States consul at Jerusalem, they know very little except about their household duties. They occasionally meet a few together, and have a little gossipy chat about their personal affairs. They sometimes show a slight animation of spirit, but mostly they are dull, listless creatures, ignorant and illiterate. They have no ability to speak or write in grammatical form. They play dominoes a little, games of card and checkers are also played sometimes, but no games or pastimes are indulged in that cause any mental effort or physical development.

They know nothing about dancing; they know nothing about association with the opposite sex. A family picnic in an olive orchard near their home is the greatest event of their lives.

Men are absolutely barred from their presence. For a girl to appear in any assemblage where men are is regarded as vulgar and unbecoming. The girl is practically a prisoner, awaiting the time when she shall change jailers. Her first jailer is her father or elder brother or male guardian. Her second jailer is her husband. She has nothing before her but a dreary outlook; nothing behind her but memories of a morbid and monotonous past.

How would a New York woman of today, or the matinee girl, adjust herself to such a life?

It would be a living death for such women. Jerusalem may be a very good place to read about and tolerable for a short visit, but for a girl born and reared in the United States it would simply be unbearable.

Dirty Stage Mirror.

Whenever a looking-glass appears in a scene in a play above a fireplace in a sitting room, it is almost a dead certainty to hear somebody ask his or her neighbor why the glass has been smeared with whiting or soap or something that dulls its surface completely. All sorts of reasons are hazarded or suggested. Sometimes it is stated that it is done for luck, at others that they did not intend to leave it dirty. The real explanation is, however, a simple one. The glass is dirtied to prevent the illusion of the scene being destroyed, as it certainly would be if the audience saw in it the reflection of themselves, or, worse still, the reflection of the people in the wings carrying on the business of the stage.—Chicago Tribune.

Sounds Like It.

It must have made the Japanese seance to take Kinchau.—Indianapolis News.

GREGORIAN CHANTS

VATICAN TO PUBLISH ORIGINAL MELODIES.

Another Step by the Pope in Restoring to Catholic Church the Music of Pope Gregory the Great.

Under special direction of the pope the vatican printing office has undertaken the publication of the common text of the liturgical Gregorian melodies in order that the Roman Catholic churches all over the universe may be able to carry out the decree of the pope issued early in January of this year restoring this form of music to the church. It will be remembered in this connection that the services of female singers in the Roman Catholic choirs were dispensed with at that time, the liturgical Gregorian chant being sung by male voices only. This latest move by the pope emphasizes his sincerity of purpose to reform the music of the Catholic church and intensifies the interest of Protestant and Catholic alike in this old form of sacred melody.

POPE GREGORY.

There are two schools of ecclesiastical music known as the "Ambrosian" and "Gregorian Chant." It appears that toward the close of the fourth century, Ambrose, of Milan, fearing the loss or corruption of the venerable melodies which, to that time, had been preserved to the church by means of oral traditions only, endeavored to restore them to their primitive purity as nearly as possible, and at the same time to teach the clergy to sing them with greater precision than had previously been attempted.

The music at the time of Ambrose admitted only four tones, what are now called the first, second, third and fifth, and was merely a succession of changes on these four tones. Of course the number of combinations of these were small, and the tunes had a great and not very musical sameness. The tune called Peterborough in the Catholic hymn books of to-day is probably a very lively specimen of the Ambrosian chant.

The chant which Gregory introduced in the church, though less melodious than the Ambrosian, had the higher element of a full harmony. He completed the octave, and, of course, immensely increased the number of combinations. By writing, too, new notes with separate characters and not by numbers, he made music independent of the poetry or rythm of the church song, and they could apply it to prose as well as to poetry.

Gregory, like Ambrose, gave to the church many hymns of his own writing, as well as with chants and music. There are eight hymns remaining which are ascribed to him. Six of these are written in the regular rhyming style of ecclesiastical verse, but the other two in the genuine Sapphic and Adonian stanza of the old Latin poets. They are all adapted to some peculiar festival of the church.

But Gregory did not confine his musical improvements to changes in the science. He established at Rome the first singing school of which we have any record in Christian history. This school was an extensive establishment and partook of the character of the best university of music, from which the directors and performers in choirs all over the western church were graduated.

The tradition goes that Gregory himself instructed the choristers, for whom he had established schools endowed with its own little property, one in the precincts of St. Peter's, the other in those of St. John Lateran, where his own residence was. And a couch is still shown on which he lay while giving or superintending their lessons, and the rod by which he is said to have threatened the singers when they made false notes.

There is a very curious commentary by John, the deacon, one of Gregory's biographers, upon the new musical system which he inaugurated and its adoption throughout Europe. The Italians seem then as now to have had a poor opinion of German modes of singing. "This music was learned easily by the Germans," he says, "because they could not retain it because of making accitions of their own, and also because of their barbarous nature. Their Alpine bodies resounding *to their depths with the thun*ders of their voices, do not properly give forth the sweetness of the modulation, the savage roughness of their bibulous throat when it attempts to give forth a delicate strain, producing rather harsh sounds with a natural crash, as of wagons, sounding confusedly over the stones." Now this description might have been true in the days of Gregory, and is interesting comment, still it has no possible point in this day of German musical culture.

What Did He Mean?

She—Women are handsomer than they used to be.

He—Impossible!—Indianapolis News.

HERE'S AN ODD CASE.

YOUNG NEW YORKER SUES AN AFFECTIONATE MAIDEN.

Girl Hugged So Hard That She Broke Admirer's Rib—How the Victim Wants Her to Pay the Doctor's Bill.

Walter Lorraine, of Riga, N. Y., has brought an action against Marie Du Calm of Niagara Falls, to recover damages. It is charged by Lorraine that Miss Du Calm hugged him so tightly as to break one of his ribs.

It appears that last winter the plaintiff was visiting Ottawa. While there he met the defendant, who was visiting an aunt in the Canadian city. Mutual subjects of interest drew the young people into an acquaintanceship that speedily developed into an attachment of a deeper nature. Lorraine overstayed his original time, and the young woman also found it more agreeable than she had anticipated in the province. The ice carnival was at its height, and the young people decided to go to Quebec to visit it, and also to secure a number of photographic views, both being ardent amateur photographers.

The visit was made, and conversation was punctuated with the click of the kodak. Lorraine was to return home on the following day, and it was decided to develop the negatives that night. At the home of the defendant's aunt there had been fitted up a temporary dark room for the use of Miss Du Calm while she was visiting, and the room was fitted with the regular ruby lamp. That's where the red rays enter into the case.

Several negatives had been developed, and one in particular appealed to the enthusiastic nature of the defendant. As she saw the image of the gay scenes which they had witnessed earlier in the day she was completely carried away. With a gurgling, "Oh, Walter, doesn't anything like that make you love nature? I'm just going to give you a big hug!" she hurled herself at the plaintiff. As her arms encircled him there was a crackling sound, and Lorraine uttered a cry of pain.

HER ARMS ENCIRCLED HIM.

Interest in the negatives terminated and the plaintiff was assisted to an adjoining room. His pallor alarmed the defendant, and she had a physician summoned. He decided that Lorraine had suffered a fracture of one of the ribs on the right side. Lorraine underwent the usual treatment, and under the pain incident to the knitting of the fractured bone his affection rapidly cooled.

Upon his return to Riga, he talked the matter over with friends, and they urged the bringing of an action to recover for his injuries. The advice of his counselors prevailed and he wrote and suggested that the expense incurred in treatment of his injuries be paid by the defendant. She refused to listen to any such proposition and then the law was called in.

In defense of her action Miss Du Calm sets up that she is of an affectionate and clinging nature, that the fact was well known to the plaintiff, and that up to the time of the unfortunate incident or accident that led to the estrangement the plaintiff had shown no disinclination to submit to caresses.

Furthermore, it is set forth that the action of the defendant at this time complained of was involuntary and due to the effect of the red rays of light emitting from the use of the ruby lamp. That it is a recognized scientific fact that the red rays are the most strenuous and likely to provoke excitability in one of ardent temperament, and their effect upon the defendant is and was at the time alleged in the complaint known to the plaintiff, wherefore judgment is asked that the complaint be dismissed with costs to the defendant.

Frigate Bird Sleeps on Wing.

The frigate bird can feed, collect materials for its nest, and even sleep on the wing. The spread of the frigate bird's wings is very great, and it can put at a speed of 90 miles an hour without seeming to move its wings to any great degree. Mr. J. Lancaster, an American naturalist, asserts that he has seen a frigate bird on the wing for a whole week, night and day, without rest.

Tonsorial Art in Cuba.

The barbers in Cuba father their patrons with their hands, from a bowl made to fit under the chin. A brush is not used.

Heart Is a Busy Organ.

All the blood in a man's body passes through his heart once in every two minutes.

FAST FIRE RUN RECORD.

Chicago Firemen Astonished French Visitors, But the Strategy Was Costly.

A score of firemen were relating anecdotes of the late Denis J. Swenie, for a score of years Chicago's fire marshal. "Oneday," said a grizzled veteran, who, according to the Journal, for years worked under the old fireman in the down-town district, "a party of French gentlemen called on the mayor. They said they were directors of the Paris fire department, and would like to inspect the fire department. The mayor called Chief Swenie and turned the party over to him. Sure! he would show them everything. He sent out a notice to the fire department that he would pull box 74, Hubbard court and Michigan avenue, at four o'clock. He wanted three engines and a truck to make a record run to the box.

"Among the companies to run in on the box was engine 19 and truck company 1, both located next to the Harrison street police station. There was a great deal of pleasant rivalry between these companies and another due on the test run. Accordingly the captains decided that 19 and 1 were going to beat out all the others.

"They arranged to get the apparatus out in Harrison street. The operator at the Harrison street police station agreed to give them a signal when the box call came.

"The scheme would have worked to a charm had the visitors been on time. They were, however, about two minutes late. Now, it just happened that a fire was discovered in the North side at four o'clock to the second.

"The operators in the fire alarm office struck off box 8-4-6. Before he counted off the alarm, the operator waved to the waiting companies, and away they went. When he discovered the mistake it was too late. He had sent the companies away to box 76, and the box had not been pulled. The firemen rounded the corner just as Chief Swenie was walking up to the box.

"He was the most surprised man in the crowd. The companies were on the scene before he had touched the box.

"'Seems to me you had a wrong hunch,' was all he said. He then pulled the box, and brought out the other two companies. At the next session of the trial heard two captains forfeited five days' pay for 'anticipating an alarm of fire.'

"Ever since that time, test runs or no test runs, no horse has poked his nose out of a stall until at least one round of the box has been received."

TOO MUCH LOVE-MAKING.

London Art School of Twenty Years' Standing Disrupted by Spoony Students.

Prof. Hubert Herkomer, the noted painter, has closed his well-known art school at Bushey, near London, because of the irrepressible love-making of the students. This school, says a London report, quite an art institution in England, was established 21 years ago and has been conducted by the professor without any gain to himself, but merely out of love for art.

The students work together. Of late, especially, they have contracted the habit of falling in love with one another. Eighteen couples out of 35 are now engaged.

Love-making, the professor says, is far more seriously pursued than the study of art. So he has determined, his patronage from the school, which accordingly comes to an end.

The students indignantly contend that they are at liberty to court when the day's work is over and that nothing contributed to the developing artistic capabilities than love.

The chauffeur is beginning to become a serious social problem in England. Formerly the flighty young woman of fashion afflicted with a mania for horses frequently fell in love with her groom. Nowadays the good looking expert chauffeur is run after by the same class of young persons, with the same results.

Society is ringing at the moment with *the story of a handsome girl of 22 belong*ing to one of the oldest untitled families in England who has announced her positive intention of marrying her father's chauffeur. She has an income of $5,000 and must succeed ultimately to a great fortune. Her parents sent for the chauffeur and offered him $50,000 cash down to decline their daughter's hand.

He simply asked:

"What is the matter with me? I have given my word, and no money can make me break it."

Thus the affair stands at present. The girl's parents are distracted. It is simply a not uncommon case of an impressionable girl who gets crazed about motoring and comes to regard the chauffeur as the god of the machine.

Danger That Lurks in a Rabbit.

A correspondent of the Washington Post tells of a rabbit which killed a hound with one blow of its claws. A rabbit is more dangerous than is really thought. Last winter on Pocosin creek Mr. John Hobbs, while hunting rabbits, had his dog run one into a hollow log. As he stooped to peep into the log the rabbit leaped out full against Mr. Hobbs, breaking his nose and knocking him upon his dog with such force as to crush that animal to death. The rabbit escaped. We don't know as to the truth of the story in the Washington Post, but Mr. Hobbs is a living but disfigured witness of the tragedy on Pocosin creek.—Princeton (W. Va.) Journal.

Two Views.

The Daughter—Archie says that in my new white satin I remind him of a yacht under full sail.

Her Father—From my standpoint you're more of a revenue cutter.—Woman's Home Companion.

STUDYING THE ROBIN

IT MAY BE AN INTERESTING AND USEFUL PASTIME.

Some Things to Look For in the Few Hours You Can Give the Subject—Method for the Schools.

There are few of our wild birds more numerous or of wider general distribution than the robin, and for this reason the robin is one of the very best birds for the nature student to begin on; he will be able to compare his notes with those of his fellow students all over the country. Of course everybody can identify the robin, but even the leading ornithologists know comparatively little about him. Ask one of them the average age to which the robin lives, whether the robins which nested in his town last year are the same which are nesting there this year, or any one of a dozen simple questions, and you will get an idea of what a splendid field for original research is presented in the life of even the best-known of our wild creatures.

The average person can devote but a small portion of his time to the study of birds, and, as the field of bird study is practically limitless, his general knowledge of birds must necessarily be very, very limited. It, however, he choose to devote most of the time he has for this subject, to a single species, by preference a common species, such as he would not have to wander out of town in hunting for, his chances of doing original, useful work would be good.

If this plan of bird study were adopted in the school, it would also have another advantage; it would tend to save the nests of the rarer birds in any particular locality from the visits of enthusiastic but often very thoughtless youngsters, who might get just as much pleasure, and perhaps more instruction, by studying the nest of one of the commoner birds.

For the benefit of those who so far have had no experience in studying birds, I will make the following suggestions for the study of the robin:

Begin your study of the nest as soon as possible after the birds have begun to build. Make a note of the site selected, whether in a tree, on part of a dwelling or other building, on the ground, in a hole in a tree, for robins select very queer sites sometimes. Notice its height from the ground, and if it is in a tree, note what kind of a tree it is in. Find out if both the male and the female assist in the building, and whether they divide the work about evenly, or if one does more than the other. If the latter is the case, which bird works the harder? Are they all the same size and color? Which is the male or the female sit on the eggs, or do they take turns? Which sits at night? Which in the daytime? How many days does it take for the eggs to hatch? Do they all hatch at once, or does the time between the first and last hatched vary? Do both parents begin to feed the young at once, or does one go away for food while the other remains to protect the little ones? Which one remains? Watch and make notes on the development of the young at least once a day. How many days elapse between the date of hatching and the date on which the young birds leave the nest? Do all those which were hatched live to leave the nest? Did you notice whether any died after they left the nest? Try to find out how long the young are fed by their parents after leaving the nest. Also make as many notes as possible on the actions of the birds under different circumstances. What do they do when it rains? What do they do when it is very hot? How do they act when an enemy, a cat or a snake or a squirrel, approaches the nest? Be sure to put down all the dates and notice whether the parents have a regular brood; if so, notice if the second nest is as well made as the first.

THE ROBINS.

Of course very few will be able to make all the notes I have suggested, but they should make as many of them as they can, but if they make as few so few, let these few be accurate, accurate, accurate.

ERNEST HAROLD BAYNES.

Turkish Women

Indian Squaws Have More Liberty Than They

TURKEY takes rank among nations as a civilized country. China does not, yet the women of China have more liberty and better education than those of the sultan's realm.

Investigations show that while the red Indian squaw of America does the hard work of the family she has rights and authority that are never contradicted. The Turkish married woman appears to have just one right; the Turkish girl has none at all. Turkish women have their apartments sacred to themselves. When a Turk wishes to go into his wife's rooms he advances cautiously toward the threshold. If a pair of slippers lies upon the threshold that is a sign that some woman friend is visiting his ladies. No Turk or Mohammedan may look upon the face of any woman except a relative or inmate of his own harem, so if the slipper be at the door the lord and master must withdraw.

It is said that many a time the women of a harem put a pair of slippers upon the threshold of their apartments when they have no company, merely because they do not want to be bothered with their man around. In this respect the Turkish wife has the advantage of her western sister, who has no den or corner sacred from the intrusion of her husband when she does not wish to see him. Western law and custom give him the right to break in upon his wife by force, if he chooses, at any time and place.

The Mohammedan religion and oriental views of the sex question are together responsible for the degradation and subjection of Turkish women. Recently one or two Turkish women have escaped from their country to tell the western world of the life of woman in the Ottoman empire. In Constantinople the Turkish women and girls of the wealthy classes have occasionally opportunity to make the acquaintance of western women, but once the desire to be free and to know something arises in the soul of the woman of Islam. She longs with the longing of the slave to be free. She is restive and rebellious. So true is this that three years ago Sultan Abdul Hamid issued an edict forbidding Turkish families to employ foreign teachers in their families.

One Turkish girl was handed over by her father to be the property of another Turk, old as her father himself and extremely repellent to her, but that was nothing. The girl was not even the first wife of the man to whom her father gave her, but that again was nothing. The girl accepted the situation and bided her time. She assisted all that was possible with western women; she learned all she could of their ways and languages. Finally one morning the girl was missing. Her western women friends had aided her to escape from Turkey in disguise, and the so called civilized land that degrades and oppresses women worse than is done among the savage Moros of Sulu saw her no more. She is now in Europe trying to interest the white women in the hapless, hopeless condition of their sex in Turkey.

PRINCESS HAIRIE BEN AYAD.

Another Turkish lady is Princess Hairie Ben Ayad. Her husband, a member of the party of Young Turkey, had incurred the suspicion of the sultan's spies, but managed in time to elude them and get away to Europe, as Europe outside of Turkey is significantly and fittingly called in the Ottoman empire. After a time Princess Hairie got away with her children and joined her husband. She, too, is lecturing to European audiences on the deplorable condition of Turkish women. She expects to come to the United States, where she will tell her story, in the hope that somehow a way will open for the uplifting of womanhood in her native land.

When a wealthy Turk wishes to make the most acceptable present to a friend or a man high in authority, to this day he gives that individual the most beautiful girl slave he can find. He dresses her gorgeously, adorns her with the richest jewels he can afford and hands her over.

In all Turkey there is scarcely an educated woman. It is the policy of the government to keep women in absolute ignorance and to encourage in all ways the traditional belief that woman has no soul, only a body. Abdul Hamid knows well that educating women will sound the death knell of oriental despotism.

MARCIA W. CAMPBELL.

SUMMER REQUISITES.

Dainty Bathing Suits, Mull Gowns and Shirt Waists.

Though long delayed by stress of weather the summer girl is here, and just as sweet and frilly as she ever was. Her gowns are of as thin goods as ever, her underwear as fluffy and lacelike and her general appearance quite up to her reputation for beauty and daintiness. Laces of every description are seen everywhere and on everything. I saw something quite new the other day, and, though it was called lace, I think it rather too heavy to come exactly under that head, though it is exceedingly rich and handsome. It is a sort of guipure made by sewing fine fancy silk braid into elaborate designs, sometimes in applique on silk mull, white, black, cream or ecru. The most of this is made in the shape of deep collars, in stole shape or with some hanging portion, while the rest is in form of a wide collar. Sewing is scarcely the word to use, for this rich silk braid is wrought into its designs by regular lace stitches like that used for the renaissance laces and the Irish point. So the different pieces are very elegant additions to any fine costume. The black can be worn over the white, and vice versa, but probably the finest taste would suggest that each be worn over its own color. Some of these, though few, have the braid of one blue, and those with the silk threads make stylish collars very suitable for young girls. But the others are calculated only for very handsome wear. I believe they are called silk soutache renaissance collars. They would make a plain suit dressy.

MAUVE SILK MULL DRESS.

The bathing suits are now to be seen everywhere, and some of them are very pretty and modest. There are many styles of mohairs, which, next to the silk warp henriettas, are the best materials, for the water does not penetrate, but falls off the fabric at once, and the garments do not cling to the figure. Light colors in mohair are seen very frequently, white being much liked. This is trimmed with bands and narrow fluting of some pretty color or even ribbon. But more are made for use rather than for show, and there are so many colors in mohair that every one can be suited, but black and dark blue are the best. Skirts are made short, and close Turkish trousers are worn beneath, reaching to the knee, and the whole dress with more or less likeness to the dresses for ordinary wear. One I saw had a deep bertha of lace, but this is rather farfetched for a bathing suit. Slippers and stockings are of course among the necessities, and dainty little oilskin caps protect the hair. Some have the caps made to come very close to the head and with them wear fancy silk handkerchiefs to hide the cap. Others, again, think it beneficial to let the hair get wet in the invigorating brine.

But I set out to speak of the summer girl, though bathing and yachting suits also belong to this time of the year. Silk mull in delicate tints is one of the best liked of all the materials offered for summer dress for nice wear. In the illustration one can see a beautiful model of one, this being made in pale mauve, the shade which looks pink at night. The underdress is, as are all of such gowns, made of taffeta and has a plaited ruffle set on the edge, while the outer dress has a hem and above that a deep ruffle, headed by a band of gauze ribbon with chine design in faint tints, mostly greens, and this is edged by triple shirrings top and bottom. Another dress treated in the same way finishes the skirt. These deep flounces each have the scallops outlined by embroidery in soft green shades of floss. The yoke and bertha are trimmed and made to match the skirt, and the sleeves follow the same general design. This makes an exquisite dress and would be equally pretty in any thin material.

Shirt waist dresses made of louisine, taffeta and other pretty and light silks are to be found everywhere now marked down a trifle from what was asked for them a month ago, as the summer trade is about over. Striped, figured and pin head checks are all much favored this season for such dresses.

Shirt waists of sheer lawn and dotted Swiss are much liked now, and so far this season I have to see one of those very openworked waists so much ridiculed last year. All waists are, while thin, of a uniform thickness, among those now most popular are some made of sheer Persian lawn with Tenerife medallions, tucked waists made of handkerchief linen, many of them with fine Mexican hand work and tucks, and other styles of Persian lawn in which, between fine tucks and fine colored embroidery, valenciennes lace is inset. The collars are made separate, and the cuffs also. These sell for as much as $8 or $10.

HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU.

UP TO DATE GOWNS.

White Costumes of Supple Materials. Fashionable Silk Gloves.

Many of the most beautiful gowns of today are of supple white silk or crepe de chine. Some of the new white taffetas are as supple as any silks, and they have a delicate luster which is most becoming.

There is a perfect furore for old rose and many odd shades of rather vivid blue. These are trimmed with embroideries dyed to match.

Nile green is an ultra fashionable shade, and it is very beautiful for an evening gown in a combination of satin, chiffon and velvet mingled with old lace.

SHIRT WAIST SUIT.

Parisians just now are very fond of different shades of orange mingled in one frock. If these are softened with deep yellowish lace the effect is particularly good. Shirrings of taffeta intermingled with yellow valenciennes are a very smart and pretty trimming. It is these dainty finishing touches which make a gown a success.

Manufacturers are earning the gratitude of women with small dress allowances by sending out really artistic and at the same time cheap materials in blue, ecru and white.

The cut shows a shirt waist suit shirred on the shoulders. It has a lace yoke and cuffs and is trimmed with a piping of narrow satin of a deeper shade.

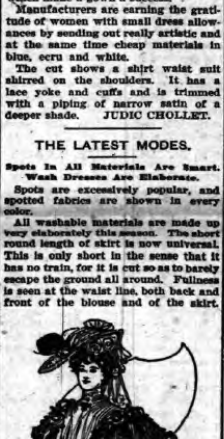
JUDIC CHOLLET.

THE LATEST MODES.

Spots In All Materials Are Smart. Waist Dresses Are Elaborate.

Spots are exceedingly popular, and spotted fabrics are shown in every color.

All washable materials are made up very elaborately this season. The short round length of skirt is now universal. This is only short in the sense that it has no train, for it is cut so as to barely escape the ground all around. Fullness is seen at the waist line, both back and front of the blouse and of the skirt.



BLACK CHANTILLY HAT.

The general effect is ample and puffed out to give a plump effect to the figure.

Besides shirrings, broad flat tucks are equally popular as a trimming. These are folded and stitched on separately, and they are used both to trim waists and skirts.

Deep cape collars with stole fronts are sold to wear with cotton gowns, and the economical girl can make one of these go with several dresses. Ponges comes in a heavier weave suitable for blouse suits. It also comes dyed in a variety of new tones, among which are bright red and a beautiful shade of pink.

It is hardly possible to make sleeves too wide or to fill them in with too many frills of lace or lingerie plaiting. Sleeve puffs are gradually creeping upward, so that fashion designers are predicting the full sleeve puffs of several seasons ago.

For young children the long waisted, short skirted effect still prevails, and the lower edges of the full skirts are tucked and elaborated after the fashion of those of older people.

The illustration shows a hat of black chantilly trimmed with roses, and a fancy stole of black chiffon, also trimmed with roses.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

FASHION NOTES.

The Curtain Veil is on the Wane. Embroidery For Lingerie.

The curtain veil is on the wane, but when it is well arranged on the hat it is a becoming fashion and not one to be lightly given up. Besides, for motoring it is decidedly useful.

Embroidery is a distinct feature of all Paris lingerie. Of course this embroidery is handmade and not the coarse stuff bought by the yard.

Separate flower motifs outlined by insertions of valenciennes lace are the smart thing. Embroideries worked on pure linen or on fine lawn, though so delicate in appearance, have great wearing properties.

For evening wear a great deal of chiffon voile is being used, and this is trimmed handsomely with hand embroidered laces or chiffon applique.

There is a revival in favor of the cambric petticoat fitting tightly around the hips and very full and ample at the feet. These petticoats are generally cut with one deep flounce, with a wide insertion heading it through, which ribbon can be run and tied in a wide bow on the left side. Under this flounce there are a couple of underflounces to give the necessary fullness.

SILK SUIT.

With the skirt cut walking length there are some very pretty and useful petticoats made of pongee trimmed with linen colored lace.

The cut shows a silk suit. The bolero jacket is shirred, and the elaborate skirt is cut exceptionally full.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

COLORS AND TRIMMINGS.

Coral Shades In Vogue—The White Hats Made of Blossoms.

Not only has coral returned to favor as jewelry, but tiny buttons for dresses and buckles for hats are made of it. All the coral shades are also to the fore in ribbons and dress materials. A belt of gray suede seen recently was fastened with coral buttons and was worn with a shirt waist costume of coral and white foulard.

Long tassels, both of linen and of silk fringe, are also the smartest trimming for veiling or linen frocks. They are used at intervals. The space intervening is filled with curved appliques harmonizing in tint.

The wide girdle and the shirred bands are here to stay and form the most prominent features of summer dressmaking. In fact, no gown is fashionable with a narow girdle and a plain gored effect.

PINK VEILING GOWN.

The straight brim still continues to be the favorite for the everyday sailor hat. This is trimmed with a stiff band of tiny flowers having a bunch of foliage on one side or a row of ribbon.

Ecru linen gowns have replaced to a large extent those of pongee. They are made in an equally elaborate manner.

Shirrings and cordings are introduced wherever the figure can stand them. The general effect is full and elaborate even to the point of exaggeration.

The picture shows a pink veiling dress having a wide lace collar. The skirt is trimmed with ruchings of chiffon, and the hat is an especially chic Paris importation.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

FOR WARM WEATHER.

Linen Suits Are Very Smart—Many Simple but Becoming Hats.

In Paris one sees many beautifully embroidered linens made up with little short bolero and skirts clearing the ground. They are combined with scarlet belts, hats and parasols.

Vivid blue, vivid red and vivid green are three shades much used in linen. They are toned down with white or black and white embroideries.

To wear with wash dresses a variety of simple hats have been designed this year—for instance, the plateau hat of canvas, bound with black or colored ribbon and simply trimmed with knots of straw on a ribbon band. The Breton sailor shape is as popular as ever, and it is seen at its best trimmed with two wings and a shaded ribbon ruching. The envelope hat is another of the latest millinery confections. This rolls up on one side and folds over on the crown. The entire trimming consists of a twist of tulle or some other soft material.

SILK BLOUSE WAIST.

Many simple sailor shapes are trimmed with fruit and foliage, strawberries being among the latest novelties.

There is a revival of grass lawn linon and tussore of the same ecru shade, but this color is trying and needs to be relieved with dashes of red or green.

The picture shows a silk waist trimmed with valenciennes lace insertion. It has a cape effect, and the blouse is made more elaborate by the use of pin tucks.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

WHAT IS WORN.

Apricot Shades Are the Newest Thing. Hats Made of Blossoms.

Apricot shades are the latest, and they are far smarter than the ordinary pink tones. A gown of this shade of chiffon was seen recently. The full skirt was trimmed with shirrings and ruchings of the material. The bodice was snugly fitted and was trimmed down the front with tiny velvet bows of a somewhat darker shade, with a paste buckle in the center of each. The shoulders were draped with a soft fichu of old lace caught with a cluster of three mammoth roses shading from primrose to tangerine.

A SERVICEABLE HAT.

Some charming negligees are made with a loose coffee jacket and skirt of dimity trimmed with valenciennes lace. The prettiest lace ornamentation for these is in a vandyked pattern, with the lace frills to correspond.

Large flat hats composed entirely of small blossoms are very smart. These are trimmed simply with a large bow of ribbon.

The gown of all over lace will be worn a great deal this summer, and with it will be seen the all lace hat trimmed with a couple of large, beautifully shaded roses.

Tailor made gowns are this season of much thinner materials. One of pale blue silk was trimmed with broad bias bands, the coat having an Eton front and blouse back, the distinctive features being the narrow black embroidered vest and tiny turnover collar and cuffs of the same. The short puffed sleeves extended to a little below the elbow and were finished with three frills of lace.

The illustration shows a straw hat trimmed with a wreath of leaves and red roses.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

BETSY ROSS.

Five Pointed Star In the American Flag a Woman's Idea.

It is high time women were beginning to write history for themselves. Recently I wanted to find out something about Betsy Ross, who made and partly designed the first American flag, the one accepted by Washington and afterward by the congress of the colonies. I searched through five encyclopedias, all of them containing specially with American biography, none with American biography alone and professing to make note of everybody worth while born or figuring on this continent in the last four centuries. In every one of these alleged encyclopedias I found a whole troop of Bosses, "theologians and divines" mostly, that nobody ever heard of, but not one word concerning the skillful and brainy woman who wrought the first flag of our country. In the very history itself of the American flag in these encyclopedias there is not a syllable concerning Elizabeth Ross, scores of whose descendants are yet living.

BETSY ROSS SHOWING THE FLAG TO WASHINGTON.

One of these descendants, Mrs. Rachel Albright, a granddaughter of the original Betsy herself, to this day makes flags for the members of various historical societies who desire them. Mrs. Albright lives in Iowa. She is ninety-one years old. Betsy Ross herself lived till 1836, dying at the age of eighty-four. Mrs. Albright was born and brought up in her grandmother's home, therefore remembers the fashioner of our country's flag well. A grandniece, Mrs. Susan McCord Turner of Philadelphia, also remembers Mrs. Ross, who, she says, was beautiful even in her old age.

Let us recall the story of the maker of the first United States flag. Let us patch together the few facts that are on record concerning this important personage and historians can thank me the mention of, so opposed are they to giving credit to a woman for anything, and so taken up are they with exploiting their own sex.

Betsy Ross' maiden name was Elisabeth Griscom, and when a mere girl she was noted for her exquisite needlework. She was three times married. Her first husband's name was Ross. He started an upholstering business in Philadelphia, but died young, and Betsy continued the enterprise on her own account. This fact shows her ability and grit. She was twenty-four years old when she made the first flag.

A committee of men was appointed to design a flag, and Betsy was appointed to make it. The design was shown to her. Washington himself had helped to make the design, patterning it somewhat after the English coat of arms of his own family. He himself drew the sketch for the flag and showed it to Betsy Ross. There were the thirteen red and white stripes, with thirteen six pointed stars ranged in a circle upon the blue union.

Betsy Ross told Washington the six pointed star was a mistake. It was the heraldic star of the British, the enemies of the Americans. She declared that the five pointed star, the heraldic emblem in heraldry among the French and Belgians, who were the friends of the young colonies, was the right one. By employing it on the young nation's flag the patriots would pay a graceful compliment to the only friends they had in their struggle for freedom. Besides that, the five pointed star would arrange itself easily for the circle of stars the first flag contained.

Then Mrs. Ross took a piece of paper, folded it, cut it with a stroke of her scissors, unfolded it and showed to General Washington the perfect five pointed star design which now adorns our flag. Washington was convinced on the spot. Betsy Ross got soon afterward the contract for making all the government flags.

The flag committee of men recommended to congress that a new stripe be added to the original thirteen for each new state. Again Betsy objected strenuously. She told them that would destroy the symmetry of the flag. She said a star should be added for each new state. However, they did not consider that a woman could possibly know anything, so went on and urged the additional stripe for new states. Congress adopted it, and the flag continued to grow bulkier and bulkier and uglier and uglier until 1818, when the national authorities were obliged to go back to Mrs. Ross' original plan of thirteen stripes, adding a star for every state. The old pattern had been followed till the flag contained twenty stripes. Mrs. Ross had the happiness of living to see her original suggestion adopted.

Her flag was adopted by congress June 14, 1777, and the next day Betsy Ross was married to her second husband, Captain Ashburn. Her third husband was John Claypool.

SUSAN PEPPER.

Hours Spent In the Air and Sunshine.

Every hour we can get in the air and sunshine is for us the imbibing of so much of the breath of eternal life. And if with the outdoor hour we can join work that will adorn the earth or make it yield products useful to the race, so much the better.

The New Woman.

There Are Men Who Conceal Their Age

A FINE old gentleman whom I sometimes see is at the head of a business enterprise which requires attention night and day. The fine old gentleman founded it over fifty years ago, when he was a raw, redheaded youth. He gave it the closest attention from the start and continues to do so to this day. He is obliged to or it would not prosper, although now he is wealthy. His hair is snow white, but his bearing is erect and graceful as a soldier's, and he is on duty as many hours as any employee he has. There is about him no trace of failing either physically or mentally, and he manages his affairs even better than he did fifty years ago because of the long experience. He is now seventy-five years old, "but he is sensitive about his age," his acquaintances say. When I heard that, I respected this fine old man more than ever. He feels himself strong, well and capable as ever, but he fears if the foolish, spiteful world knew how old he is it might take for granted he is growing weak. I once knew, too, a man who dreaded so to be thought old that he sometimes told strangers his own daughters were his stepchildren. Nobody ever really did find out how old he was, but for forty years he presented the appearance of a man forty to fifty years of age. In general, when you find an old man or even an old woman who is sensitive on the subject of age you will find a person who is twenty years younger than the family Bible records. I don't know whether the fine old gentleman of seventy-five is a hypocrite or not, but in any case this spirit of persistent youthfulness is a credit to him. To feel ever young and keep up the appearance of being young is a fine trait in aging men. If more men possessed this spirit, there would not be nearly so many decrepit old hunkses among them.

Senator Depew says a young man can make no greater mistake than to seek a clerkship in public office and that no greater misfortune can befall him than to get such a place. Very well, Mr. Depew, give the official places to the women. They will take them and hold them down satisfactorily and rest content with the places. Thus all your gifted, soaring young men will be released to hustle and develop their talents. Yes, let the women have the offices. They are not so ambitious.

Don't tell all you know, not even half.

A poor woman, but a respectable, refined one, let out her parlors regularly to some ladies who met for social bridge whist and other parties. There was no gambling and all the people concerned were of respectable standing, yet some of the woman's neighbors and acquaintances were scandalized. They formed committee after committee to wait on her and tell her she must cut off the bridge whist and progressive euchre. Here is what she says in answer: "I have told these people that I will discontinue my card parties if they will agree to support me and my husband for two years, but I have not had a reply to my proposition."

At the last part of the meeting at St. Louis of the General Federation of Women's Clubs the members reached the point where they actually took their hats off and sat with their pretty heads uncovered. One may have hopes of women now. It is not surprising either to find that this last convention was the most alive, progressive and up to date one the federation ever held.

When a woman participates in a free food exhibition scramble it is a sign that she does not get enough to eat at home.

It is said by men that women are too emotional to be trusted in high office or to sit on juries. Note: There is a man who has held high office more than a generation. Lately he was on trial charged with serious official offenses. Well, he wept like a street sprinkler all through his trial. He shed tears copiously when he gave his testimony, and spectators shed tears with him out of sympathy. Finally, at the close, when he was pronounced not guilty, there was a general tear letting loose. The man himself was quite subdued, the jury shed tears abundantly, likewise the court officials and lookers on, and the whole pile of them enjoyed the jolliest weeping time of their lives, and not a woman among them!

From the pages and columns of print just now padded out with alleged health and beauty culture recipes it looks as if the writers of this delectable stuff were paid for it by the yard and are afraid of losing their jobs.

Conundrum: What is it that woman has, needs most and next least? Answer—Her own judgment.

Do all you can to help women and girls to become financially independent.

It is the lightweight brains that froth and sputter. Many women waste great and precious nerve force shooting off violent opinions concerning matters that are none of their business.

ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, June 30, 1904.

The Keans could not get rid of giving dinners even when out in Chicago. They've got the habit.

A St. Louis sculptor is executing a bust of William Jennings Bryan. This should not be confounded with the "bust" to be executed at the St. Louis convention.

For the sake of the solution of the problem of aerial navigation it is to be hoped that Santos-Dumont will be more successful than Bryan at St. Louis next month.

Fairbanks was given a warm welcome by his home people upon returning from the Chicago convention. Jim Martine says warm welcomes can't be counted in the returns on election day.

The bestowal of an honorary degree on Henry M. Maxson is a fitting recognition on the part of Alfred University of his real worth. Under Dr. Maxson's able supervision the Plainfield Public Schools have attained a standard that has called forth unlimited praise from the foremost educators and leading educational journals in this country.

According to some interviews with prominent Democrats, published by the Hitzsbeth Evening Times, Grover Cleveland is the favorite at the county seat. The same is true in this city and generally throughout the State. If former United States Senator James Smith could indorse the Sage of Princeton to accept a nomination from the Democratic National Convention, New Jersey would undoubtedly present his name. And there are some who say that he would sweep the State on election day.

Few great advertising successes were made in a day—few that really lasted. Just as a skilful engineer starts a train of Pullman coaches, gently, waking not a single passenger, so the broad advertising campaign is started—easily, but with gathering headway that is soon resistless power. "Keeping everlastingly at it" is the idea, but this phrase includes keeping at the machinery behind the advertising. The instantaneously successful advertising often consists of nothing more than advertising. The campaign that gathers momentum from month to month and goes on steadily for years is one that reflects a thorough selling organization.—Ex.

HORSE KICKED T. J. MAHER.

Animal Planted His Hoof in Blacksmith's Forehead.

Thomas J. Maher, a former jockey at Long Branch, and now a well-known blacksmith in Sycamore avenue, was put out of business for a time by a four-year-old horse Monday afternoon. He was just getting ready to put shoes on the horse and had taken off one shoe, when the colt raised his foot and struck Maher in the forehead. The blow knocked the horseshoer down and for some minutes he was in an unconscious condition.

Men in the shop rendered assistance at once and through the constant application of warm water kept the swelling down. Mr. Maher's face will not be scarred and his eyesight will not be injured.

Change in Timetable.

The most important changes in the new timetable going in effect on the New Jersey Central puts the 11.20 morning eastbound train on at 11 o'clock. Iron horse and the 6 o'clock from New York at night only stops here on signal. The fall Long Branch schedule went into effect on Sunday. There is also a Sunday afternoon train to Newark at 3:17, and the Sunday morning train for New York now leaves at 8:36.

Building Permits Granted.

Permits have been issued by Building Inspector Doane, one for the erection of a two and a half story frame dwelling, on West Fourth street near Darrow avenue, to be built for Jerry Elliott, of Central avenue and the other, a two story and attic house, on West Front street, being built for Mrs. Ina D. Tallamy, of West Sixth street.

Westfield to Have Horse Show.

Westfield is to have a horse show. This was decided a few days ago at a meeting of the Fair Acres Driving Club. It was also decided to change the name of the club to the Westfield Horse Show Association. The show is to be held at Westfield on October 13 and 19, and there will be no racing.

Department Store Concert.

Parcobek's Orchestra will give the fifth popular concert at Hill & Shepp's department store Saturday night, July 2. The second floor has been cleared for the concert, so that at least 100 people may find seats.

AMUSEMENTS.

Wm. Collier, who is now under Charles Frohman's management, appears at the Criterion in a new farce by Richard Harding Davis, entitled "The Dictator." The author has stated Mr. Collier ideally and given him a play that is all laughter, resultant from a skillfully handled farce with numerous amusing situations. The scenes are laid among the feverish fire-eaters of the southern republics, and this not only gives plenty of chance for fun, but gives romantic coloring to it also.

Luna Park—The attractions of this seaside park grow more alluring as the summer days come on. A score of Ongalese girls have been added to the five hundred persons who take part in the Dahl Durbar. Sharing attention with the Durbar is the spectacle "Fire and Flames." Some of the other attractions are the elephants who shoot the chutes, and the trip to the moon.

Dreamland—A throng of visitors pour through the gates every hour and thoroughly enjoy the wonders of the place. The free vaudeville performance on the plaza stage, now one of the most popular feats, includes Flora, who does daring things on the slack wire; the Yaeger troupe of balancers and the Yezarkasna dancers. "The Temptation of St. Anthony," the fall of Pompeii, the canals of Venice and the sewers of Paris are some of the newer attractions in Dreamland.

Bostock's—The giant orang outang is a centre of interest among the great number of animals in the show. Bonavita and his lions are as entertaining as ever and "the missing link" hold a reception afternoon and evening. Mr. Bostock came from Europe Monday, bringing a score or more of Polar bears, tigers, and hyf oensor his animal arena.

Hundreds of letters on all kinds of subjects and from all kinds of people come to Conductor Duss at Madison Square Garden where his "Beautiful Venice" is the summer attraction. Out of all these letters, mostly from women, is one really worthy of special mention. Here it is:

My Dear Mr. Duss:

How can I ever thank you for the good you and your music have done me personally? I am not exaggerating in the least when I say you have saved my life.

Saturday evening, despondent, heart sick and world weary, I went to the Garden with a woman friend. On the way I stopped in a drug store and bought prussic acid, intending to end my life when I returned home.

Your music soothed me, it lifted me out of the valley of gloom and again I am on the heights. You have relighted the beacon of hope in my soul. All the ministers in Manhattan with prayers and tears could not have caused the change of heart that came to me while under the magic influence of your baton.

The empty acid bottle is at the bottom of your Venetian Canal. God bless you Mr. Duss, God bless you.

Sincerely,

G. V.

BASEBALL GAMES SCHEDULED

ATTRACTIONS ON LOCAL DIAMONDS FOR SATURDAY AND MONDAY.

The Alis Club has three strong attractions for Saturday and Monday, two games being arranged for Independence Day. On Saturday the Acolians will return for the third game in the series. The team is greatly strengthened and it is said that Doescher, of the Brooklyn Nationals, who shut Westfield out, will pitch for them. The organ grinders are determined to win the game and thus retrieve themselves.

Fourth of July morning the Murray Hills will be here again for a second game. Those who saw Saturday's contest, know how well Nat. Strong's combination can play, but Manager Johnston is making preparation to beat the Hills. The game will be called at 10:30.

In the afternoon, at 4 o'clock, Manager Daub will have his rejuvenated Hoboken aggregation here. Two weeks ago this nine gave a fine exhibition with Alis, winning by a close score.

With these three games, the fans will have a feast of good baseball, and Manager Johnston has promised to strengthen all weak points for future contests. He has lined on a strong pitcher, a first-class third baseman and if Quinby comes here he will probably be made captain of the team.

The Y. M. C. A. team will cross bats with the Reform Club nine on the Myrtle avenue grounds Saturday afternoon.

Guests of a Commodore.

Miss Daisy Snyder and Miss Margaret Kennedy, of this city have returned from Greenville, N. J., where they have been visiting friends. While away, Miss Snyder and Miss Kennedy were the guests of the Commodore of the Greenville Yacht Club and were passengers aboard his flagship, the Jessie M. during the most exciting race of the season.

ALIS DROPS A GAME TO THE MURRAY HILLS

Errors by Lauder and Gray Help Visitors Win a Ten-Inning Contest.

WERE EVENLY MATCHED

BOTH PITCHERS WERE TOUCHED FOR THIRTEEN HITS.

McGoey Almost Makes a Home Run—Gauven Gets Three Hits—The Scores in Detail—Lauder Not to Play Until Ankle is Well.

The dropping of an easy fly ball by Lauder and a wild throw by Gray to first base in the fifth inning, together with a couple of singles, was the cause of Alis losing an otherwise interesting game to Murray Hill on Saturday. The two errors were largely responsible for three runs made in that inning, and barring these the score would have been 8 to 7 in favor of Alis, instead of 10 to 8 in favor of the visitors. It required ten innings to decide the contest, the score being a tie with eight runs each at the end of the ninth. A two bagger by O'Neil and singles by O'Gorman and Conroy netted two runs, one to spare, while Alis could do nothing in their half of the tenth.

The locals started the game in merry-go round style, making four runs, while the visitors were shutout in the first two innings. In the third they tallied three runs, while Alis drew one. In the fourth both teams drew a blank, but the fifth brought three more for the visitors, and only one for Alis. The next inning was a blank, while in the seventh each team scored two more runs. Alis failed to make any more, while Murray Hill chalked two in the tenth, giving them the game.

There seemed to be a hoodoo spell about the Alis team and Captain Lauder was particularly affected. His fumble of two easy fly balls was unusual and especially unfortunate. He made two of the four errors for the team, Gray and Davis each making one. Billy covered second and-barring his two misplays handled himself well. He has decided, however, to retire from the game for the present and he will not be with the team until his ankle is entirely well.

In the eighth inning McGoey was put out at home plate at the home plate. After putting the ball far beyond the reach of the fielders, he made the circuit, only to be thrown out at home. He failed to touch the rubber.

The score in detail:

ALIS.

	R	1B	PO	A	E
Walton, ss	1	0	1	0	0
Lauder, 3b	1	1	2	1	2
Farmer, c	1	2	10	0	0
Oregan, lf	3	2	1	0	0
McGoey, cf	0	1	5	0	0
Gray, 2b	0	1	1	4	1
Badgley, rf	1	1	3	0	0
Gauven, 1b	1	3	6	1	0
Davis, p	0	2	1	3	1
	8	13	30	9	4

MURRAY HILL.

	R	1B	PO	A	E
Courtney, 3b	1	1	2	5	0
Ousick, 2b	1	0	3	1	0
Bassford, cf	2	3	2	0	0
Dietrich, lf	1	2	3	0	0
Smith, 1b	0	2	14	0	0
O'Neil, ss	1	1	5	5	0
O'Gorman, rf	1	1	0	0	0
Diehl, ss	1	1	2	7	0
Conroy, p	0	2	0	1	0
	10	13	30	18	1

Score by innings:

Alis.....4 0 1 0 1 0 2 0 0—8
Murray Hill...0 0 3 0 0 2 0 0 3—10

Earned runs—Oregan, Gauven, Diehl, Bassford, 3; Dietrich, O'Neil. Two-base hits—Oregan, Davis. Three-base hits—Courtney, McGoey, Conroy. First base on balls—Off Davis, 1; off Conroy, 8. Struck out—By Davis, 7; by Conroy, 2. Left on bases—Murray Hill, 7; Alis, 9. First base on errors—Murray Hill, 3; Alis, 1. Umpire—Meriby. Time of game—3:20. Attendance—1,200.

It was a disappointment to the local fans to see Alis lose. Two or three times they seemed to have the game, only to fall down at the wrong time. Davis tossed the leather sphere in his usual good style, dividing honors with Conroy, late of the Boston Americans. Each pitcher was touched for thirteen hits. The visitors played a good steady game, and at the bat they excelled in bunching their hits. "Al." Farmer put up his same top-notch game behind the bat, but he fell off a trifle in hitting.

Oregan and McGoey and Badgley, the latter of Lehigh University, took care of the outfield to perfection. Gauven held down first without an error and he swatted Conroy for three singles. Walton covered short in good style, but was weak with the stick. He made one mistake in not coming up on Farmer's throw down to catch a man running home from third.

The Murray Hill team is a fast bunch, proving themselves a worthy opponent of Alis. It is to be hoped that when they return here Fourth of July morning, the score will be different. In the meantime, Manager Johnston expects to have Quinby at second and a new man on third. Gray only came for the one game, as he is playing regularly with Acolian.

DR. E. L. EARP CALLED TO SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY

Will Take Charge of the Department of Sociology There.

WILL LEAVE AUGUST 1

ANNOUNCEMENT MADE YESTERDAY CAUSES DEEP REGRET.

The Official Board of Grace M. E. Church Adopt Resolutions—A Committee Appointed to Secure a Supply.

Rev. Dr. Edwin Lee Earp, pastor of Grace M. E. church, has been elected to the chair of sociology at Syracuse University. The appointment has been accepted, and at yesterday morning's service at his church the formal announcement that Dr. Earp is to give up pastoral activity for educational work was made to the congregation. The announcement came as a great surprise.

Dr. Earp is the master of his departure from the charge before his official board Friday night. His resignation was accepted after expressions of regret. Next Wednesday final action on the matter will be taken at the quarterly conference of the church.

It is expected that Dr. Earp will begin his duties at the university next September. He is to be released from his charge in the borough on August 1.

Dr. Earp is highly educated and a wide student. He has received four degrees: Ph. D. from Leipsic University, A. B. from Dickinson College, A. M. from New York University, and B. D. from Drew Theological Seminary, where he prepared for the *ministry. He is a native of Mary*land. He has been in the ministry for five and a half years. His first charge was at Ridgewood, where he stayed a year. He was in charge of St. James' church, Newark, during the next two years, and has been pastor of Grace for the past two and a half years.

In making the announcement of his approaching departure, at the morning service Sunday, Rev. Dr. Earp spoke very briefly. He simply stated that he had received a call to take charge of the department of sociology at Syracuse University early in the week, and that to enable him to begin his work there it was necessary for him to be released August 1. He explained that a special meeting of the Official Board had been called to take action in the matter, and that he had been freed from his pastoral obligations, beginning August 1, and that a committee had been appointed to cooperate with Presiding Elder Halloran in securing a pulpit supply until the next annual conference. At some later time, he said, when it would be more fitting and appropriate, he would have something to say as to his feelings in severing connections with Grace church.

After the service there were many expressions of regret over Dr. Earp's going. His flock gathered about him be secure him of their best wishes in his new field, and to make it plain that they were sorry he had to go.

In releasing Dr. Earp, the Official Board passed the following resolution of appreciation: "The Official Board has received the announcement from Rev. Dr. E. L. Earp that he has been called to the chair of sociology in Syracuse University, and hereby express their gratification at the opportunity open to him of wider usefulness. With great regret we contemplate the necessity of releasing him of his obligations to the church as its pastor. He has endeared himself to our people by his Christian courtesy and bearing, and by his faithful and sympathetic ministration. In consenting to release him August 1, we pray earnestly for his success and happiness in his new sphere, and pray God's blessing on his wife and children."

The committee appointed to look after the pulpit supply in co-operation with Presiding Elder Halloran is composed of Dr. H. K. Carroll, John Valiant and E. E. Wiselier.

Pastor Going West.

Rev. George B. Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, will leave Plainfield about August 1 for Milton, Wis., where he will remain for a time with his family. From there he will go to Hortonville, Kansas, to attend the conference of the Seventh-Day Baptist church.

MANAGER HAND'S TEAM HAS BEEN DISBANDED

Attendance at Games Not Up to Expectations, So Scotch Plains Club is No More.

CONSOLIDATION TALK

CONFERENCE WITH ST. MARY'S CLUB UNSUCCESFUL.

Scarcely One Hundred at Scotch Plains-Colonial A. C. Contest—Running the Game at a Loss—No Plans Announced.

Baseball which has flourished successfully for three years at Scotch Plains, is a thing of the past so far as the present club is concerned. This decision was reached Saturday night, after the game with the Colonial A. C. team, of New York. Scarcely one hundred persons attended the contest, so the club decided that local interest is dead, and any attempt to revive it would be a losing venture. The end has not been an unexpected one, as the game has been run at a loss for some time. Only a balance left over from last season has carried the club along.

Manager Hand's team is playing as fast an article of baseball as has been seen on the local diamond. The team is composed of local talent, the pick of the Plainfield Amateur League, which thrived a few years ago, so the fans have no reason to find fault with the games.

Several weeks ago the club considered the matter of placing the team in Plainfield, if suitable grounds could be secured. At a meeting held last night, a delegation from the St. Mary's Club met the Scotch Plains club, but the two organizations were unable to come to any agreement as to a consolidation or management. A party of St. Mary's club has arranged a series of five games with Alis, it being proposed to use the Hoboken team for the games. The other faction is afraid that if a consolidatin of management is made it will cause a split in baseball here among the St. Mary supporters and the plan has been given up.

F. M. THIERIOT DEAD.

Former Plainfielder Passes Away at His Home in South Orange.

Ferdinand Mally Thieriot, a son of the late Ferdinand Thieriot, of New York, and formerly a resident of North Plainfield, died Monday at his home in South Orange, N. J. He had been ill for six months. He was born in Jersey City and was fifty-one years old.

Mr. Thieriot was a member of the New York Stock Exchange, and served on the Board of Governors, and was also a member of the firm of L. von Hoffmann & Co., bankers. He was also a member of the New England Society of the Oranges, the South Orange Field Club, the Union Club, Downtown Association, and the Chamber of Commerce of New York and the Baltusrol Club. He leaves a wife, two sons and two daughters.

BAPTIST EXCURSION.

Three Sunday-Schools to Hold Annual Outing at Asbury Park Thursday, July 7.

The committee from the First Baptist church met last night to complete the arrangement for the annual excursion of the Sunday school to Asbury Park on Thursday, July 7. The Sunday-schools from Faith chapel and the Mary H. Wilson Memorial chapel, at Watchung, will accompany the First Baptists.

The Mt. Olive Baptists, who have formerly gone with them, have arranged for an outing by themselves. The present indications are that a large number of persons will avail themselves of this opportunity to spend a day at the seashore.

An Auto Fiend.

Edward A. Laing, of East Front street, covered a distance of one hundred miles in his automobile on Sunday, including the difficult feat of climbing Fort Lee hill without a stop.

Clerks to Meet on Diamond.

Nines made up of employes of J. A. Smith & Bro. and of Neuman Bros. will meet on St. Mary's field July 4. Both teams are training for a shutout.

Tennis Practice.

The singles tournament at tennis, proposed by some of the Y. M. C. A. players, is a sort of try-out for the Y. M. C. A. championship tournament, to be played later in the season, has been called off because of a lack of interest.

Alis vs. Acolians Next.

The Acolians will be here Saturday for the third game of the series with Alis. Doescher, the Brooklyn National League pitcher, will be on the slab for them.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Standard Railroad of America.

FOUR TRACKS THROUGHOUT BY THE ELECTRIC AUTOMATIC BLOCK SIGNAL SYSTEM.

On and After June 27, 1904.

Trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

For Rahway, Metuchen, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park: 5.00 a. m. Main Line Express daily, with Parlor Car, Harrisburg to Long Branch. 7.00 a. m. Express daily, for Rahway, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park. 8.00 a. m. Express, daily except Sunday, for Rahway, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park. 9.00 a. m. Express, daily, for Rahway, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park. 10.00 a. m. Express, daily, for Rahway, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park. 11.00 a. m. Express, daily, for Rahway, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park. 12.00 noon Express, daily, for Rahway, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park. 1.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Rahway, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park. 2.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Rahway, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park. 3.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Rahway, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park. 4.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Rahway, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park. 5.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Rahway, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park. 6.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Rahway, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park. 7.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Rahway, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park. 8.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Rahway, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park. 9.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Rahway, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park. 10.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Rahway, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park. 11.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Rahway, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park. 12.00 midnight Express, daily, for Rahway, Perth Amboy, Matawan, Long Branch and Asbury Park.

For Philadelphia and Trenton—5.00 a. m. Express, daily. 6.00 a. m. Express, daily, with Pullman Parlor and Coaches for Philadelphia. 7.00 a. m. Express, daily, for Philadelphia. 8.00 a. m. Express, daily, for Philadelphia. 9.00 a. m. Express, daily, for Philadelphia. 10.00 a. m. Express, daily, for Philadelphia. 11.00 a. m. Express, daily, for Philadelphia. 12.00 noon Express, daily, for Philadelphia. 1.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Philadelphia. 2.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Philadelphia. 3.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Philadelphia. 4.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Philadelphia. 5.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Philadelphia. 6.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Philadelphia. 7.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Philadelphia. 8.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Philadelphia. 9.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Philadelphia. 10.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Philadelphia. 11.00 p. m. Express, daily, for Philadelphia. 12.00 midnight Express, daily, for Philadelphia.

For Newark—5.00, 6.00, 7.00, 8.00, 9.00, 10.00, 11.00 a. m., 12.00 noon, 1.00, 2.00, 3.00, 4.00, 5.00, 6.00, 7.00, 8.00, 9.00, 10.00, 11.00 p. m., 12.00 midnight.

For Somerville—5.00, 7.00, 8.00, 9.00, 10.00, 11.00 a. m., 12.00 noon, 1.00, 2.00, 3.00, 4.00, 5.00, 6.00, 7.00, 8.00, 9.00, 10.00, 11.00 p. m.

For Bound Brook—5.00, 7.00, 8.00, 9.00, 10.00, 11.00 a. m., 12.00 noon, 1.00, 2.00, 3.00, 4.00, 5.00, 6.00, 7.00, 8.00, 9.00, 10.00, 11.00 p. m., 12.00 midnight.

For Flemington—7.00, 11.00 a. m., 2.00, 5.11 p. m.

For Phillipsburg and Easton—8.00 a. m., 2.00 p. m.

For Bethlehem, Allentown and Manch Chunk—8.00 a. m., 2.00, 5.11 p. m.

For Wilkesbarre and Scranton—3.35, 9.04 a. m., 5.00 p. m. Sundays—3.35 a. m., 5.00 p. m.

For Mount Bethel and Ocean Grove, etc.—11.13 a. m., 3.44, 9.22 p. m. Sunday (except Ocean Grove) 11.13 a. m., 3.44, 9.22 p. m.

For Red Bank—11.13 a. m., 3.44, 9.22, 9.44, 4.47, 5.00, 6.00, 7.00, 8.00, 9.00, 10.00, 11.00 p. m.

For Lakewood and Atlantic City—11.13 a. m. (wood only) 9.22 a. m., 1.10, 2.00, 4.00, 5.00, 9.22 p. m., Lakewood only 11.13 a. m. Sundays—8.00 a. m., 5.00 p. m.

For Toms River and Barnegat—9.22 a. m., 1.10, 4.00 p. m. Sundays—5.00 p. m.

For Philadelphia—3.17, 7.12, 7.44, 9.44, 9.51, 10.32, 11.01 a. m., 12.02, 1.17 night. Sundays—3.17, 7.12, 7.44, 9.44, 9.51, 10.32, 11.01 a. m., 12.02, 1.17 night.

For Baltimore and Washington—3.17, 9.51, 10.32, 11.01 a. m., 12.02, 1.17 night. Sundays—3.17, 9.51, 10.32, 11.01 a. m., 12.02, 1.17 night.

For Pottsville, Harrisburg and Williamsport—9.44 a. m., 1.17 night. Sundays—9.44 a. m., 1.17 night.

For Trenton—3.17, 7.12, 7.44, 9.44, 9.51, 10.32, 11.01 a. m., 12.02, 1.17 night. Sundays—3.17, 7.12, 7.44, 9.44, 9.51, 10.32, 11.01 a. m., 12.02, 1.17 night.

For Reading and Harrisburg—9.44, 9.51, 10.32, 11.01 a. m., 12.02, 1.17 night. Sundays—9.44 a. m., 1.17 night.

For Reading and Pottsville—9.44 a. m., 1.17 night. Sundays—9.44 a. m., 1.17 night.

For Pottsville—9.44 a. m., 1.17 night. Sundays—9.44 a. m., 1.17 night.

For Philadelphia, Broad Street Station, 3.17, 7.12, 7.44, 9.44, 9.51, 10.32, 11.01 a. m., 12.02, 1.17 night. Sundays—3.17, 7.12, 7.44, 9.44, 9.51, 10.32, 11.01 a. m., 12.02, 1.17 night.

For Baltimore and Washington—3.17, 9.51, 10.32, 11.01 a. m., 12.02, 1.17 night. Sundays—3.17, 9.51, 10.32, 11.01 a. m., 12.02,

SUBLIME DIGNITY OF CHRISTIAN PRIESTHOOD

Father Egan's Discourse on Occasion of Father Boone's First Celebration of Mass.

THE RESPONSIBILITIES

A POWER OF VAST INFLUENCE OVER THE INDIVIDUAL.

Reverence Due the Clergy—Sermon by Father Egan Preached on Invitation of the Young Priest.

At the celebration of the first high mass by Father Charles Boone, the young Plainfielder who has just been admitted to the priesthood, Father Egan preached a striking and unusually interesting sermon. There was a strong personal note to it, his opening words embracing an eloquent reference to the newly ordained priest.

Father Egan's main theme was on the dignity of the priesthood. His text was from the fifth chapter of St. Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews. In beginning his sermon Father Egan said:

"On last Tuesday morning, my dear brethren, in the Cathedral of the primatial see of these United States, twenty-five young levites were promoted to the sacred and sublime dignity of the Christian priesthood. Here this morning in this sanctuary of the early piety of his boyhood days, in this temple where he first imbibed the love of the sacred calling that is now inexpressibly his, there in one of that privileged band to whom the consecrating prelate solemnly said 'Thou art a priest forever according to the order of Melchisedek.' Here, he is permitted to ascend that altar, and perform a rite that has no compare in this world, an action that sets him off from among men, makes him on earth the very vice-gerent of the living God.

"We are here this morning to honor him, a priest of the Most High and to share with him and his respected family and friends the inexpressible joy, that must needs fill his soul, as he says his first solemn introibo at that altar, where a child of this parish, he first became united to his Lord, by the bond of sacred baptism, and where the Divine spirit sealed him as a member of that Christian army that daily battles against the enemies of the Lord.

"At his very kind invitation, I am asked to preach the sermon at this, his first solemn high mass. Let me say to you, my dear friend, and newly consecrated brother, in the sublime priesthood of the new law, that at no time in my unworthy relation heretofore, has there been a more pleasant task than that which has been requested of me.

"It is at once apparent on this joyful occasion that there is and cannot be but one thought uppermost in our minds today, when we reflect that we rejoice, because a young man has just been made a priest forever according to the order of Melchisedek. The theme then on this occasion is naturally the sublime dignity of the priesthood. Let me unfold a while the solemn thoughts arising therefrom.

"No man," said Father Egan, "who believes in the fact of the great mystery of the Incarnation and death of Jesus Christ who equally believes in the divine significance of that mediatorial work of our Savior, and unwaveringly assents to all that his church solemnly declares divinely revealed, no man can but honor and reverence with the deepest affection the minister of Christ. It is an honor and an affection that spring from a true conception of what it means to be a priest. Once we perceive what the priesthood of Christ is, and acknowledging the sublime fact of the participation thereof and its perpetuation for ever more in the visible ministry of the church that He had instituted and which He still directs and governs, there is left for us, the children of the faith, but one unanimous tribute of the soul's undying endearment to him who stands at that altar as on every altar throughout the universe. And we do not wonder that at all times, in every clime and by every race, men have esteemed the Catholic priest, and recognized in him a power of immense influence over the individual, the guide of the hearth, and the savior of society, whose membership can be united only by that bond of unswerving attachment to Christ and His divinely delegated ministers."

Continuing, Father Egan said in part: "On an occasion like this, beholding a young priest celebrating his first solemn mass, we all are moved to consider anew the sublime dignity of the Christian priesthood. We are likewise not unmindful of the awful responsibility that this office begets—and if this is so, how dependent must a man be upon the prayers of the faithful for its due and proper fulfillment. I know you, my dear brethren, will not, you cannot forget to ever pray the Great High Priest in Heaven, that He may guide and bless him whom we this day honor. May the ministry with which he has just been richly invested be a source of untold blessings to those whom he shall meet on the journey of his priestedal life, and may he in all things prosper, and be a joy to the church that has chosen him to sit in the sanctuary of the living God, abiding the time when Christ shall welcome him to everlasting happiness, rewarding him for the conscientious fulfillment of the great and sublime duties of that priesthood and the possession of that unspeakable delight that eye hath not seen nor mind conceived what is in store for those who love and serve the living God. In the familiar greeting of priest to priest, 'Ad multos plurimosque annos.'"

ST. MARY'S SCHOOL GRADUATION EXERCISES

Promotion of the Primary and Kindergarten Pupils is Marked by Special Exercises.

GIVEN CERTIFICATES

JOSEPH GALLAGHER DELIVERS THE PRIMARY VALEDICTORY.

The Primary Salutatory is Made by Miss Ursula Colvin—An Operetta Closes the Programme.

Graduation exercises to mark the advancement of the primary and kindergarten children of St. Mary's Parochial School were held Monday in the parish school hall. The programme was an elaborate, delightfully rendered. A large-sized audience enjoyed the affair.

The programme opened with a musical selection, "Flatterer," by Miss Mary Smith, on the piano. Miss Ursula Colvin delivered the primary salutatory, in a charming little address.

"Sleepy Sue," an exercise in which fourteen children took part, followed. Miss Dorothy Cashin was "Sue" and the other characters were taken by the following: Harvey Lyon, John Traynor, Margaret Nichols, William Hall, John Powelson, Frank Kane, James Traynor, Richard Lawton, Hugh Breen, John Kane, Edward Forrestel, Frank Arnold, M. Angerbaner.

"Sleepy Sue" was followed by a section by the "Children's Symphony" in which the following took part: Violin, Miss Quinn; piano, C. Galbraith and L. Brown; quiri and whistle, Frank Molsenney; nightingale, Helen O'Keefe; drum, E. Hanrahan; castanets, M. Watson; mandolin, Misses M. Smith and H. Hanrahan; trumpet, E. Trembley; tambourine, M. King; bell, C. Kelley; cuckoo, M. Traynor, wood-devil, M. Caulfield; rattle, M. Crosby.

After the "Symphony," the kindergarten tots were called up and presented with tiny diplomas. Father Egan, the rector, made the presentations, just as though the little ones were receiving sheepskins. The small boys and girls bowed gravely as they received the certificates. The graduates were: Margaret Motley, Florence Witterman, Helen Newell, Joseph Gallagher, Arthur Kyle, Vincent Mullen, Anna Foabre, Lillie Coffey, Lizzie Ennis.

Joseph Gallagher delivered the primary valedictory. His address was a clever one, neatly phrased.

The exercises closed with a tuneful operetta, "The Pixies' Triumph." The cast was as follows:

Jewel Solsson, Pixie King, Master Frank Molsenney; Knowall Dolittle, King's Executive, Master John Casey; Laughing Gas, Master Edward Hanrahan; May Behind, Master John Casey; Fatima, Queen of the Fairies, Miss Lillian Molsenney; Frances, Miss Annie Heffernan; Silver Spirte, Miss Anna O'Loughlin; Golden Hair, Miss Mary Traynor.

The parts were splendidly acted and sung. Frank Molsenney, Edward Hanrahan and Lillian Molsenney were particularly good.

The children were trained for the operetta by Sister Mary Esther and Madam Mensalli-Bartlett. Miss Quinn, violin, and Miss Smith, piano, played the incidental music and accompaniment.

Prizes as His Guests.

After the service at St. Mary's Church Sunday morning, when Rev. Charles Boone celebrated his first high mass, his father, Dr. W. C. Boone entertained all the priests present at the service at dinner. The guests included Very Rev. Dean Smyth, former rector of St. Mary's, Father Egan, the present rector, Very Rev. Dr. Dyer, of Baltimore, Father Albert, of Washington, D. C., Father Clifford and Father Federiel.

FR. BOONE CELEBRATES HIS FIRST HIGH MASS

Big Congregation at St. Mary's to Witness Solemn Ceremony Conducted by Young Priest.

FATHER EGAN'S SERMON

VERY REV. DEAN SMYTH, THE FORMER PASTOR, ASSISTS IN SERVICE.

Superior of the Sulpicians in Baltimore Present—Elaborate Musical Programme—Features of the Services.

Father Charles Boone, son of Dr. W. C. Boone, of this city, celebrated his first high mass Sunday morning at St. Mary's church. The occasion called a notable group of priests together.

Assisting Father Boone were the Very Rev. Dean Smyth, the former rector of St. Mary's and his cousin, Very Rev. Dr. Dyer, who is superior of the Sulpicians in Baltimore, where he has charge of St. Mary's Seminary. Deah Smyth was deacon, Rev. Father Albert, of Washington, was sub-deacon; Rev. Dr. Dyer was assistant priest, and Mr. Dutcher, a seminarian from Seton Hall, was master of ceremonies. In the sanctuary were Rev. Father Egan, rector of St. Mary's and his assistants, Rev. Fathers Clifford and Federiel.

There was an unusually large congregation. In honor of the occasion the altar was beautifully decorated with flowers.

Father Egan preached the sermon. His discourse was on the priesthood, and an extended report of it will be found in these columns tomorrow.

There was an elaborate and beautiful musical programme The mass was Farmers' and Georgias,' the solo parts being sung by Miss Anna Daly, suoprano; Miss Lizzie Day, alto; Mr. Matthews, tenor, and Joseph O'Keefe, baseo. Mr. Eagleston sang the antbem "Exaltabor" and Williams Holmes sang "O Salutaris" in splendid form. Miss Mary Smith presided at the organ.

REPAIRING WEST FRONT ST.

THE FORCE AT WORK ON THOROUGHFARE; NEW TROLLEY TRACKS LAID.

The city street force is busy repairing the holes and depressions left by the trolley company along West Front street in laying its new tracks. The work will be charged to the company.

The stretch of track that the corporation has just completed from the city line to DeKalb avenue is one of the finest pieces of rail work that it was possible to construct. The tracks have been laid in as thorough and careful a manner as the best example of track-laying anywhere. While the exact cost is not known outside the P. S. C. offices, the manner in which the rails were put down makes it certain, according to statement made yesterday by a city official, that the amount expended on the work was large.

EXEMPTS DECLINE INVITATION

PLAINFIELD ORGANIZATION NOT TO ATTEND CELEBRATION AT RAHWAY.

The Exempt Firemen's Association has declined the invitation extended by the Rahway organization to attend its Fourth of July celebration and parade, and the secretary has been authorized to communicate with Rahway to that effect. This action is taken because of the general unwillingness of the members to pass the holiday away from home.

A number of the Plainfield Exempts will undoubtedly attend the celebration and will be the guests of the Rahway men for the day. The silver loce carriage has been loaned by the local association for the day.

MORE SPRINKLING WORK NOW.

Additions to Mileage of Macadamizing Brings Increased Task.

In consequence of the completion of newly macadamized streets, the sprinkling system this year includes forty four miles more of roadway than last year. As fast as Contractor Meeker finishes them up, other new macadamized streets will be added to the burdens of John Keely, the sprinkling contractor.

The increase in the mileage naturally stretches the sprinkling work out thinner to a certain extent. There are just the same number of wagons as last year, and all these new streets must be taken care of just as much as any of the old ones.

The main increase in mileage on West Seventh and West Fifth streets, from Clinton avenue to the line. Prospect avenue's new roadway is partly done, and that will soon be on the sprinkler map.

WM. NEWCORN WEDS MRS. MAMIE LEVENTHAL

Prominent Lawyer and Former Assemblyman the Groom at a Marriage in New York.

CEREMONY A QUIET ONE

WERE WEDDED AT THE HOME OF THE BRIDE'S BROTHER.

Honeymoon at Atlantic City—Couple to Reside in This City on Their Return—Mr. Newcorn's Career.

Former Assemblyman William Newcorn, of this city, and Mrs. Mamie Leventhal, of New York, were quietly married at the home of the bride's brother, Israel M. Finkelstein, in East Eighty-seventh street, New York, Sunday afternoon. Only two near relatives and immediate friends of the couple were present. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. A. H. Davidson, assisted by Rev. Joseph Martin, both of New York.

William Newcorn.

The bride and groom were unattended and in all there were about sixty guests present. The bride was gowned in a pale gray renaissance robe, trimmed with chiffon. She also wore a gray hat trimmed with silk flowers, and in her hair a crescent of thirty diamonds, the gift of the groom.

After the wedding the couple left for Philadelphia and today they will go to Atlantic City for a brief stay. Upon their return they will live at 220 West Front street.

For a number of years Mr. Newcorn has been active in Union County politics and he was a member of the Legislature in 1902-03. For several terms he was a member of the city and county Republican committees and a leader in the Fourth ward. He has also been active in several fraternal lodges, being a past great sachem of the Improved Order Red Men of New Jersey and an officer of Central Lodge, No. 48, A. O. U. W. Mr. Newcorn was admitted to the New Jersey Bar several years ago and as a practicing lawyer has been very successful.

Mrs. Newcorn has been prominent in New York society, where she has taken an active part in many social events. Both she and her husband are very popular in large circle of friends and acquaintances. The bride was the recipient of many costly and useful gifts.

CHAMPIONSHIP TENNIS PLAY

TOURNAMENT TO BE HELD ON ROSELLE CASINO COURTS.

It is expected that the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club will be well represented in the championship tournament of the East Jersey Lawn Tennis Association for men's doubles to be held on the courts of the Roselle Casino, on Monday, July 4, all day, and Saturday, July 9. All entries should be sent to D. Warner Mulford, Roselle Casino, Roselle, before Saturday night, July 2.

Play will commence Fourth of July morning at 10 o'clock, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of July 9. All matches will be the best two out of three sets, except in the final round, which will be the best three out of five sets. Prizes will be awarded to the winners and runners-up.

Gardiner H. Miller will act as referee and this committee will be in charge of the tournament: D. Warner Mulford, chairman; T. M. Day, Jr., Julian R. McGiffert, James M. Stiffer and John L. Warner.

Birthday Party.

The young friends of Edward Alpaugh, of 225 East Ninth street, were handed a party in honor of his fifteenth birthday, Saturday night. Instrumental music formed the larger part of the evening's amusement. Dancing was also enjoyed for a time and a dainty collation was served late in the evening.

LOCAL GOLF LINKS CROWDED WITH PLAYERS

Hillside's Crack Team Defeats Hackensack by a Score of 45 to 0.

PARKS, 5; CRANFORD, 10

E. B. SHOEMAKER WINS FIRST HONORS AT HILLSIDE.

Nelson A. Miller Gets Three Points at Park Golf Club—June Handicap at Westfield—The Individual and Team Scores.

The high temperature of the weather on Saturday had no material effect on the golf enthusiasts and a large number took part in the events at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club. The course was in the best of condition and as a rule low scores were made. There were two events; a team match between Hillside and Hackensack and the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup. In the team match Hillside won a decisive victory by a score of 45 to 0. The home club had an exceptionally strong team out and not once did the visitors have a chance to win.

This is the summary of the match: Hillside—F. O. Reinhart, 7; Robert Abbott, 9; W. L. Glenney, 1; Willard Wadsworth, 9; Story Rowland, 8; Dudley H. Barrows, 3; C. Westley Abbott, 3; S. D. Lounsbery, 10. Total, 45.

Hackensack—Temple, 0; Whitbeck, 0; Colder, 0; Kypper, 0; Williams, 0; Hodgson, 0; Cowes, 0; Johnson, 0. Total, 0.

E. B. Shoemaker won first honors for the Golf Committee cup with a net score of 76, while C. B. Morgan, E. E. Iremonger and George T. Van Boskerck were tie for the remaining honors, each receiving a point. The scores:

E. B. Shoemaker, 88, 12—76; C. B. Morgan, 98, 9—79; E. E. Iremonger, 90, 11—79; George T. VanBoskerck, 90, 11 —79; W. L. Glenney, 80, 0—80; Willard Wadsworth, 93, 8—85; S. D. Lounsbery, 98, 8—81; H. F. Fox, 109, 20—83; H. D. Hibbard, 92, 9—83; Olaf Saugstad, 95, 8—87.

The only event at the Park Golf Club was the weekly play for the President's and Park Golf Club cups, the latter a scratch event. Nelson A. Miller won first honors for the President's cup, while T. W. Morris, Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll and Charles L. Nichols were tie for the other honors, each receiving a point. For the other trophy, T. W. Morris won first honors, Dr. Carroll second and Rev. G. L. Goodrich the one remaining point. The scores:

Nelson A. Miller, 101, 23—78; T. W. Morris, 95, 12—83; Charles L. Nichols, 111, 28—83; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 96, 13—83; Rev. G. L. Goodrich, 100, 16—84; R. L. Hallock, 104, 19—85; J. B. Betts, 116, 30—86; H. C. Wells, 104, 17—87; L. W. Hallock, 106, 18—88; J. L. Watson, 122, 30—92; E. Maxwell Honeyman, 115, 17—96; Charles H. Morse, 144, 14—100.

The Park Golf Club team met defeat in its first match with the Cranford Golf Club team at Cranford, on Saturday, G. W. Faber and Morgan T. Townsend scoring the only points. The final score was 10 to 6, on the Nassau system. The summary:

Park—G. W. Faber, 3; Morgan T. Townsend, 3; Arthur Peck, 0; Charles Faber, 0; Charles A. Reed, 0; Herbert Rogers, 0; Rev. J. O. McKelvey, 0; Samuel Townsend, 0. Total, 6.

Cranford—Dr. Davis, 0; Tappen, 1; Waterbury, 1; Boger, 2; A. Edgecumb, 0; Fiske, 3; Bigoney, 3. Total, 10.

At the Cranford Golf Club, Saturday afternoon, there was another team match between the home team and Morristown. Cranford lost by 24½ points to 10.

The June handicap was the only event at the Westfield Golf Club on Saturday, and E. R. Perkins was the winner with a net score of 71. There was a large field and considerable interest. The leading scores were as follows:

E. R. Perkins, 89, 18—71; E. R. Proudfit, 99, 25—74; J. A. Woodward, 86, 12—74; H. I. White, 106, 30—76; H. W. Gladwin, 109, 30—79; R. I. Townley, 90, 10—80; E. D. Floyd, 95, 14—81; S. A. Trevvett, 91, 10—81.

In the evening there was the formal opening of the new addition to the clubhouse. The event was marked by a dance and reception at which a number of women and officials of the club received. There was a large attendance of members and friends and all expressed themselves as being pleased with the additional room.

No Time for Baseball.

Lynch, who has been playing a few games with Alta, failed to show up on Saturday. Inquiry about the matter brought forth the information from Manager Johnson that the right fielder got married on Wednesday, and enough said.

FINE RACING CARD FOR INDEPENDENCE DAY

Speedy Trotters and Pacers Among the List of Entries for Driving Park Attraction.

THREE BIG EVENTS

THE PURSE FOR EACH RACE IS TWO HUNDRED.

Col. Edwards, R. A. Fairbairn and and Mr. Rose to Act as Judges—Joshua Rogers As Starter—Music by the Band.

No finer programme for racing has ever been offered at the Driving Park than the card prepared by the Driving Association for the Fourth of July. Some of the speediest trotters and pacers off the big tracks will compete for honors. Places as far away as Ossining, N. Y., are represented in the entries. The list is better and bigger than ever before.

There will be three races in all: 2:25 trot, 2:17 trot and 2:20 pace, and 2:25 trot and 2:28 pace. The purse in each race will be $200.

The entries closed last night, the final additions to the list being received in this morning's mail. As announced by the Association this morning, the list is as follows. The name of the owner and his place of residence follow the name of the entry. A. C. Blair, J. W. Johnson, M. W. Brandon, Stonewall Jackson, J. H. Greene, Jr., of this city, and Philip Jenner, of New Market, are among the owers on the list. Mr. Greene has a horse in every race:

2:25 trot and 2:28 pace, purse $200—Jerry Red, J. H. Greene, Jr., Plainfield; Lady Onward, G. Ditzler, Elizabeth; Red Wing, B. F. Brown, Hastings, N. Y.; Mary Tudor, J. F. Matthews, Princeton; Nellie Collins, James Smith, 3d, Newark; Albert L, M. H. Brandon, Plainfield; Woven Wind, J. W. Johnson, Plainfield; Agnes, Stonewall Jackson, Plainfield; Rosetine, bl g by Baron Stein, J. H. Power and Son, Brooklyn.

2:17 trot and 2:20 pace, purse $200—Gilthorpe, J. H. Greene, Jr., Plainfield; Jessie Dine, J. S. Irving, Westfield; Fonda, Pitman Farm, Trenton; Buss, Moses Hand, Lyons Farms; Billy Pizzaro, J. F. Brown, East View, N. J.; Rex, A. C. Blair, Plainfield; Harry H, ch. H. by Mary King, dam by Aberdeen, J. H. Power and Son, Brooklyn.

2:20 trot, purse $200—Fancy Spot, J. H. Greene, Jr., Plainfield; Jessie Delmar, J. Gregory, Newark; Hank, Theodore C. Maxfield, Bloomfield; Otario, Andrew Rohr, Ossining, N. Y.; Karachi, E. M. Grover, Newark; Lida Mc, Philip Jenner, New Market; Estella br. m. by Elector, dam unknown, Mercer Driving Park Stakes, Trenton.

Close and exciting contests are expected by all the horsemen interested in the event. The track is in the finest shape it has ever been since racing started there, and all the other conditions are in favor of magnificent sport. The events will start at 2 o'clock sharp.

It is hoped to draw a record-breaking crowd to the meet. The grandstand has been repaired, the seats have been covered with muslin, and feminine horselovers will find nothing to detract from their enjoyment of the sport. Boxes may be hired at Rowley's drug store.

The judges will be Col. Edwards, of Newark; Robert A. Fairbairn, of Westfield, and Mr. Rose, of Perth Amboy. Joshua Rogers, of Brooklyn, a veteran starter, will send the horses off. William L. Smalley, Jr., will be clerk of the course.

A full brass band will furnish music between heats.

Golf Schedule.

There will be mixed foursomes, scratch, at the Westfield Golf Club on Saturday. In addition to the weekly competition for the Golf Committee Cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Saturday, there will be the regular play for the Women's Handicap Cup.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Utter, of Lyman place, have been called to Greene, N. Y., by the serious illness of Mrs. Utter's mother, who resides at that place.

Michael McCarty, of Lee place, has been granted a permit for the erection of a two and a half story frame dwelling on Lee place near West Fourth street.

E. C. Martin, of the firm of Woodhull & Martin, returned home Saturday from a successful fishing trip.

DIED.

DIXON—On Tuesday, June 21, 1904, William E. Dickson.

COMPTON—On Tuesday, June 21, 1904, Austin M. Compton, aged 32 years, 5 months, 27 days.

DEVINE—In this city, June 22, 1904, Catherine, wife of Michael Devine, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Clark, in her 33d year.

Sanitary Plumbing

Brick and Portable Furnace Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing, Etc., Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Members Association of New York City, I employ none but first class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business, at all times and in cases.

D. W. LITTELL,

No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Handbook on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

NEW IN EVERY DETAIL!

My new barber shop at

143 NORTH AVE.

is now open ready for business. All the latest appointments in the tonsorial line.

EDWIN B. MAYNARD.

CARNEY BROS.,

MADISON AVENUE,

Between Front and Second streets.

Tinners, Plumbers Gas Fitters,

Grates and bricks for all kinds of stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your tinware mending to us. The best tinners, the best plumbers, and the best gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction. Keys of all kinds are made here. Tinware made to order. Ranges, brick and portable furnaces. Sanitary plumbing.

DIME

Savings Institution,

Of Plainfield, N. J.,

Is now receiving deposits with interest, allowed on all sums from $5 to $3,000.

J. Frank Hubbard, President.
Wm. F. Arnold, } Vice-Pres
Jeremiah Manning, }
J. C. Pope, Sec'y and Treas.

Money deposited on or before January tenth will draw interest from the first.

Guaranteed Salary $900 YEARLY.

Men and women of good address to represent us; $3 to $5 per day for expenses; horses furnished when necessary; position permanent; extra commissions and expenses paid advancement; old established house; special chance for earnest man or woman to secure valuable territory; we furnish capital, instructions and patterns. New, brilliant lines. Write at once.

STAFFORD PRESS,
23 Church St., New Haven, Conn

W. B. CODINGTON,

Counsellor-at-Law

Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery, Notary Public. Offices Corner of Park avenue and Second street.

ALBERT HEDDEN

Livery & Boarding Stables

FOURTH ST.,

between Watchung and Park avenues. First-class Livery. Horses boarded by week or month. Telephone call No. 114.

Wm. A. Woodruff

Fire and Life

INSURANCE AGENT,

OFFICE,

corner Front St. and Park Avenue, Plainfield, N. J.

RAMAZOTTI TO SUE FOR $5,000 DAMAGES

Plainfield Store Keeper, Acquitted on Charge of Keeping a Speakeasy, Wants Redress.

ACTION AGAINST CITY

AGGRIEVED MAN RETAINS COUNSEL TO TO BRING PROCEEDINGS.

Humiliated by Being Handcuffed and Taken to Elizabeth—His Lawyer, William G. DeMeza, Talks on the Case.

David J. Ramazotti, the Park avenue fruit dealer, through his counsel, William G. DeMeza, is about to bring suit against the city for $5,000 damages for false imprisonment in connection with his recent arrest on a charge of illegal liquor selling.

It will be remembered that Mr. Ramazotti, together with a number of others, was arrested for the alleged keeping of "speak-easies." In most cases the persons arrested were not confined in the county jail. It is claimed that bail was refused in the case of Mr. Ramazotti, although his counsel offered the bond of well-known freeholder, who was well qualified in the matter. The accused was taken to Elizabeth handcuffed to another prisoner and detained over night. The next day, when he entered a plea of not guilty the court was obliged to accept bail and Mr. Ramazotti was subsequently released.

He takes the position that inasmuch as he was acquitted of the charge preferred and that the city refused him bail, he is entitled to damages for false imprisonment and unless he is reimbursed he will bring action against the city.

Mr. DeMeza in speaking of the latter says that the city had no moral or legal right to refuse his client bail, especially as he is a citizen and a business man in this city. He claims that the city authorities have acted very unjust and that in view of this they should be compelled to make a satisfactory settlement. He also claims that his client was disgraced in being handcuffed to a prisoner accused of another crime and led to the county jail, there to be incarcerated for a length of time.

HOSPITAL VISITORS APPOINTED

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY OF THE INSTITUTION TO RAISE FUNDS.

Visitors to Muhlenberg Hospital were appointed for the coming three months at the meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary, held Friday. This was the last meeting until the last Friday in September, hence the necessity of making the appointments now. These appointments were made: July, Mrs. Hyatt, purchaser; Mrs. Edward Love and Mrs. T. W. T. Maxwell, visitors; August, Mrs. Hyatt, purchaser; Mrs. R. A. Meeker and Mrs. Charles M. Slocum, visitors; September, Mrs. W. T. Pelletier, purchaser; Mrs. R. M. Siever and Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, visitors.

For the purpose of increasing the fund for the Nurses' Home from $1,800 to $3,000 a resolution was adopted requesting each member to secure $3 during the summer for the fund.

JUNIORS ELECT.

Officers to Serve Benevolent Council, No. 256, Jr. O. U. A. M.

At the regular meeting of Benevolent Council, No. 256, Jr. O. U. A. M., held Friday evening the following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing six months:

Councilor, Edward C. Searing; vice councilor, Harry C. Runyon; recording secretary, Horace G. Adams; assistant secretary, John V. Beakman; financial secretary, Theodore A. Kornbals, Jr.; treasurer, Jacob M. Higgins; conductor, Donald Bechtel; warden, John VanHorn; inside sentinel, Clarence Pope; outside sentinel, Gilbert E. Martin; trustee for eighteen months, Alfred T. Speed.

One candidate was initiated into the mysteries of the order and several propositions were received.

Asbury's Baby Parade.

Peace has been restored between the Unrivaled Association and the Beach Commissioners, and the Asbury Park's baby parade is assured for August. This announcement was made yesterday, after the Beach Commissioners had agreed to accept 33 1-3 per cent of the gross receipts for the use of the Asbury avenue casino for the masquerade fete and coronation ball on August 30 and 30, the use of the band, the arcade and an office on the boardwalk.

Bicycles and bicycle sundries in full variety at Harry K. Lister's store on North avenue. Phonographs and phonograph records.

HONOR ROLL.

Pupils in Piscataway Township Schools Worthy of Special Mention.

The following are the names of the meritorious pupils of the Piscataway township public schools who have neither been absent nor tardy during the month of June:

New Market: High School—Frank W. Smalley, Lillian F. Harris, Edward Horn, Maud Repell, Sadie Brouwer. Grammar Grades—Hilda Johnson, John Sebenck, Pauline Ward, Frank Cornell, Paul Whitford. Intermediate Department—Emilie Nelson, Rose vonMinden, Hannah Nelson, Annie Wingo, Minnie Boys, Kathryn Kerwin, Edna Dutcher. Primary Department—Grace Cornell, Jessie Dutcher, Agnes Kerwin, Martha Noble, Katie Ward, James Boys, Bryon Burdick, Fred Cornell, Raffy Chicarelli, George Nelson, John Kropp, John Man, Maxwell Richards, Matthew Ward, Harold Voorbees.

Pierce School—Grace Parker, Elsie McCullough, Katie Eganey, John Baxter, Bennie Giles, Russell Perrine, John Sebring, Harry Goble, Grace Smith, Della Smith, Elsie Kess, May Taylor, Mary Norman, Frankie Brugger, Willie Vogel, Walter Baxter, Harry Jones, Hazel Taylor, Martha Franks, Laura Smith, Nettie Mathews, Hazel Humble.

South Plainfield: Grammar Grades—Margaret Gallagher, Maude Harris, Marguerite McDonough, Lillian Norman, Myrtle Randleph, George Gage, Andrew McDonough, John McDonough, Patrick McDonough. Intermediate Department—Nora McDonough, Marjorie Cubberley, Robert Morgan, Thomas Duffy, Elmer Riddle, Elwood Johnson, Joseph Harlow. John Miller, Joseph Horn, Margaret Maguire. Primary Department—Frank Phillips, Norman Major, Clifford Brown, Jacob Stiers, Edward Hanson, George Teeple, Peter McDonough, Robert Hamilton, Annie Bohl, Gladys Thorne, Julia Richards, Nellie Riddle, Mary McDonough, May Harlow, Annie Reilley, Maud Morgan, Matilda Morgan, Nellie Harlow, Lizzie Maguire, Marion Bigley.

Maple Grove School—Emily Brentnall, Alice Brentnall, Helen McCallum, Ruth Morris, Annie Winkelhels, Rhoda Gray, Edith Gray, Matilda Winkelhols.

Randolphville School—Edith Giles, Marjorie Dunn, Grace Gerickmut.

Union School—Merle Randolph, Anna Schenck.

Mrs. Pettit to Preside.

Mrs. Alonzo Pettit, of Elizabeth, who is well-known here from her connection with Sunday-school Union work in this county, will be one of the presiding officers at the summer school at Northfield, Mass., for womens' foreign missionary societies. She will begin her work there on July 13. On the opening day of the conference she will have charge of the primary class instruction.

Fourth of July Tennis.

Tennis enthusiasts will not lack for excitement on the the Fourth of July. Arrangements have been completed by the Cedar Brook Tennis Club for a tournament for doubs. Entries are to be sent to C. B. Kious, Jr., 40 Sandford avenue. Prizes will be offered, but the exact nature of them has not been determined.

...ng in Speer's Vineyards,
AT PASSAIC, N. J.
...attesting the Oporto Grape for Pure and Stronghandy Wines.
...ing Wine.

...pper's Port & Burgundy Wine.

The Finest Wine in the world from the 56 Acres of Vineyards, where the soil is rich in iron, imparting to the Oporto grape and the grape to the Wine—causes the dark, deep rich color, and blood-making property of this life-giving Wine. The Iron in it. This is the Wine that beats the world in its valuable medicinal qualities, for family use and evening parties; it is especially beneficial for females, invalids and aged persons.

The Port Wine is nine years old and the Burgundy, a rich dry wine eight years old.

The Claret equals the finest French product.

Druggists and Grocers Sell it.

THE WONDERS OF THERMIT.

Melts Both Iron and Steel in Short Order—Burns at Temperature of 5,400 Degrees.

Humanity, which sweltters in a heat of 90 degrees, and sighs and dies if the mercury runs up 10 or 15 degrees higher, finds it hard to realize a heat of 5,400 degrees. Yet, says the Brooklyn Eagle, that is the heat developed in the combustion of thermit, a heat which welds together pieces of the most ponderous machinery, which makes it possible to mend iron castings weighing tons, which heretofore had to be replaced at great expense of labor and time; which can unite iron rails so perfectly that the jolting can scarcely be seen or felt, and a rail can be made miles long, instead of 50 or a hundred feet at its outside.

This thermit is a compound discovered by Dr. Hans Goldschmidt, of Essen, Germany, who has been lecturing in this country before chemical and engineering associations on this chemical discovery of his that is so full of engineering possibilities; a discovery that, unlike so many scientific discoveries, is not merely interesting to the scientist, but commercially valuable in the industrial world. The thermit is a mixture of finely granulated or powdered aluminum with some metallic oxide, most frequently iron oxide. This mixture looks not unlike gunpowder, or to a housewife would suggest mixed tea, the light granules being aluminum and the dark ones oxide of iron. In burning this mixture creates a temperature, as Dr. Goldschmidt expressed it in a lecture read at the annual meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, "about equal to that of the electric arc light."

THE VORACIOUS DOGFISH.

Will Annihilate Maine Fisheries If Government Doesn't Help Kill It.

Fish Warden N. J. Hanna, of Rockland, has the following to say, according to the Portland Press, relative to a government bounty on dogfish:

"There is no doubt but that for five years these scavengers of the sea have wrought more damage to our fishing industry than in a quarter of a century. They swarm every bay and even penetrate our rivers. They came into Cape Cod by the million five years ago and now Maine's fishing industry is at their mercy. Years ago they came only about a month or six weeks each year from August to September and at the first northerly wind they disappeared, but now they are with us about all the year.

"What are known as the whip lash dogfish are our scourge—a small, voracious fish that feeds on every other fish that is not its master. A species of the shark, the large one, will attack a man. I remember 22 years ago a boy fell overboard off Monhegan and before he was rescued he was literally torn to pieces, the water surrounding being covered with blood.

"They are not a menace to the lobster, as claimed. A dogfish has to turn upon its back to bite, and the lobster being a bottom crawler the shell fish has ample protection in his location. They should by all means be a government bounty of five cents apiece or over for these dogfish. If something is not done there will be in time annihilation of one of Maine's greatest industries—her fisheries."

PATIENT'S LUCKY ESCAPE.

Victim of Blood-Poisoning Saved His Limb by Dodging the Surgeons —Strange But True.

"We certainly have some strange cases to deal with," said the hospital attendant, "and an odd one came to us recently. An awfully bright but eccentric chap was brought here for the treatment. He had contracted blood poisoning from some colored woolen yarn he had used. It was decided that amputation above the knee was the only thing that would save his life. Of course, we told him about it, and made all preparations for it. But the strange part was that when we got ready for the operation the patient was nowhere in sight. He had quietly moved out without saying anything to anyone. We were frightened, because we were afraid it meant the sacrifice of his limb. But two days later he appeared again, saying that he had made up his mind that if that was his last chance for a two-legged bat, he was going to have a good one. And I guess he had had it, judging by his looks. But the most remarkable thing about it was that he was much better and that the doctors found that it was not necessary to operate. Yes, it is a strange case—but it is the truth."

Commercial Camphor.

Practically all the camphor of commerce comes from Japan and Formosa, which is a Japanese colony. As Japan needs it for making smokeless gunpowder, the government has forbidden its export, so that Russia may not get any, and also in order that the Japanese powder mills may not run short. Japan's control of the camphor trade gives the mikado a sort of control over war among other nations.

The Family Hat in Corea.

A Philadelphia man who has been in Corea, over which the Russians and Japs are at war, long enough to grow familiar with its customs, says one of the most unique and picturesque of their is the family hat, that descends from father to elder son. This hat, made from the hair of the family ancestors, is a priceless possession, and so carefully handled that it never wears out.—Philadelphia Record.

STRIPED BASS IS A FIGHTER

When Biting It Is a Fish That Will Give the Angler a Good Day's Sport.

"Would you go a-fishing?" observed an enthusiastic lover of salt water angling, according to the New York Sun. "Then do not dream of your speckled trout, nor of black bass waters, nor the far-away salmon, but seek the haunts of that shyest, gamest, handsomest of all fishes of the Atlantic coast, the striped bass.

"The striped bass is a fish of sporting blood. He has teeth on his tongue, a square jaw, a fierce eye and power in his shoulders. Born and reared in the turmoil of swift waters, he is aggressive always and fears no foe. Even in the depths when the water is in repose, he draws near shore when it is astir and where his easier prey then lies. At times he seeks the ditches in the salt water meadows, eager for the crustacea that may be found afloat as the tide rises.

"He follows up the streams that flow into the sea, and finds his food where the water of other streams mingles with that in which he is swimming. He may at times be found on the bottoms of rocky channels, where the water runs swiftly. If you love a contest with nature as well as with fish, go into the surf or brace your feet on a low, rocky headland, where the spray will drench you, and cast your baited hook into the midst of the white water when the tide is at flood.

"But perhaps you would rather handle the oars and troll. Then take your boat where the tide rushes to and fro in some rocky inlet and you will find your prey there, alert, and ever ready for the contest. Or, preferring a tramp, along the shore and a cast from the land, go to the ditches on the sunken meadows connected with the sea, and drop your hook into the water over the bordering grass that overhangs the bank.

"He will take the fly, this most versatile of fishes, and if you would put him to the test with this, equip yourself with split bamboo rod and gaudy flies; go up the Hudson river, at any likely spot, and they are plentiful almost anywhere above Spuyten Duyvil; get into a boat and anchor it where some stream comes into the river. With a red and white fish for your stretcher fly and a white miller for your dropper, let your lines fall gently, as for brook trout, and sink them a foot below the surface, as for black bass, drawing them smartly and cast.

"You will strike plenty when the tide comes. None will be large fish. None will weigh three pounds, and a three-pound striped bass on the eighteen ounce rod will put you to your best skill in outgeneraling him in his fierce rushes and sudden plunges and the many eccentricities of his resourceful tactics. When you can save your fish in the net and maintain the tip of your rod intact, you may have no fear of a trial of conclusions with any ing again.

other fish that swims.

"For trolling for striped bass no stronger rig is needed than one that will serve in black bass trolling. Artificial silvery lures are used, one that anglers have found particularly killing being an imitation minnow three or four inches long. For fishing in the surf and from rocky headlands heavier and stronger tackle is necessary."

DANGERS OF CROWD POISON

Impure Air Inhaled in Working Places and Some of Its Ill Effects.

"Crowd poison" confronts us at all turns in this city. In our own homes, in places of employment, in public buildings and in conveyances we are constantly inspiring impure air and being poisoned by it, the only part of the day, perhaps, when we breathe pure air being the few minutes which are spent in walking to work or in waiting for the trolley which will carry us thither, says Health Culture.

So insidiously does "crowd poison," which is the poison of impure air produced by a vast population in a small area, enter the system that it is hard to persuade people of its existence. The occupants of a work-room, entering it in the morning and remaining all day, or of a sleeping-room, do not notice the gradual withdrawal of the oxygen from the air and its substitution by "crowd poison" thrown off by their own lungs. The sleepiness, lassitude and headache that follow if they ascribe to the fatigue of long-continued labor.

The inability to rise brisk and fresh in the morning, after a night spent in a close room, the lack of appetite for the morning meal, the pallor and muddy complexion that ensue after awhile, they do not recognise as the results of days and nights spent in impure air. They seek relief from their ailments in taking medicines, rather than in the simpler method of cure by exercise in the open air.

Born Diplomat.

"But," protested the fair maid after the engagement had been duly ratified, "this is the same ring you gave Edyth Rivers a year ago when you were engaged to her."

"I know it is, darling," replied the wise youth, "but I had it cut down three sizes in order to make it fit your shapely finger."

And his explanation pleased her so much she immediately fell on his collar and giggled for joy.—Chicago Daily News.

Not Qualified for the Position.

Miss Goode—We are in an awful muddle! Our first bass has left us.

Yalevard—I wish I could help you out, but you see I've never played anywhere but behind the bat.—Brooklyn Life.

SWACKHAMER ON THE ROBIN

SOMERSET'S ASSEMBLYMAN TO TELL WHY BIRD SHOULD NOT BE KILLED.

The irrepressible robin so ably defended in the New Jersey Legislature last winter, is again to be the subject of debate under the auspices of the Somerset County Agriculture Society. Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer, of the borough, whose strong voice was heard in support of the bird, will be called on once more to defend it.

William K. Skillman, of Bells Mead, president of the State Horticultural Society, and State Entomologist John B. Smith, of New Brunswick, will argue in favor of extermination. A. P. Sutphen, secretary of the Somerset County Board of Agriculture, is arranging the debate which will be held at Somerville within a short time.

ST. AGNES' GUILD PICNIC

PLEASANT OUTING CLOSES SUCCESSFUL SEASON OF CHURCH SOCIETY.

The members of St. Agnes Guild of Grace Episcopal church, held their last meeting for the summer on Wednesday, the affair taking the form of a picnic. The merry party boarded a trolley car on Watchung avenue, going to the foot of the mountains, where a delightful spot was found on Johnston's Drive. Here a fine lunch was enjoyed, after which the afternoon was spent in playing games. Before starting for home the baby camp was visited.

The party consisted of twenty-six members and four teachers. The return trip was made about 5 o'clock. In the fall the guild hopes to renew the classes for girls. The past year has been a successful one and the directoress wishes to thank the members and her able assistants for their hearty support and co-operation in carrying on the work of the society.

STRICT RULES FOR R. F. D.

CARRIERS CANNOT SOLICIT, OR RECEIVE COMPENSATION.

As the rural free delivery is now a part of the local mail system, a new order which goes in effect July 1, and which affects this part of the mail system, will be of interest. The law leaves much to the discretion of the Postmaster-General. According to the new ruling the rural carriers are not to receive compensation from the public for any person, firm or corporation. All matiable matter must be prepaid, except county newspapers to actual subscribers. Carriers are not permitted to receive compensation from the seller of merchandise carried, and the carrier must not leave the route officially laid out in delivering such merchandise.

Carriers while on duty are not to carry, either for themselves, for sale or for the accommodation of their patrons, spirituous liquors. They are not to engage in any business during their prescribed hours of service or after hours which offer the temptation to solicit patronage on their routes, or giving them special advantage over competitors, such as book canvassing, insurance, selling sewing machines, nor compile or assist in compiling directories, nor furnish names for pay or favor to business men or establishments.

CLAIMS DAMAGES FROM P.S.C.

CONSTABLE PANGBORN'S HAND INJURED ON THE TROLLEY.

Charging that the company is responsible, William Pangborn has demanded damages from the P. S. C. for a severe injury to his hand on one of the cars of the Dunellen terminal two weeks ago. Franc's J. Blats, Esq., has been retained to press the claim, and will bring suit if damages are not forthcoming.

Mr. Pangborn's hand was resting on a seat, when, without warning, it is claimed, the conductor suddenly swung the seat back over. The heavy contrivance landed full on the back of his hand, cracking several of the small bones. His hand was rendered useless, and danger of permanent stiffness of the members has developed.

Martine's Prophecy.

Former Orator James E. Martine, of Plainfield, has submitted to a newspaper interview, in which he declares that should either Mr. Cleveland or Mr. Parker be nominated at St. Louis, Colonel William Jennings Bryan will not bolt, but will give his support to the party candidate, and Mr. Martine says he will follow suit. Princeton and Rooper papers please copy.—Newark Evening News.

C. E. Meeker Hurt.

C. M. Meeker, the contractor, is walking about with the aid of crutches, the result of falling off a step-ladder and severely spraining his ankle.

SEA GIRT CAMP NOT A PICNIC

ORDERS ISSUED BY GENERAL GILLMORE LIKELY TO HAVE BENEFICIAL RESULTS.

The week's encampment of the National Guard at Sea Girt is not to be a picnic this year. This is indicated by a preliminary order just issued by General Gillmore, through Assistant Adjutant General Gilkyson, which has been recieved by Captain Martin, of Co. K. The order deals with the regulating of guard duty during the encampment.

General Gillmore orders that the guard each day shall consist of one first lieutenant, who will be commandant of the guard; two second lieutenants, two sergeants, four corporals, two musicians and sixty privates.

The guard to serve Saturday, July 9, and Saturday, July 16, will be detailed previous to the departure of the organization from their home stations. This guard will be employed on the trains to preserve order and prevent the soldiers from riding on the car platforms.

On the arrival at the rendezvous at Sea Girt the guard will proceed to their first lieutenant, who will be commandant of the guard; two second lieutenants, two sergeants, four corporals, two musicians and sixty privates from the column.

This last arrangement will do away with the long delays that have heretofore occurred in mounting the guard after the troops reach camp.

First Lieutenant Richard F. Cross, of Elizabeth, who has made a special study of guard mounting, has been detailed as instructor of guard duty for the entire encampment. Each colonel is to detail an officer satisfactory to Lieutenant Cross and his junior in rank as his assistants.

The order providing for the guard to preserve order on the trains is made to prevent a recurrence of the incident of several years ago, when some of the soldiers discharged their guns while the train was passing through Rahway, causing a runaway in which a man was seriously injured.

The summer home of the militia at Sea Girt is making preparations for a long season.

The State camp is an attractive place, and the appreciation which it meets is evidence by the Governments officers and men from Governor's Island, who have already pitched their tents on the parade ground and are already at daily rifle practice.

The clubhouse is now open for the officers.

REALTY CONVEYANCES.

Transfers of Plainfield Real Estate as Recorded in the County Clerk's Office at Elizabeth.

Recent transfers of Plainfield real estate as recorded in the County Clerk's office at Elizabeth:

Eugene M. Laing to Frank A. Pope, northeasterly corner Second and Center streets, $3,400; Luther V. Stryker to Harriet Hubber, lot 3, block 3, "Map of William Hand," $600; Charles L. Moffett et ux. to Nellie S. Francis, lots 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, block B, "Map of South End Park," $1; William J. Sandford et ux. to Clifford D. Brady, northwesterly side West Third street, southwesterly of M. C. Smith, $1,300; same to same, northeasterly side of West Third street, corner M. C. Smith, $1,300; same to same, southwesterly side Spooner avenue, corner Lizzie S. Sandford, $1,150; John A. Lafferts et al. to Jeremiah Griffen, westerly side Johnston avenue, 240 feet of East Second street, $77; Frank Putnam et ux. to Frasee C. Putnam, East Second street, corner John Simpson, $1; Frasee C. Putnam to Ida C. Putnam, same as above, $1; Minnie Stryker et al. to Eugene M. Laing, West Seventh street, southwesterly of Isaac F. Randolph, $1; John H. Snyder et ux. to Jacob Schneider, easterly side Rushmore avenue, corner lot 8, $1; Frederick H. Walker et ux. to James Canfield, westerly side Johnston avenue, 40 feet of Midway avenue, $125; James Canfield et ux. to Frank Haulenbeck, same as above, $1.

STATE DENTAL SOCIETY MEETING.

Annual Gathering to Take Place in July at Asbury Park.

The New Jersey State Dental Society will hold its thirty-fourth annual session this year in the Beach Auditorium, Asbury Park, on July 20, 21 and 22, and the sessions will be attended by several Plainfielders. The headquarters will be at the Hotel Columbia.

The gathering will be of more than usual interest and will amount practically to a post-graduate course in dentistry. There will be an exhibit of all new appliances, and valuable papers will be read by learned members of the profession. At the opening session, Wednesday morning, President H. S. Sutphen, D. D. S., of Newark, will deliver the annual address. The general public will be excluded except on Thursday evening, when the society will give them an entertainment.

A MISSING TRUNK CLOUDS HONEYMOON

William Pike and His Bride Sail Away, Leaving Her Gowns in New York.

LEFT ON THE PIER

RECOVER TROUSSEAU AND PLAN ANOTHER TRIP.

Mrs. Pike Was Formerly Miss Drusilla Smith — Marriage a Surprise to Their Many Friends.

Miss Drusilla Smith, formerly of this city, and William Pike, of East Front street, were quietly married a fortnight ago and have since been on their honeymoon. The New York Evening Sun last night contained this story relating to their trip:

The wedding and honeymoon of Mrs. Drusilla Smith-Pike, of 68 West Sixty-ninth street, and her husband, William Pike, a young banker of this city, who returned yesterday from their wedding trip to New Orleans, had been a chapter of surprises, both to the young married pair and to their friends. Mrs. Pike is the daughter of William B. Smith, an inventor and manufacturer, and the young pair have gone to live with Mrs. Pike's parents, at 68 West Sixty-ninth street. In spite of the little comedy of errors which followed in the train of the wedding ceremony at the Little Church Around the Corner, two weeks ago, the newly wedded young folks are now planning an extended trip to Saratoga, where Mrs. Smith-Pike expects to wear the gowns which she did not have in New Orleans.

The wedding date of the Smith-Pike nuptials had been set and a large reception prepared for the many wedding guests invited to witness the church ceremony. Then Mrs. Smith, mother of the bride, fell suddenly ill and all preparations were off. A note was sent out on the trail of each wedding invitation, saying that the happy event had been postponed, and all hands would be duly notified when a new date for the ceremony had been determined upon.

While the friends of the young pair were expectantly awaiting the second notice on their invitations, the prospective bride and bridegroom hastily decided on a new move.

"What's the use of waiting?" said young Mr. Pike.

"It isn't absolutely necessary, dear," answered Miss Smith. And forthwith the knot was tied by the Rev. Dr. Houghton, pastor of the Church of the Transfiguration, on the very day printed on the wedding invitations. Miss Mary Smith became an ally of the anxious ones and witnessed the hastily planned festivities.

Directly after the ceremony the bridegroom despatched four dress suit cases and a large trunk to the Morgan line pier, and the young pair boarded the Proteus for New Orleans. The trunk contained an elaborate trousseau for the bride. The Proteus was several hours out of port when Miss Drusilla Smith-Pike made up her mind to change her gown.

"Where's our trunk?" the bride asked her husband.

"I have the key, but I haven't the trunk about me. I'll look for it," he volunteered.

Mr. Pike went down among the baggage, but no Pike trunk could be found aboard. That is why Mrs. Drusilla Smith-Pike was in New Orleans for nearly two weeks with one gown, and it is also the reason a trip to Saratoga has been planned.

Mrs. Pike's trunk has been at the Fall River line pier for the past two weeks.

WILL TOUR EUROPE IN AUTO.

Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, of Elizabeth, to Go Abroad July 5.

That noted club-woman, Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, of Elizabeth, who is president of the State Charities Aid Association, general secretary of the State Board of Children's Guardians, and Union County's probation officer, has planned an extensive trip abroad and will sail for Europe on the Cunard line from Boston July 5 with a party of friends living in that city. Mrs. Williamson will make a tour of the continent in an automobile and anticipate much enjoyment in this mode of traveling. She will leave her home in Elizabeth for Boston July 3 and will not return until the latter part of September.

While she is away the probationary work in Union County will be attended to by her assistant, Captain Charles W. Irwin, of Elizabeth.

Gas Mains Extended.

The gas company has extended its mains along West Fifth street beyond Liberty street. A number of the houses along there have been connected with the system.

MISS VANDEVENTER NOW MRS. G. H. WHITTINGHAM

A Baltimore Man Claims a Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. VanDeventer for His Bride.

EPISCOPAL CEREMONY

GROOM'S FATHER, REV. RICHARD WHITTINGHAM, TIES THE KNOT.

At the Church of the Holy Cross—Bride's Sister, Miss Mabel VanDeventer, as Maid-of-Honor—Groom's Brother Best Man.

Miss Eleanor Thurston VanDeventer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus VanDeventer, of Myrtle avenue, North Plainfield, and George Herbert Whittingham, of Baltimore, were wedded in the Church of the Holy Cross, Wednesday, June 23, at 5 o'clock. The edifice was thronged with relatives and friends of the people. The decorations were simple, yet effective, consisting chiefly of palms, ferns, smilax and potted plants. These were arranged with beautiful effect about the chancel.

Attending the bride was her sister, Miss Mabel VanDeventer, as maid of honor, and Miss Hallah VanDeventer, a sister; Miss Frances VanDeventer, a cousin; Miss Marguerite Burnet and Miss Grace Overton, were bridesmaids. The best man was Richard Whittingham, of Baltimore, brother of the groom, and the ushers were Thomas U. Dudley, Theodore Morris, of North Plainfield; Ernest Marshall, of New York, and Robert Barton, of Baltimore.

As the bridal party entered the church, the Lohengrin wedding march was rendered on the organ by William Whittingham, of Baltimore, a brother of the groom. First appeared the ushers, followed by the bridesmaids and maid of honor, who were gowned in white organdie and wearing white hats trimmed with pink. They carried pink sweet peas. The bride, gowned in white plaited mull, trimmed with old rose point lace and carrying an ivory-covered prayer book, was accompanied up the aisle by her father, who gave her away in marriage.

At the chancel the party met the groom and his best man, Richard Whittingham, of Baltimore. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. W. O. Snodgrass before a bank of daisies, ferns and crimson rambler roses. The rooms were also decorated with a profusion of palms and foliage plants

The bride was given in marriage by her father and was accompanied by her younger sister, Miss Helen Apgar, as maid of honor. The best man was George L. Apgar, a brother of the bride. Gowned in champagne silk poplin, trimmed with chiffon, and carrying a shower bouquet of white sweet peas and fern, the bride presented a charming appearance. The maid of honor wore pale voile and carried pink sweet peas.

The guests numbered about fifty, mostly relatives and intimate friends. A collation was served to the company after the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Neal left late in the evening for a tour which will last about a month. They will probably visit Niagara Falls while away, and after the first of August will be at home at 9 West 133 street, New York city. The groom is employed as foreman of a raising-shell shop on the Harlem River.

THEO. PRUDEN WEDS.

He Marries Mrs. Louisa B. Wooden, of East Front Street, Rev. Mr. Bond, Officiating.

Theodore Pruden, of East Second street, and Mrs. Louisa B. Wooden, of 251 East Front street, were married very quietly at the latter's home June 21. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Bond, a Michigan missionary. Mrs. Wooden was the widow of William Wooden. The groom was a widower.

Only the necessary witnesses were present at the ceremony. The couple has gone on a short trip. They will make their residence at the groom's home.

Mrs. S. C. Ryder Dead.

Mrs. Ryder, wife of Stephen C. Ryder, a former resident of this city, died Wednesday, June 22, in the Cumberland Street Hospital, Brooklyn, as the result of being overcome with illuminating gas at her home about a month ago. A gas jet was left turned on accidentally and on the 19th Mrs Ryder was almost suffocated to death. Careful treatment, however, prolonged her life until yesterday.

Wife Beater Released.

Judge Vail, withdrew the six-months' sentence he had imposed on Robert Moore, of Scotch Plains, for wife-beating and let him off under a suspension of sentence, with a warning that a second appearance in court would land him in States prison. This action was taken after the man's wife had interceded with the court.

MISS MANTZ ANNOUNCES HERSELF MRS. STINER

A Boroughite, Who Teaches School at Warrenville, Married Quietly on June 5.

KEPT WEDDING SECRET

HER HUSBAND IS A PROSPEROUS YOUNG FARMER.

Ceremony at Mt. Bethel M. E. Church—A Daughter of Martin Mantz, of Pearl Street, North Plainfield.

Very much to the surprise of her friends, Miss Sadie Mantz, daughter of Martin Mantz, of Pearl street, announced a day or two ago that she had become Mrs. Augustus Stiner. The wedding took place on Sunday, June 5.

Mrs. Stiner has been teaching school in Warrenville. Three months ago Mr. Stiner, who is a prosperous young farmer near Warrenville, met Miss Mantz, and they became very much interested in one another.

On June 5 they went to the parsonage of the Methodist church at Mt. Bethel, and with only the necessary witnesses present, were married. Neither one said anything of the marriage, and Mrs. Stiner returned to her duties at the little school just as though no most momentous event had not taken place in her life.

Last Sunday, however, Mrs. Stiner quietly allowed the secret to escape, by announcing her marriage to her father. Her school will close this week, and then she will go to take her place on her husband's farm. The little school house will know her no more.

MISS ESTELLA APGAR MARRIED

BOROUGH GIRL BECOMES THE WIFE OF ELBRIDGE H. NEAL, OF NEW YORK.

Miss Estella Apgar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Apgar, of East Front street, was married at 7:30 p. m. June 22, to Elbridge H. Neal, of New York, at the home of the bride's parents.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. W. O. Snodgrass before a bank of daisies, ferns and crimson rambler roses. The rooms were also decorated with a profusion of palms and foliage plants

The bride was given in marriage by her father and was accompanied by her younger sister, Miss Helen Apgar, as maid of honor. The best man was George L. Apgar, a brother of the bride. Gowned in champagne silk poplin, trimmed with chiffon, and carrying a shower bouquet of white sweet peas and fern, the bride presented a charming appearance. The maid of honor wore pale voile and carried pink sweet peas.

The guests numbered about fifty, mostly relatives and intimate friends. A collation was served to the company after the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Neal left late in the evening for a tour which will last about a month. They will probably visit Niagara Falls while away, and after the first of August will be at home at 9 West 133 street, New York city. The groom is employed as foreman of a raising-shell shop on the Harlem River.

MISS EMMA BURRILL A BRIDE

SHE IS NOW THE WIFE OF FRANK ANDREW STIGLITZ.

Given in marriage by her father, Amos Burrill, of Anthony, Hunterdon county, Miss Emma Burrill, of North Plainfield, became the wife of Frank Andrew Stiglitz, of this city, at 8 p. m. June 22. The marriage took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Overland, 815 West Fourth street, Rev. Lawrence R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel, officiating. The ceremony was rendered particularly attractive by the decorations consisting of daisies and roses

The maid of honor was Miss Pauline Wall, of this city, and the best man, Samuel Vail. The bride wore white china silk and carried white roses.

Over fifty guests were present to enjoy the good things provided for the marriage supper. Newark, New York, Dunellen and Somerville were represented among them. The groom served several years in Cuba and the Philippines as well as in Maine, New Mexico and others parts of the Union, in the regular army. He is at present a member of Company K, Second Regiment, N. G. N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Stiglitz will make their home at 110 East Fifth street, this city. Mr. Stiglitz is in the insurance business here.

Dr. VanAlstyne Weds.

Miss Lillian T. DuCharme and Dr. William H. VanAlstyne were quietly married June 23 at 312 East Seventh street Rev Charles L. Goodrich officiated. The bride's half sister, Miss M. E. Benedict, was maid of honor, and George A. Shiffert was best man. The bride was attired in an artistic gown of lace and chiffon; were the conventional veil and carried bride roses and lilies of the valley. Dr. and Mrs. VanAlstyne will make their home in Westfield.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

July 2: "Christian Patriotism."—Rom. xiii, 1-7; 1 Pet. ii, 12-17.—A Temperance Subject.

It is a serious mistake to consider government as a necessary evil and to restrict its powers to a kind of police protection of the weak against the strong. Government, to be sure, has the duty of defense, but it is in fundamental conception a good and not an evil. It is necessary to the best development of men.

If one might always live alone and apart from all other creatures, his own will and desires might be the only rule he would need or know. As soon as a second person appears, and the attempt is made to live together, society has been constituted and there must be defining of rights, duties, privileges and relations. Nor are these dependent upon the arbitrary will of the two persons associated. Some exist in the nature of things without regard to the desires or views of the individuals under consideration. Others are dictated by surroundings and circumstances equally independent of the opinions of any one. The best way to state it is to say God has made the world and men as they are. When persons come to live in community they cannot alter, but must recognize, the truths which are bred in nature and must make their laws the plain expression of the facts fundamental in the constitution of man and nature. Government is an ordinance of God because He has so made men that they invariably constitute society in an ordered way. The task is to find out the basal rights which inhere in man and proclaim them in institutions and not merely in words.

Land is needed on which to raise food crops. What are the rights and corresponding duties of each and all as regards the locality where home is located? Patriotism is defense of heritage and homestead and fatherland against oppression and aggression. But it is far more than this. It is an enthusiasm for proper development of all resources and natural advantages for the betterment of community interests. Patriotism is a generous passion for the advancement of spiritual good of one's fellows as well as for the overthrow of enemies.

It is more than drums and bugles. It is more potent than cannon and bayonets. It means far more than ships of war and military equipment. Love of country may cause the eye to fill with tears when we see the old flag of stars and stripes float on the breeze in a foreign land; it may lead one in the wild charge against bristling depths, smoke wreathed and bullet swept; it may demand all the passions and life itself. If need require, yet none of these is the highest tribute patriotism claims by right from us.

To be manly and womanly and live nobly with right reasons, using every power of being for God gladly and for the good of our brother man, whether near or afar—that is true patriotism. He who would wrong any other land or people, his own or another, but a traitor in disguise. Love of our own lives only in advancement of the good of all.

For mankind are one in spirit, and an instinct
Round the earth's electric circle, the swift flash of right or wrong.
Whereby humanity's consciousness, yet humanity's vast frame
Through its ocean sundered fibers feels in the gain or loss of one race all the rest have equal claim.

The Path God Has Prepared.

Well did Luther triumph that the Lord of Hosts was with him and that he had for his refuge the God of Jacob. He who doeth according to His will in the armies of heaven and among the children of men never makes His people a majority, though they may stand forsaken and alone among the people of the world. The hosts are at His command and encamp around His children, though, like the prophet's servant, our eyes may not discern them. While we are ever wakeful guardian, with such cohorts encircling us, we need have no anxiety, we need fear no evil. Whatever comes to pass can only be with the consent and approval of our Father. The path may be hidden from dim eyes, the mist may obscure our vision, but we can confidently put our feet down, knowing that they will occupy just the position our God has prepared for us to walk in.—Episcopal Recorder.

Standing Against Grace.

There are some things which the grace of God cannot do. It cannot save those who deliberately continue in sin. It is only effective in the lives of men and women who have formed the single purpose to walk in the way of righteousness. There are many who make a sort of halfway covenant, secretly pledging themselves to the service of Satan while openly taking the vows of a Christian disciple. They have an idea that there is a positive merit in being identified with the church. It costs little, they argue, in the way of personal effort or personal sacrifice to be a nominal church member, and the connection, moreover, may have some advantages. While they love the Christian name they practically engage in selfish and sinful pursuits, taking care to repent and reform when death threatens.—Independent.

Duty of Church Membership.

The duty of church membership is plain and the obligation of gratitude and love and life service; the joy of pardon and peace and hope of glory; the joy of salvation and loving devotion. To confess Christ before men in His church should be the very first desire of a new disciple. The church is His spiritual house, and Christians are its brethren and its work is Christ service.—Evangelist.

IN BRITISH BORNEO

Something About This Interesting Neighbor of the Philippines.

An Odd Little Colony of England in the Far East—A Durbar the Scene of Pleasures for the Dusky Natives.

Since the day Dewey's guns pronounced the doom of Spain in the orient and gave to the United States a vast territory in the far east we have developed a new interest in not only the people and conditions over which fly the Stars and Stripes, but in all the neighbors of those islands as well. Far off Java, Indo-China, Sumatra, New Guinea and the Borneos are now our near neighbors, and worthy of our attention.

British North Borneo is now but next door to us, so close, in fact, that we have had a little diplomatic quarrel with England over who owns the islands that lie just off its coast, and this caused us to look up our long-forgotten school geographies and assume a new interest in Borneo, of which many of us had forgotten, save, perhaps, as the home of a certain wild man. Let us see, then, what this odd little colony of England is.

NATIVES FROM THE INTERIOR.

The territory now known as British North Borneo, and formerly called Sabah, is situated at the northern end of the island of Borneo, and has a coast-line of about 500 miles. The population is estimated at 120,000, which includes about 10,000 Chinese.

Sandakan, on the east side of British North Borneo, has a magnificent harbor and is the chief center of trade in this part of the island. The imports include rice, hardware goods of all kinds, opium, cotton goods, tobacco, provisions, crockery, matches, biscuits, oil, sugar, etc.; while the chief exports are tobacco, timber, cutch and rattans, gutta-percha, indiarubber, birds' nests, seed pearls, tre-pang or bêche-de-mer, camphor, tortoise-shell, dried cuttlefish, hides, and other natural products, which are brought into Sandakan from the interior and also from neighboring islands.

Latterly, coffee planting has been taken up, and cotton, gambier, hemp and sugar are receiving attention from European settlers.

On the west coast, a short line of railway has been constructed, running inland from Brunai bay to open up the interior of the country.

A great event to the natives is a Durbar—which usually occurs only on the arrival of some high official. Then there flock into the little town of Sandakan chiefs in gold-embroidered garments, and others who have but little in the way of garments to boast of. One of our illustrations shows a group of Sundyaks, natives who had never before been to the coast, and knew nothing of the sea and of ships. They were very much astonished at what they saw, and were inclined to think that they were being deceived in some way.

STARTING A RACE.

A Durbar is always made the occasion of festivities of all kinds, and as Englishmen carry their sporting instincts with them everywhere, a series of races was instituted by the English residents. One race for boys was very picturesque. The boys were clad in various fashions—or perhaps we ought to say that the variety consisted chiefly in the various methods adopted of wearing very little.

The type of native is Malay, and the name given to them is Dyak. It will be remembered that at Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee a number of Dyak troops were present in England and excited considerable comment on the part of the jubilee visitors from all countries.

Not at All Egotistical.

Jillson—Sometimes I almost believe you think yourself the only person in the world.

Bender—That's where you do me an injustice. Of course, I'm the only person worth talking about; but then to say that there are no other persons would be absurd.—Boston Transcript.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning July 2.

Topic.—Ways of consecrating ourselves to our country.—Rom. xiii, 1-7; 1 Pet. ii, 13-17.

Christianity was predetermined of God to be a universal religion. It does not therefore advocate any particular form of human government for the obvious reason that one form of government would not meet the wants and needs of all people. We believe that for Americans self government is the only thing, and yet our government has decided that for the 10,000,000 inhabitants of the Philippine Islands self government is not the thing. But, while advocating no particular form of government, Christianity teaches that all governments are from God and that they should be respected and obeyed. Every Christian should therefore desire to consecrate himself in every way to his country for good. He is a most ungrateful citizen who partakes of all the advantages of citizenship and then declines to do anything for the benefit of his country.

How may we therefore as Christian citizens celebrate this anniversary of our country's birthday by consecrating ourselves to our country?

1. Let us consecrate ourselves to our country by respecting its government. God says to us that even human governments even though the occupants of official positions may be personally unworthy. In a government like ours many unworthy men are certain to be elected or appointed to official positions. The danger therefore is that we may lose respect for the office as well as for the officers. Indeed this is a prevalent condition in our land. The license with which public officials are attacked in the press and on the platform is teaching many to lose respect for our various forms of government and even to wonder whether government by the people can be successfully carried on. But such logic is false. Let us not be deceived. Let us even respect an unworthy man, if compelled to do so, for his office's sake rather than lose respect for the office for his sake. "Fear God; honor the king."

2. Let us consecrate ourselves to our country by participating in it by government. Ours is self government, and every citizen should take his part in it—in the selection of candidates, in their election, in supporting good measures and in opposing bad ones, and, if called upon to do so, holding office under the government. Failure to participate in governmental affairs rather than participation in them should be proscribed by the church of Christ. There are "bosses" and "rings" and "machines" in our political life today largely because the best citizens of the land fail to fulfill their duties as citizens and are indifferent to the affairs of government. And yet God commands us to "be subject unto the powers that be," to "render unto Caesar that which is Caesar's"—yet how can we do it when we neglect our political duty to our land—the duty of participating, as citizens, in the affairs of the government—municipal, state or national? We cannot, and therefore should consecrate ourselves to this work.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ezra vi, 8-10; Neh. ii, 1-5; Ps. xxxiii, 10-22; cxxxvii, 1-6; Prov. xiv, 34; Matt. xvii, 24-27; xxii, 15-21; Mark xii, 13-17; I Tim. ii, 7-13; Heb. xi, 8-16.

A Convention Button.

The Buffalo convention button is unique in that the Endeavor monogram, sheltering a healthy specimen of the bison tribe, indicates where the convention will be held. The button has come to play an important part in telling the story not only of international conventions, but of state gatherings as well.

In New Zealand.

The official programme of Dr. Clark's meetings in New Zealand is an elaborate affair, covering thirty-two pages. It provides for meetings in thirteen of the principal centers in the island, covering eighteen days. On some days Dr. Clark is scheduled for three and four addresses. New Zealand has about 200 Christian Endeavor societies.

Recent Gains.

In the increase campaign Maine, North Dakota, Oklahoma and Indian Territory have each recently passed the 10 per cent increase mark, and Illinois has rolled up a complete 100 new societies.

Endeavors That Count.

Camps of Mexican and Japanese workmen have been visited by the First Congregational Endeavorers, Pasadena, Cal., with religious services in their native tongues. In one, thirty Spanish Testaments were presented. Women camp-followers were also turned over to another Endeavor society. The Endeavorers would have entered a camp of Greeks, but could find no one who spoke the language.

The Christian Endeavor societies in the cathedral city of Mexico are flourishing, both Young People's and Junior, under the earnest patronage of Archdeacon Govett, who is most interested in the work among young people.

About 200 conversions in the Cook County hospital, Chicago, are reported in two months (to 1903) through the labors of the Endeavorers, who hold meetings in twenty-one wards every Sunday and Wednesday night. Not long ago they distributed about 3,500 bouquets, besides holding a number of concerts and visiting many.

LITERARY.

Among the authors announced as contributors of fiction to the next few numbers of The Red Book are Stewart Edward White, Maarten Maartens, W. A. Fraser, Eden Phillpotts, George Horton, Rex E. Beach, Hayden Carruth, William Hamilton Osborne, Harry Irving Greene and Adeline Knapp—a pretty good showing for any magazine.

Pearson's for July contains five special articles—Running The Campaign, by Day Allen Willey; Th. Nast—A Picture of the Times When History Was Warm in the Making; Reconstruction, by Mr. Albert Bigelow Paine; Modern Methods of "Finance," Example V.—The United States Steel Corporation, by Mr. Henry George, Jr.; The Battle of the Washita (Indian Fights and Fighters,) by Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady; and the Mysterious whites."

The Burr McIntosh Monthly is today one of the foremost publications in America, covering a field exclusively by itself. It contains handsome reproduction of the photographs are, of which Mr. McIntosh is a recognized master. Beautiful portraits of the world's handsomest women, needless to say almost without exception the subjects being Americans; the famous men of the times, and scenes of great importance in the line of current events, are found within the ornate covers of this unique publication, which becomes of increased interest from month to month All the picures are worthy of a fame. Ask your newsdealer for it.

The first session of the Fifty-eighth Congress lasted 139 days; the shortest first session for many years. It talked 6,155 pages of the Congressional Record. Its word-output stands third. The Fifty-seventh Congress was proudly first, with 8,414 pages; the Fifty-sixth second, with 7,765. As the first session of the Fifty-eighth 294 public bills and 1,886 private ones were passed. In the number of bills introduced it "beats" all other "records." More than 16,000 bills were brought in. Nearly 3,000 reports were made. Congress earns its money. It talks enough; and this is a great and necessary part of its functions. Let off the steam!—With the Procession, Everybody's Magazine for July.

J. Adam Bede, the humorist of the House of Representatives, has written a genial comparison of Speaker Cannon and John Sharp Williams the Democratic leader, for the July number of Leslie's Monthly Magazine. It is not only the wisdom and keenness of what Mr. Bede says, but the delightful way in which he says it that makes this sketch valuable. There is also an interesting article on The Men Who Will Control the Next National Political Conventions, and a study of Senator Fairbanks, and one of Mona Monnesen, the hero of the Missouri. The last installment of the personal story of the immigrants is in this number, as well as a thrilling article on icebergs, and the true history of Radisson, the real discoverer of the great Northwest.

In consonance with the beauty of the season the July number of the Metropolitan Magazine appears in new and exquisitely beautiful habiliments—an entire new dress of type, a new make-up, new fireplace and tailpiece decorations and initials, a deeper and broader text-page, a more readable and attractive arrangement of the letter-press and a lager scheme of illustration throughout. Sixteen pages are printed in two colors, a number of the illustrations being color facsimiles of drawings and pastels by the late Robert Blum. The July number contains the first part of a new serial story, entitled "The Princess Passes," by O. N. and A. M. Williamson, the authors of that very successful novel, "The Lightning Conductor."

Scribner's Magazine for July contains an article on the negro problem by Thomas Nelson Page, which summarizes in very vigorous fashion the conclusions to which his investigations have brought him. The title of this article is "The Distranchisement of the Negro"—the result of the so-called "grandfather clauses" which so many of the Southern States have adopted. Mr. Page gives it as his deliberate belief that "the distranchisement of the main body of the negro race in the Southern States was a measure of high necessity." He further believes that "this distranchisement is the greatest blessing ever conferred by the white race upon the negro race." The author concludes this vital discussion by saying "the direct injury the negro's worst enemy can do him is to perpetuate hostility between him and the Southern Renegade and the Indians' Side of the Fight as Beecher's Island, by Mr. Herbert Myrick.

MISS RUTH A BERRY WEDS WM. R. FABER

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Berry the Bride at Nuptial Ceremony in Holy Cross.

THE RECTOR OFFICIATES

MISS MILDRED BERRY, BRIDE'S SISTER, AS MAID-OF-HONOR.

Handsome Gowns and Beautiful Decorations—Reception at Home Following Marriage Service—Groom a Son of A. E. Faber.

Miss Ruth Allen Berry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Berry, of Grove street, and William Rowley Faber, son of A. E. Faber, of Rockview avenue, were married in the Church of the Holy Cross at 7:30 Wednesday, June 22, in the presence of a large number of society folks from New York, Pittsburg, Boston, Cleveland, the Oranges and Plainfield which thronged the edifice.

It was a daisy wedding, the flower being used in profusion in the decorations at the church and the house, where a reception was held after the ceremony. The decorations at the church consisted of palms, smilax and daisies, they being banked in and around the chancel.

In the bridal party were Miss Mildred Berry, sister of the bride, who was the maid of honor, and Miss Alice Faber, of Cleveland, Ohio; Miss Isabelle Milne, Miss Marion McCutcheon and Miss Sophie Barlow, of this city, who were bridesmaids. The best man was Charles W. Faber, brother of the groom, and the ushers were Lewis Williams, Jr., Frank Thompson, Allen B. Laing and Henry C. Wells, of North Plainfield.

The bride's gown was of white mousseline satin, with yoke and sleeves of real lace. She wore a veil of tulle and spray of orange blossoms fastened in the coiffure and carried a bouquet of daisies and diamonds, the gift of the groom. Her bouquet was of white sweet peas. The maid of honor's gown was of white point d' esprit over white taffeta and she carried a basket of daisies.

The bridesmaids were gowned in white silk novelty over white taffeta, trimmed with lace and they carried sprayed bouquets of daisies. They also wore wide yellow girdles. The bride's mother wore a gown of creame colored lace.

As the wedding march from Lohengrin was being played by J. Edmund Skiff, the church organist, the bridal party entered the church. The ushers led the way for the bridesmaids, maid of honor and the bride, who was accompanied by her father. The groom and best man, entered the edifice from the vestry door and met the other members of the party at the chancel, where the ceremony was performed by the rector, Rev. William Montgomery Downey. During the ceremony, Mr. Skiff rendered softly on the organ "O, Promise Me."

Following the wedding, a reception was given for the couple by Mr. and Mrs. Berry at their home on Grove street, where over one hundred and fifty guests were present. The decorations were quite elaborate. In the hall and library there was an arrangement of roses and oak boughs, while in the reception and dining rooms, there were daisies, smilax and oak boughs.

A unique feature was to be seen in the dining room. A large daisy ball suspended over the table was reflected in a mirror placed in the center of the table.

While Mr. and Mrs. Faber were receiving the congratulations of their relatives and younger friends who comprised the guests, a delightful programme of music was rendered by Suhr's orchestra seated on the porch. During the reception an elaborate supper was served by a caterer. Later in the evening the bride and groom were given a rousing send-off by the guests as they departed on a wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside at the home of the groom's father, 38 Rockview avenue, for the summer.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Faber are numbered among those most popular in Plainfield and North Plainfield society. They are prominent in affairs at the Park Club and the Park Golf Club and have taken part in a number of social events held in North Plainfield. The bride received numerous gifts of great value and use. The groom's present to the bride were from the conservatory of the groom's father.

F. O. Salaries Increased.

According to the list of adjustments of the salaries of clerks in the first and second-class postoffices of the country, which takes effect July 1, Plainfield receives these increases: One from $700 to $800; one from $800 to $900; one from $900 to $1,000, and one from $1,000 to $1,100.

Many School Children are Sickly

Mother Gray's Sweet Powders for Children, used by Mother Gray, a nurse in Children's Home, New York, break up Colds in 24 hours, Feverishness, Constipation, Worms, Stomach Troubles, Diarrhoea, move and regulate the bowels, and Destroy Worms. Mrs. Emily Gaston, Marsden, Ct., says: "It is the best medicine in the world for children when they are sick and constipated." Sold by all Druggists or by mail for 25c. Sample FREE. Address Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N. Y.

SONS OF OLD ELI HOLD ANNUAL DINNER

Plainfield Alumni Gather at Pedeflous and Have a Rousing Good Time.

RUNYON, TOASTMASTER

JOSEPH H. SHELLABARGER RESPONDS FOR OLD NASSAU.

Other Speakers Include James R. Joy, John Leal and Evarts Tracy —S. St. John McCutchen is the President of Organization.

With much noise and an eloquent flow of oratory, the sons of Eli who abide in the plains at the foot of the mountain of Watchung took possession of the valley of The Pedeflous. And the valley flowed with milk and honey, for it was the time of the annual dinner of the tribe of the Plainfield Yale Club.

If That was Friday. The Yale Club, which has seventy or more members, turned out pretty nearly in force. There was an unusually good sized gathering, and the affair went off with a degree of enthusiasm and jollity that was highly enjoyable by the diners.

Chef Henri excelled himself. The tables received as fine a course of perfect culinary creations as The Pedeflous has ever spread before his guests.

As usual at alumni dinners, the songs of alma mater were sung lustily and often. The singing was a notable feature of the feast, Judge Runyon, the toastmaster, leading with his booming voice. At accepted intervals the Yale yell tore through the walls. There was no throat that had lost its vigor, apparently, and once or twice the cap of the mountain shook, and the natives prayed fearfully that a landslide be averted.

Speeches, without seriousness except in that they were all full of the spirit of loyalty to Yale and Yale men, were made by James R. Joy, John Leal, Edward H. Williams, Fred W. Wallace, Story Rowland, Evarts Tracy and Louis Treadwell. Of course Toastmaster Runyon had something sweetly complimentary to say of every speaker. His hammer was as fine and industrious a one as ever an alumni dinner toastmaster wielded.

The outer collegiate world was represented by Joseph M. Shellabarger, who spoke, amiably but not very humbly, for Princeton. He did not appear to realize what a terrible mistake he had made in spending four years in Princeton when he might just as well have gone to New Haven. He was cheered and clapped. The Yale Club is the strongest college alumni organization in this city. Its officers are: President, S. St. J. McCutchen; vice president, F. W. Wallace; secretary, C. W. Abbott; executive committee, C. W. McGee, Evarts Tracy and T. M. Day, Jr.

HOLZWASSER & CO

SPECIAL DISCOUNT THIS MONTH OF 10% ALLOWED ON ALL CASH PURCHASES.

ACTUAL VALUE $200.

We Also Furnish a Flat at $65.00.

Write for Our New Catalogue. Mailed Upon Application.

$1.00 a Week Opens an Account.

We Also Carry a Complete Line of CLOTHING For Men, Women and Children.

Freight and R. R. Fare Allowed on All Out-of-Town Orders.

1417 TO 1423 3D AVE BETWEEN 80 & 81ST

Open Evenings until 9 o'clock. NEW YORK, N. Y.

'PLAINS, 4; COLONIAL A. C., 2

SUBURBAN TEAM DEFEATS NEW YORKERS IN FINE EXHIBITION.

The 'Plains team, although badly crippled, defeated the Colonial A. C. team, of New York, Saturday afternoon in a good fast exhibition of the National game by the score of 4 to 2. Montrose and Jones both pitched good ball.

Following is the lineup:

Scotch Plains — Baldwin, 1b; J. Albert, 3b; Allen, c; Flannery, cf; Cronius, ss; Enright, 2b; Montrose, p; Taylor, lf; H. Alberts, rf.

Colonial A. C.—Painter, cf; Hinchman, c; A. Egan, 1b; Daley, ss; Bandall, 3b; Overton, lf; H. Egan, 2b; Thomas, rf; Jones, p.

Score by innings:

Colonial A. C. . . . 2 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—2
Scotch Plains. . . . 0 0 0 0 2 0 0 0 0—4

Umpire, H. Monrose; scorer, A. Jahn.

Lodge Election.

The officers were elected by Martha Washington Council, No. 22, Daughters of America, Saturday night: Councilor, Mrs Sadie Dodge; associate councilor, Mrs Annie Anglemon; vice councilor, Mrs Winnie Allen; associate vice councilor, S. H. Allen; recording secretary, Gilbert S. Martin; financial secretary, G. B. Allen; treasurer, Mrs. Mary Welsh; conductor, Mrs. Niles; warden, Mrs. Mary Alpaugh; trustee, eighteen months, S. H. Allen; representative to State Council, F. G. Welsh; representative to Funeral Benefit Association, G. B. Allen.

Mr. Carney Going With Smith Party.

David J. Carney, of the borough, has been invited to go with Senator James Smith and his party to St. Louis on Saturday. He will probably accept the invitation.

John Hiscox, business manager at the Sabbath Recorder office, is detained at home by illness.

COLORED GIANTS DEFEAT WESTFIELD

Denman's Colts Get a Good Coat of Whitewash Saturday.

"RED" WALLER PITCHED

THE DUSKY BRAVES GIVE A FINE EXHIBITION OF BASEBALL.

Only Nine Hits Made—The Two Teams Will Meet Again on Wednesday at Business Men's Matinee—The Score.

According to the schedule prepared by Charles Denman, who is the original Foxy Quiller, there was to be pie for the Westfields Saturday afternoon. Blackberry pie. Instead of pie, they got eggs—goose eggs. Nine of them, and the New York Colored Giants, who were slated to go down the maw of the Denmanites, stripped gayly away with one run. Just one, but quite enough for all practical purposes.

It was expected that the Giants would furnish a lot of fun, but hardly that they would have any—and shout frolicing at that. They put a lot of horseplay and gurgling rag-mastication in their coaching, but they played ball and played every minute of every inning.

Good ball, too. Both sides played fast, the Giants hanging right to the darlings of the Denman bamlet. While the pitchers had an old-fashioned duel, there was enough for the fielders to do, and they were kept open-eyed with admiration.

Red Waller was in the box for Westfield, and he pitched golden-tipped ball. Once Charley Denman repudiated Red, because he went away with other and naughtier players, and vowed that Red would never wear the Westfield tailor-made suit again. But Charley has forgiven the erring one, and Red showed how happy he was by shining up his roseate top and striking out eleven of the mahogany and ebony batsmen.

If Red lost his own game, and maybe Charley will grow cold and distant again. It was one of those foolish wild pitches that will come up. Red put too much muchness on the ball in an effort to catch the runner at first, in the fourth, and the run sailed in. After that it was nip and tuck, and nothing doing but wild attempts for both sides. Westfield got a man to third twice, but Warrick, the gunmetal shootsmith and his backers were all there to their unreasoned gallop down the homestretch.

Mr. Denman is not tickled over the way his pets were beaten that he is going to take another shy at the Giants Wednesday afternoon. "They are the best colored players going," he said after the game. Of course. After beating Westfield they couldn't be anything else. The Wednesday game is down as a "business men's matinee." It will start at 5 o'clock.

Score by innings:

	R	H	E
Colored Giants.	0 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0	1	5
Westfield.	0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0	4	1

Batteries—Warrick and Devos; Waller and Poole. Attendance—400

Lougheed's New Shop.

J. B. Lougheed has removed his repair shop from Whitewood avenue to Washington Hall and has fitted up an up-to-date shop. He does all kinds of machinery repair work.

Poor Shad Season.

During the past season there were only 13,000 shad caught in the Delaware river in this basin, while in the year 1902 as many as 13,000 were caught in a single day.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Aldrich, of Brooklyn, spent Sunday at the home of Mrs. Rachel Beise, of Park avenue.

REV. EDWARD MOLDENKE DIED VERY SUDDENLY

Wealthy Lutheran Minister, Stricken at Breakfast Table, Passed Away Soon After.

ATTACK DUE TO GRIEF

PASTOR BEMOANED THE FATE OF SLOCUM DISASTER VICTIMS.

He Was Seventy Years of Age and Had Been in Charge of One Church for Thirty Years.

Rev. Dr. Edward Moldenke, one of the best known and wealthiest Lutheran clergymen in the country, died at his summer home, "Elstnore," Washingtonville, on Saturday. He was stricken with heart disease while at breakfast and before medical aid could be secured he passed away. The cause of his illness was believed to be due to grief for members of his congregation who lost their lives on the ill-fated Gen. Slocum, and his compassion for the bereft families of St. Mark's church.

A week ago yesterday he broke down while holding memorial services for the Slocum dead. He then went to his country home. Dr. Moldenke was pastor of St. Peter's Lutheran church, New York, for thirty years. He was 70 years old and leaves a widow and three sons—Dr. Richard Moldenke, manufacturer and secretary of the American Foundrymen's Association; Dr. Charles Moldenke, a retired clergyman, and Dr. Alfred Moldenke, who is the assistant pastor of St. Peter's church.

The remains were taken to New York, where services were held in St. Peter's church Tuesday. They were then brought back to this city and placed in a vault which the deceased built near his home several years ago.

NEW MARKET, 10; REFORMERS, 5

TEMPERANCE BOYS LOSE AN EXCITING GAME OF BASEBALL.

The New Market Y. M. A. continued on its victorious career by defeating the Reform A. A., of Plainfield, on Saturday at the New Market field. The Reformers were no match for them at any time and were easily beaten by a score of 10 to 5. The feature of the game was the batting of the Y. M. A. team. This makes the tenth straight victory for New Market and the fans are enthusiastic over the showing.

The score by innings follows:

New Market. . . . . 0 0 2 3 1 2 0 2 0—10
Reform Club. . . . . 3 0 0 1 1 0 0 0 0—5

BERTON WALDRON IS MARRIED.

Boroughite Takes Miss Boylan, of Potter, N. J., as His Bride.

Berton Waldron, of Chatterton street, was married Sunday to Miss Florence Boylan, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Boylan, at Potter, this State. The wedding was a quiet one.

Rev. G. T. Watts performed the ceremony. The bridesmaids were Miss Olive Waldron, sister of the groom, and Miss Myrtle Boylan, sister of the bride. Miss Ella Boylan played the wedding march. After the ceremony the couple left for a short honeymoon trip. The groom is an employe of Stephen Schlief.

Miss Sharkey's Birthday.

Miss Agnes Sharkey, of Whitewood avenue, celebrated her sixteenth birthday anniversary on Saturday night and in honor of the event entertained a number of friends. Miss Sharkey received many handsome presents.

THE SLOCUM HORROR

Captain Van Schaick Testifies at Inquest on Disaster.

DID HIS DUTY AS FAR AS POSSIBLE

Commander Brought Into Court a Cripple—Knee Broken Jumping Overboard in Shallow Water While Clothing Was Afire.

NEW YORK, June 29.—William H. Van Schaick, captain of the steamboat General Slocum when it burned at the entrance of the sound, with the loss of more than a thousand lives, has testified at the inquest held by Coroner Berry at New York. He was wheeled into court in an invalid's chair, and his examination had to be interrupted to allow him to recuperate. Other witnesses testified in the interval, one of whom, the Slocum's candy counter clerk, contradicted the captain to the extent of saying that he had never seen or taken part in fire drills on the Slocum. The captain said that he had held three on the boat this year, but when asked to say in what they consisted replied that he could not tell exactly.

Once under way Van Schaick answered most questions, sometimes after temporizing, but generally as the prosecutor wanted. He said that only 250 new life preservers had been put on board the Slocum since 1901, and all that he recalled by way of repairs to them was that new straps were put on 300 last year. He told a whole lot of things that Federal Inspector Lundberg of the steamboat bureau did not do. He said Lundberg, who refused last week to testify at the inquest on the ground that to do so might tend to incriminate him, boarded the Slocum this spring and examined "maybe ten, maybe a hundred," of the Slocum's life belts. He did not inspect the hose, Van Schaick said, nor test the lifeboats and life rafts. He made no tests of the life preservers in water, said Van Schaick, who added that the Slocum's life preservers had never been tested in water. The bar cashier, who testified, said that the bartender tried to get some of these lifebelts on the day of the fire and that they burst, scattering cork all over the bar.

When Van Schaick was told that the district attorney had asked all the questions he wanted to, the captain turned to the jury and said:

"I want you gentlemen to understand that I did all in my power that could be done under the circumstances at the time of the accident. I could not get the boat and beach her any sooner than I did. I remained standing in front of the pilot house until we struck. Then I started to go downstairs.

"A volcano of fire had broken out along the decks and was sweeping up the stairways. I could not get down the stairs. Some one yelled, "Jump for your life, captain!" and then I jumped overboard. I struck in shallow water on the rocks and broke my knee. My clothes had been on fire. I was stunned.

"A large, fleshy woman and a young nurse girl came to me and dragged me up over the rocks to the shore. Then I crawled up to a small tree, and I lay down under it. As I looked toward the Slocum I saw the pilot house and the upper decks fall."

Van Schaick's explanation started the jurors asking questions. They demanded explanations of the delay in notifying the captain that there was fire on board and how he reconciled his information with the stories of passengers who began to jump off at Ninety-second street.

The district attorney wanted explanations too. All that the captain could say was that he did his duty, did his best and couldn't explain.

He said that he gave no orders to the crew after he knew of the fire.

The witness said he had been on the General Slocum since the boat was built in 1891, that he was fifty-three years old, that he had been a boatman for forty years and master of vessels for thirty years.

Blind Helen Keller a B. A.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 29.—Helen Adams Keller, the deaf, dumb and blind girl whose wonderful achievements have made her name familiar throughout the world, was the central figure among the ninety-six ladies of Radcliffe college who received their degrees of bachelor of arts at the hands of Dean L. R. B. Briggs, the president of the college. Miss Keller was attended by Miss Sullivan, her teacher and companion, and when her name was called and she rose to receive her degree the large audience broke into hearty and prolonged applause.

French Cruiser For Haiti.

PARIS, June 29.—The French cruiser Jurien de la Graviere has been ordered by the ministry of marine to proceed to Haiti to insist on the punishment of those guilty of the outrage against M. Deprez, the French minister, who was stoned by the palace guard at Port au Prince recently while driving with the minister of Germany.

Will Only Demand Punishment.

BERLIN, June 29.—It is semiofficially stated that the satisfaction which Germany and France will demand from the government of Haiti for the attack on the respective ministers of those countries by the palace guards at Port au Prince will consist of the punishment of the guilty persons.

Lafayette Young to Be Orator.

ST. LOUIS, June 29. — Lafayette Young of Iowa has accepted an invitation to be Independence day orator at the world's fair grounds.

SYRACUSE BOYS WIN

Great Intercollegiate Regatta at Poughkeepsie.

CORNELL WON FOUR OARS WITH EASE

In the Great Race of the Meeting, the Eight Our Varsity, and In the Freshmen's Syracuse Oarsmen Won by Handsome Margins.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 29.—The perennial Cornell spell is broken, and the comparatively small number of Syracuse men in town are in a state of hilarious delight, in which surprise at their own achievement is quite as active a factor as the delight, for in two out of the three races on the Poughkeepsie course, the only races in which she was entered, the crews of Syracuse university won victory from the sons of Cornell in a fashion which will return all hands here another year seeking further honors.

In the four mile eight our varsity race and in the freshman two mile eight our race the Syracuse oarsmen won by handsome margins, coming out of obscurity in the minds of the boating sharps so marked that the friends of Syracuse could not find takers for bets at 1 to 12. Cornell won the four our varsity race with ease.

Wisconsin, which was thought to threaten all competitors in the four our and varsity races, was never a factor, coming in fourth out of five in the four our race and last in the varsity.

Columbia, the "dark horse," whose mysterious doings upstream have led to a good deal of solicitude on the part of all of her competitors, did well in the four oared race, in which she came in second, though she made but a feeble showing in the others, coming in last in the freshman race and fourth in the varsity.

No records were broken. Indeed the time was slower than for three years in two of the races and more than a minute and a half slower than last year in the varsity race. What might have been done in the varsity race had Cornell pushed Syracuse may be inferred from the statement of the Syracuse coxswain, in which he is quoted as saying that his men were prepared for a surprise from Cornell in the last part of the race and were ready for it with reserve power to hit up their speed materially, but they were not pressed in any part of the race.

The effect of the splendid victory of Syracuse is very marked here in a great increase in all manifestations of interest in the racing in general and in vows to make next year's regatta a contest surpassing all those of the past. Fireworks, clanging of cowbells and part din of tooting horns kept the people of Poughkeepsie awake until far into the night.

The weather was on the whole nearly perfect for racing. Dashes of rain marred the enjoyment of the spectators somewhat, and a rather brisk southerly breeze toward the close of the day made the water somewhat rough, to which the slow time may be attributed.

Cornell led off at the pistol shot in characteristic style, but lost her lead almost immediately to Syracuse, which with a quick stroke pulled out ahead with a lead which, never lost during the race, was increased to five lengths at the finish. Once, near the two mile mark, Cornell in a fine burst of speed did press her sturdy rival on almost even terms.

Decision Against Chippeway Indian.

WASHINGTON, June 29. — Justice Anderson, in the supreme court here, has sustained a demurrer upholding the department of the interior in its defense of a suit brought by Joseph Nagamo, a Chippeway Indian, who claims that his tribe will be injured if the order of the secretary of the interior should be carried out setting aside 300,000 acres of Minnesota pine timber, worth $3,000,000, as a perpetual forest reserve.

English Colonel Killed.

LONDON, June 29.—Colonel Bloomfield Gough, who during the Boer war was ordered home for refusal to obey the order of Lord Milner's cook, has been killed in a carriage accident at Kelso, Scotland. Gough, at the time he refused to obey orders, was in command of the Ninth lancers. He claimed that his men and horses were not fit for service. Once, near the two mile mark, Cornell in a fine burst of speed did press her sturdy rival on almost even terms.

Divorced Teacher Weds Millionaire.

CHICAGO, June 29.—Marion Lintner, a Chicago kindergarten teacher, has been married to Samuel Paul, the millionaire banker and lumber merchant of Beaumont, Tex. The wedding took place on the day the bride was granted a divorce from H. H. Newton of Toledo, O. Mr. and Mrs. Paul left for Beaumont to go to Fort Arthur, Tex., and board Park's steam yacht for a two months' cruise in Mexican waters.

Workers For Panama Zone.

COLON, June 29.—The steamer Allianca, from New York, has arrived here, bringing Chief Engineer Wallace and his party and also Majors Gorgas and Lagarde of the sanitary department and trained nurses for the hospital corps, the chief of whom, Miss Hibbard, is a veteran nurse of the Spanish-American war. They all proceeded to Panama during the day.

Letter Left $18,000,000.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—It is said here that the total amount of the estate left by Mr. L. Z. Leiter, father of Lady Curzon, will approximate $18,000,000.

ITALIAN RESIDENTS TO HOLD CELEBRATION

To Observe in Elaborate Style the Feast of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel.

ON JULY 18 AND 19

MASSES AND PARADES THE FEATURES OF THE AFFAIR.

May Use Concert Park for Celebration—Salvadore Velerdi in Charge of the Programme—Illuminations.

If elaborate preparations, a metropolitan band, streets draped and arched in bunting and illuminated by hundreds of little lamps, special church services, including the celebration of masses by Italian priests from New York, two parades and fireworks galore mean anything, the Italian colony of this city will have the finest celebration of the feast of Our Lady of Mount Carmel ever seen in this vicinity. The celebration will take place Monday and Tuesday nights, July 18 and 19.

Last year's observances were considered a creditable affort, but the splendor of that occasion will fade completely in comparison with next month's affair. The finest Italian band in New York, Nardiello's Harlem Columbia Band, is to furnish the music both days. This organization always makes a favorable impression on parade, with its Continental uniforms of blue, faced with red.

The procession will include about 100 of the more prominent Italians of this city and also a score or more from Connecticut and New York. On Tuesday, the second day of the festival, probably 1,000 Italians will come into town from the city and enjoy themselves in their own happy Neapolitan style. Salvadore Velerdi, chief executive of the colony, has a permit from Mayor Jenkins for a parade. He will lead the procession through the principal streets.

If arrangements can be concluded for the use of St. Joseph's church, a father from St. Antonio's church, in Baxter street, New York, will celebrate the mass at a special service. In this case, the roadway of Watchung avenue, along which the procession will march to the church, will be decked with Italian and American flags, bunting and hung with lamps for a night illumination. These decorations, which will include ornamental arches over the street, will extend from the corner of Front street to that of Manning avenue, ending at the church.

The intention of the committee on arrangements were to use the same grounds for the fireworks display that were so courteously placed at their service last year by James E. Martine, but it is uncertain, for some reason or other, if the necessary consent can be secured from Mr. Martine at this time, so Mayor N. B Smalley, of the borough, has offered the more central location, now known as "Concert Park" on Watchung avenue near Tear's pond.

In addition to Salvadore Velerdi, in charge of the arrangements, there is a committee on which the following are serving: Guiseppe Matteis, Filomeno Galuppo, Gaetano D'arraso, Domenico Fiore, Leonardo Velerdi, Michele Constantino and Antonio Petrillo.

TO INSPECT JERSEY ROADS

NEW YORK COMMISSION TO SEE MODEL MACADAM HIGHWAYS.

Monday, July 11, a special commission of five members appointed by the Legislature of New York will come to this State to investigate the New Jersey method of road building with a view of adopting it for the Empire State. State Supervisor of Roads Robert A. Meeker, of this city, will have charge of the party.

New Jersey was the first to adopt the State aid plan of securing the extension of good roads. Massachusetts and Connecticut followed and then New York fell in line. But the plan as tried in the latter State has not succeeded, and the officials claim that the State is spending too much money for the results being achieved.

The fame of the New Jersey roads and the success of the State aid plan here traveled to Governor Odell's bailiwick and led to the appointment of the commission.

Not only was this State the first in the field with State aid to road building but the road department states that it leads all the other States of the Union in the length and condition of its improved roads. While the other States which have taken up good road building have improved them in detached section, New Jersey has aimed at a continuity of fine highways, and has stretches of the best macadam roadways 40 to 60 miles long, with the system being extended every year.

WALTER SQUIRES BECOMES A BENEDICT

A Plainfielder Weds Miss Edith Lombard, of Lawrence Park, Bronxville, N. Y.

SON OF H. C. SQUIRES

DR. CHARLES SQUIRES, A BROTHER OF THE GROOM, BEST MAN.

Ceremony in the Congregational Church, Lawrence Park—Groom, Best Man and Ushers Members of the Same College Fraternity.

Miss Edith Lombard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Lombard, of Lawrence Park, Bronxville, New York, and Walter Squires, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Squires, of Watchung avenue, were married at 12:30, Saturday, at the Congregational church, Lawrence Park, Bronxville, in the presence of a large and fashionable throng of society folks, including many from this city.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Louise Lombard, who was maid of honor. The best man was Dr. Charles Squires, brother of the groom, and the ushers were Louis Squires and Fred Squires, also brothers of the groom; Richard Northrop, of Evanston, Ill, and William Pryne, of New York.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents from 1 to 2:30, after which the couple left on a honeymoon. They will live in this city upon their return. Mr. Squires is engaged in the sporting goods business with his father in New York.

The groom, his best man and the ushers are all members of the same college fraternity, Phi Delta Theta. The groom was graduated from Williams College this year, Dr. Charles Squires is a graduate of Cornell Medical College, Louis Squires is a graduate from the law department of Columbia College, and Frederick Squires, an architect, is a graduate from the same college, while Richard Northrop and William Pryne are graduates of Williams and Holly Titus of Cornell.

AIDING FRESH AIR CAMP

SUCCESSFUL OPEN AIR SALE FOR THE BENEFIT OF CHARITY.

The lawn in the rear of 306 Central avenue, was gay Friday afternoon, with a crowd of children eagerly buying candy, cake and fruits, as well as fancy articles. The sale was conducted for the benefit of the Mary Morgan Fresh Air Camp. A large majority of the merchants of the city donated the good things sold there.

About 300 tickets were sold for the sale, and, taking it all together, the profits will probably amount to $60.

Miss Mary Moffett arranged the affair, with the assistance of Miss Lena Moffett, who acted as cashier, Mrs. Nelson VanWinkle, Mrs. E. B. Ryder, Mrs. Henry Mosher, Miss Jennie Tompkin, Miss Ethel Morris, Mrs. Fred Moffett, Miss Olive Heden, Henry Zoops and Lawrence Satterlee.

The waitresses were Edna Mosher, Lois Heideloff, Helen Ryder, Dorothy Parvin, Ruth Moore, Muriel Conner, Florence Ryder, Ted Ryder, Elizabeth Winn and Marion Wean.

At the close of the sale everything remaining was auctioned off to the guests at figures that soon disposed of the articles.

Magazine Articles by Howe Sisters.

"Telephone Manners" is the title of a sketch in the July number of Good Housekeeping by Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Montross avenue, and "The Evil Eye and Witches Night in Rome" is the heading of an article in The Century for July by Maud Howe, a sister of Mrs. Hall and the wife of John Elliot, the artist.

Date of Council Meeting.

The next regular meeting of the Common Council is scheduled for day night, July 4, but as this will be a holiday, is is quite likely the meeting will be held the next night, July 5.

Finks Give $1,000.

Harvey Fink & Sons, New York bankers, of which former Mayor Charles Fink is a member, have contributed $1,000 to the Slocum disaster relief fund.

Excursion to Quaker City.

The members of the Calvary Baptist church and Sunday-school have completed arrangements for an excursion to Philadelphia on Wednesday, July 27.

Hillier's Laundry Removal.

Miss Mary Brown, manager of Hillier's laundry, has leased the Linke store, on West Second street and will take possession July 1. The new place will be just as accessible as the old with the added advantage of increased space.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1904. NO. 27.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Center of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

CITY FATHERS BALK AT WOODEN PAVEMENT

As Ordinance Providing for Their Use is Adopted by a Vote of Five to Four.

A PROTEST IS MADE

SOME COUNCILMEN PREFER THE INTRODUCTION OF VITRIFIED BRICK.

Street Commissioner Gavett Explains the Durability of the Wood Block—Messrs. Bullock, Daniel, Higham and Lee Object.

Wooden pavement, which is to have a try-out on Watchung avenue, had a narrow squeak from displacement for vitrified brick at the Common Council meeting held on Tuesday. Opposition to the wooden blocks was vigorously pushed on the third reading of the ordinance providing for it, and the measure went through by just one vote, five to four.

Councilmen Bullock, Lee, Higham and Daniel opposed the wood. Mr. Lee started the assault on the wooden blocks by having a letter from the paving engineer's office of Cleveland, O., read. The letter enthusiastically endorsed brick, and gave figures to prove that it was much cheaper than wood. Mr. Lee, Mr. Bullock and Mr. Daniel spoke strongly against the wood, maintaining that it was hard to lay properly and hard to maintain. Mr. Higham said brick looked very much prettier and more permanent.

Mr. Gloak, who introduced the ordinance for the street committee, said he was willing to change it to provide for brick, but thought the street commissioner, who had spoken for wooden pavement, knew what was best. President Tolles also argued that Street Commissioner Gavett, being the expert, knew better than the Council what was best. Councilman Tyler argued the same way, urging the body to give the commissioner a chance to carry the experiment through as he thought best. Commissioner Gavett spoke briefly, dwelling chiefly on the fact that he did not wish to be regarded as the advocate of wood as against brick. He thought wood, treated with creosote and resin, was better than brick, but acknowledged that the latter looked prettier and were well.

On the vote Councilmen Bullock, Daniel, Higham and Lee voted no, Councilmen Gloak, Tyler, Wilson, Murphy and President Tolles voting aye.

TO ST. LOUIS BY WATER

CAPTAIN BUCKELEW AND FRIENDS COVER A DISTANCE OF 1,793 MILES.

Captain C. W. Buckelew, of 126 West Fifth street, has just completed an all-water trip to St. Louis with a party of friends on the steam yacht Cherub, of Perth Amboy.

The yacht started from Perth Amboy on June 1 and berthed at St. Louis on June 26. The total distance travelled was 1,793 miles, the route being as follows:

Perth Amboy to Troy, N. Y., via Hudson River, 175 miles; Troy to Buffalo, via Erie Canal, 353 miles; through Lake Erie, 237 miles; up the Detroit River, 26 miles; through Lake St. Clair, 17 miles; St. Clair River, 40 miles; through Lake Huron, 243 miles; on Lake Michigan to Chicago, 285 miles; Illinois and Michigan Canal and Illinois River, 325 miles; and finally from the mouth of the Illinois down the Mississippi to St. Louis, 50 miles.

Capt. Buckelew writes that it makes this trip. After taking in all that the exposition has to offer, the Captain's party will start for home along the same route in about two weeks. The distance that will have been travelled both ways will total up to 3,586 miles.

Belated Wedding Announcement.

Miss Lottie J. Bunn and Frank J. VanNest, both of this city, were married Thursday night, June 30, by Rev. Cornelius Sobsenck, at his home on West Front street. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert VanNest, of Whitewood avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. Smith, of Watchung avenue, attended the couple. Mrs. Smith is a sister of the groom.

Another Fire Hydrant.

One four-way fire hydrant has been placed on the south side of Madison avenue, between Front street and the brook, as ordered by the Common Council at a recent meeting.

PAROCHIAL SCHOOL EXHIBIT

MANUAL TRAINING WORK OF ST. MARY'S KINDERGARTEN IS PLACED ON VIEW.

A fine display of the work done by the kindergarten department of St. Mary's School was on exhibition at Stafford Hall, Sunday and Monday, for the purpose of illustrating to the parents and friends of the children of the parish, the progress made in the work in the one year's time it has been taught in the school. The specimens of work include all branches of the course, from the crude first efforts of the four-year-old who has just entered to the graduating essays of the little one of a year later, in the line of fancy decoration with scissors and paper, or drawing with crayons and water colors. Some of the little ones are quite expert in weaving the straw braid for baskets and also in making the baskets themselves. The characteristic of the work, which strikes one most, is the uniform neatness and workmanlike manner of cutting out the different colored pieces of paper and arranging and pasting them together, symmetrically. The same can be said of the crayon and water color sketches made by the more advanced pupils, a number of these specimens being on view in the hall.

Not the least interesting was the sewing department, with samples of the various stitches, hems, tucks, etc., arranged in a large book. Some of the children become so careful and painstaking that they will take the work from another child and do it themselves just because the owner is careless.

OBJECT TO STREET WIDENING

PROPERTY OWNERS PROTEST TO COUNCIL AGAINST STREET IMPROVEMENT.

Strong protest against the proposed widening of Sycamore street, between Fourth and Fifth streets, was made on behalf of property owners at the public hearing on the project at the meeting of the Common Council last Tuesday. In consequence of the objections action on the matter was laid over until the next meeting. In compliance with requests from the protestants, the Council voted to give a further hearing to the objectors at that session.

T. W. Nash appeared for Bateman Thatcher. He maintained that the widening was unnecessary, because the street is as wide as those that intersect it. That it would damage the Thatcher holding to a very material extent and that a number of fine shade trees would be destroyed.

Appearing for his mother-in-law, Mrs. Chapin, who owns one of the properties on the corner of Fifth street, W. H. Brokaw protested on the ground that the proposed widening would ruin her house. He said the proposed improvement would cut off the bay window and put the house squarely on the street line.

John Brower, speaking for his mother, who owns the house on one of the other corners, declared that the advertisement of the hearing had appeared wrongly in one of the issues of the newspaper, giving the date as the fifteenth instead of the fifth. He protested on general grounds but said he had not had time to prepare a full statement or petition on account of that confusing error. On that ground he asked that the hearing be laid over in order to enable him to lay the matter properly before the Council. V. T. Nash also asked that the hearing be adjourned.

Mr. Brower maintained that it was unjust to widen the street between Fourth and Fifth streets and leave the block below untouched. Councilman Gloak argued with him, declaring that the thoroughfare should be widened to Seventh street.

A query by Councilman Bullock brought out the fact that all the properties mentioned by the objectors fronted on Fifth street.

Chairman Gloak, of the street committee, said that he believed the objections should be considered, and that the committee desired to give them every consideration. It was on his motion that the hearing went over.

Councilman Tyler suggested that all the property owners affected by the proposed widening be personally notified of the hearing, to avoid another misunderstanding and insure action at the next meeting. It is expected that all the objectors will appear at the coming hearing fortified with long protests and strong petitions against the project.

A Boy Arrives.

Mr. and Mrs. Hinton, of 981 West Fourth street, are happy over the arrival of a ten-pound boy.

HIGH SCHOOL BIDS ARE ALL REJECTED

Architect is Instructed by the Board of Education to Revise Plans for New Structure.

THE LIMIT IS $107,000

NINE BIDS ARE SUBMITTED ONLY TO BE TURNED DOWN.

Costs of Grounds, Construction, Architect's Fees, Plumbing, Heating and Electric Wiring Must Not Exceed $125,000.

Because the appropriation of $125,000 was exceeded by the total of the lowest bid for building, plumbing, heating and electric wiring, taken together with the cost of grounds and architect's fees, all bids for the construction of the new High School were thrown out at Tuesday's meeting of the Board of Education, and the architect, Herbert D. Hale, of New York, was instructed to revise the plans in such degree as would best bring them within the limit of the appropriation.

The plans as drawn called for the building complete in one case and with an optional four room addition in the other. It was thought that by this means the cost could be kept below the $107,000 available after the grounds and architect have been settled for at the figure of $18,000. The bids and names of the bidders follow, the alternative price under the heading "with addition" applying in case the structure is to include the four room addition. In each case, the prices bid are for the building itself, without plumbing, heating or electric wiring.

If the lowest bids for the general contract, the plumbing, wiring and the heating were combined it would make the building cost as placed for 600 pupils about $135,000, or, omitting four class rooms, about $125,000.

John Abbott, Plainfield, without addition, $103,979, with addition, $113,612; J. E. & A. L. Pennock, Philadelphia, Pa., without addition, $104,500, with addition, $117,500; H. A. Week Co., New York, without addition, $106,485; J. H. Parker, New York, without addition, $107,393, with addition, $115,985; Herman Probst, New York, without addition, $110,900, with addition, $124,277; T. H. Power & Sons, Trenton, without addition, $113,000, with addition, $125,000; H. C. Cummings Co., Lynn, Mass., without addition, $114,787, with addition, $133,397; Wheaton & Lumber Co., without addition, $116,850, with addition, $129,890; H. Wales Lines Co., without addition, $112,333, with addition, $123,333.

For electric wiring, the following proposals were received: M. B. Foster, New York, without addition, $2,535, with addition, $247 extra; S. H. Comklin, $3,833; Walker & Keppler, $4,960; Craig & Apgar, Plainfield, $3,930.

Two bids were received for the plumbing, Dennis J. Galbraith, $6,315, and James Tucker & Sons, Boston, $6,290.

The heating proposition called forth one bid, that of Evans, Almvall & Co., $16,000.

NURSES' HOME IS LEASED.

Children's Home to Use Old Structure on Muhlenberg Place.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, at the meeting held last night, voted to lease the nurses' old home on Muhlenberg place to the managers of the Children's Home for several months' use while rebuilding operations of the home are in progress.

This report of the medical staff was received: Patients remaining at last report, 18; admitted, 47; discharged cured, 32; improved, 9; unimproved, 1; died, 2; remaining, 21; number of patients treated in the hospital during the month, 65; operations, 56. In the dispensary there were 38 patients, visits of patients, 84; operations, 10.

Mussell Held Lucky Number.

Charles Mussel, a butcher at the meat market of Fred Endress, held the lucky ticket on a raffle for Frank Vanderhoef's gold watch. The chances were sold among the employes in the market and Mr. Mussel, who took one chance, got the watch which is valued at $25.

—Eat fruit much and often, and other things less, in weather like this. The juicy, fine flavored berries, and appetizing Rocky Ford muskmelons, sold by Neuman Bros., will lure you irresistibly.

L. T. L.'S THREE DAYS' SALE

M. C. DOBBINS' LAWN THE SCENE OF THE LEGION'S ENTERPRISE.

The Loyal Temperance Legion opened a three-days' lemonade and cake sale yesterday afternoon. Mrs. M. C. Dobbins' lawn, on Elmwood place, was the scene of the affair, which started very auspiciously.

The porch and the refreshment tables were prettily decorated with flags and flowers, the lawn and house front looking decidedly on fete. There was a large attendance, and the lemonade and cake went rapidly.

Miss Ethel Vail was in charge of the affair, assisted by Anna Vail, Raymond Mosher, Kathie Gray and Miss Corn Gray. The latter is treasurer of the sale.

The receipts will be turned into the Legion treasury. This afternoon and tomorrow afternoon, if the weather permits, the sale will be continued.

J. H. HALL WINS HONORS

PLAINFIELDER RECEIVES A SCHOLARSHIP WITH HIS M. A. AT HARVARD.

John Howe Hall, the third and youngest son of David Prescott Hall and Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Madison avenue, has received the degree of M. A., from Harvard University. He was awarded the B. A. degree in 1903.

Mr. Hall has also won one of the best scholarships in the gift of the university for the coming year, having been at the head of his department in the graduate school. This makes the third scholarship which Hall has won at Harvard in three successive years. He was for two years a member of the track team. His specialty is long-distance running. Mr. Hall is the grandson of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe and the late Dr. Samuel Grindley Howe.

POLICE ON BURGLAR HUNT

THE MISSES BASS BADLY FRIGHTENED REFUSE TO SPEND NIGHT AT HOME.

Three cops and a special officer were called into action by a burglar scare on Second place last night. It was a full fledged scare of the old fashioned kind, with distraught damsels in the leading parts, and the whole neighborhood in the supporting roles.

The scare originated at No. 815. The Misses S. Lena Bass, Imogene B. Bass and Roberta Lee Bass live there. Shortly after 11 o'clock one of them heard a burglarious noise, and within two minutes all of them were certain that they were about to be murdered in cold blood. They lost no time in getting to a second story window to call for the police.

Their cries of distress aroused all the neighbors, and brave men flocked to their aid in soothing numbers. Special Officer Jeremiah Cash arrived a minute or two later, and said he would get the bad man in the house if the women would open the door for him. The Misses Bass declined and said they didn't dare leave their room. They were locked in, and they never, never would unlock the door until somebody came in and took the burglar out.

Officer Cash notified police headquarters, and Patrolmen Myers, Mc Keon and Higgins came down to the scene on a run. All four policemen, assisted by men in the big crowd that had gathered, made a thorough search of the premises. They couldn't find the burglar or any trace of him. All the windows and doors were properly fastened, and gave no indication of having been disturbed.

The Misses Bass were finally persuaded to leave their fortress, but they refused to stay in the house. As long as there was any doubt about the whereabouts of the "burglar" they preferred to be elsewhere. Sympathetic women neighbors took them in for the night.

Baby Camp Opens Tomorrow.

The opening of the King's Daughters' Baby Camp takes place tomorrow afternoon, from 3 until 6 o'clock. Carriages will run from the Somerset street trolley terminal to the camp every half hour during the time named. The committee hopes to see all who are interested in this good work as well as those who may not be interested now, but will be, it is hoped after a visit to the camp.

Hope Chapel Outing Aug. 20.

The Hope chapel excursion committee met last night to further plans for the annual Sunday-school outing to the shore. The excursion will take place August 20.

COMMON COUNCIL'S MINOR TRANSACTIONS

The City National Bank is Awarded the Garbage Crematory Bonds.

MORE ELECTRIC LIGHTS

ORDINANCE FOR ADDITIONAL MACADAMIZING PASSED ON SECOND READING.

Corporation Counsel Marsh Gives Advice Relative to Claim of Jas. Forrestel As to Blocking of College Place—Reports.

The City National Bank, being the only bidder, the Common Council at its meeting Tuesday awarded to it the issue of $3,100 worth of bonds, put out to pay for the purchase of the garbage crematory plant. The bid was for par and interest. These bonds are to be redeemed $700 at a time, as regular intervals.

Corporation Counsel Marsh sent in a statement relative to the notice served on the Council by James Forristol, who asks that C. T. Waring be compelled to remove a barn from College place, on the ground that the street was dedicated to public use by a former owner and that Waring, on that account, has no legal right to obstruct the thoroughfare. Mr. Marsh informed the Council that if the street was dedicated by a former owner the body had a right to accept it at any time and eject obstructionist property owners; that there was no statute of limitations to such a dedication. It was not under necessity to accept the street, however, if, in its opinion, the public need was not conserved by such action; that it was entirely within its own province to say that it was a street or that it was not. The communication was tabled.

Additional electric lights were ordered as follows: Two on North avenue, between Frederick street and Terrill road; one on Terrill road at Columbia avenue; two on West Sixth street, between Scott avenue and Berckman street; one on Denmark road at Berkeley avenue. A petition for three more lights on Clinton avenue, between Fourth and Seventh street, was received. A petition for the macadamizing of Berkeley avenue, from Belvidere avenue to Park terrace, and Denmark road, from Belvidere avenue to Berkeley avenue, signed by the Plainfield Land and Building Company and others, was received and referred to the street committee.

An ordinance, introduced by Mr. Tolles, providing for the following macadamizing work, was passed on its second reading: Monroe avenue, from South Second street to West Seventh street; Spooner avenue, from West Third street to West Eighth street; Lee place, from South Second street to West Seventh street; Carlton avenue, from Putnam avenue to East Seventh street; Randolph road, from Plainfield avenue to Cedar brook; Norwood avenue, from West Front street to West Seventh street; Berkeley avenue, from Belvidere avenue to Park terrace; Denmark road, from Belvidere avenue to the proposed macadamizing of Berkeley avenue.

City Judge Runyon reported that during the past six months there have been 129 arrests; 28 fines; 86 suspensions of sentence; two dismissed complaints; $137 was collected in fines. Police officers expended $86.80, leaving a balance of $98 in the court strong box.

$3,000 was transferred from the general fund to the fire department and $300 was transferred from the general fund to the poor fund. $90 was appropriated for the maintenance and repair of the town clock for a year.

The tax ordinance, for the collection of school taxes, was passed on its third reading. Councilman Daniel reported that the $60,000 worth of school bonds had actually been issued and the money was in the hands of the committee.

Building Inspector Doane reported that 19 permits had been issued during June.

Installation of Lodge Officers.

The newly elected officers of Freedom Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle, chosen last Tuesday, were formally installed last night. Deputy Grand Chief Kenny was the installing officer. Following the installation, an informal sociable was held. The entertainment committee passed refreshments and cigars.

WESTFIELD TENNIS CONTEST

COMPLETE SCORES IN THE ANNUAL CHAMPIONSHIP TOURNAMENT.

The best and most satisfactory tennis tournaments for the championship of the Westfield Club, began on Saturday and was concluded Monday night. The event was men's handicap singles, with this results:

C. S. Swaney, 0, defeated Roy Phillips, 2-6, by default, in the preliminary round; J. H. A. Williams, minus 15, defeated W. E. Tutte, Jr., 5-6, 6-4, 6-2; J. H. Kyte, 0, defeated F. S. Taggart, 2-6, by default; Herbert Knight, 2 6, defeated Lloyd Thompson, 4 6, 7-5, 6 3; E. C. Moody, 2-6, defeated George Tunison, 4 6, 8-6, 6-2. Chase Coale, 0, defeated Arthur Pierson, 5 6, 6 0, 6 3.

The first round resulted as follows: Carolus Clark, 4-6, defeated Ernest Aipers, 2-6, 6-3, 6 2; J. H. Craig, 0, defeated J. H. Punchoon, 5-6, 6 1, 6 1; C. L. Wrenn, 0, defeated Swaney, 6 4, 1-6, 6-1; Williams defeated Tutte, 6-4, 6-2; Knight defeated Moody, 6 0, 6-3; Coale defeated Thomas Gregory, 4 6, 6 4, 6-3; Oscar Richardson, 2 6, defeated Lawrence Clark, 4-6, 6 3, 4-6, 6-3; H. D. Rush, 4-6, defeated Evert Pierson, 5-6, 6 3, 6 3. This was the result of the second round; Clark defeated Craig, 6-4, 6-3; Williams defeated Wrenn, 6-3, 6 4; Knight defeated Coale, 6-3; 6-0; Oscar Richardson defeated Rush, 6-3, 6-2. In the semi-finals Williams defeated Carolus Clark, 6-4, 6-1; Oscar Richardson defeated Knight, 6-4, 6-3, and in the final play Williams defeated Oscar Richardson, 6-3, 6 2, 7 5.

SCHOOL DIRECTORS MEET

MUCH ROUTINE WORK IS ACCOMPLISHED BY BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The Board of Education met last Tuesday at Stillman High School, all members being present except L. N. Lovell. The routine business before the Board included the tax report, in which the collector stated the amount collected for school taxes during the month, to be $643.53. The custodian of school moneys announced the year's receipts to be $71,452.44 and the expenditures the same. Superintendent Maxson turned over something in excess of $100 collected as fines in the library and suggested that the Stillman and Irving School library accounts, which have been overdrawn about $40 each, be made up from that sum.

The question of teachers' salaries came up and was referred to the teachers' committee for consideration.

All the janitors of the school buildings were reappointed at the same salaries. Drs. T. H. Tomlinson and A. F. VanHorn, were reappointed medical inspectors for the Board.

The finance committee was empowered to borrow $4,000 to meet current obligations, in anticipation of taxes which come to the schools next fall.

The request of the trustees of the Seventh-Day Baptist church for payment of interest on purchase money of the new High School lot was committed to the clerk with power. The Board constructed to pay for the lot August 1, 1903, but were unable to do so because the school law was declared unconstitutional. Meanwhile the trustees had purchased lots at Hillside and expended a good deal of money in removing the bodies from the old grounds, hence they ask for four per cent. interest on the deferred payment.

TO RESELL PROPERTY.

Petition of James M. Bolce is Granted in Chancery Court.

The decision in the case of Abram V. D. Folbemus, complainant and John B. Prascilla, defendant, on the application of James M. Bolce, a brother of Eden Bolce, of this city, for an order to open a decree of foreclosure after sale and to enable him to file an answer and have a re-sale of the mortgaged property was filed by Vice Chancellor Stevens in the Court of Chancery, at Trenton yesterday, granting the petitioner the relief sought and order a re-sale of the mortgaged property.

The premises in question was what was known as the Raritan Landing property on the outskirts of New Brunswick. William Newcorn, of this city, represented Mr. Bolce.

Plainfield Exhibit at St. Louis.

One of the manganese steel vaults made by the Hibbard-Rodman-Hyde Safe Works is used by a big New York jewelry house to store its exhibit at the St. Louis Fair in after dark. The vault, attracts as much attention as if it were part of the exhibit.

MISS M. B. BODINE, J. P. DUNCAN'S BRIDE

Wedding at the Home of Her Parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Bodine, in Dunellen.

MANY FRIENDS PRESENT

REVS. R. F. Y. PIERCE AND W. W. CASSELBURY OFFICIATE.

Groom is Connected With New York Sun and His Bride a School Teacher—To Reside in Brooklyn.

Miss Mathena Beekman Bodine, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Bodine, of Dunellen, and John P. Duncan, of Tenafly, were married at the home of the bride on Dunellen avenue, Tuesday afternoon, at 5 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. F. Y. Pierce, of Scranton, Pa., an uncle of the bride, assisted by Rev. W. W. Casselberry, of the Dunellen Presbyterian church. The maid of honor was Miss Marion Duncan, a sister of the groom, and the flower girls were Miss Marion Hamilton, of Westfield, and Miss Beatrice Folbemus, of Newark. The best man was Spencer Smith, of Tenafly, and the ushers were Walter Bodine, a brother of the bride, and W. J. Hamilton, of Westfield. The bride was given away by her father. The Lohengrin wedding march was played.

The bride was gowned in chiffon over silk and carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. She wore a sunburst of pearls, the gift of the groom. The maid of honor wore pink muelle silk and carried pink carnations. The flower girls were dressed in white and carried flowers.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple left for an unknown destination to spend their honeymoon which will last for two weeks. Upon their return they will reside in Brooklyn. A large number of guests from Tenafly, New York, Brooklyn, Somerston and other places witnessed the nuptial affair.

The bride received a large number of valuable presents. The bride is a graduate of the State Normal School and has been teaching school at Tenafly. The groom is connected with the New York Sun.

PLAINFIELD SETTLES CLAIM

COMMON COUNCIL EFFECTS COMPROMISE FOR ALLEGED INFRINGMENT.

Compromise with the Cameron Septic Tank Company, of Chicago, which is suing the city for alleged infringement of its patents in the operation of the septic tank on Rock avenue, was voted at the meeting of the Common Council last night. The city agrees to pay the Cameron Company $4,000, getting in return a seven-years' license, and a guarantee of protection from any other suit for damages, particularly from the American Sewage Disposal Company, of Boston, which has been trying to get money from the city on a similar claim.

Councilman Bullock and Murphy opposed the resolution for compromise on the ground that it acknowledged the validity of the Cameron Company's patents, which had not been proved in court. Mr. Murphy thought it was the duty of the city to spend more money than the compromise sum, if necessary, to make the company prove its claim. Mr. Tyler explained that the claim was not of a bold-up character, but that it had strong legal basis, and the city stood to save money by paying the $4,000 rather than fighting the suit. The resolution went through over Messrs. Bullock and Murphy's nays. The $4,000 is to come out of the general fund at first, the fund to be afterwards reimbursed with money received from the sale of street work bonds.

Mrs. VanDew Dead.

Mrs. Margaret Blokaw VanDew, a former resident of this city and well-known here, died on Sunday at her home in Perth Amboy, aged eighty-two years. She was a sister of Mrs. Peter Dunn, who for many years had a millinery store on West Front street, and of A. Shapp's store. The interment will be at Bound Brook.

Frank W. Bailey, of Door street, is substituting for Letter-carrier C. B. Stephens, who is on his vacation.

Letter-carrier J. W. A. Bauernecke is detained at home by illness, and Carrier Charles Glasmire, who has been on his vacation, has been called in to work.

OUR INDUSTRIAL METHODS.

They Will Be Studied This Summer by Prussia's Noted Minister of Commerce.

Berlin (Germany) Special.

In further pursuance of his well-established policy of borrowing for the industrial Germany everything good which the United States has to offer, Emperor William has deputized his Prussian minister of commerce, Herr Theodore Moeller, to go to America in August, study the industrial side of the St. Louis exposition, and make an exhaustive investigation of commerce and finance, with a view to introducing in Germany whatever he finds

HERR THEODOR MOELLER.
(Minister of Commerce of the Kingdom of Prussia.)

worthy of recommendation. His trip will be what the Germans call a "Studienreise"—literally, a "study journey." "Studienreisen" to the United States are now considered an indispensable part of the equipment which a modern, up-to-date German business man must have. Dozens of big German merchants and manufacturers from all over the Fatherland will make them this summer, and it is therefore natural that Emperor William, who is the greatest German business man of all, should order his ministers to follow suit.

Herr Moeller, who is a Westphalian and 64 years old, is one of the few Germans occupying high government rank who come from "self-made" stock. Most German cabinet officers and high functionaries are barons, counts or nobles, with "von" attached to their names.

Herr Moeller, however, is the descendant of good old "buergerliche" progenitors. He is known throughout the country as "the long Moeller," on account of his extreme height. Moeller ranks as the leading authority and frankest advocate of the trust system in Germany. He believes that combination is the order of the age and that unless great manufacturing interests pool issues for a common purpose, Germany cannot hold its own in the markets of the world in competition with the great combines of America. He thinks, however, that the American "community of interests" idea is not ideal, because of the over capitalization feature and the piecing of too much power in a few hands.

The Prussian minister of commerce will be accompanied to America by four of his department chiefs. He will be the third official the kaiser has sent to the United States for such a mission.

PORTO RICO'S NEW CHIEF.

Judge Winthrop Chosen to Succeed William Hunt as Governor of the Tropical Island.

Washington (D. C.) Special.

President Roosevelt has selected Judge Beakman Winthrop, of the court of first instance, Philippine Islands, to succeed William Hunt as governor of Porto Rico. Judge Winthrop is from New York. He is a member of one of the oldest families of New York, a graduate of Harvard and a personal friend of President Roosevelt. He went to the Philippines as the assistant executive secretary to the Philippine commission.

JUDGE BEAKMAN WINTHROP.
(Appointed Governor of Porto Rico by the President.)

He made a record for efficiency and during the temporary absence of Mr. Ferguson acted for several months as secretary of the commission. During a brief sojourn in this country nearly two years ago Judge Winthrop saw much of the president and was entertained by him at the white house. Later he was appointed by the president as judge of the court of the first instance. The Philippine commission has expressed regret at the prospective loss of his services to the Philippine islands. Judge Winthrop will not assume office in Porto Rico until the beginning of the next fiscal year, July 1, it having been decided Gov. Hunt shall continue in the office until then.

Japanese Soldiers Are Quiet.

The soldiers of Japan are noiseless fighters. There are no bands, and no drums; and no matter how excited they are, they utter no shouts or cheers.

MARRIAGE IN JAPAN.

ANCIENT CEREMONIALS STILL IN VOGUE EVERYWHERE.

Grooms of Twenty Usually Wed Maids of Sixteen—Engagements Are of Short Duration and Quite Informal.

Tokio (Japan) Special.

A Japanese marriage is essentially a business transaction, and its celebration is remarkable for a total absence of sentiment of any kind. There is nothing characteristic of a religious ceremony about it. It is regarded by all concerned merely as a civil contract, and the presence of a priest is deemed quite unnecessary even by the most devout worshipers of Buddha.

All preparations for a marriage are undertaken by the friends of both parties, and the couple themselves are about the last persons whose advice is sought.

The engagement which precedes the marriage is of short duration. Such a thing as an engagement ring is quite unknown. In its place the young man gives his betrothed a rich sash of colored silk. The giving of presents is quite a curious feature of the engagement. These are given so lavishly that when the time comes to set up housekeeping the young couple find their resources almost exhausted. A bride receives no dowry, but she is provided instead with a trousseau and the necessary household furniture. Embroidered silks take the place of jewelry, which latter is not worn by the women of Japan.

On the momentous day the bride almost conceals her face under a thick coating of paint, and, in company with the bridegroom and all relations, goes to have the marriage formally registered in the office of the kocho, or mayor of the town. The real celebration commences in the evening, when the wedding feast takes place. This feast is more like a dinner-party than anything else, its chief features being the changing of garments and the drinking of enormous quantities of a rice-wine known as sake.

When dusk is falling the bride is taken to the house of her father-in-law in a palanquin, escorted by a little procession

WHEN DUSK IS FALLING.
(Taking Japanese Bride to House of Her Father-in-Law.)

carrying Chinese lanterns. The bride's relatives take their seats in one end of the principal apartment, while the bridegroom's friends sit opposite. The bride, dressed entirely in white, is led into the room by two richly-attired young girls. The bridegroom, who has already taken a seat in the middle of the room, makes no sign of recognition, but keeps his eyes fixed on the ground, while the bride seats herself opposite him. A table is then drawn forward, on which is placed a double-spouted kettle filled with hot sake.

Another table, loaded with eatables, is placed before each person, and the feast begins. The two girls who escorted the bride into the room hand cups of sake to the guests, who are expected to drain them to the dregs for luck.

After this ceremony the bride and bridegroom retire for a short time to change their costumes. When they return the two bridesmaids fill three cups with sake, and hand them to the bride and her parents-in-law. Three cups are imbibed by the father-in-law, who then gives the vessel to the bride. She in her turn drinks three cups, and receives a present from his hands. Another course, usually rice or fish, is now brought forward, and the bride goes through the same ceremony of drinking with the bridegroom's mother, afterwards receiving another present. A thin soup is then served, and three more cups of wine are drunk all round.

Then comes the great event of the evening. This is the almost sacred sake drinking by the married couple, which appears to constitute a kind of marriage service. The bridesmaids bring forward the double-spouted kettle and present it to the lips of the married pair. These drink alternately from it until its contents have been exhausted, the act being emblematical of the way in which they intend to share one another's joys and sorrows.

When the happy couple have partaken of the sake it falls to the ceremony is at an end. So well versed are the bride, bridegroom and relations in their roles that the whole affair passes off quite silently. There is no confusion. Each person knows what is expected of him, and does it in a mechanical way that gives the proceedings an air of monotony. After the marriage the bride continues to live in her father-in-law's house; for it is an almost invariable rule that a wedded couple shall dwell during their first months of married life at the house of the bridegroom's father.

Australia's Public Debt.

Australia's public debt averages £278 for every man, woman and child in the country; that of the United States is only $15 for each person.

BEGAN LIFE AS A LABORER.

Republican Candidate for Governor of Indiana a Fine Type of Self-Made Man.

Lafayette (Ind.) Special.

J. Franklin Hanly, who was nominated by the republicans for governor of Indiana, presents a living example of a poor boy who has risen by virtue of his own efforts. Five years before being elected to congress he was a ditcher and common farm hand, working for 70 cents a day. He was born in a log cabin in Champaign county, Illinois, April 4, 1863. His father was an invalid and his mother blind. At 11 years of age he was the sole support of his helpless parents, never seeing the inside of a schoolhouse until 16 years old. At 15 he walked to Warren county, Indiana, and got a job of sawing wood at 50 cents a day. The next five years he worked on a farm and went to school in winter. Later he taught school and studied law, beginning his professional practice at Williamsport. In 1890 he was elected state senator for the counties of Warren and Franklin. In 1894 he was nominated for congress in the old Ninth district. His election gave Indiana its youngest congressman in 40 years. He is married and lives at Lafayette.

J. FRANKLIN HANLY.
(Nominated for Governor by the Republicans of Indiana.)

The platform on which Mr. Hanly runs pledges new confidence in the wisdom and efficacy of the protective tariff, with a change of schedules as conditions demand, but made consistently with the policy of protection. It advocates the gold standard, approves the course of President Roosevelt with reference to combinations of capital in restraint of trade, approves the reciprocity treaty with Cuba, the Panama transactions, the Philippine policy, international arbitration and a just pension policy.

THE AIRSHIP IN WARFARE.

Its Use Eloquently Urged by M. Santos-Dumont, the Famous Brazilian Aeronant.

Paris (France) Special.

Santos-Dumont, the noted aeronaut, in his book entitled "My Airships," strongly urges the use of airships for scouting purposes in time of war.

"An airship is able to observe the movements of both a land and a naval force," he says in his volume. "This should be sufficient to convince naval and military experts that balloons have tremendous advantage over scouting ships or outposts on land, and I will not be surprised to see airships used extensively by all the great powers within the next few years.

"The normal place of the airship should be in low altitudes; as then they are in a position to see everything closely There is little danger of their being struck by shot or shell, as a balloon can be so constructed that its speed will make it almost impossible for the most expert sharpshooter or gunner to strike the airship."

M. SANTOS-DUMONT.
(Brazilian Aeronaut Who Believes in Use of Airships in War.)

Santos-Dumont also believes that the aldship might be usefully employed in locating submarines and signaling their presence to battleships.

Japanese Soldiers' Rations.

Rice and dried fish is the uniform food of the Japanese army in campaigning times. This is the way in which the rice is cooked: It is boiled until quite thick and glutinous. Next it is placed on a ceramic slab, rolled out, and cut into squares. The squares are then placed in the sun to dry and often turned. When hard as tea biscuit and greatly reduced in weight, they can be stored. A certain number are allowed each day to the soldier. All he has to do is to break up a square in boiling water and to add the dried fish. In a few minutes he has what seems to him a delicious thick soup. If he cannot procure boiling water he simply eats his rice dry. In the fruit season he substitutes fruit, when he can obtain it, for the fish.

TALL AND SHORT WOMEN.

They Have to Adopt Separate Versions of the Prevailing Modes.

The fashion of piping, gauging and ruching is well fitted for summer costumes, but at the same time it is very trying to small or stout people. These last should remember that styles may be modified for their benefit and still remain in good taste. The full gathered ruffles are especially trying, and no woman under the average height should even think of them. For the short woman there are skirts eased in a trifle around the hips and trimmed around the bottom very simply with two or three folds of silk, better still, a couple of ruchings to give the effect of fullness. There are also the pin tucked skirts, which are allowed to flare from above the knees down and are only trimmed with a bias fold or two around the feet.

AN ELABORATE MODEL.

Nothing is more unsightly than the serpent-like skirt of a few seasons ago done in muslin.

Recently spotted muslin seen recently was trimmed with insertions of plaited muslin edged on either side with tiny baby blue ribbon. These insertions became wider and wider as they neared the bottom, finishing at last in a mass of frills. As the wearer lifted her gown one might glimpse of a bewitching blue glace silk petticoat. The waist was buttoned in the back and was adorned with a scroll pattern of the plaited muslin edged with the ribbon ruching. Above this there was a deep yoke made of white Irish lace over chiffon, while the elbow sleeves were edged with ruchings and plaitings.

The picture shows a foulard silk gown trimmed with yellow lace. There is a particularly good long shouldered effect, and the skirt illustrates an elaborate shirred model.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

UP TO DATE MODES.

The Latest Hats Turn Up at the Side. Shirt Waist Suits.

Many of the new hats turn up at the sides and are trimmed on the upturned brim by a bunch of roses or a coq plume. Small toques are trimmed on both sides, geisha fashion, and dressy hats are loaded with long and handsome ostrich feathers.

Taffetas of every shade vie with foulard gowns for shirt waist dresses. Some of these taffetas are almost white in color, being merely ruled here and there by hair lines of black. Others are in the new coral pink and old rose tones, the pattern being a tiny dot. Still others again are in a grayish green changeable tone with silvery effects.

CHILD'S DRESS.

Envelope shirt waist hats are made of lightweight white straw, turned up on one side and filled in with a twist of white chiffon or a wreath of white roses.

The picture shows a child's dress of white lawn and lace over pink silk. The ribbons are also pink and are run through insertions. With this is worn a poke bonnet trimmed with two roses under the brim and pink ribbon.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

MODESTY OF CROWN PRINCE

Heir to Germany's Throne Was Too Retiring to Take Kindly to Military Life.

"Go now," said the kaiser, "and be a student."

The art of being a student in Germany is, as everyone who has tried it knows, rather complicated, writes Vance Thompson, in Success. The getting of book lore is supplemented by much clashing of schlaeger, by some bloodletting, by a great deal of loud singing, and by deep drinking of beer. Whether it be Jena or Bonn or Heidelberg, it is all the same. The young philosopher must show his prowess both in the beer-duel and in the less dangerous duel with swords. The young prince was not only permitted to attend the classic bier-kneipe; he was also ordered to attend and drink as became the heir to the German throne. It was an imperial and paternal command.

Can you imagine the scene?

The crown prince was not only modest, but was also timid as a child, in spite of his military rank. He had been brought up in the rigor of Prussian discipline, and under the caprice of home tyranny; the slightest fault had been punished with military severity; he was repressed and bashful lad, but no more. The youth, sentimental, poetical and pure-minded, was thrown into the broad-girthed, brawling, guzzling proletariat of a German university, and commanded to compete with such fellows in their coarse pleasures. In huge, smoky, lamp-lit cellars, it was his to drink down mugs of beer at a word of command from some gross "president" or beer-lord; to sing when he was told or howl in chorus, and to play for scars in the foolish game of swords. Germany is a land of castes, but its student-world is utter democracy. It is well enough for a coarse-grained youth, who has been roughened in a "gymnasium," to take a cut at a sword; but what will come out of it a grave doctor, lawyer or theologian; but for a timid lad, bred in the quasi-monastery of a court, it is not so well. The crown prince found it anything but well. He begged to be allowed to forego, at least for his month stay, to attend only the lectures and spend his time in study. The kaiser told him his choice was between the bier-kneipe and a military prison, so the young man finished his semester. Can the vacation of the youth, though he had shown no great beer-prowess, was rewarded with a trip to his royal kin in England. There he was to receive another education; that of high life, l'education mondaine. His professor was to be the "first gentleman in Europe"—as the fond English call him—his great-uncle, Edward VII.

HARD TIME GETTING SLEEP.

Traveling Man Goes to Bed Four Times in One Night, But Is Still Drowsy.

"Talking about sleep," remarked the man with the tired rings around his eyes, relates the Chicago Tribune, "I like to remark that last night I slept in two hotels and two sleeping cars, and still had to get up sleepy to a dining-car breakfast just outside of Chicago.

"The house wanted me to look up a man down here in the southern part of Illinois, so I left Chicago for Jacksonville about midnight Thursday. I got to Jacksonville at seven o'clock the next morning, and half an hour later caught a train for the little town of Virginia, where I thought my man lived. But he wasn't there. He was living away on a farm, and when a driver in a top buggy started with me for the farm it was just ten degrees below zero, having been 17 degrees below three hours before.

"I got over at the farm we didn't find the man. He had gone to Chandlerville, four miles away. We drove there over still rougher roads, found him, and started back to Virginia, getting there in time for six o'clock supper. The best way back to Chicago was said to be by way of Beardstown and Galesburg, with the train leaving for Beardstown, 12 miles away, at 8:30 o'clock.

"After supper I went to bed and slept an hour and a half, catching the 'bus for the Beardstown train. I got to Beardstown at nine o'clock, only to find that the Chicago train did not leave there until 12:30. I got into a hotel 'bus and rode uptown, and went to bed again for nearly three hours. When I got back to the station I discovered that there was no through sleeper to Chicago—that it went only to Galesburg, where it arrived at four o'clock. As a concession possible because of connecting trains, I could sleep until 4:25, and I should have done so if a man with delirium tremens hadn't wakened me up at 3:45 o'clock sharp.

"But I got into a Chicago sleeper at last, just before five o'clock, and the way I hammered my ear till eight o'clock was a caution.

"But maybe you think I'm not going to sleep to-night!"

Paris School for Dogs.

A school for dogs is the latest development of the educational movement. It has been established in Paris, with the object of teaching, not letters, but politeness. The schoolroom is furnished with chairs, tables and rugs, to give the necessary "local color" to the surroundings. The dog pupils are trained to welcome visitors by jumping up, wagging the tail and giving a low bark. When the visitor leaves, the dog accompanies him to the door and bows his farewell by bending his head to the floor. He is trained likewise to pick up a handkerchief, glove or fan that has been dropped and return it to the owner. He is taught further to walk with "proud and prancing steps" when out with his mistress.

Big Eaters of Grass.

A sheep eats seven hundredweight grass in a year, and a cow 50 hundredweight.

ELEVATOR RED TAPE

A STORY THAT REMINDS ONE OF MEDIEVAL TIMES.

Rules of Precedence in the War Department at Washington Would Please a Russian Court Official.

Washington (D. C.) Special.

To be an elevator conductor in most buildings is the United States requires no especial intellectual qualifications. Not so with an elevator conductor in the war department at Washington. He is required to have a knowledge of rank and precedence that should enable him to seat guests at a state dinner at the white house properly.

The New York Sun correspondent describes the way of it. The carriage of the secretary of war is sighted several blocks away. Word is immediately passed down the line and finally it reaches the watchman nearest the elevator. He rushes like mad to the electric button and presses three quick and fierce rings.

Quick as a flash the elevator descends to the basement as if the rope had suddenly been cut. It makes no difference who is in the car nor what floor it is at now how important the business of those aboard.. Down for the secretary it must go.

By the time Mr. Secretary gets to the shaft the car is waiting for him. Were the general staff on the floors above to ring all at once that elevator could not budge till Mr. Secretary was safely on the second floor.

Nor is the boy's task much simplified after depositing the civil head of the army in his handsome office. For instance, the lieutenant general and chief of staff wishes to visit the library on the top floor. One major general is ringing vigorously on the floor above. A brigadier general is ringing and swearing and threatening to have the boy fired on the floor above that, and so on.

Of course, the lieutenant general goes without stop to the library. On the downward trip of the car the brigadier general is passed for the accommodation of the major general going to luncheon with a senator.

Now the car goes rapidly back to pick up the brigadier general, who is in a

WILLIAM ALDEN SMITH.
(Michigan Congressman Who Abhors Washington Red Tape.)

hurry to join some friends. Just as it gets within one floor of the bottom with the brigadier general, the lieutenant general finishes his errand in the library and the button of the lieutenant general is pressed, and the already overworked little car again heads for the top of the building and gets the military head of the army, who gets out at the second floor, just as the secretary of war gets in to go up a few flights.

The brigadier general is on board all the time, mind you, and very hungry and very thirsty, for he knows the delightful repast awaiting him. Finally the secretary gets out and allows the elevator man to get the brigadier general to the ground floor, from which he speeds to the nearest cab call and vanishes for the day.

William Alden Smith, of Michigan, described the war department elevator in the house of representatives the other day thus:

"I want to say to this house that a representative directly from the people has no standing in the national capitol, in the estimation of these political cruisers. I know a department of this government where they have issued orders to the elevator man that whenever a bureau chief gets on the elevator he shall be promptly delivered to his floor, whether representatives ever are assisted to their destination or not. He may carry a representative in congress up and down the heights and depths of that building without stopping to let him off, no matter how urgent his mission; and he do not even allow him mileage for what he travels."

And as for the poor, little, everyday, ordinary government clerk in the war department, who does the real work of the department, and whose business is always more urgent than that of army officers, he presses the button with the same doubt that he drops a nickel in a chance slot machine in the hope of getting a cigar, knowing the chances are against him, yet filled with that natural desire to tempt fate.

Emperor Respects His Jaw.

The emperor of Korea has a tender regard for his royal jaw. While gorging himself at a feast in his palace, a little bit of bone came between his imperial grinders and one tooth was broken. The emperor promptly sent to prison his cook and the entire kitchen force. After a few months, a dentist appeared in Kingkitao, the capital, and he inserted an artificial tooth at an expense of about $500. The kitchen attendants were then set at liberty, but the chef must serve three months without pay.

SPIES EMPLOYED BY JAPS.

A System That Takes in Persons of All Nationalities to Effect Its Ends.

I am rather inclined to believe that Japan gets her best information through corrupt or careless Russians and through Chinamen in Russia employ, writes a correspondent of the New York Herald. The big burly, roaring Russian, who likes his bottle and his dog and, most of all, his champagne, has probably no idea of the net which the smiling, sedentary, keen-witted leaders of the two great divisions of the yellow race are silently weaving around him.

But, leaving the Japanese out of the question, there is a sufficient number of mysterious and sometimes weird Europeans here to supply the novelist with an illimitable amount of material for character studies. Here is a Swedish gentleman, formerly an officer in the army, who is exceedingly anxious to know what is happening, and whose presence is, I take it, a proof of the great interest Scandinavia takes in the coming contest, a contest which may show her how she, too, may yet be absorbed by the northern colossus or how greatly the strength of that colossus has been overestimated.

Then there is a gentleman who represents himself as a British colonel, and who goes to the theater in his khaki uniform, gets photographed with all his medals on and does other things that one would scarcely expect a real British colonel to do in a foreign fortress.

Sometimes these strange characters disappear with strange abruptness. Some time ago our little community included a teacher of the English language, who led a blameless life until he was discovered early one morning gazing with mild astonishment at the big guns in a battery. He is now gone from among us.

The writer, who is now in Russian employ, once received a visit from a high military official of a foreign power who had come to the place in disguise, and who, after some preliminary conversation, calmly asked him to procure some military lists and other important documents.

I mention this matter under the heading "Strange Disappearances," because my disappearance would have seemed strange enough to my friends if I had agreed to the proposition made to me, but, of course, it was not the fear of discovery and punishment that made me reject the offer. I like the Russians in spite of all their drawbacks, and even if I did not like them I should certainly decline to sink from newspaper correspondent to spy.

EARTHQUAKES COME OFTEN

Japan Is Shocked Almost Every Day and May Some Time Be Submerged.

From 20 to 50 earthquakes occur daily in the world, and the average gives Japan about 300 a year. It would be a pretty thing if some morning we were to wake up and find our little friends blotted out of the map. Greater cataclysms have occurred; oceans flow where once dry land was and continents to-day give homes to millions of human beings where formerly the leviathan swam. A small fissure, leading to a great fire one, one hundred fathoms of the sea or river to the heated rocks below, the flashing of the water into steam, a mighty explosion—and then we need a revision of maps.

Nature is a master builder. Chili rides 9,000 feet higher than she did 150 years ago. She was upheaved all along her sea front in a single hour in 1750. The Runn of Cutch and the coast of Chittagong became correspondingly lower a dozen years ago. An earthquake may change a volcano's crater to a mountain to a valley. How deep these disturbances are it is not easy to say, but they have been traced to a depth of 24 miles. From the center of the disturbance shocks which have affected the whole earth have radiated.

While harmful inevitable earthquake is credited with some of the biggest juggling feats on record. One curiosity occurred at the fort of San Carlos, where the flagstaff, sunk 30 feet in the ground and secured with iron rods, was suddenly shot high into the air, leaving a clean round hole where it had been. The Riobamba convulsion sent the bodies of the inhabitants whirling across the river and deposited them on the top of La Culla, a hill 300 feet in height. During the Calabrian and New Madrid (Mo.) earthquakes trees were observed to rock and swing till their branches touched the ground and in the end righted themselves. Perhaps the strangest story is that which a Jamaican gravestone tells: "Here lieth the body of Lewis Gaily, Esq., who died on the 22d of September, 1737, aged 80. He was born at Montpelier, in France, which plague he left for his religion, and settled on this island, where, in the great earthquake, 1672, he was swallowed up and by the merciful providence of God by a second shock was thrown out into the sea, where he continued swimming until he was taken up by a boat and thus miraculously preserved."

Silent Auctions in China.

To a stranger a Chinese auction is a most curious spectacle. The auctioneer leans over a slightly elevated counter and exhibits his wares. He says nothing; neither does the bidder, who merely steps forward to the auctioneer and runs his fingers up his sleeve, making pressure on the salesman's arm, thus indicating how much he will pay for the article. Then another and another repeat this action, until the one signifying the highest price receives the articles without a word being exchanged on either side. Only the auctioneer and the successful bidder know the price offered and accepted.—Lahore Tribune.

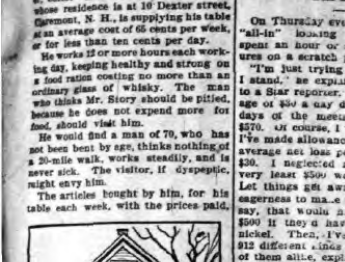
LIVES ON SMALL DIET.

New Hampshire Editor, Seventy Years old, Spends Sixty-Five Cents a Week for Food.

While some of Uncle Sam's commissary officials are being worried by people who wish to learn if it is possible to live on a food ration costing only 15 cents per day, Samuel H. Story, printer, editor and newspaper publisher, whose residence is at 16 Dexter street, Claremont, N. H., is supplying his table at an average cost of 65 cents per week, or for less than ten cents per day.

He works 12 or more hours each working day, keeping healthy and strong on a 20-mile walk, works steadily, and is never sick. The visitor, if dyspeptic, might envy him.

The articles bought by him, for his table each week, with the prices paid, are as follows: Thirty-six graham biscuits, 36 cents; a pound of pork, 12 cents; pork scraps, five cents; one pound sugar, five and one-half cents; cheese, ten cents; a quarter of a pound of ginger costing eight cents, and a pound of chocolate costing 20 cents lasts him a month.



WHERE STORY LIVES.
(Home of New England Editor Who Lives on 65 Cents a Week.)

He buys neither milk, tea nor coffee, but drinks either chocolate or a weak infusion of ginger with his meals. His luxuries, he says, are lemons in the summer, when lemonade takes the place of ginger tea, and apples in the winter.

In the winter he often walks to Cornish, a distance of six miles, chops wood through the day and walks home at night. He gets to Cornish before daylight, and does not return until after it becomes too dark to chop.

He was born in Claremont August 15, 1823. His father was of Scotch and his mother of German descent. He has worked at the type case since 1843, and has published a newspaper here since 1870. His creeds are brief. He says: "I believe in living a pure life and in right doing, but have no religious preference.

"I do not believe in the free and unlimited coinage of drunkards. For all good women I have a liking, but never wished to kiss or marry one. Have been a bachelor from choice. I love quiet, and would not like to place myself where I would have to endure the year and tear of married life."

Mr. Story refuses to be photographed, and hides when he fears a snapshot will be attempted.

JOHN LEE WEBSTER.

Nebraska Republicans Want to See Him Nominated for Second Place Next June.

John Lee Webster, whose friends are organizing in Nebraska to procure for him the republican nomination for vice president, is a lawyer of Omaha and is widely known for his defense of the Indians and for other cases in which he has disclosed legal talent of an unusually high order. He has won his prominent position at the bar by innate ability and unrelenting industry. He is a native of Ohio and 57 years of age. He has been quite prominent in the political affairs of his state. In 1901 he was a candidate for the United States senatorship, and he was a delegate at large and chairman of the state delegations to the national conventions of 1892 and 1896. Mr. Webster also was a delegate to the last Nebraska state constitutional convention and was honored by being elected its president. A committee has been organized to advocate his claims before the national convention in Chicago next June.

JOHN LEE WEBSTER.
(Nebraska's Favorite for Republican Nomination for Vice President.)

Clothing for Stage Favorites.

Appreciation of good acting is strangely expressed in some parts of Japan. The theater patrons throw portions of their clothing on the stage, and give the performance reigns the air with money going to the actor or retreats who has excited their admiration.

PLAYING THE RACES.

WASHINGTONIAN SAYS IT IS AN EXPENSIVE SPORT.

He Attended the Bennings Meetings Nineteen Times at Enormous Cost of Hard Cash and Self-Respect.

On Thursday evening a worried and "all-in" looking Washington man spent an hour or so making idle figures on a scratch pad.

"I'm just trying to dope out where I stand," he explained, disconsolately, to a Star reporter. "I've lost an average of $50 a day during the 19 racing days of the meeting. That makes $570. Of course, I won a few bets, but I've made allowance for those, and the average net loss per diem for me was $30. I neglected my business at the very least $500 during the 19, if not more. Let things get away from me, in my eagerness to make the track, that is to say, that would have brought me in $500 if they'd have netted me in a nickel. Then, I've framed up about 912 different ideas or 'ines, and no two of them alike, explaining to disconsolate how it was that I couldn't meet them, in order to make a wild dash for the track as the racing hour drew nigh.

"I've spoiled three suits of clothes, one rain coat and one overcoat and two pairs of shoes, in the betting ring, being jostled and joggled and pushed and pulled and tugged and hauled and knocked around and stepped upon and gouged and elbowed and prodded and chucked aside, and so on.

"I have suffered the physical and mental torture of having my horse left or nearly left at the post eight times, and there's no way of estimating just how much that's taken out of me. Every time a man goes through the grueling misery of being left at the post just so many days are lopped off his life. I know it. You can't tell me any different.

"I've been mistaken in the colors of my horse four times, so that on four occasions I have presented the idiot's and egregious spectacle of rooting violently and noisily for the horse sweeping with long strides into the stretch when he wasn't the one I played to win at all. The chagrin which afflicts a man who does this is also of so keen and agonizing a nature that it is bound to shorten his days.

TELLING HIS TALE OF WOE.

"I have been grossly insulted by eight or ten different heavy-jawed bookmakers when, after having bet all of my money except a dollar, I have sneaked up to their stools and offered to make dollar bets. 'Aw, I ain't takin' no dollar bets from pikers!' these bookmakers have overwhelmed me by growling at me out of one corner of their mouths, while people I knew standing about have chuckled at my discomfiture.

"I have been compelled to make all sorts of groveling explanations of my weakness to friends to whom, at the close of the Bennings meeting last fall, I swore that I never intended to look at another race as long as I lived.

"I have been so stingy with myself in order to have all of the incoming dough to bet that I haven't bought a necktie or a pair of suspenders or a collar since the middle of March, and the first thing I know, if I don't buck up, I'll be pointed out by my friends as a buzzard who got to his sad estate through playing the ponies.

"I have gone to the trolley cars by my eyebrows in my eagerness to get to the track, and on one day I got to the track too late to play the 50 to 4 shot in the first race that I had been told was a sure thing, and that I found, when I arrived late, had won in a common canter by 15 lengths.

"I have growled like blazes when my wife told me that she needed $8.79 to buy a spring hat that had made a hit with her, when I've had in my jeans several hundred dollars of money carefully hoarded to chuck at the bookmakers in order to enable them to get their wives hats and things of the kind that my wife never even dreams of.

"I've paid 75 cents apiece for dozens of cigars that I didn't want, that I wouldn't use for cholera fumigators anywhere else.

"I forgot to mention the $1.50 a day that I paid for badges for straight 19 days in order to get a chance to throw my hard-earned coin at the birds.

"I've got my nerves in such a jangled up state that I won't be able to transact any business until I begin to simmer down, which will take at least a week.

"In short, now that the tumult and the shouting have died away, I feel like an infinitesimal portion of fromage de brie.

"Great Caesar, the chance of living by!"

"But what's the use?"

AMERICAN GIRLS IN MEXICO.

Their Mission as Reformers Changes the Customs of Native Women of Fashion.

Uncle Jacob not long ago was riding in one of those trolleys here called ecos electrios, on his way down town to discover whether exchange was up in the skies or on the sea level. Just before his stopping place, La Calle de Gante, his flying machine, vulgo "car," passed another; in it he caught just a glimpse of an American girl, fair of complexion, beautiful in features and carriage, one of those American girls who make the United States famous, that marry princes, dukes, counts, millionaires or ordinary good men, as their hearts may desire or their caprice direct. It was all over in a moment, the young lady was only visible from the shoulders up. But the face and the dip of her hat caught the eye and, catching, held it. The drapery of said hat could not have been more graceful, yet the effect total was that of the utmost simplicity. Oh, artful simplicity, how thou drawest the hearts of men to thee! Those large, blue eyes, clear, white and rosy complexion, round but firm chin, all so truly Anglo-Saxon, were but a fleeting and enchanting vision, just coming, glance, says a writer in Modern Mexico.

Uncle Jacob fell into a brown study, and nearly forgot to leave the "electro" at the corner nearest "the man" he was going to see. He was reflecting what changes had come over these happy streets since the advent of the American girl. Uncle Jacob is a bachelor, a foreigner of many years residence in Mexico. Years ago, in the far-off New England states, a plump little maiden called him that in a generalized heart go pit-a-pat, pit-a-pat. He still remembers this charming dream of his youth, in soft white, muslin and pale blue sash, therefore his love for delicate, discreet colors.

Formerly he wore the mantillas becoming to many, but often hiding more beauty than they allowed to be seen. Now, light and becoming hats, allowing the well-dressed hair of the Mexican senoritas to be seen, have taken their place. Formerly it was considered improper to show the frontilles sending for muestras or samples, be it for a yard of manta or a $50 hat. This was the cause of much sending to and fro, with the ancient mode of no fixed prices, and then the feeling of distrust if "Pulanita" or "Sotanita" were charging more than the other.

Now, all purchasing is done by the women going to the stores, choosing what they like, which is much quicker and better for buyer and seller.

Uncle Jacob remembers very well the small, dingy show windows filled with dress goods of hideous purple, infernal wine color, maroon color, guisada. In Spanish, and shrieking pinks and blues. Not that the Mexican girl has not innate good taste; she may like a little more color than her northern sister, but her love of flowers has taught her that delicate taste which we all admire in the dainty ball dresses of the Mexican senorita at society gatherings. But men, not women, bought the dry goods imported to Mexico, probably very often what Europe refused. Only the very rich could order robes from the extranjero. The American girl came, saw and conquered the shopkeeper. She plainly told him that she must have what she was accustomed to find in Uncle Sam's domains; she must have goods in defetas, organdies, etc., in the proper quality and of stylish design, or she would, with the improved facilities, order from "at home" what she wanted. Hence the improvement of shop windows and assortment. You now find seats of some kind for the weary shopper in all the stores. Parcels are sent home, and there are a great many places where you can get real ice cream.

Uncle Jacob was all ready to go into a reflection as to the improvement of largartijos and other admirers of el bello sexo when some one spoke, awakening him to actual life. This some one was much surprised to hear Uncle Jacob say bravely the American girl has had a mission."

Few Blossoms Bring Fruit in Japan.

"I would hesitate to say that the Japs would rather fight than eat," said a Philadelphian who has spent considerable time in Japan, "but I do know that they would rather feast their eyes than their stomachs. They are great lovers of the beautiful, and that is the reason there is little fruit raised in Japan, in spite of the fact that there are plenty of fruit trees, and the climate is ideal. Instead of allowing the blossoms to remain on the trees and mature, they are cut off in sprays and are used for decorating the interiors of the houses. The Japs would much rather use the blossoms in this way than to raise the fruit. Imagine an American using cherry blossoms for decorative purposes rather than eating the cherries. But, then, the American hasn't the poetic soul of the Jap."—Philadelphia Record.

Long-Lost Rings.

Two rings stolen from a house in Massachusetts 33 years ago lately came into the possession of George L. Bliss of Brewton, son of the original owner. They are mourning rings, family heirlooms, and were stolen by a discharged servant. They were recently purchased by an honest man, who, finding that they were marked with names not accounted for in the personality of the vendor, turned them over to the police, with the idea that they might have been stolen. The newspapers published descriptions of the rings, and Mr. De Blois came into the city from seeing the stories.—N. Y. Sun.

CUTTING UP A BEEF

Points That Should Be of Value to the Home Butcher.

How It Can Be Done to the Best Advantage — How the Different Sections Should Be Cooked.

In cutting any kind of meat one should always cut across the grain of the meat. Following this principle will result in uniform pieces and the joints will be more easily carved after cooking.

Beef should not be cut until the muscles have set firmly. When they are in the proper condition divide the halves into hind and fore quarters, from 8 to T, between the twelfth and thirteenth ribs (Fig. 1). This leaves one rib in the hind quarter. Lay the hind quarter on the block or table with the inside up. Remove the kidney and suet. Cut off the flank as indicated by the line N to P in the illustration. Turn the quarter over and cut off the loin, beginning at the middle of the sacrum near O, and cutting to a point one and a half or two inches above the stifle joint at N. Turn the remainder of the quarter over and separate the rump from the round just below the pelvic arch and parallel to the backbone, as indicated by line R to L.

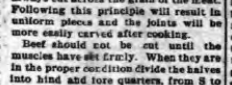

Fig. 1.—Carcass of Beef Showing Wholesale Cuts.

Lay the fore quarter on the block with the outside up. Beginning at P (Fig. 1), 10 to 13 inches down the rib from the spinal column—the distance depending on the thickness of the meat—cut across the ribs to the armpit above M. Cut between the third and fourth ribs to M, and then across the shank to B. Then cut off the "cross ribs" just below the shoulder joint, H to X.

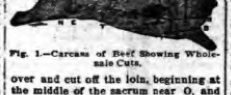

Fig. 3—Square Chuck of Beef Showing Divisions. a, Neck; b, Shoulders; c, Chuck Ribs; d, Cross Ribs.

The prime "ribs" (Fig. 2) are then taken off between the fifth and sixth ribs, counting from the front. This cut contains seven ribs and is usually taken off in one piece, though it may be cut into as many as are desired. Cut off the remaining five ribs called "chuck ribs" (Fig 3 C), making the division between the first rib and the shoulder bone. Divide the neck and shoulder—G to H.

The "cross ribs," the name of course, varied to suit customs and families. There is no portion of the carcass but what may be cooked by boiling or by roasting.

The flank is usually boiled or braized but is also suitable for corning. Flank steak is sometimes cut from the lean muscle on the inside of the flank. The loin is commonly cut into steaks, though fancy trade often demands its use for roasting. In cutting steak from the loin one should begin at the "butt," or rear end, and cut parallel to the line N O (Fig. 1). The first slices cut are the sirloin steaks (Fig. 4 A). They continue until the "hook point" is passed, when the slices are termed porterhouse steaks (Fig. 4 B). These contain both the sirloin and tenderloin muscles, the sirloin above the spinous processes and the tenderloin muscle below. Unless both muscles are present it is not porterhouse steak. The porterhouse steaks are often erroneously called tenderloin steaks. The tenderloin steak consists of only the tenderloin muscle stripped from beneath the loin. Since it destroys the value of the porterhouse steaks to strip out the tenderloin muscle the tenderloin steaks are usually taken from this cattle of the "canner" class. Porterhouse steaks are cut from the hip bone forward until the end of the tenderloin muscle is reached.

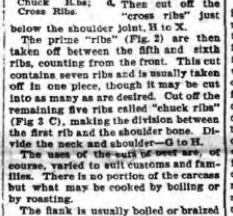

Fig. 2.—Prime Ribs of Beef. a, Rolled Roast; b, Folded Roast; c, Standing Roast.

The seven best ribs are used as oven roasts, and may be divided into one, two or three-rib pieces, as desired. It is from this joint that the rolled roasts are obtained, hence its high value. The chuck-rib cut may likewise be subdivided into one or two-rib pieces for oven roasts, or, in the case of old or tough beef, for pot roasts. In making the "best rib" and "chuck rib" cuts the divisions should always be made parallel with the ribs. The shoulder is used for boiling, corning or mince meat; the piece cut in strips across the ribs is for corning and corning, and the shanks and neck for soup stock, mince meat or sausage.

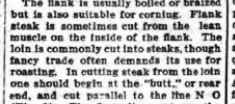

Fig. 4—Loin of Beef. a, Sirloin Steak; b, Porterhouse Steak; c, Sirloin Strip.

ANDREW BOSS.

FRENCH NOT IMMIGRANTS.

There Are No Organizations for the Encouragement of Emigration to America.

The number of French citizens who desire to expatriate themselves is so small that neither the government nor private parties have created organizations for aiding and stimulating emigration.

The medical examination of all emigrants is made by the French emigration doctor (an official appointed by the French government), by the chief medical officer of the French line, by the doctor of the steamer upon which the emigrants are to be embarked, and by two other medical officers belonging to the steamers of the French line then in port; so that each emigrant is generally examined by at least five physicians. Special attention is paid to diseases of the eyes, skin, and scalp, and immediately an emigrant is found whose entry into the United States is considered doubtful he is placed at one side and kept there until all the emigrants have passed. Then the physicians gathered together, examine him again, and consult over his case. He is then refused or accepted. All the emigrants are vaccinated, and, after being examined by the last physician before whom they pass, are given a card stating that they have been vaccinated and have passed the sanitary examination. They then, to gain access to the ship, are obliged to go through a narrow exit through which only one person can pass at a time, and are again inspected by three officers—the steamship physician and one of the French line's medical officers, to whom the emigrant must show his card. At the gangway of the steamer the card must again be exhibited to an employe of the company before the emigrant can embark. The medical examinations are conducted in the presence of myself or the vice consul.

The most undesirable emigrants who embark at Havre for the United States are those who come from the Levant via Marseilles. The percentage of Syrians Turks, and Greeks refused at New York and sent back during 1902 was much larger than that of the emigrants from other countries.

The ability of our country to assimilate the class of emigrants which is now pouring into the United States, the bulk of which coming, as it does, from races socially and politically different from our own, is a question which is rightfully giving most concern to those who are interested in the future welfare of our country. In addition to the proposed legislation to decrease undesirable emigration to the United States, educational requirement and the mental capacity of the alien, age limit of 50 years, refusal of all aliens who are physically deformed, etc., I would most earnestly recommend that a certificate of admission, issued by our consular officers in the consulates nearest to the places from which the emigrants commence their journey, duly visaed and stamped by the consular officers at the ports of embarkment, be required of each emigrant before being allowed to enter the United States. As an additional safeguard a heavy fine should be imposed on all steamship companies who would bring emigrants not provided with consular certificates of admission. Such certificate would contain a full description of the person to whom it is given, by which he or she could be easily identified, and should only be issued after careful and searching examinations of the would-be emigrant to ascertain if he or she would fulfill all the requirements of our emigration laws. To the centers of emigration from which the dangerous and undesirable class comes trained immigrant inspectors should be sent and the consular officers by making tours through the villages, towns, etc., where the emigrants live, investigating any frauds which might be attempted, or, in other words, to gather information by which would enable the consular officer to weed out the bad emigrants from the good. The consular officer, before issuing the certificate, should require emigrants to present a "casier judiciare," which would state the moral record of the bearer in the eyes of the law, or, in countries where such papers are not obtainable, to bring a "certificate of good morals," duly legalized by a competent official of the village, town, or city whence the emigrant comes. It may be said that in some countries the authorities are in league with the unscrupulous emigration agencies and would issue any paper that might be needed, but it would not take long for our immigrant inspectors to find out such frauds. In almost all European countries public records of paupers, prostitutes, and criminals are kept, to which the consular officer could have access.

The economic conditions prevailing in Europe and the prosperity which has been reigning in our country have stimulated to a great extent the current of natural emigration to the United States; but in my opinion if the inspection of emigrants recommended at the ports and at the line of the unnatural and dangerous class would be greatly decreased instead of increasing annually.

A. M. THACKARA.

Sunday in Spain.

The law recently approved making Sunday a day of rest has been published. Manual labor is prohibited. Work on Sunday will be permitted only when absolutely necessary, the hours to conform with the regulations. On no account are women or persons under 18 years of age to be employed on said day. The law will be put in force within six months.

R. M. BARTLEMAN.

STRANGE WAR STORY

DRAWING THE BLACK BALLOT MEANT INSTANT DEATH.

Trying Ordeal for Two Confederate Soldiers in Civil War—How Retaliation Was Met and Satisfied.

On almost any Saturday or court day there can be seen on the streets of Wytheville, says the Wytheville correspondent of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, two farmers, simple and retiring in their tastes and habits, who were called upon to undergo as trying an ordeal during the war between the states as any soldier on either side of that tremendous struggle.

The old confeds. are Joseph Headrick, a farmer who lives on and owns a comfortable country estate lying on the waters of Stony fork, nine miles west of Wytheville, and Jackson Grubb, likewise the possessor of a goodly country home a few miles south of town.

They, like thousands of other young mountaineers of southwest Virginia, answered promptly to Virginia's call for volunteers in '61 and later became members of the Sixty-third Virginia regiment, which was afterward assigned to and became a part of Gen. Palmer's brigade in Gen. Hood's army, and while in that command they were captured by some of Gen. W. T. Sherman's men at Midway Station, nine miles west of Branchville, in South Carolina. That was on the 7th day of February, 1865.

Three federal officers accompanied them, and without any explanation the prisoners of war were lined up. The three federal officers took position at a short distance, one of them holding above his head a cigar box, while the two others acted as guards. The confederate soldiers were then commanded to march one by one between the guards and past the one holding the cigar box and draw therefrom a slip of paper.

DREW THE BLACK BALLOT.

Then, for the first time, did it dawn upon the prisoners what was being exacted of them.

The ordeal of that moment can better be imagined than told. The fearful agony and strain which 99 of the soldiers endured was soon over with, for the orders were soon executed, and the "die was cast." Jackson Grubb was fortunate in that he was among the first to draw and he drew a white ballot, which eventually meant life, home and loved ones in old Virginia again.

Joseph Headrick was not quite so fortunate, being late to draw, seventy-fifth in number, but he drew a white ballot also.

The one who paid the awful penalty was No. 81 to draw. As soon as he drew the black ballot he was hastily told to step aside and the drawing ceased. He was at once marched off to Gen. Sherman's headquarters and in an hour or so afterward gunshots were heard and the fullest terms of war retaliation had been met and satisfied.

When Mr. Headrick recalled the events of that moment tears came into his eyes, and he said that he had often faced cannon loaded with all of the deadly missiles of war; that for four days and nights he had been exposed to the shot and shell of the federals before Nashville, but that none of them was as trying as when he faced that cigar box with its 100 ballots on that spring morning in 1865.

Public Auctions in China.

To a stranger a Chinese auction is a most curious spectacle. The auctioneer leans over a slightly elevated counter and exhibits his wares. He says nothing, neither does the bidder, who merely steps forward to the auctioneer and runs his fingers up his sleeve, making pressure on the salesman's arm, thus indicating how much he will pay for the article. Then another and another repeat the action until the one signifying the highest price receives the article without a word being exchanged on either side. Only the auctioneer knows the name of bidder know the price offered and accepted.

Paps Was Full of Joy.

A coffee planter in Madras, India, recently became a father for the first time. He was particularly overjoyed, especially as the progeny was twins. The happy father galloped to the nearest telegraph office and wired to his wife's sister in Calcutta: "Twins to-day—more to-morrow."

CIRCUS WOMEN GOOD WIVES

They Lead Strenuous But Not Unhappy Lives and Enjoy Home Comforts.

"Of all the women engaged in public employment there are none who are better known in a public manner by the great masses of people living in city and country than circus women. And there is no class of women in public employment who are so little known to the general public in a private manner. There are no women who are so little understood, whose real character is so little discerned from a correct standpoint."

The speaker, says the Chicago Tribune, was a man connected in an executive capacity with one of the largest shows in the world, and whose experience in the amusement field has been sufficiently diversified to make him an authority.

"I must confess that I have been nothing that I have seen in my surroundings that has given me so much surprise as the women of the circus," he continued. "Several years as a reporter and critic around the theaters of several cities gave me an intimate knowledge of the women of the stage, and I did not fancy there was much difference between them and the women of the arena. But there is.

"The latter day stage, with its insatiate demand for young and pretty faces and forms, particularly in those most popular forms of stage entertainment, comic operas and extravaganzas, enlists thousands of young girls from every walk of life, and installs them on the stage. It is safe to say that the vast majority of them are without talent or training, and the moment the bloom of youth vanishes their usefulness is at an end and their living is precarious and uncertain. Few marry, or, if they marry, they usually marry nomads like themselves.

"Nothing of that sort may be said of the women of the circus. To begin with, they are comparatively few in number. Women are they called, because in the general public that it might be well said that they must literally be born to the business. At least nine out of every ten circus women have circus parents. The remaining one marries into the business or gets into it through a brother, sister, or some other relative. No manager of a first class circus will engage a female performer in any capacity unless she is accompanied by some male relative. The reasons for this are many and obvious to any one who will give the subject a moment's reflective consideration. This rule is so general that exceptions to it are rare.

"Dissipation is an impossibility among circus women as it seldom indulged in by circus men, performers, or executive officers. Managers enforce the most stringent rules against dissipation in its every form, and will accept no excuses. The first offense brings a heavy fine as a penalty, and instant dismissal inevitably follows a second violation. The nature of their work makes is impossible to dissipate. Not only their livelihood, but life itself, depends upon a clear mind, firm muscles, and steady nerves. Their lives while on tour are made up of the most vigorous activity. Their work is from early morning until late at night, with no opportunity to gain any rest or recreation away from the show. Midnight must see them in their beds on long trains. After that hour the car doors are locked, and if they are behind time their trunks and belonging are simply placed outside along the track and their engagement is at an end.

"Circus women are most devoted wives and mothers who take life seriously and soberly. I believe that there is no other class of women in any sort of employment where they come in contact with the public which supplies so little food for scandal.

"Their home life in winter is pleasant and agreeable. Some of them, but not many, work in the theaters in the winter time. It is a most curious fact that few of them care to live in the large cities, but make their homes on farms or in small towns. There they have their small circles of friends and relatives and pass the time away in the usual social functions and household affairs, many of them preparing their wardrobes for the coming season on the road. Few of them ever become indigent or dependent upon their families or the public authorities.

"They, of all women in the world, most truly appreciate and enjoy the comforts and blessings of a home after being compelled to be away six months—in a strange town and among strangers every day, and in the narrow confines of a sleeping berth on a circus car every night. It is a hard life, but by no means an unhappy one. The rigorous labor and plain but good food and abundant sleep bring good health and attendant good spirits and pleasant disposition.

"Charity in its truest sense abides among them. The slightest call for aid from them always elicits a ready and hearty response. The 100 women with a show like ours are surrounded by their male relatives and 500 other men, each one of who considers himself the protector of their welfare and their honor, and there is not any one who would assail either. I maintain that circus women are a credit to their calling and an honor to their sex."

Old Jug Repaired a Church.

A church-warden of West Malling (Kent) parish church discovered in a lumber-room some time ago a peculiarly-shaped jug which on subsequently identified as a rare old Elizabethan stoup. An offer of £50 for it was refused, and the church authorities decided to send it to Christie's, where it was sold for 1,100 guineas. With the proceeds the authorities have just completed several important improvements in the fine old church. Parts of the fabric have been restored, a new porch has been erected, and the seating accommodation has been greatly improved.—London Tit-Bits.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, July 7, 1904.

"Cleveland will get it by a neck," says our office boy. Maybe "in the neck."

Gen. Miles threw cold water on the Prohibitionists by declining to become their nominee for the Presidency.

Japan is proving its claim to the title of Flowery Kingdom. It is getting all the bouquets in the war with Russia.

A Pennsylvania weekly suggests that the stray iceberg sighted off Nantucket might be the Parker boom. Wrong again brother. It was frozen enthusiasm from the Chicago convention.

It is safe to predict that Swallow, the Prohibitionists' candidate for the Presidency, will not be flattered by the vote he receives in his own State. The people of Pennsylvania have little use for cranks, and the doctor's record there entitles him to a first prize among the obnoxious class.

Governor Murphy is consulting Edward Stokes before making any appointments. The party's convention will be allowed the privilege of naming the Cumberland man for the Republican gubernatorial nomination in the fall. Of course the convention will express its own will by making the nomination unanimous.

The Trenton State Gazette seems to think that because Roosevelt's name was observed for fully twenty minutes when he was placed in nomination the Republican convention was not a front. Is neglecte to say that the delegates only cheered for forty seconds when the Rough Riders' name was mentioned by the chairman. Enthusiasm was largely an absent quantity at the Chicago convention, but it is a cheap quantity anyhow. The votes are what count and already Strenuous Teddy seems to have cornered the market in that respect.

Former United States Senator Smith, the persistent advocate of Cleveland's nomination, pays the freight for a whole trainload of Jersey Democrats, who will start for the convention tomorrow. About the same time, Charles A. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, who is equally insistant upon Cleveland's nomination, will start for St. Louis with another trainload of his friends. A telegraph wire is being run into the Cleveland summer home in New Hampshire. Parker is losing ground every day. No gains are being made by the radical element of the party. Guess the rest.

There is an element in every community that firmly believes that the press has no right to make use of any person's name without his consent and it is often amusing to hear the demands of wrongdoers who wish their names kept out of print. When criticism is passed upon his nefarious acts, he becomes greatly incensed and makes all sorts of foolish threats. As a rule newspapers know just how far they are privileged to criticise a citizen, in his individual or official capacity, and seldom overstep the bounds. If every journal was sued for libel as often as it is threatened, every newspaper in the country would have lots of lawsuits on its hands. From the foundation of the government until the present time the freedom of the press has always been recognized. The editor who construes liberty as license damages the reputation of his paper far more than does a jury hurt his bank account by returning a verdict against his journal. The authority given to pass criticism upon public officials is so general that even the courts can not and do not escape. As Judge Purnell, of North Carolina, said the other day: "While all customs should entertain due respect for the courts of the land, it does not follow that editors and public speakers are to refrain from legitimate criticism of the acts of any tribunal. Such criticism should be invited by public officials in order that the people may fully understand what is being done by those who are acting as their agents in the administration of the law. Public questions are generally settled in the right way, and the fact that such is the case is due in a large measure to their free and untrammeled discussion by the press of the country." This decision is worthy of reflection. The press has done more to bring about reforms and to punish wrongdoers than any other single agency in the civilized world. It is a police officer that never goes to sleep.

Anthony McDonough has resigned his position at the Fond Machine Tool Company's plant.

AMUSEMENTS.

Arrangements have been completed by Messrs. Rush & Weber and the management of the Madison Square Garden for the opening of the Madison Square Roof on the night of Monday, July 4, when there will be presented the musical spectacle called "Paris by Night." Not only will the musical play itself be known by this name, but the ensemble of attractions of the roof of New York's most famous amusement resort will also be called "Paris by Night." It is intended that this will be the most protentious open air attraction of New York's mid-summer. There will be several hundred persons employed about the roof itself in the way of French waitresses, booth tenders and other attaches, while in the musical play of "Paris by Night" there will be over a score of principals and some sixty persons in the chorus, most of whom will be pretty girls.

Klaw & Erlanger's Aerial Garden and Theatre, on their New Amsterdam Theatre, Forty-second street, just west of Broadway, have become the most popular summer evening resort in New York city. The theatre, complete in every detail as any of surface construction, but so built that it can be thrown open on all four sides, will seat 1,200 people. With the gardens, 2,000 people can be entertained. The attraction, John J. McNally's skit, "A Little of Everything," presents a notable aggregation of novelties in which the Official Review, the last hit of Paris last season, has been added. This consists of a selection of complete scenes from eight of Offenbach's most popular operas. Fay Templeton and Peter F. Dailey have made notable hits as Rosa and "Gen Boom" in this review, which is the musical sensation of the town. Since its opening three weeks ago there has not been an empty seat in the Aerial Theatre at any performance.

Three years ago a young Englishman, 6 years of age, calling himself "Datas," created a sensation in a London music hall by answering instantly and correctly all questions in reference to the dates of historical events, both B. C. and A. D., and in connection with the careers of historical personages. "Datas" came to fill the American engagement two weeks ago and began a six weeks' stay at the New York Theatre roof garden last Monday evening, answering questions as to dates, shot at him as from a rapid-fire gun, instantly and correctly, except in one instance—"When did Commodore Perry enter the American Navy"—to which he failed, but he could tell the date of the battle of Lake Erie and knew that Perry was in command. After the performance, explaining his failure, "Datas" said he would wager that Commodore Perry's birth, entrance into the United States Navy and death could not be found recorded in the standard work of the world's histories, Haydn's Dictionary of Dates. An investigation of this point last Tuesday found this statement true. "Datas" will make dates a fad in New York for the next six weeks at least at the New York Theatre Roof Garden.

Malcolm Williams, the leading man of the Fifth Avenue Stock Co., re-enters the cast after a month's vacation in the mountains. Mr. Williams had played steadily for almost two years and a half, during which time he had studied more than one hundred roles, and felt the need of rest and recuperation before continuing his work. During his absence S. Miller Kent played a special starring engagement of two weeks, and Wallace Erskine, one of the old favorites, also made a brief reappearance. A number of important dramatic successes have been secured for the use of the Proctor stock companies at the Fifth Avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Theatres, and this promises to be the most prosperous summer season on record.

Not one of all the great array of popular places of amusement in New York holds a more prominent place than does Keith's Union Square Theatre. By its future goers it is conceded to be one of the most popular of them all, a haven to the weary and sunshine to the downcast. There is a home atmosphere about the place that endears in the estimation of its immense clientele. Keith's holds a warm place in the affection of the out of town visitors to New York, who, when they attend the theatre never fail to drop around to the Union Square. Verily, Keith's is New York's home theatre.

LITERARY.

The St. Louis Exposition management wisely determined to recognize American boys by setting apart a special day for them at the Exposition. The day selected is July 5th, and the program and arrangements for the day are in the hands of William C Sprague, editor of THE AMERICAN BOY, of Detroit. The program includes athletic contests in the stadium between the boys of the public schools, in which public school teams are entered from Chicago, New York and other cities, and opportunities will be given for individual entries.

REFUSE HOSE HOUSE TO EDUCATION BOARD

North Plainfield Council Declines to Donate West End's Building for a Kindergarten.

TO SELL THE BUILDING

MAYOR SAYS BOROUGH CAN NOT AFFORD TO GIVE IT AWAY.

Factional Lines Drawn When the Vote is Taken, Mr. Smalley's Ballot Killing the Proposition—Van-Winkle Introduces Resolution.

By a party vote, as its monthly meeting Friday night, the Borough Council quashed the project to use the old West End Hose Company house on Harrison avenue as a kindergarten. The idea of using the house originated with the Board of Education, and as its last meeting the Board appointed Dr. J. H. Cooley a committee to ascertain the sentiment of the Council on the matter. Councilman VanWinkle introduced a resolution giving the house to the board, with the idea, he explained, of finding the sentiment of the Council on the subject.

Every member of the administration party promptly spoke against the plan in forcible phrase. Mayor Smalley spoke at some length. A kindergarten in that neighborhood might be advisable, he said, but it was up to the Board of Education if it wants one there. If the majority of the Board asked for it for themselves, he said drily, he might be inclined to grant it to them. There was need of a kindergarten in public affairs as well as in school life. But there was no need to put the borough property to the use expected by the Board. Incoming bills showed the need of money by the borough; let the Board offer to buy the house if it wanted it. Under present conditions, after all that has been done, the Mayor thought that for the Board to ask the borough to supply it with a school house was out of order.

Councilmen Lee, VanArsdale and Arnold declared emphatically that they were opposed to the motion. They maintained that the borough needed the money, and that the house had been already offered for sale on that account. None of the Cits spoke on the resolution, but on roll call they all voted for it. With the three straight party votes against it, the ballot was a tie. Mayor Smalley's vote killed the resolution.

In the course of his argument against the project, the Mayor said it was his hopes that the Council would effect a sale of the property very shortly.

IN CHARGE OF ST. STEPHEN'S

A. S. PECK, A DEACON IN THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH, IS NOW IN CHARGE.

A. S. Peck, of Trenton, who has deacon's orders in the Episcopal church, has been assigned by Rt. Rev. Dr. John Scarborough, Bishop of New Jersey, to St. Stephen's church, and will be in charge temporarily. Mr. Peck is connected with the House Mission at Trenton and has officiated at St. Stephen's church during the past two weeks.

Mr. Peck is planning to spend Friday, Saturday and Sunday of each week in this city. He is about 30 years old and has made a favorable impression here. St. Stephen's church is not now in such a position financially as to warrant a regularly ordained clergyman being put in charge.

DEATH OF S. C. LINBARGER.

Former Plainfielder Passes Away at His Home in San Jose, Ill.

Silas C. Linbarger, son of Mrs. J. B. Linbarger, and brother of Walter and Norman Linbarger, of the borough, and Mrs C. B. Waldron, of Martinsville, died Monday morning at his home in San Jose, Ill., where he was for many years cashier of the State Bank. He was at one time mayor of San Jose.

Mr. Linbarger was well-known here, where he lived twenty-five years ago. He was born at Bound Brook forty-nine years ago. He leaves a wife and two children, a boy and a girl. The funeral was held at the late home yesterday.

Death of An Infant.

The eight-months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy, of Brooklyn, who with her mother, came to Plainfield some days ago to visit Mrs. Kennedy's sister, Mrs. Frank Haurand, of Elmwood place, died Sunday night. The child had been ill and was brought here in the hope that a change would be beneficial. The interment will take place in Brooklyn.

George Case, of Grant avenue, has returned from a few days' visit with New Brunswick friends.

ROUTINE BUSINESS OF BOROUGH COUNCIL

Several Changes Are Made in the Make-Up of the North Plainfield Fire Department.

THE USUAL REPORTS

POLICE COMMITTEE ORDERED TO SEE BICYCLE ORDINANCE IS OBEYED.

H. A. Woodruff Protests Against Confusion in Numbering Houses —Thirty-One Arrests Are Made in June—Dog Catchers at Work.

Several unimportant matters came up for action at Friday's meeting of the North Plainfield Council. William Barry, captain of Hose Co. No. 2, who was recently convicted of sending in a false alarm, was formally dismissed from the department, upon motion by Chairman Lee, of the fire committee. William McCullough was appointed in his place—not, however, to the captaincy—as a call man. The captaincy is left vacant for the present. George Glidden resigned his place as a regular fireman, requesting appointment as a call man. His resignation was accepted, and the requested appointment was made. It is expected that his place in the regular ranks will be filled from among the call men. John Johnson, E. L. Smith and E. B. Bennett were appointed special marshals.

H. A. Woodruff, of 131 Westervelt avenue, appeared before the Council to complain of the way in which his neighbors disregard the new numbering ordinance governing his street. The numbers are greatly confused, and complaints over the jumble have been frequent. Mr. Woodruff said his was the only household on the block numbered rightly, with numerals visible on the door. He said tradesmen bothered him at all times of the night for directions to his neighbors' places. He complained bitterly of the hardship he suffered on that account, and wanted to know if a subscription for the purchase of numbers for those neighbors couldn't be started. The matter was referred to the committee on streets, with directions to stir the property owners up on the subject.

Councilman Arnold said that complaints against habitual violations of the bicycle ordinance had become numerous, and he asked that action be taken to have the regulation enforced. The Mayor instructed the police committee to see that the force stepped the sidewalk and lightmen riding.

Through Councilman Lee, Henry DeMott asked that a tax bill for 1908 on a piece of property on Greenbrook road be wiped out. In May, 1908, four months before he became the owner, the property was owned by an old soldier, exempt under the taxation law. Mr. DeMott thinks the tax for that year ought to be quashed, because it was exempted in May. The tax bill amounts to $13. The matter was referred to committee.

For the police committee, Councilman VanArsdale reported thirty-one arrests during June, seventeen suspended sentences, nine commitments and ninety-three dollars collected in fines. He filed a report showing that between June 8 and June 25 twenty-two dogs were captured. At fifty cents apiece the borough paid eleven dollars for the work, and took in seven dollars in redemption fees.

Chairman Arnold, of the street committee, reported an expenditure of $364 for general repair work and sprinkling during June, and $463 for stone used in macadamizing. Collector Brown reported a balance of $961; his receipts during the month amounted to $5,448, expenditures, $4,486.

A sidewalk was ordered laid before 27 Somerset place, owned by Miss Mary Gardner.

WELCOME MISS CURRY.

Exercises to be Held in Crescent Avenue Church in Honor of Fresh Air Home Matron.

Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, who is much interested in the work of the Mary Morgan Fresh Air Home, plans to give Miss Sara Curry, the matron, a welcome upon her return to this city for the summer. The meeting will be held in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, on Sunday night, July 10, at 8 o'clock.

Among the speakers will be Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie and Rev. Mr. Rodman. In addition to the addresses, there will be other interesting features.

Excursion to Asbury Park.

The annual excursion of the Crescent Avenue church Sabbath-school and others to Asbury Park takes place on Thursday, July 14.

George Kean, formerly of the Manganese Steel Safe Company's plant, has taken a position with his uncle, in Falmouth, Mass.

ALIS CLUB WINS IN TWELFTH INNING

In a Supurb Game, Local Team Defeats Aeolians, Score Being 1 to 0.

BADGLEY'S FINE WORK

PLAINFIELD'S PITCHER COVERS HIMSELF WITH GLORY.

Oregan the Only Man to Cross the Home Plate — Patience, of Kingston, in Great Form —The Scores.

Without doubt the finest exhibition of baseball ever seen here, was played on Crescent Oval Saturday, between Alis and Aeolian, it being the third contest in the series with these clubs. Alis won by a score of 1 to 0, twelve innings. Badgley, who occupied the box for the home team, pitched the game of his life and covered himself with glory. For twelve innings he held the organists down to five hits, striking out ten men. Doescher, of Brooklyn, his opponent, pitched almost as well, striking out eight men and allowing the same number of hits.

The excitement was intense and when the one run was made everybody broke loose. Oregan tallied the run on a single by Heckman, the left fielder having reached first by being hit with the ball. Then Farmer, McGoey and Heckman each followed with singles. The whole Alis team played gilt-edged ball. Patience, of the Kingston, Hudson River League, covered second in good style and O'Gorman, of the Murray Hills, was in right field. The detailed score:

ALIS.

	R	1B	PO	A	E
Walton, ss	0	0	3	5	0
Oregan, lf	1	0	2	0	0
Farmer, c	0	2	11	4	1
McGoey, cf	0	1	0	0	0
Heckman, 3b	0	2	2	2	1
Patience, 2b	0	0	3	2	0
O'Gorman, rf	0	0	0	1	1
Gaeven, 1b	0	0	13	1	1
Badgley, p	0	0	2	5	0
	—	—	—	—	—
	1	5	36	20	4

AEOLIAN.

	R	1B	PO	A	E
Flynn, 2b	0	1	2	4	1
Gray, 3b	0	0	1	0	6
D. Poole, 1b	0	0	12	0	1
Supple, ss	0	1	2	1	0
Alberts, lf	0	0	2	0	0
Goldstein, cf	0	0	4	0	0
Davis, rf	0	1	0	0	0
W. Poole, c	0	0	11	1	0
Doescher, p	0	1	0	2	1
	—	—	—	—	—
	0	5	33	14	9

Score by innings:

Alis.....0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 1—1
Aeolian..0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—0

Three-base hits—Gray. First base on balls—Off Badgley, 1; off Doescher, 2. Struck out—By Badgley, 10; by Doescher, 8. Left on bases—Alis, 7; Aeolian, 7. First base on errors—Alis, 1; Aeolian, 3. Hit by pitcher—Oregan. Time of game—2:10. Umpire—Mezity. Attendance—1,500.

FUNERAL OF JOHN REILLY

FATHER DUNPHY OFFICIATES AT SERVICE, INTERMENT BEING MADE HERE.

Funeral services over the remains of John W. Reilly, who died Wednesday, were held at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Reilly, at South Plainfield, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. A large number of friends and relatives were present at the services, which were conducted by Father Edward Dunphy, pastor of St. John's church, Dunellen.

Floral pieces in great variety were in evidence, some of the handsomest being sent by the classmates of the dead boy. When the body was borne from the house twelve boys acting the direction of P. Kane, of New York, ranged themselves along the walk from the house to the hearse, six on either side, each of them bearing flowers, and the whole number forming a sort of escort to the casket, which was carried by six Sunday-school classmates of the dead boy. Several of the largest floral tributes were taken to St. Mary's cemetery, where interment was made at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. Middlekauff Moves Here.

E. D. Middlekauff, of Toledo, Ohio, has recently moved here with his family and taken a house on Watchung avenue, expecting to become a permanent citizen of Plainfield. Mr. Middlekauff is the vice president and general manager of the New Jersey T. and L. Oil Company, which has large oil producing properties in Lima, Ohio, and in the States of Texas and Louisiana.

George Babcock, of the Potter plant, returned yesterday from a three days' fishing trip at Lake Hopatcong.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Standard Railroad of America.

PROTECTED THROUGHOUT BY THE ELECTRIC AUTOMATIC BLOCK SIGNAL SYSTEM.

On and After June 26, 1904.

Trains will leave Plainfield as follows:

1 2 35 a m—Main Line Express daily, with Pullman Vestibule Parlor Cars, for Pittsburg and Cleveland. Harrisburg Coach and Buffet Parlor Car.

2 2 35 a m—Chicago and St. Louis Express, daily, for Nashville (via Cincinnati and Louisville), Indianapolis, Chicago and St. Louis. Dining Car.

3 6 45 p m—Western Express, daily, with Vestibule Sleeping Cars and Dining Car, for Pittsburg and Chicago.

4 3 17 p m—Pacific Express, daily, with Pullman Vestibule Sleeping Cars, for Pittsburg, Toledo and Chicago. Also, for Louisville, via Cincinnati, and for St. Louis. Dining Car.

5 12 32 p m—Fast Line, daily except Saturday.

For Atlantic City, 8 00 a m, 1 04 p m daily.

For Washington, 2 35 a m, 12 32, 3 17, 6 45 p m daily. For Baltimore, 2 35 a m, 12 32, 3 17, 6 45 p m daily. For Harrisburg, 2 35 a m, 12 32, 3 17, 6 45 p m daily. For Philadelphia, 2 35, 6 45, 8 00, 10 15, 10 44, 11 04, 11 36, 11 48 a m and 12 12 night. For New York, 2 35, 6 45, 8 00, 10 15, 10 44, 11 04, 11 36, 11 48 a m, 12 12 night, 1 04 and 3 17 p m.

For Trenton and Philadelphia—2 35, 6 45, 8 00, 10 15, 10 44, 11 04, 11 36, 11 48 a m, 12 12 night, 1 04, 3 17, 6 45 p m. (Trenton only), 8 00 p m. (Trenton only) Sundays, 2 35, 6 45, 8 00, 10 15, 10 44, 11 04, 11 36, 11 48 a m, 12 12 night, 1 04, 3 17, 6 45, 8 00 p m. Sundays, 1 01 night. For Atlantic City, 8 00 a m, 1 04 p m daily.

For Asbury Park—Through Vestibuled Express Trains, with Parlor Cars, Dining Car and Combined Coach, 10 15 a m, 3 17 p m week days; 10 15 a m, 3 17 p m Sundays. Express, 8 00 a m, 12 05 p m. Sundays, 8 00 a m. Express, 1 01 night, daily. Local, 7 45 a m week days. Sundays, 7 45 a m. Pullman Parlor, Dining and Smoking Cars and wide vestibule Coaches.

For Ocean Grove and Long Branch, Delaware River Bridge Route—8 00 a m, 12 05 and 3 17 p m week days; 12 05 and 3 17 p m Sundays.

For Cape May—Express, 1 01 night, daily.

For Manasquan—8 00, 4 35, 6 45, 8 00, 9 28, 10 15, 10 44, 11 04, 11 36, 11 48 a m, 12 12 night, 1 04, 3 17, 6 45, 8 00 p m. (Saturdays only), 9 28, 12 40 (Saturdays only) 1 01, 2 40 (Saturdays only) 4 35, 6 45, 8 00, 9 28 p m. (except Saturday). Sundays, 8 00, 9 28, 10 15, 10 44, 11 04, 11 36, 11 48 a m, 12 12 night, 1 04, 3 17, 6 45, 8 00, 9 28 p m. Week-days, 1 01, 2 40, 4 35, 6 45, 8 00, 9 28 p m. Sundays, 1 01 night.

For Point Pleasant—8 00 a m and 3 06 p m.

For Lakewood via Manasquan Junction—7 10 a m, 4 28 p m week-days.

For Long Branch, Asbury Park, Ocean Grove, Bay Head, Point Pleasant and Lakewood via Manasquan Junction—8 00 a m week-days.

For Toms River, Seaside Park and Intermediate Stations—8 00 a m week-days.

For Somerville—8 35, 7 12, 8 35, 9 38, 10 56, 11 59 a m, 1 35, 2 30, 3 45, 4 55, 5 37, 6 35, 7 30, 8 45, 10 30 p m. Sundays—8 35, 9 38, 10 56 a m, 1 35, 3 45, 5 37, 6 35, 7 30, 8 45, 10 30 p m.

For Bound Brook—7 15, 11 00 a m, 5 11, 8 09 p m. Sundays—8 09 p m.

For Philadelphia, Bethlehem and Mount Olive—6 40 a m, 12 05, 5 11, 8 09 p m. Sundays—8 09 p m.

For Wilkesbarre and Scranton—4 30, 9 24 a m, 5 11 p m. Sundays—5 11 p m.

For Long Branch and Ocean Grove, 6 40, 8 35, 11 59 a m, 5 11 p m. Sundays—8 09 a m, 5 11 p m.

For Red Bank, Freehold and Matawan—6 40, 8 35, 11 59 a m, 5 11 p m. Sundays—8 09 a m, 5 11 p m.

For Keyport and Intermediate Points—6 40 a m, 5 11 p m. Sundays—8 09 a m.

For Perth Amboy—6 40, 8 35, 11 59 a m, 5 11 p m. Sundays—8 09 a m.

For Trenton—7 45, 9 44, 9 58, 10 44, 11 04, 11 36, 11 48 a m, 12 12 night, 1 04, 3 17, 6 45, 8 00, 9 28 p m. Sundays—8 00, 9 28, 10 15, 10 44, 11 04, 11 36, 11 48 a m, 12 12 night, 1 04, 3 17, 6 45, 8 00, 9 28 p m.

For Princeton—7 45, 9 44, 9 58, 10 44, 11 04, 11 36, 11 48 a m, 12 12 night, 1 04, 3 17, 6 45, 8 00, 9 28 p m. Sundays—8 00, 9 28, 10 15, 10 44, 11 04, 11 36, 11 48 a m, 12 12 night, 1 04, 3 17, 6 45, 8 00, 9 28 p m.

For Pennington—7 45, 9 44, 9 58, 10 44, 11 04, 11 36, 11 48 a m, 12 12 night, 1 04, 3 17, 6 45, 8 00, 9 28 p m. Sundays—8 00, 9 28, 10 15, 10 44, 11 04, 11 36, 11 48 a m, 12 12 night, 1 04, 3 17, 6 45, 8 00, 9 28 p m.

For Lambertville, Flemington, Manville and Intermediate Points—9 44 a m, 3 17 p m week-days.

For Belvidere—9 44 a m week-days.

For Bethlehem, Easton and Phillipsburg—9 44 a m week-days.

For Lehigh Valley Junction—9 44 a

TWO DAYS' PLAY ON THE GOLF LINKS

Regular Contests on Saturday Are Followed by Special Events Independence Day.

THE OFFICIAL SCORES

ATTRACTIONS AT HILLSIDE AND PARK CLUBS DRAW BIG CROWDS.

Willard Wadsworth Wins Grtens' Committee Tankard, and W. L. Glenney the Holiday Cup at Hillside—Results at Park.

In the weekly play for the presidents' and Park Golf Club cups on Saturday at the Park Golf Club, these scores were returned:

R. R. Carroll, 87, 8—79; C. A. Reed, 94, 8—86; Charles B. Morse, 104, 17—87; Rev. C. L. Goodrich, 103, 14—89; T. U. Dudley, 111, 23—89; J. L. Watson, 122, 30—92; Nelson A. Miller, 110, 16—94; Samuel Townsend, 111, 15—96; C. O. Faber, 100, 4—96; George T. Rogers, 112, 12—100.

The Park team played its first match at home in the East Jersey Golf Association tournament, on Saturday, with a team from the Westfield Golf Club. The visitors won by 14 to 2 points, Nassau system. The summary:

Parks—M. T. Townsend, 3; C. A. Reed, 0; H. S. Rogers, 0; C. O. Faber, 0; Rev. J. O. McKelvey, 0; Samuel Townsend, 0; Ralph Hallock, 0; Leslie M. Hallock, 0. Total, 2.

Westfield—M. Whitstatch, 0; E. F. Raynor, 3; J. A. Woodward, 0; R. L. Townley, 3; S. A. Trevvett, 2; E. D. Floyd, 3; W. M. Townley, 3; N. P. Condit, 1. Total, 14.

These scores were posted for the golf committee cup, at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, on Saturday:

Leighton Calkins, 81, 8—73; G. E. Calhcart, 89, 11—78; F. E. Cruikshank, 101, 22—79; H. D. Hibbard, 88, 9—79; J. H. Carman, 97, 17—80; Dr. F. O. Ard, 88, 8—80; T. W. T. Maxwell, 102, 22—80; W. L. Glenney, 81, 0—81; C. O. Burke, Jr, 95, 14—81; H. F. Fox, 101, 18—83; Olaf Saugstad, 93, 10—83; J. E. Erickson, 92, 8—84; Willard Wadsworth, 87, 3—84; G. F. Earl, 105, 20—85; E. E. Ironmonger, 96, 11—85; C. B. Morgan, 95, 9—86; H. L. Hall, 109, 20—99.

Miss Edith H. Tracy won the third leg on the Woman's Handicap cup, with a net score of 102.

There were many interesting events at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, Monday, the chief of which was the golf play for the club championship. In this there were many upsets and those picked for winners were defeated. In the morning the qualifying round resulted as follows:

Willard Wadsworth, 74; Robert Abbott, 79; Leighton Calkins, 80; Walter Peterson, 83; R. S. Rowland, 83; W. L. Glenney, 85; R. D. Hibbard, 85; Morris Demoss, 86, after playing off tie with C. W. Abbott, who also got an 86.

Those qualified for second eight: C. W. Abbott, 86; H. R. Stockton, 88; R. F. Murray, 90; C. B. Morgan, 92; George Cathcart, 92; J. E. Erickson, 92; G. T. VanBoskerck, 92; Howard Huntington, 92. Third eight: E. E. Ironmonger, 95; D. W. Taylor, 96; E. B. Shoemaker, 96; H. L. Hall, 100; E. J. Patterson, 109; G. F. Earl, 114; Evarts Tracy, 116; H. Hall, 122.

For the greens' committee tankard, Willard Wadsworth won a leg with a 71 net. For the holiday cup, for men with a handicap of 18 and over, W. L. Glenney won a leg with a 75 net.

In the afternoon, the match play rounds for the club championship resulted as follows:

W. L. Glenney beat M. J. Dumont, 7 up and 6 to play; Walter Peterson beat Robert Abbott, 1 up; Leighton Calkins beat Willard Wadsworth, 2 up and 1 to play; H. D. Hibbard beat R. S. Rowland, 3 up and 2 to play. The results in the second eight for the consolation cup were: H. R. Stockton beat C. B. Morgan, 1 up; George Cathcart beat J. E. Erickson, 1 up; Howard Huntington beat C. W. Abbott, 3 up and 1 to play; R. F. Murray beat George VanBoskerck, 4 up and 3 to play. The results for the third eight was as follows: H. L. Hall beat Harold Hall, 7 up and 5 to play; E. E. Ironmonger beat E. J. Patterson, 5 up and 4 to play; Evarts Tracy beat D. W. Taylor, 1 up, (19 holes); E. B. Shoemaker beat G. F. Earl, 5 up and 3 to play.

In the women's clock golf competition Miss Fleming won with a 32; the second prize was won by Miss Margaret Tracy with a 33. In a similar event for the men J. E. Erickson won first honors with a 30 and W. L. Glenney finished second with a 33, after playing off a tie with H. R. Stockton.

At the Park Golf Club there were three events, the ball sweepstakes and holiday cup, both of which were won by T. U. Dudley. The third event, an approaching and putting contest, was won by Miss Harriet Shreve and George T. Rogers.

ALIS LOSES TWICE ON INDEPENDENCE DAY

Murray Hill Scores a Victory in the Morning and Hoboken in the Afternoon.

TWO GOOD GAMES

IN THE AFTERNOON FANS WITNESS A TEN INNINGS EXHIBITION.

Only Seven Innings Are Played in the First Match—Farmer's Home Run Ties Score in the Second Performance.

Alis did not show up in as good form Monday morning as on Saturday, and was defeated by Murray Hill by a score of 9 to 7. The locals made five costly errors, which meant runs. Badgley pitched a fine game, holding his opponents down to three hits up to the seventh inning. Alis hit Tyler, the Columbia College twirler, for nine safties. Heckman and Patience each made a three bagger, while Farmer and McGoey each got two hits. Only seven innings were played, as the visitors had to catch a train for Long Branch. The summary:

ALIS.	R	1B	PO	A	E
Walton, ss	0	1	2	3	2
Quinby, 2b	1	1	1	2	1
Oregan, lf	1	0	1	0	0
Farmer, c	2	2	7	0	0
Heckman, 3b	1	1	0	0	0
McGoey, cf	1	2	1	0	0
Patience, rf	1	1	0	0	0
Gauven, 1b	0	1	8	0	1
Badgley, p	0	1-	1	3	1
	7	10	21	8	5

MURRAY HILL	R	1B	PO	A	E
Cusick, 2b	1	0	4	3	2
Bamford, cf	1	1	5	0	0
Courtney, 3b	2	1	2	1	0
Dietrich, lf	1	1	1	0	0
O'Neil, c	1	1	1	2	0
Smith, 1b	2	2	3	1	1
Monihan, ss	1	1	4	2	0
Conroy, rf	0	0	0	0	0
Tyler, p	0	0-	0	2	0
	9	7	21	11	3

Score by innings:

Murray Hill ..... 3 0 0 2 0 0 4 — 9
Alis ..... 0 1 3 0 0 0 3 — 7

Earned runs—Patience, Courtney, Smith, Dietrich, O'Neil. Two-base hits—Dietrich, McGoey, O'Neil. Three-base hits—Patience, Heckman. Home runs—Smith. First on balls—Off Badgley, 1; off Tyler, 2. Struck out—By Badgley, 7; by Tyler, 1. Left on bases—Alis, 7; Murray Hill, 5. Passed balls—Farmer. First base on errors—Alis, 3; Murray Hill, 5. Hit by pitcher—Courtney, Quinby, Heckman. Time of game—1:40. Attendance—1,300.

In a contest brimful of excitement, the crack Hoboken aggregation defeated Alis in the afternoon for the second time this season. It was a ten-inning exhibition and not until the last man was out was the result positive. Hoboken made its runs singly, while Alis made four in the fourth and one in the ninth inning. Farmer electrified the crowd in the ninth by making a home run and tieing the score. The visitors got the necessary run to win in the tenth and shut out Alis. Davis pitched a fair game, being touched for thirteen safeties, including two three-baggers. He received fine support. Lindeman allowed but five hits. The summary:

ALIS.	R	1B	PO	A	E
Walton, ss	0	1	1	5	0
Quinby, 2b	1	0	4	1	1
Oregan, lf	1	0	2	1	0
Farmer, c	2	2	9	0	0
Heckman, 3b	0	0	1	1	0
Patience, rf	1	0	1	1	0
Gauven, 1b	0	1	11	0	0
McGoey, cf	0	1	0	0	0
Davis, p	0	0	0	1	1
	5	5	30	10	2

HOBOKEN.	R	1B	PO	A	E
Seward, rf	3	3	2	0	0
Kiernan, ss	0	1	3	5	3
Shortell, 3b	0	1	3	3	2
Shackleton, lf	0	1	1	1	0
Sweeney, 3b	1	2	0	3	1
Driscoll, 1b	3	1	14	0	0
Tierney, cf	0	2	0	0	0
Lamar, c	0	2	7	1	0
Lindeman, p	0	0	0	6	0
	6	13	30	19	6

Score by innings:

Alis ..... 0 0 0 4 0 0 0 0 1 — 5
Hoboken ..... 1 1 0 1 1 0 0 1 0 1 — 6

Earned runs—Farmer, Sweeney, Driscoll, Seward. Three base hits—Seward, Lamar, 2. Home runs—Farmer. First base on balls—Off Davis, 3; off Lindeman, 3. Struck out—By Davis, 4; by Lindeman, 6. Left on bases—Alis, 4; Hoboken, 8. Double Plays—Quinby and Gauven. First base on errors—Alis, 2. Hit by pitcher—Driscoll. Time of game—1:35. Umpire—Mertty. Attendance—1,500.

PLAINFIELD HORSES TAKE FIRST MONEY

Woven Wind and Rex Win Two of the Three Events at Driving Park.

BIG CROWD THERE

ONLY ONE MISHAP AND IT OF LITTLE CONSEQUENCE.

Races Start at 2 o'Clock and Drag Along Until 7—Purse in Each Event $200—The Results.

In two of the three races on the card at the summer meeting of the Plainfield Driving Club at the Driving Park, Monday afternoon, Plainfield horses took first money, defeating their fields handily in three straight heats. J. W. Johnson's Woven Wind captured the first race, 2:25 trot and 2:28 pace, and Adam C. Blair's Rex won the second race, 2:10 trot and 2:20 pace, the fastest class on the card.

There was some pretty racing, all but one or two of the heats finishing close. A holiday crowd witnessed the sport, the grandstand being crowded, and the "lawn" well filled all the way to the first turn. The programme dragged to a tiresome extent, however, the heats stretching from 2 o'clock until after 7 o'clock. Some of the starts aroused howls of protest from the grandstand, and one of the drivers who was distanced after a ragged go protested successfully against his flagging. Still, on the whole, the crowd witnessed good sport.

Eight horses started in the first race. Lady Onward, owned by G. Ditmler, of Elizabeth, took the first two heats in 2:23¾, and looked like a sure winner. She got the worst of the succeeding starts, and were down so that Woven Wind captured first place without much trouble. Lady Onward got second money; Albert L., owned by M. H. Brandon, of this city, took third money, and Nellie Collins, owned by James Smith, Jr., of Newark, took fourth money. Jerry Red, owned by J. H. Green, Jr., and Agnes, owned by Stonewall Jackson, both of this city, were among the starters. Agnes was badly distanced in the first heat.

Rex got first money in the second race by winning the second, third and fourth heats. There were five starters, among them being J. H. Green's Glitters Lad. Rex went his fastest heat in 2:23¾. In rounding the first turn in the fourth heat, Jessie Dine, owned by J. S. Irving, of Westfield, tripped in her hopple and fell. Her driver, Frank Irving, was thrown into the crowd, and the overturned rig crashed into the rear of Glitters Lad's bike, pitching James Phelan, the driver, out. Neither driver was hurt. Glitters Lad kept on down the track at his racing gait, but ran himself down on the homestretch and pulled up without damage. Jessie Dine was out, but not badly.

Billy Pizarro, owned by J. F. Brown, East View, took second money and Bess, owned by Moses Rand, of Long Farm, took third money. Under the rules, not being the offending horse in the accident, Glitters Lad was awarded fourth money.

Jessie Delmar, owned by James Gregory, of Newark, took first money in the third race, 2:35 trot, by winning the second, fourth and fifth heats. Her fastest heat was 2:24¾. Hank, a Bloomfield horse, took second money, and J. H. Green's Fancy Spot captured third money. Lida Mc., owned by Phillip Jenner, of New Market, landed in the fourth place. There were six starters.

The purse in each race was $200. J. F. Rogers, of Brooklyn, was the starter, and thee judges were Mayor Smalley, R. A. Fairbairn, of Westfield, and Weston Rose, of Perth Amboy. William L. Smalley, Jr., was clerk of the course.

Sunday-School Graduates.

Miss May Batchelor, Miss Sarah Pauline Denton, Miss Violet Crouse, Miss Helen Robins and Miss May Serrell were graduated on Sunday from the Normal Class at the First Baptist church Sunday-school. J. D. McNabb is the teacher of this class. Each graduate received a diploma for having completed the course They will now teach in the Sunday-school.

Rev. Dr. Chambliss Improving.

In a letter from Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, the pastor of the First Baptist church, who is stopping at Lookout Inn, Tenn., to Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of this city, says that his health is greatly improved and that the unfavorable symptoms are disappearing. He has been afflicted with throat trouble.

Samuel Clouston, of the Manganese Steel Safe Company's plant, left today for Philadelphia on business for the firm.

POUNDED WITH A BALE-STICK

GARFIELD NELSON VICIOUSLY ATTACKED BY HARRISON RANDOLPH.

Garfield Nelson, colored, had his head nearly knocked off his shoulders with a bale-stick, wielded by Harrison Randolph, another colored man, Monday. Randolph attacked Nelson with a razor and a knife. These gentle weapons were taken from him by the neighbors and he resorted to the bale-stick, one blow from which put Nelson to sleep. The disturbance was caused by a dispute between the two.

Chief Kiely was attracted by the disturbance and in company with Detective McCarthy, proceeded to the select neighborhood along the railroad where the trouble took place. They placed Randolph under arrest and called Dr. Leatherbrow to attend Nelson. Injuries which seemed to have nearly killed him at the time. After working some time over him, Dr. Leatherbrow restored Nelson to consciousness. Harrison will probably go to Elizabeth for a forty day stay, although a woman friend of his is endeavoring to raise the $15 fine imposed by Judge Runyon.

DUNELLEN IN THE ELEVENTH

NEW MARKET IS DEFEATED BY A SCORE OF 4 TO 3.

The long standing rivalry between New Market and Dunellen was settled Saturday at New Market when the Dunellen A. C. defeated the New Market Y. M. A. in a red hot eleven inning game. Craig brought in the winning run after the score had been tied in the ninth by New Market.

Smith's steady pitching and the support given him at critical times won for Dunellen. W. Nelson and Mack played best for the Y. M. A. A large crowd was in attendance. The lineup: Dunellen—Giles, ss; Craig, 3b; Matthews, 1b; Smith, p; Giddes, 2b; Emery, lf; Davis, c; Alberts, cf; Garvey, rf. Y. M. A.—Taylor, 2b; Mack, ss; Voorhees, 1b; W. Nelson, 3b; Piddington, lf; Waglow, cf; Squiers, p; J. Nelson, rf; A. Nelson, c.

Score by innings:

	R	H	E
D. A. C.	1 0 1 0 0 0 0 1 0 0 1	4	9 2
Y. M. A.	1 0 0 0 0 0 1 0 1 0 0 — 3	8	4

KEPT WEDDING SECRET LONG

GEORGE POPE MARRIED A READING, PA., GIRL A YEAR AGO IN NEWARK.

Breaking a year's silence on the subject, G. W. Pope, the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Asa B. Pope, of Manning avenue, astonished his relatives and friends Saturday by announcing his marriage. His bride was Miss La Rue B. Barnett, of Reading, Pa.

They were married in Newark on June 22, 1903, while on a pleasure trip. Neither one gave any hint of the marriage until the young husband confessed Saturday afternoon.

The bride has been living in this city for the past three years. The groom is a member of the Criterion Club set, and is well known about town. They will reside with his parents for the present.

FLAG RAISING IN PRIDEVILLE

INCIDENTLY ASSEMBLYMAN SWACKHAMER MAKES A PATRIOTIC SPEECH.

"Gen." Albert Perry conducted an old-fashioned Fourth of July picnic on the lot at the corner of Harrison avenue and Walnut street Monday. Several hundred people, mainly Gen. Perry's neighbors in Prideville, attended the event.

The main feature of the picnic, which lasted all day, was a flag-raising in the afternoon. Assemblyman Swackhamer delivered a patriotic oration.

A large stand had been erected, and this was decorated with bunting and flags. After the flag raising, Prof. Naylor's band played a concert programme.

Hawthorne Centennial.

Exercises at Concord, Mass., marking the centennial celebration of the birth of Nathaniel Hawthorne, July 4 and succeeding days, are full of unusual interest on account of the celebrity of the writer and the high character of the men and women who drink in the inspiration here. Mrs. Julia Ward Howe and her daughter, Mrs. Maude Howe Elliot, of Boston, are among the speakers taking part in the celebration.

Sunday-School Class Picnic.

The members of Miss May B. Squier's Sunday-school class were given a picnic to Washington Rock, Monday, by their teacher. Those who were on the outing were the Misses Jamie Longbottom, Elizabeth Porter, Jesse Burns, Ruth Kenny, Nellie and Grace Squier, Mary Radford, Clara Hallard and Edith Squier.

JOLLY TIME IN HUNTERDON

PLAINFIELDERS ARE THE GUESTS AT GRANDINMERE OVER THE FOURTH.

Following her annual custom, Mrs. J. F. Grandin, of Hamden, Hunterdon county, entertained two Plainfield families at her beautiful country place, "Grandinmere," over the Fourth and the reception accorded her guests was even more delightful than ever. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clark, Jr., of Jackson Avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Force and daughter, Miss Lillian Force, of Duer street, composed the party, which found "Grandinmere" so attractive and its hostess so hospitable. Mrs. Grandin's two daughters, Miss Sara Todd and Miss Elizabeth Grandin, likewise did everything to make this year's visit eclipse those of former times.

The exterior of Mrs. Grandin's charming home was tastefully decorated with the flags of various nations, bunting and Chinese lanterns while the interior was also lavishly decorated. Across the reception hall were stretched the words WELCOME, catching the guests' eyes as they entered. In the dining room flags and roping of red, white and blue were arranged most artistically and the dining table itself was made effective with the National colors and big and little fire crackers as well as by other devices emblematic of the occasion. To each guest was presented a battledore backed with a small silk flag.

In the afternoon, the youngest daughter, Miss Elizabeth Grandin, sprang a surprise on her guest by extending an invitation for them to join her in her Colonial quarters. This attractive apartment consist of two large rooms set apart for the sole keeping of very old china and antique silverware and furniture, which has come into her possession through the will of an aunt, recently deceased.

After tea was served in the Colonial apartment, the guests participated in a enjoyable game of pit, prizes being awarded to the men and women winners, a booby prize not being overlooked. In the evening, a regular Fourth of July demonstration was arranged to interest the Plainfielders. A fine display of fireworks, including sending sky ward nearly a dozen fire balloons, took place on the handsome lawns surrounding the homestead. It was about midnight when the guests were sent to bed "full" of ice cream and refreshments and with the further satisfaction of having had a most delightful Fourth.

PLAINFIELDERS IN ILLINOIS

MR. AND MRS. FRANK W. JONES VISIT SETTLEMENT OF MANY JERSEYMEN.

During a trip which Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Jones, of Plainfield, are now making in the West, they have met quite a number of Jerseymen in Jerseyville, Ill., some of whom are relatives There was quite an exodus from Plainfield and vicinity to Illinois half a century ago, and not a few of the old residents of North Plainfield have relatives there. The name Jerseyville was adopted by a colony which went from Plainfield. Traveling in those days was not so comfortable as now, and perhaps the most memorable trip that any of the Jerseyites took from there was the one made by Mr. and Mrs. Furman Campbell. It was sixty-six years ago that they started in a colony overland for the West. They located in Jacksonville, Ill., before the Jerseyville colony was formed. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell and the latter's brother, William L. Smalley, now of Plainfield, made the thousand-mile trip in a lumber wagon. Mrs. Campbell drove the team and carried her infant son in her arms, while her husband and brothers walked most of the way. Walking was more comfortable than riding, and she men often went faster on foot than the team. They were forty-two days en route, and experienced many dangers from pantery, wild cats and wolves, which they were often compelled to shoot. The party camped in the wagon when they could not reach farmhouses, and carried provisions for the forty-two days' trip, getting milk from farmers when they could. In the colony was but one spring wagon. That belonged to the VanGlassen family, who were accounted rich in their day, as all were who had spring wagons. They used to come upon Indian tribes, who were always looking for "Brownies," and would offer their papooses for a share. Mr. Campbell started the basket business in Jacksonville, but some years later he returned to New Jersey and built the line of railroad from Bound Brook to Somerville.—Newark Evening News.

Borough Exempts In Session.

The borough Exempt Firemen's Association met last night in regular session. Final arrangements for the organization's initial socialable to be held next Tuesday night, were made.

A culvert is being put in on Plainfield avenue, at the Chamberlain corner.

CHAMPIONSHIP PLAY IN TENNIS DOUBLES

Men's Doubles in the East New Jersey Lawn Tennis League's Tournament.

ON ROSELLE'S COURTS

SEVERAL PLAINFIELD CRACKS PARTICIPATE IN THE EVENTS.

Imbrie and Grant, of Bergen Point L. T. C., Win Third Round—Contest to be Continued Saturday.

Matches in men's doubles were held in the East New Jersey Lawn Tennis League's tournament Monday, in the Roselle Casino courts.

Men's Doubles—Preliminary round—G. H. Miller and E. McKay Miller, Roselle Casino, defeated Sherer and Fernald, Sewaren Land and Water Club, 6-1, 6-1; N. F. Charlock and H. M. Glasebrook, Elizabeth Town and Country Club, defeated Ferris brothers, Jersey City Golf Club, 6-4, 6-4; Jennert and Lockwood, Danforth T. C., defeated Berry and Burnham, Ilderan Outing Club, 6-4, 6-4, 9-7; Goddard and Fleming, Hillside T. and G. C., defeated Tucker and Robbins, Ilderan Outing Club, 6-7, 6-1; C. S. Shaw and Sydney C. Smith, Bergen Point L. T. C., defeated Thomas M. Day, Jr., and Buckley, Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, 6-1, 6-2; Brunn and Elfirth, Ilderan Outing Club, defeated Rockwell and Moore, Danforth T. C., 1-6, 6-0, 6-2.

First Round—Arthur Lovell and Millock, Hillside T. and G. Club, defeated Ayres and partner, Bergen Point, L. T. C., by default; Ernest Imbrie, Bergen Point L. T. C., defeated Nader and Schenck, Jersey City T. C., 6-4, 6-2; G. H. Miller and E. McKay Miller, Roselle Casino, defeated E. S. H. Pendergast and Smith, Bergen Point, L. T. C., 6-2, 6-3; N. F. Charlock and H. M. Glasebrook, Elizabeth Town and Country Club, defeated Jennert and Lookwood, Danforth T. C., 6-3, 6-4; Shaw and Smith, Bergen Point L. T. C., defeated Goddard and Fleming, Hillside T. and G. Club, 6-3, 6-0; H. R. Charlock and Clarkson Runyon, Elizabeth Town and Country Club defeated Brun and Elfirth, Ilderan Outing Club, 6-2, 6-1; Robinson and Tinker, Sewaren Land and Water Club, defeated Black and partner, Ilderan Outing Club, by default; R. A. West and A. L. West, Bergen Point L. T. Club defeated McGriffers and Mulford, Roselle Casino, 6-3, 7-5.

Second Round—Grant and Imbrie, Bergen Point L. T. C., defeated Arthur Lovell and Millock, Hillside T. and G. Club, 6-1, 6-4; Miller brothers, Roselle Casino, defeated N. F. Charlock and Glasebrook, Elizabeth Town and Country Club, 6-1, 6-3; M. S. Charlock and Clarkson Runyon, Elizabeth Town and Country Club, defeated Shaw and Smith, Bergen Point L. T. C., 6-8, 8-6, 9-7; West brothers, Bergen Point L. T. C., defeated Robinson and Tinker, Danforth T. C., 6-2, 6-2.

Third Round—Imbrie and Grant beat Lovell and Mallick, 6-1, 6-4.

The tournament will be continued next Saturday.

REV. L. G. LEGGETT'S CALL

HE IS CHOSEN PASTOR OF FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, NEBRASKA CITY.

Rev. Lester Girard Leggett, formerly in charge at Faith chapel, has accepted a call to the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church of Nebraska City, Neb. He will preach his first sermon in that city on Sunday, July 17.

Last November Mr. Leggett was associated with Rev. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, secretary of the General Assembly's Evangelistic Committee, in a series of Bible lectures at this church and the call, which was extended last January, was a result of these lectures. Mr. Leggett leaves behind him a host of friends and well-wishers

Michael Muldowney, of Fond place, who has been employed as "barker" at the "War of the World's" at Luna Park, Coney Island, is visiting relatives. "Mul" will return to his position tomorrow.

The Alis-Hoboken contest and the horse races were both largely attended on Monday, showing that neither sport interfered with the other.

Walter Dicky has resigned his position as electrician at the Pond Machine Tool Company's plant.

Sanitary Plumbing

Brick and Portable Furnace
Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing,
Etc., Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Plumbers Association of New York City, I employ none but first class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business at all times and in all cases.

D. W. LITTELL,
No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Handbook on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

NEW IN EVERY DETAIL!

Mr new barber shop at
143 NORTH AVE.
s now open ready for business.
All the latest appointments in the tonsorial line.
EDWIN B. MAYNARD.

CARNEY BROS.,

MADISON AVENUE,
Between Front and Second streets.

Tinners,
Plumbers
Gas Fitters,

Grates and bricks for all kinds of stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your tinware mending to us. The best tinners, the best plumbers, and the best gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction. Keys of all kinds are made here. Tinware made to order. Ranges, brick and portable furnaces. Sanitary plumbing.

DIME
Savings Institution,
Of Plainfield, N. J.,

Is now receiving deposits with interest, allowed on all sums from $5 to $3,000.

J. Frank Hubbard, President.
Wm. F. Arnold, } Vice-Pres
Jerusha Maxwell, }
J. C. Pope, Sec'y and Treas.

Money deposited on or before January tenth will draw interest from the first.

Guaranteed Salary $900 YEARLY.

Men and women of good address to represent us; some to travel others to remain at home; no canvassing for local work among your neighbors. Good salary guaranteed yearly; extra commissions and expenses allowed for advancement; old established house. Grand chance for earnest man or woman to secure pleasant, permanent position. Liberal income and future. Write, brilliant lines. Write at once.
STAFFORD PRESS,
25 Church St., New Haven, Conn

W. R. CODINGTON,
Counsellor-at-Law
Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-chancery, Notary Public. Offices Corner of Park avenue and Second street.

ALBERT HEDDEN
Livery & Boarding Stables
FOURTH ST.,
between Watchung and Park avenues. First-class Livery. Horses boarded by week or month. Telephone call No. 114.

Wm. A. Woodruff
Fire and Life
INSURANCE AGENT,
OFFICE,
corner Front St. and Park Avenue,
Plainfield, N. J.

DIED.

REILLY—At South Plainfield, N. J., June 28, 1904, John W. Reilly, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Reilly, in his 11th year.

BELLIS—In this city, June 29, 1904, Henrietta R., wife of G. H. Bellis.

BURKE—In this city, July 5, 1904, James J. Burke, in his 47th year.

I. O. O. F. ENCAMPMENT ENTERTAINS ITS FRIENDS

Women Share in Enjoyment of Programme as Presented by Noah Dove, Odd Fellows.

SPEECHES A FEATURE

GRAND PATRIARCH KAHN TELLS OF TRADITIONS OF THE ORDER.

Violin selections by David Dreier and Songs by Aleck Muir—Refreshments at Close of Entertainment.

Winding up their social season before the summer shut-down, the members of Noah Dove Encampment, No. 25, I. O. O. F., entertained their women friends Thursday. It passed off as a most delightful affair, full of pleasant features. There was a large attendance, and keen enjoyment was the keynote of the evening.

Two prominent State officers were present to mark the importance of the event, Grand Patriarch Kahn and Grand Senior Warden Taylor, of Newark. Both delivered addresses. A delegation from the New Brunswick canton was present.

There was a long and enjoyable bill of entertainment. Grand Patriarch Kahn's address was the first thing on the programme. He spoke in happy phrase, touching on the traditions and aims of the order, and complimenting the Encampment upon its make-up and success.

Musical features included several violin selections by David Dreier, vocal solos by Aleck Muir, and a number of selections by an orchestra. Miss Ella Case recited, and Fred Becker gave an exhibition of club and sword swinging. All the numbers were sleepily rendered, and insistent applause compelled several encores.

Grand Senior Warden Taylor spoke on lines somewhat similar to the address of the Grand Patriarch. He evoked warm applause with neatly turned compliments for the organization and its work.

Only one local member spoke. Dr J. Hervey Buchanan delivered one of his inimitable speeches, putting the assemblage into great good humor by his hits and digs.

After the entertainment the gathering adjourned to the dining rooms, where refreshments were served. The committee in charge of the affair comprised Stephen H. Schlier, John A. Kriney and John Becker, Jr.

A DELIGHTFUL MUSICALE

GIVEN FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE SCOTCH PLAINS BAPTIST CHURCH.

Under the auspices and for the benefit of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, a delightful musical and literary entertainment was held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Westcott, in Fanwood, Thursday. There was a large attendance of members and friends of the church and the receipts were most gratifying.

Miss Frances Klopsky, a well-known soprano of Brooklyn, pleased the audience by singing "Beloved Is It Morn," and she generously responded to an encore. She was accompanied on the piano by Miss Lillian Fancher, who also rendered several piano selections.

A feature of the entertainment was singing by a male quartette composed of Marshall W. White, first tenor; Howard G. Gilmore, second tenor; L. D. H. Gilmore, second bass, and Phillip Nelder, first tenor. They sang "A Continuous Performance," and "Laughing Gas," receiving hearty applause.

Vocal duets by Mrs. Charles Vincent and Mrs. VanBrakle, and mandolin selections by H. G. Gilmore, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. L. D. H. Gilmore, were well received, as were also the excellent recitations by Miss Mildred Bass, of Paterson. Those presenting the programme were in each instance obliged to respond to encores. Following the entertainment there was a social time.

Miss Matthews Agreeably Surprised.

Miss Jessie Matthews, of West Fourth street, was given a surprise party Thursday. The affair was arranged by her brother, Elias Matthews. There were twenty young persons present who spent the evening playing "pit." The winners were Miss Mabel Gano and Munroe Squires. After the game dancing was enjoyed.

Mrs. Gow's Mother Dead.

Mrs. Robert Gow, of Lee place, this city, has just received word from her home in Cheadle, Staffordshire, England, that her mother is dead, having passed away June 20. She was buried on June 22. Mrs. Gow was about to leave for a visit at her old home, having arranged for passage on the "Oceanic."

FLAG ON CITY POLE ALL THE YEAR 'ROUND

Junior Order of United American Mechanics to Supply the Starry Banner.

POLE 125 FEET HIGH

FRANKLIN COUNCIL HAS THE MATTER UNDER CONSIDERATION.

Benevolent and Somerset Councils May Aid in the Scheme—Edward White Gave the First Flag.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., the oldest Council of American Mechanics in this city, has taken steps to purchase a large American flag to float in the breeze from the city flag pole on Front street, at the head of Park avenue. When one banner becomes worn out, a new one will be supplied and the flag will be unfurled every day.

The matter has been under advisement for some time, and there is no doubt but what the action will be taken. It has always been the pride of the Sons of Liberty, as well as the general public, to see Old Glory flying from the city pole. Heretofore, there has been more or less trouble in having a flag raised on this pole. Edward White presented the first flag to the city after the pole was put in position and later Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk gave a flag for the same purpose. According to a resolution adopted by the Council Chief Deane, of the fire department, was to display the flag on all legal holidays and other proper occasions. And he has taken pains to preserve the flag by only displaying it on holidays.

It is quite likely that both Somerset and Benevolent Councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., will join in the movement.

WORKING ON NEW BRIDGE

PUTTING ON THE FINISHING TOUCHES AT GIRAUD AVENUE STRUCTURE.

F. A. Roe, superintendent of bridge construction for the Dover Boiler Works, has several men at work on the new Giraud avenue bridge, putting the finishing touches to the railing and painting the girders. Much of the railing for this bridge was so damaged in transit as to make it impossible to erect it without taking it apart and removing the damaged portions.

Several times the delay has been so aggravated that the Board of Freeholders has been on the point of abrogating the contract, taking up the company's bond and finishing the work on its own responsibility.

George Ogden, Jr., Marries.

Miss Bridget McFadden and George Ogden, Jr., were made man and wife at Scotch Plains, Thursday, in the presence of a few friends and relatives. The ceremony was performed by Justice Hand.

Scene in Speer's Vineyards, AT PASSAIC, N. J.

Gathering the Oporto Grape for Port & Burgundy Wine.

Weakly persons, invalids and the aged, find this is just what they want, a genuine old-fashioned, rich

Blood-making Wine.

Diamond wine is the word for weakly and aged persons

FOR PARTIES.

Speer's Port & Burgundy Wine.

The Finest Wine in the world from his 56 Acres of Vineyards, where the soil is rich in iron, imparting it to the Oporto grape and the grape to the Wine—causes the dark, deep rich color, and blood-making property of this life-giving Wine. The Iron in it. This is the Wine that beats the world in its valuable medicinal qualities, for family use and evening parties; it is especially beneficial for females, invalids and aged persons.

The Port Wine is nine years old and the Burgundy, a rich dry wine eight years old.

The Claret equals the finest French product.

Druggists and Grocers Sell it.

TITLES AND THE 400

EXPERIENCE OF AMERICAN WOMEN WITH NOBILITY.

PRODUCTIVE OF SCANDALS

Daughter of Vice President Morton Bringing Suit for Divorce from Brute of a Husband—Some Exceptions to the Rule.

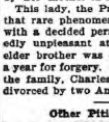
NEW YORK.—The divorce scandal in the case of the Duchess de Valencay was no small prize to New York. For some time the duchess, who was Miss Helen Morton, the daughter of Levi P. Morton, has been sheltered by her father's home in this city. The Morton family is prominent in society. Its head has been governor of New York and vice president of the United States. Its wealth is ample, its country estate at Ellerslie on the Hudson one of the finest in the country. Mr. Morton himself is in feeble health and old. He is broken by the sorrow of his second daughter's death, which came almost at the same time as the final news of the irrevocable parting of the Valencays.

One of Napoleon's plain-spoken marshals described Talleyrand as a "shovelful of mud in a silk stocking." The description would fit some of Talleyrand's distant relatives of to-day. The man who married Miss Morton is fully named the count of Talleyrand-Perigord. The ducal title of Valencay came from Mr. Morton; at any rate, his money to the tune of $600,000 bought the ducal chateau, and that may or may not carry the higher title. That point is disputed.

In New York Mr. Morton lives in a house on the east side of Fifth avenue, about 35 feet in width—one of those slice-of-cake-shaped houses that emit a lot of money and are bigger than they look. In France his daughter was for a little time nominally the mistress of a great mediaeval palace with a proud name, but not with happiness, actually she never occupied it. It was seized by her mother-in-law.

This lady, the Princess de Sagan, is that rare phenomenon, an aristocrat with a decided personality, and decidedly unpleasant at that. The duke's elder brother was once in prison half a year for forgery. Another member of the family, Charles, —as actually been divorced by two American wives.

Other Pitiable Cases.



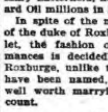
MR. MORTON has been in vice president when his daughter married abroad. Not the first case in the families of men distinguished in American politics. Gen. Grant's granddaughter married a Russian prince. President Arthur's son married a woman of title. Miss Edith Van Buren, who was a grandniece of President Van Buren, married the Count de Castelmenardo of Italy, and was badly treated by him.

Other cases turned out better; the early ones apparently more often than those of recent happening. Thus the daughter of Preston King married the French minister, Waddington. Her memoirs, which have just been published, reveal a happy life spent in high places, vexed by nobler cares than trouble the titled do-nothings who seem preferred by so many silly girls nowadays.

To this latter class belong the Prince Rospigliosi, whose noble family have made miserable the life in Rome of the former Miss Marie Reid of New Orleans; the Baron von Schellendorf, who took his Cincinnati bride to German East Africa and tortured her by drunken attentions to dusky rivals; the Baron Halkett, whose American wife is now a hermit in the Adirondacks; the Prince Colonna, who, with the proud record of a thousand years of nobility behind him, drove the adopted daughter of John B. Mackay from his home with her two children; the Baron de Focke, arrested for embezzlement in Vienna within the honeymoon with his bride, Miss Anna Cox, of New York; the Count Larisch-Moniech, who was backed by a marriage-settlement, his campaign for the hand of miss Mary Satterfield, heiress of eight Standard Oil millions in Buffalo.

In spite of the marriage last winter of the duke of Roxburgh and Miss Goelet, the fashion of international romances is decidedly going out. And Roxburgs, unlike the creatures who have been named, is a manly fellow well worth marrying on his own account.

Cabe Case's Tavern Morns.



IN GABE CASE a picturesque New York character has passed away. Case was born in the city; about no one is, so that this alone was a distinction. In successive taverns in the upper part of the city he catered to those horsed people who before the advent of the automobile fared forth of the city gates to find dirt roads and room for speed in Westchester county.

Gabe Case was the founder in this section of the practice of setting up a magnum of champagne for the first driver—amateur, of course—who reached his hotel in a sleigh or cutter and upon runners each autumn. The magnum was always taken after a fierce struggle on perhaps a quarter inch of rapidly fading snow, and of course it brought to the hotel enough custom to more than compensate for the cost of the wine. Afterwards other hotel keepers copied the idea. One man in Yonkers used to set up wine for the first bicyclist to reach his place every year. Result a race beginning at one minute after midnight between 50 or more hooting scorchers, making night hideous, and sometimes pedaled through six inches of snow. After the winner got his supplies, the others still had a thirst to assuage.

Thirteen years ago Case moved for the third or fourth time to McGown's Pass tavern in Central park. Gov. Flower and his staff had a festive dinner there. In his day Case knew well Robert Bonner, W. H., W. K. and "Commodore" Vanderbilt; the Jeromes, the Works and other people who loved horses because they were horses.

"Citizen" Genet's Son.

ONE doesn't need to have read much American history to remember the row that was made more than a century ago about "Citizen" Genet, the French minister who in the time of the Paris revolution came to this country to prevent a British-American alliance—of which, by the way, there was no danger.

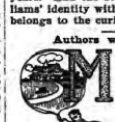
Genet's son died the other day in New York, where he had lived all his 80 years. His father, the minister, who came to this country in 1793, remained and became a citizen; he was a friend and admirer of George Clinton, and when in his middle life a son was born to him he gave the boy Clinton's name. So when George Clinton Genet died so recently New York took—not of course, so much interest as in a prize fight or something really important—but a decent degree of interest.

For it was a curious fact that this gray-haired old man had heard in his youth from his father's own lips personal reminiscences of both the French and the American revolutions; and that thus a single life intervened between Washington and the present day.

Genet married an Albany lady of good family and practiced the law until 15 years ago and gained a fortune.

This country has always had an attraction for Frenchmen of title or ability. Few men of his day knew our west better than Chateaubriand. The Bonapartes of Trenton and Baltimore are a famous case in point. It has long been believed by many that Marshal Ney was never really shot by the soldiers of the restoration, but escaped to this country and lived here many years. And the story of Eleazer Williams' identity with a missing dauphin belongs to the curiosities of history.

Authors with Money.



MANY jokes have been exploded at the expense of Irving Bacheller and Hamlin Garland, who went to Mexico with the object, as the funny men will have it, of buying gold mines. As a matter of fact Garland is an experienced miner and both men have earned big money by their pens, so they could try their luck if they wished. Bacheller, who already has a beautiful seaside place in Connecticut, is preparing to build a new one of magnificent proportions. I do not see how he can bear to leave the study he has built of native granite upon a rock fairly overhanging the water.

All the successful authors seem to take to country places of manorial size. Winston Churchill's mansion up in New Hampshire is a show place for miles around. R. H. Davis has a place up the Hudson with a private golf course, kennels and stables; but he married money. Frank Stockton had but just moved up a big Virginian plantation with a stately mansion when he died, older in fame than he looked with his sprightly figure and keenly intellectual face. One of the finest houses I have seen in New York was that in which the late Paul Leicester Ford did his writing—but he, too, married money in man's point of view. The library was vast and well filled, partly with books that old Gordon Ford, Paul's father, who was one of the owners of the Tribune, had collected.

Authorship was 15 years ago a very uncertain business. The number of men and women who earned more than $4,000 a year by their pens, except in newspaper work, was small. The great sale of fiction of recent years has changed conditions. Suppose, for instance, that Mr. Churchill's new book goes to 200,000 copies; multiply that by 20 cents a copy—and his royalty is probably more than that—and you can see that the proceeds will keep up a New Hampshire mansion for some time.

OWEN LANGDON.

Sense of Propriety.

"It was careless of me to say that I admired Bacon," remarked the young woman with glasses.

"Did you offend some Shakespearean student?"

"No. It was a Chicago pork packer. He frigidly remarked that he didn't care to talk shop."—Washington Star.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

Public Library Notes.

List of books added to the Library during June, 1904.

American association for the advancement of science. Proceedings, 1849-Ja. 1900. v. 1-8, 7-49.

Bacon, E. M., Walks and rides about Boston; Bancroft, Mrs. G., Letters from England; Barnum, P. T., Struggles and triumphs; Beecher, H. W., Life of Jesus, the Christ; Boston, Mass., Public Library, Periodical publications in the library, etc., 1897, 1905; British journal of photography, 1898-1901; Brown, J. D., Manual of library economy; Bullen, A. H., ed. Carols and poems from 15th century to present time; California, State library, Libraries of California; Cesarone, Comtesse E. M., Lombard studies; Churchill, Winston, Crossing; Cincinnati, O., Public Library, Annual list of books added, 1901-1902; Coates, T. F. G., Life and speeches of Lord Rosebery, 2v; Crapsey, A. S., Causes and remedy of the disunion of Christendom; Crapsey, A. S., Voice in the wilderness; Crerar, John, library, Chicago, Ill., Books on industrial arts, 1903; Crestien of Troyes, King Arthur and the round table; Edgren, A. H., French grammar; Field, Eugene, Songs of childhood, with music, by R. DeKoven, and others; Fraser, J. F., Real Siberia; Garrison, G. P., History of Texas; Goodwin, Mrs. M. W. Four roads to paradise; Gresley, H., and others, Great industries of the United States; Guppy, H., French fiction and French juvenile literature for the public library; Haeckel, E., Riddle of the universe; Headley, P. C., Women of the Bible; Helmholt, H. F., History of the world, v. 2; Marchmont, A. W., By right of sword; Moss, C. M., First Greek reader; New Jersey, Legislature, acts of 175th legislature, 1903; New Jersey, Public Roads Commission, 10th annual report, 1903; Oliphant, Mrs. M. O. W., Women novelists of Queen Victoria's reign; Palgrave, F. T., Golden treasury, v. 3; Pennsylvania Railroad Co., Summer excursion routes, 1904; Richardson, E. C., Writings on American history; St. Louis, Missouri, Public Library, English prose fiction, and German prose fiction in the library; Super, C. B., Preparatory French reader; U. S. Agriculture department, Yearbook, 1903; U. S. Census office, Special reports, employes and wages; U. S. Engineer department, Geological surveys west of the 100th meridian, 4v; U. S. Engineer department, Professional notes; U. S. Engineer department, Geographical and geological surveys west of 100th meridian in 1873; U. S. Engineer department, Report on a reconnaissance from Carroll, Montana territory to Yellowstone National Park; U. S. Engineer department, Spring hydraulic conomy; U. S. Interstate commerce commission, 17th annual report, 1903; U. S. Library of congress, Bibliography: bound pamphlets; U. S. National museum, American hydroids, part 1; U. S. National museum, Oceanic ichthyology, 2v; Wentworth, G. A., Elements of algebra; Wentworth, G. A., School algebra; Worman, J. H. Erstes Deutsches buch; Wharton, Edith, Descent of man.

PYTHIAN ELECTION.

Harry Werner is Chosen Chancellor Commander of Unity Lodge.

Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., met Thursday and elected these officers: Chancellor commander, Harry Werner; vice chancellor, George Dean; prelate, J. D. Anderson; master of work, T. C. Smith; master at arms, David Rogers; inner guard, Charles Sandburg; outer guard, Charles E. Harris; trustee, eighteen months, Jeremiah VanWinkle. The officers will be installed at the next meeting by Deputy Grand Chancellor VanWinkle and a collation will be served.

Wesley Gaskill Fined.

Recorder E. S. Campbell, of Dunellen, sentenced Wesley Gaskill to a $10 fine or 15 days at New Brunswick for being drunk and disorderly. The fine was paid. A large crowd assembled to hear the court proceedings but were disappointed as the trial was carried on through an interpreter who was a mute, the dumb alphabet being used.

Chancery Mortgages Not Taxable.

An opinion was filed Tuesday in the Court of Chancery at Trenton to the effect that mortgages issued by Chancery are not taxable under the law of 1898. The test was made in the case of the Assessor of Delaware Township, Hunterdon County, against Mrs. Julia Larue. The effect will be general throughout the State.

A. N. Evander is confined to his home by illness.

CALIFORNIA BRIDE FOR NEW YORK MAN

Miss Mary Onderdonk Hunt, of Los Angeles, Becomes the Wife of C. J. F. Gunning.

WEDDING AT VAILMERE

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER SENDS A GIFT TO THE BRIDE.

Rev. L. E. Wheeler, of New Brunswick, and Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of This City, Officiate—Miss Gunning as Maid-of-Honor.

Miss Mary Onderdonk Hunt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Hamilton Hunt, of Los Angeles, Cal., and Clarence Joseph Foist Gunning, a prominent New York business and society man, were married at "Vailmere," the Colonial homestead of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Vail, at New Market, last Thursday night.

The ceremony was performed in the huge old-fashioned parlors, amid a bower of greens and potted plants, the color scheme being green and white. Rev. Lint E. Wheeler, pastor of the First Baptist church, New Brunswick, officiated, assisted by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor emeritus of the First Baptist church, of this city.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Florence O. Hunt, as maid of honor, and Miss Emeline Gunning, a sister of the groom, as bridesmaid. Miss Virginia Phyfe Vail, a cousin of the bride, was flower girl and she strewed bridal roses in the path of the party as they entered the parlor. The ushers were Frank Frost, of this city; Alfred D. Fettreich, James A. McCormick and Gerald N. Thaxter, of New York. The best man was Frederick Gunning, of Chicago.

As the bridal party entered the parlor, and during the ceremony, the wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Garland's orchestra. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was gowned in white chiffon, trimmed with duchesse lace and she wore her mother's wedding veil, fastened with a large diamond brooch, the gift of the groom. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses.

The maid of honor wore a gown of yellow crepe de chine, trimmed with more panels and lace and she carried a bouquet of roses. The bridesmaids and flower girl wore white net over white silk and carried yellow roses. Among the guests were seen many handsome gowns.

After the ceremony the bride and groom departed on an extended wedding journey and upon their return they will go to their country home at Searsdale, N. Y. The reception held during the evening was attended by guests from Chicago, New York, Trenton, New Brunswick and Plainfield.

The bride received a large collection of gifts of both use and value, including a costly clock from Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, four substantial checks and a curiously wrought decanter, which came from Russia.

Among the invited guests were Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Howard Colby, Mr. and Mrs. I. V. Brokaw, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Field, Mr. and Mrs. Carstensen, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Cannon, and Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Palmer, of New York; Mrs. M. A. Ryerson and Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Crane, of Chicago; Prof. H. D. S. Mulford, of New Brunswick; Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Frost, of Trenton; Dr. and Mrs. Frank Donahue and Dr. Monsyer Oliars, of New Brunswick; Mr. and Mrs. Halsey, of Newark; Alexander Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Frost, Dr. Norman H. Probasco, James Middledith, Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Leonard, the Misses Marsh, Arthur Stout, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen and Mr. and Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen, of Plainfield.

Mutrs vs. Firstbrooks.

From the Muir children of Essex street to the Firstbrook children of West Fifth street has come a challenge for a series of game to decide the inter-family championship in baseball. Each side can muster a large majority of players from among an active troop of brothers, ranging in age from six and eight to fifteen and sixteen. All of them are players, and the series is being seriously arranged.

Miss Mallen's Party.

Observing her twentieth birthday, Miss Mary Mallen, of West Third street, entertained a number of friends at a porch party Thursday. Lanterns were strung about the porch with pretty effect. Piano and whist were played, and songs were sung, until 11 o'clock, when refreshments were served.

Mrs. Huff's Luncheon.

Mrs. Horace Huff, of Coddington avenue, entertained a number of friends at luncheon Wednesday. The affair was held in honor of out of town guests.

RELUCTANTLY RELEASE REV. DR. EDWIN L. EARP

Quarterly Conference of Grace M. E. Regretfully Dissolves Relations With the Pastor.

PRAISE HIM HIGHLY

MINISTER ACCEPTS CHAIR OF SOCIOLOGY AT SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, Presiding Elder Halleron and William J. Conroy Make Addresses—Resolutions Are Passed.

Final action on the release of Rev. Dr. Earp from the pastorate of Grace M. E. church to enable him to begin his work as professor of sociology in Syracuse University in the fall, was taken at the second quarterly conference of the church June 29. In formally dissolving relations with the pastor, the members of Board of Trustees and Presiding Elder Halleron, who was in the chair, expressed regret over Dr. Earp's departure in eulogistic phrase. Resolutions of appreciation of his character and his work were passed.

Following the presentation of the usual conference reports, Dr. Earp formally laid the matter of his call to the university before the Conference. The action of the Official Board, last Friday, in releasing Dr. Earp August 1 was ratified.

Rev. Dr. E. L. Earp.

By unanimous rising vote, a resolution similar to the highly complimentary one on the minutes of the last meeting of the Official Board, the full text of which was published on Monday, was passed.

Dr. H. K. Carroll expressed the regret of the trustees over the approaching departure. He was sorry to hear that Dr. Earp was going away, he said, but glad that in his going he went to so wide a field. He congratulated him, and felt sure that in his new field the church, the community and the world at large would hear of him.

W. J. Conroy spoke feelingly of the endearment that had grown between the pastor and his people. He said that not only the people of the church but outside citizens, even those not members of a church, would regret to hear of Dr. Earp's departure.

Presiding Elder Halleron added an eloquent word of praise and regret. He spoke of the friendship he had formed for Dr. Earp since his first meeting with him when Dr. Earp had charge of a Newark pastorate. He eulogized the Doctor's character, and said he had had his eye on him, and expected just such an advance as had come.

Dr. Earp's response was feelingly worded. He expressed a deep sorrow in leaving his charge and Plainfield. This had practically been his first home, he said. His two children were baptized at the Grace font, and this community would always be large in his memory and in his heart.

There was some talk of Dr. Earp's temporary successor between the supply committee and Presiding Elder Halleran, but nothing of a definite nature developed. Two or three names have been suggested to the committee, but no actual steps toward filling the pulpit have been taken as yet. The conference adjourned subject to the call of the Presiding Elder, who will convene it when some definite action upon the pastorate is to be taken. The pastorate will be filled in as short a time as it is possible to arrange matters to that end.

Dr. Earp will speak his final word to his charge on Sunday, July 31.

R. V. Brokaw, of Regent street, has been visiting relatives in Bound Brook.

Miss Adelaide Carney, of Craig place, has returned from a visit to friends in Newark.

Miss Tina Voehl, of Somersetstreet, has returned home after a visit to friends in Mendham.

Mrs. J. B. Tiger, of Dunz street, has returned home after a week's stay with relatives in New York.

ST. MARY'S PUPILS COMPLETE THEIR WORK

Graduates in Commercial Department Present Elaborate Programme.

SOME GOOD ESSAYS

MISS MARGARET LUTZ IS THE SALUTATORIAN.

Pupils Give "The Bogus Inspector," an Amusing Operatta — Father Egan Presents the Diplomas— Reception to Graduates.

Completing the three-nights' series of graduations, the commercial department of St. Mary's Parochial School, the highest of the institution, held its commencement June 29, in the school hall. As at the other two exercises there was an elaborate programme of entertainment. Additional interest was given to the exercises by the distribution of honors for which the graduates strove during their last year of study.

Eleven young people composed the graduating class: Margaret F. Lutz, Helen E. Hanrahan, Margaret A. King, Mary T. McCarthy, Christine V. McEachen, Blanche A. Skinner, John P. Kyle, Eugene E. Johnson, Joseph R. Sullivan, John T. Caulfield and Cornelius J. McCarthy. A large audience of relatives and friends, and members of the parish, saw the class go forth on the careers for which they have been preparing under the tutelage of the gentle and motherly Sisters, and the counsel of the wise and fatherly priests.

An interesting aspect of the audience was the presence, in a body, of the recently organized alumni association. The old graduates were accorded seats of honor near the platform.

Miss Margaret Lutz delivered the salutatory. Her address was happily worded, with well turned phrases. John Kyle was the valedictorian, the subject of his address being "Christian Education." He gave an eloquent and interesting exposition of the value of religious instruction in conjunction with secular teaching.

Father Egan distributed the following honors: Gold medal, for general excellence, to Miss Margaret Lutz; second honor, gold cross, for excellence, to John Kyle; gold medal, for best essay on Christian Doctrine, Miss Mary McCarthy; gold medal, for prize essay, to Miss Helen Hanrahan; gold medal, for excellence in stenography and typewriting, to Miss Margaret Lutz; gold medal, for arithmetic, Miss Mary McCarthy.

Honorable mention was awarded to the following, in the order named: Miss Elizabeth Brown, George Mc Cusker, Katherine McCauley, James Cullen, Mary McKenna, William Sullivan.

For attaining 100 per cent. in attendance, the following were given honorable mention also: Margaret Lutz, John McEachen, Madeline Seaman, Mary Powers, Charles Schuck, James Comiskey.

The chief feature of the entertainment was "The Bogus Inspector," a pretty little operetta of school life. It abounded in funny situations, with many tuneful numbers, of which the cast took full advantage. The music was well rendered, and all the members of the cast filled their parts with a degree of cleverness that relected very much credit upon Sister Mary Esther and Madam Menzeli Bartlett, who coached them.

The main parts were taken as follows:

Colonel Fip, inspector of schools, Edward Carty; valet to inspector, James Cullen; Mr. Pointer, school teacher, James Comiskey; Mr. Fitcham, school attendance officer, Martin Welsh; Johnny Smith, a lazy schoolboy, Thomas Harding.

There was a large and well-trained chorus in support of these leading characters. A feature of the operetta was a Dancos' Dance, in which James Lynch, Thomas Harding, William Colvin, Frank Hand, Thomas Lappan, William Casey, John Barry, John Mize, John Brown, Joseph Schuck, Charles Rodier, Edward O'Loughlin. The Country Dance performed at the grammar graduation the night before, which scored a remarkable success, was repeated. It evoked as much enthusiastic applause as was brought out by the first presentation. Those who took part in it were: Katherine Kelly, Mary Kyle, Emma Killoran, Ella Lappan, Lillian Fennessy, Bridge Hepner, Helen Mullen, Katherine Galbraith, Mary Crosby, Margaret Conway, Mary Conway, Katherine McCauley.

Other features of the programme included the rendition of Chopin's Polonaise by Miss Mary Smith on the piano, the singing of "The Palms" by the graduates, and the singing of the class song, written by Miss Helen E. Hanrahan, by the alumni and the graduating class.

Immediately after the exercises the graduates and their friends gathered in Stafford Hall, where the Alumni Association tendered a reception and dance to the Class of 1904. Music for the dancing was furnished by Prof. Eugene O'Reilly's full orchestra.

During the intermission a collation was served. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Miss Anna Daley, chairman; Dr. Frederick Hughes, Miss Katherine Flynn, Miss Mary Smith, Miss Anna O'Keefe and Miss Mary Burke.

ALIS - WESTFIELD COMPACT

TERMS UNDER WHICH THE SERIES OF GAMES WILL BE RESUMED.

The agreement drafted at the meeting of the Alis Club on Wednesday night whereby the Alis and Westfield teams may resume the series started earlier in the season, appears to meet with general approval, provided the dispute is settled purely on its merits.

Mayor Perkins, of Westfield, an official of the Westfield Baseball Association, has taken an unusual interest in the matter of a settlement of the dispute. He has been very anxious to have the contests resumed.

This is the agreement drafted Wednesday night and signed by representatives of both clubs:

"The games to continue the baseball series as heretofore arranged between Alis and Westfield Clubs with the following modifications. The managers of the respective teams will arrange new dates for the balance of the games to be played; the guarantees to remain as heretofore agreed.

"The disputed game played as Westfield June 11, 1904 will be referred to three arbitrators, one to be selected by Alis Club, one by Randolph Perkins, of Westfield, and the third arbitrator to be selected by the two so chosen. The sole question to be determined by the arbitrators is whether the disputed game shall be counted for Westfield as won, or be played over. The arbitrators shall decide this question on the facts to be presented by both teams and the rules of the game.

"The schedule and umpires for the balance of the games to be played, when arranged by the respective managers, shall be presented to Randolph Perkins for his approval, and when approved by him, shall stand as the agreement between the two aforesaid clubs.

Westfield Baseball Association,
By Randolph Perkins.
Alis Club,
By J. J. Slavin,
Chairman B. B. Com.
Plainfield, N. J., June 28, 1904.

HELPING WATCHUNG SCHOOL

STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL IS GIVEN TO RAISE NECESSARY FUNDS.

A highly successful strawberry festival was held Wednesday night at Texier's mill in Watchung. The object of the affair was to raise funds for a new well at the Watchung school house and the following members of the school board formed the committee on arrangements: Mr. Duffy, Mr. Clark, George Schmidt, Edward Canning and Mr. Voorhees, of Greenbrook. There was a musical programme in addition to the good things served by the Misses Emma and Addie Wyckoff, who presided over the cake and fruit table and the Misses Demler, who were in charge of the cream and berries. The musical portion of the entertainment included vocal solos by Leonce Texier, of Watchung, and Alex. Muir, of this city, who were enthusiastically applauded. Probably 250 people were present and the affair was conceded to be such a success that another will probably be held late in August or early in September.

Stanbury's Luck Returns.

After six months of comparative peace, W. R. Stanbury's auto broke down again at the corner of Somerset and Front streets Wednesday afternoon. It attracted a big crowd and kept Patrolman Overbaugh and Detective McCarthy busy clearing the corner for foot traffic. Mr. Stanbury, collarless and in his shirtsleeves, helped one of F. L. O. Martin's men tinker the machine into shape. "This is just like old times," said the Fanwood chauffeur, mopping his head. "I'd begin to think the old machine was going back on me."

Friends' Society Picnic.

In spite of what promised to be a rainy day, the First-day school of the Society of Friends, held their picnic at the Fanwood home of former Mayor Thomas S. Young, on Midway avenue. The afternoon was spent in playing various games on the lawn and refreshments were served.

Red Men to Meet on Diamond.

Wetumpkah and Miantonomo Tribes will meet for the second game of ball in their latest series Saturday, July 9, on the mountain. Both teams are practicing hard.

HOME DRESSMAKING.

A Few Hints For the Woman Who Has to Do Her Own Sewing.

There are plenty of women who have to do their own sewing in these days of incompetent and high priced dressmakers, and perhaps a few hints on how to make it easier will not be amiss at this time of the year.

In the first place, and I would like to put this in italics, don't undertake more than you can do. Remember that another summer is coming and that what you can't have this summer you may get next summer. You don't have to lay in a supply for two years.

Don't attempt things that are too elaborate. Ten to one they won't turn out so well as the simpler modes would under your untrained fingers. Pick out a design as unpretentious as possible and follow it closely and be neat and trim in your stitching, with attention to corners and detail. Better one piece of applique sewed on firmly and smoothly than a dozen pieces scattered all over a gown with four stitches and a promise.

DON'T SEW AT NIGHT.

Don't invest in poor materials that you may have more lace and trimming. Cheap materials fade and do all sorts of disappointing things during the making process. There is an exception right here in favor of muslin. The inexpensive plain varieties are just as pretty when simply made up as the expensive ones.

Unless you have plenty of money stick to the plain shirt waist, and don't attempt to make at home the fancy one, all tucks and lace. Don't get so interested in your work that you will go without your meals and bolster yourself with a cup of tea instead. When you feel that you can't eat, it is time to take a rest. You will be able to accomplish all the more work afterward.

Don't sew at night. Another day is before you, and you can get up early in the morning. Besides, if that is any consolation to you, what you do at night you generally rip in the morning.

Get along with as few things as possible. It is better to wear a plain dress with a fresh smiling face than an elaborate one with a countenance drawn and weary from sewing over it.

HELEN CLIFTON.

IN COUNTRY HOUSES.

Old English Effects Are Popular For Dining Rooms and Libraries.

The dining room of the present is an echo of the past, and the accompanying cut illustrates this.

Here we have a room in a country house the wall's and ceiling of which are done in grayish plaster and brown oak. The floor, of course, is of hard wood sparsely covered with one or two Turkish rugs. The shelf all around the wall holds blue and white china and bits of old pewter and brass. The inglenook seat and the quaint fireplace are most attractive. The tables and chairs are of antique pattern. The light comes from electric bulbs placed in lanterns suspended from the ceiling. The china closet is built into the wall, as is the custom now in most houses.

AN ANTIQUE EFFECT.

This room could be equally well carried out in Flemish oak, with the plastering painted a rich tone of Venetian red.

R. DE LA BAUME.

Women's Clubs.

Women's clubs are evolving out of the paper reading stage and have entered on the good clothes stage.

SOUVENIR OF THE JAPANESE

Bell at Annapolis That Was Presented to Commodore Perry Fifty Years Ago.

One of the reminders of the early friendship of Japan for America now adorns the grounds of the naval academy at Annapolis, Md.

Suspended in a pagodalike structure just off "Lover's Lane" is a queer looking bronze bell of unique design. It usually attracts the attention of visitors, but few ever learn that it possesses a history of importance. It was presented to Commodore Matthew Perry on July 13, 1854, by the regent of the Lewchew islands, a dependency of the Japanese empire. Commodore Perry was at that time commander in chief of the United States squadron in the Asiatic seas and minister plenipotentiary, charged with the duty of opening intercourse between Japan and the United States. After his death, in 1858, Mrs. Perry presented it to the naval academy, in fulfillment of his wish.

The bell is covered with an inscription in Japanese, which was recently translated by a young Japanese who was at one time a student at the naval academy. The inscription reads as follows:

"In the eighth year of Ritaki and Konoye Tara of the reign of the king of Lewchew, Kei-shi-yo-hi-ho-o offered a prayer of benevolence for the people and afterward ordered a large bell to be founded. He did this as an act of thanksgiving, and presented it to the temple of Daisen Anji, in the kingdom. In order that the king might reign prosperously and live long, and that the people of the three worlds, Heaven, Earth and Hades, might be saved from infernal doctrines, and therefore it was that Hatrenited Shoko-ku An-sai to frame this inscription: This beautiful bell has been founded and hung in the tower of the temple. It will awaken dreams of superstition. If one will bear in mind to act rightly and truly, the lord's affairs will flourish, justice in a body, the barbarians will never come to invade. The sound of the bell will convey the virtue Tsuki, and will echo like the sing of Tanfray, and the benevolence of the Lord will continue forever like these echoes.

The 39th day, 10th month, 7th year, Kaitai.
Shui Elshi
Chief Priest of the Temple,
Emoneske Tujitvara Kumimite,
Founder of the Bell.

As the "7th year Kaitai" refers to the year 1456 of the Christian era, this bell is exactly 448 years old.

CANOEING IN SWIFT WATER.

Seasonable Suggestions for the Amateur Who Wishes to Enjoy the Sport.

To give any description of handling a canoe in rapids would be a waste of time, both for the writer and the reader. The best way to learn is first to watch some one do it and then try it yourself under his direction. You will soon find out which is the safe water and how to force the light craft over the seemingly impossible falls. Running rapids, provided they are not too bad, appeals to me as one of the most exciting forms of sport and exercise that I know of. Never attempt a rapid that you do not know can be run without examining it from end to end to see that it is possible, and also to get an idea how to take it. Many a man has lost his life through neglecting this precaution, and remember that a rapid which is safe to-day may not be so in a day or two, as the rising and falling of the water will frequently make it impassable or at least very dangerous.

I scarcely envy anyone his first attempt at shooting rapids if he suffers as I did. From an overhanging rock I had carefully watched a guide go through the galloping, foamy waters, and then, with empty canoe in my canoe and leaving my watch and other unnecessary articles on shore and putting my heart carefully into my mouth, I made for that noisy little run of water. What I suffered when the curling waves struck the canoe was bad enough, but nothing to the agony of the return trip, when, traveling with startling speed, the whole river seemed a mass of menacing rocks being boiled in the seething water. How I got through I do not know, but I came safely to the smooth water, and after a rest made another run with less trepidation. Then, loading the canoe with my light outfit, I took her through with little difficulty.

Women as Expert Mariners.

In some coast villages among the Danes, Norwegians and Finns, women are employed as sailors and prove themselves to be expert mariners. In the smaller sailing ships, where there is a woman on board, whether she be the wife of the skipper or the stewardess, she is expected to take her turn at the ordinary work of the sailor, not even excluding the duties of the man at the wheel or of the night watch. Denmark employs women on her state officials at sea. Experienced captains assert that the women make excellent sailors and are equal to most seamen in dexterity and power of endurance.—London World.

Victims of Alcoholism.

During the last 30 years there died in Europe alone of alcoholism a total of 7,500,000 people. That is more people than were killed in all the wars of the nineteenth century. The authority for these statements is a professor in the University of Denmark, who goes on to show that in Denmark one out of every seven men who die between the ages of 35 and 55 is a victim of alcoholism.

Unhappy Marriages

Selfishness Is Generally the Cause.

"I TELL you what!" exclaimed the unmarried girl. "It's mighty hard to get me into the matrimonial noose since I've seen the number of marriages which have turned out ghastly fiascos. Marriage isn't lucky. I've come to that conclusion."

"I suppose you never study cause and effect in these little matters," returned the married woman. "You never blame the contracting parties themselves, but simply the institution."

"Yes, I do. It's mostly the man's fault."

"After it's the woman's fault," interpolated the married woman. "She is lacking in some respect, and then, I'm bound to say, he usually goes her ten times better—or rather worse."

"I suppose you'll bark way back to the beginning and say that girls' education is to blame; that they are not prepared for marriage?"

"Yes, I could talk on that by the hour, but I'll spare you and simply remark that the two chief causes of marital unhappiness are short acquaintance and selfishness."

"It's pretty true that people don't know much about each other before they are married."

"Much? They don't know anything except each other's good qualities, and that's pretty poor knowledge to start on. Love is necessary, but there are a few other things—congeniality, for instance, having tastes in common and being able to take a common interest in things which are not sentimental or personal."

"What about the selfishness part of it? That's where the man comes in, isn't it?"

"That's where he comes in, but the woman does also. Man thinks too much of his material comforts, woman of her feelings, and both think only of themselves instead of each other. If a man isn't right there, worshiping every minute of the time, the average bride thinks she is the most abused mortal alive, and if the meals don't run on clockwork lines, or if there is a jog in the wheels of household progress, the husband thinks he is the most uncomfortable and consequently unhappy man alive. There is no other thing which is more selfish on the woman's part than on the man's—a man will rarely trouble a woman with his business fiascoes, but how many dinners have been spoiled by the recital of the woes and troubles of the day—why the butcher didn't do this or that or what a trial the maid is!"

REHEARSING THE FAILURES OF THE DAY.

"And bad temper!"

"Oh, I'm coming to that. I would like to tack up in every home the following motto: 'Don't get angry first.' If husband or wife would only be a little slower to take offense there wouldn't be any quarreling at all, for it takes two to do that."

"There is such a thing as flirting on the man's part"—

"And not enough on the woman's part. Some women appear to mistake the holy state of matrimony for painless death and to govern themselves accordingly. It is by no means the ultimate state, and they would do well to remember that and be a trifle alive."

"And money matters?"

"Ah, that is the man's faunt if he would only put himself in his wife's place and imagine how painful it would be to his pride to have to ask her for every cent he wanted to spend, he would make her an allowance, however small, with which she could do as she pleased."

"And sloppy weather dress and unattractive appearance?"

"Coupled with mental laziness? Oh, well, women know all about that, and when they allow themselves to slump, whether physically or mentally, it's just because they would rather be comfortable, and it's another case of selfishness; that's all. You'll find, on the whole, that almost every bit of marital unhappiness comes from one cause—selfishness. If each thought of the other first, everything would be right."

LAUD ROBINSON.

POPULAR COUNCILMAN IS QUIETLY MARRIED

Robert L. Lee Springs a Pleasant Surprise on His Friends by Becoming a Benedict.

CEREMONY AT HOME

MRS. EMMA J. CUMBERSON, FORMERLY OF RED BANK, IS THE BRIDE.

The Groom Well-Known About Town — Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck Officiates—Now Living at His Residence.

Councilman Robert L. Lee and Mrs. Emma J. Cumberson were quietly married at 7:30 p. m. June 29, by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, at his home on West Front street. Councilman and Mrs. J. Stephen Higham, the latter a sister of the groom, and the bride's three children, were the only ones present to witness the ceremony. The couple are now residing at the home of the groom, 328 West Fourth street.

The bride was a resident of Red Bank until three years ago when she came to this city to live. Mr. Lee has been a resident here for many years and for several terms has been one of the representatives of the Fourth Ward in the Council, and a member of several of its important committees.

Since his election to the Council he has manifested more than ordinary interest in city affairs. He is a member of Perseverance Lodge, Knights of Pythias and other fraternal organizations and is very popular.

LITERARY.

The July Atlantic in its handsome new dress opens with an article on Washington in Wartime, drawn from Ralph Waldo Emerson's Journal of a visit to that city in 1863, recording pen pictures and notes of conversations with Lincoln, Seward, Sumner, Chase and others.

The head of one of the most famous packing houses in Chicago uses as a pet phrase, "'Tis the fortunes of war." It is said that at a recent family gathering at his home, a small grandson overheard his grandfather's remark and he had closed a very profitable beef contract with a representative of the Russian government, previous to the opening of hostilities with Japan. "Grandpa," piped the small boy, "if you make lots and lots of money then, will that be the fortunes of war?"—From "Success."

It will disappoint the applicant to find that her voice is the least consideration. She need, indeed, have none. A good figure and at least a claim to good looks are necessary for her. Her weight and height are important. A hundred and sixty pounds is too much to weigh; five feet seven inches is the limit in height. On account of the general prevailing craze, brunettes are in demand. Good altos are rare, the proportion being six of these to fourteen sopranos. One of the first questions propounded to the applicants will be: "Do you wear tights?"—The Era Magazine for June on the chorus girl.

The Architectural Record for July is sarcastically critical of modern reconstructed business house fronts. It says that as business sections are continually changing we are often confronted with an apparition of what was an orderly and well-designed dwelling-house now supported on stilts in the form of iron columns, and these surmounted by a galvanized cornice, the upper part of the building being apparently held up by the plate glass show windows. How a city may be redeemed in a large measure if the right kind of effort is used in these reconstruction proceedings, is described and illustrated with fullness. "Hillair," the country house of Paul Gilbert Thebaud, at White Plains, N. Y., is the subject of a number of plates and an article by William Heming.

Married at Mt. Olive.

A quiet wedding took place at the parsonage of Mount Olive Baptist church Thursday, Robert Gray, of Trenton, being married to Miss Matilda Binns, of Allentown, N. J., by Rev. Dr. E. E. Jackson, pastor of the church, in the presence of Clifford Hill and Miss Emma Spring, who acted as witnesses. Mr. and Mrs. Gray left shortly after the wedding, for a honeymoon trip. They will make their home on Plainfield avenue.

Law Collections at Library.

It is not generally known, but there is a good sized collection of valuable law books at the Public Library. The library authorities have just sent lists of the legal works on their shelves to the lawyers of the city, inviting them to make use of them.

Clark a Cleveland Man.

Hon. Alvah A. Clark, of Somerville, one of the delegates to the Democratic National Convention, announces himself for Grover Cleveland.

PLAINFIELD GROOM FOR ELIZABETH GIRL

T. H. Chamberlain, of This City, Married to Miss Susan May Moore, at County Seat.

AFTERNOON WEDDING

PETER J. GALBRAITH IS THE BEST MAN AT THE NUPTIAL EVENT.

Ceremony in St. Michael's Church Rectory—Supper Followed by Reception — Two Hundred Friends Present.

Miss Susan May Moore, of Elizabeth, became the wife of Thomas Henry Chamberlain, of this city, June 29. The ceremony was performed at the rectory of St. Michael's church, Elizabeth, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, by Rev. Dr. Baer, a number of relatives and friends being present. Miss Lillian Civelite was the maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Anna Moore, sister of the bride, and Miss May McGrath. Miss Viola Harriman, cousin of the bride, was the flower girl. Peter J. Galbraith, of this city, was best man. The ushers were John E. Harriman, cousin of the bride, and William Diltz, of this city.

The bride was gowned in white embroided russell net, studded with pearl buttons over white silk. She wore a white tulle veil, and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses.

After the ceremony a wedding supper was held at the home of the bride. Fully two hundred friends and relatives attended the reception, which was held at the T. A. B. Hall in the evening. Covers were laid for two hundred guests. Dancing was also a feature. After the reception the young couple left for a wedding trip to Niagara. On their return they will reside on West Sixth street, corner Clinton avenue.

Each of the bridesmaids received from the bride a pearl necklace. The groom's gift to the best man and the ushers were stick pins.

Among the Plainfield guests present were Mr. and Mrs. James Chamberlain, Mr. and Mrs. William Chamberlain, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Walls, the Misses Bessie and Hattie Walls, Lillian Duckworth, Jessie Chamberlain, John Duckworth, Edwin Howes, William Porter.

MISS DAY'S ANNUAL MUSICAL

LITTLE MAY ARDEN RECEIVES SPECIAL RECOGNITION AT THE AFFAIR.

The annual musicale by the pupils of Miss Irene Day was held in the lecture room of the Presbyterian church, at Dunellen, Thursday. Several Plainfield young people took part. May Ardern, the six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ardern, of South Second street, was loudly applauded for her piano solo. She was also presented with a handsome roll filled with music, for the best scholarship for the past year.

The presentation speech was made by Rev. W. W. Casselberry, who said that he "never heard of a girl at the age of six years master a piano so cleverly, and that the young lady was well deserving of the prize." Twenty-two pupils took part, and twenty-four selections were given. The piano duet, "Sunflower Dance," played by the Misses Nellie Squier and May Ardern, was well rendered.

Another musicale will be given next Tuesday evening, at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church.

OVERTON WITH MILLSTONES

TEDDY SIGNS WITH GEORGE DUPEE'S CRACK TEAM.

Now that the Y. M. C. A. nine has gone the way of the has-been, Teddy Overton, the lively little fielder, will probably play steadily with the East Millstone team. Teddy is a rattling good catcher, and he will very likely be kept playing backstop and field alternately for the swift Middlesex combination. George Dupee, the Millstone twirler, likes Overton's catching a whole lot. He had him in a game recently to try him out, and Teddy made good so splendidly that Dupee has been urging him to sign with Millstone permanently.

Overton learned his game on the High School nine three years ago. Overton came up to expectations and has been playing it ever since. He is a heady player, a sure fielder and a timely hitter.

Colored Baptists Enjoy Day.

The first annual excursion of the Mount Olive Baptist church and Sunday-school was enjoyed by about 500 members of the congregation Thursday, making the trip to South Beach.

DEMAND REMOVAL OF STREET OBSTRUCTION

James Forrestel Claims That O. T. Waring's Big Barn Blocks College Place.

NOTICE TO VACATE

SUIT TO BE BROUGHT UNLESS OFFENDING BUILDING IS TAKEN AWAY.

Papers Are Served on Mr. Waring, the Mayor, Street Commissioner and Common Council—Court's Decision is Depended Upon.

Action to compel O. T. Waring to reopen College place, which he closed to traffic several years ago by the erection of a barn on his property line, there, has been taken by James Forrestel, one of the abutting property owners on the place.

Formal notice that his right to close the thoroughfare is denied, and the reopening of it demanded, has been served on Mr. Waring by Mr. Forrestel, through his lawyer, V. W. Nash, Jr. Notice to the same effect has been served on the Mayor, the Street Commissioner and the Common Council. These last are notified to give them the authority, if they see fit to exercise it, to order the obstructing barn removed. Should neither Mr. Waring nor the city officials take the action demanded by Mr. Forrestel he will bring suit, and contest it through the courts until the question of Mr. Waring's right to block the street has been settled beyond doubt. Mr. Waring erected the offending barn several years ago when the street was little used.

Mr. Forrestel's claim is based on the decision of the courts in the case of the city against J. W. Price in 1878. It seems that T. B. Stillman dedicated the city park site on the map of his land, and that Price ignored this dedication by attempting to close the park tract as Mr. Waring has just closed College place. The courts held that when a tract is designed for public use on a map published by the owner that no individual has any right to close it. On the same map as the park appears, Mr. Forrestel claims, College place is designated, and he holds the court's decision in the Price case makes the erection of the Waring barn clearly illegal.

CROWDS AT BAND CONCERT

THIRD IN SERIES OF FREE MUSICAL FEASTS IS ENJOYED BY THE PEOPLE.

Popular musical fancy was again tickled by the LaVere Band at Connect Park Friday night, when the musicians gave the third concert of the scheduled series. There was a large audience, and enthusiastic applause indicated how much it enjoyed the programme.

The bill was long, but very delightful. Descriptive pieces always popular, were a feature, and the two classical bits were not too heavily burdened with classicity.

L. R. Anderson, the cornet soloist, scored a great hit with his "Aquarilla Polka," the studied and tone effects of which he handled in splendid form.

Somerset Council Elects.

Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., elected the following officers Friday night: Councillor, F. L. Soper, Jr.; vice councillor, William LaTourette; warden, H. W. VanArsdale; conductor, L. O. H. Dunham; inside sentinel, George Wilson; outside sentinel, E. D. Gaffne; assistant recording secretary, Charles Sebring; recording secretary, W. G. Walker; financial secretary, G. M. Allen; treasurer, Jesse M. Scull; trustee, E. D. GaNue; chaplain, P. H. Latourette.

Prize Winning Gardener.

Harry Howes, the gardener on McCready Sykes' Scotch Plains estate, has attracted a lot of attention to his work. The beauty and size of his vegetables and flowers are notable. His agricultural and horticultural display is the envy of his fellow gardeners here.

Will be Judges at Horse Show.

Lewis Q. Waring, of West Seventh street, and Robert A. Fairbairn, of Westfield, will be two of the judges at the horse show to be held at New Brunswick, Saturday, July 9, under the auspices of the Raritan Driving Association.

Patriotic Service.

Patriotic services were held at the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday evening. National songs were sung by a choir composed of members of the Junior C. E. Society and a stirring patriotic sermon delivered by the pastor, Rev. A. E. Finn. In the course of his sermon Mr. Finn sounded a warning against the tendency to secularize the Sabbath Day.

HOLZWASSER & CO

SPECIAL DISCOUNT THIS MONTH OF 10% ALLOWED ON ALL CASH PURCHASES.

We Also Furnish a Flat at $65.00.

Write for Our New Catalogue. Mailed Upon Application.

$1.00 a Week Opens an Account.

We Also Carry a Complete Line of

CLOTHING

For Men, Women and Children.

Freight and R. R. Fare Allowed on all Out-of-Town Orders.

1417 TO 1423 3D AVE BETWEEN 80 & 81 ST

Open Evenings until 9 o'clock. NEW YORK, N. Y.

JOSEPH W. REINHART SUES

PLAINFIELDER SEEKS ASSETS OF OLD DOMINION CONSTRUCTION CO.

Joseph W. Reinhart, of Belvidere avenue, has filed a bill in the Court of Chancery, at Trenton, against Thomas Stokes, Dewit Smith and others to get for himself and other stockholders of the Old Dominion Construction Company certain assets which he asserts belong to that company. He asks an accounting and a receiver. The company was organized to obtain the contract to build the Chesapeake and Western Railroad from sidewater in Virginia to the coal fields of West Virginia.

Reinhart charges that by an arrangement with Stokes and Smith he surrendered his stock in the Old Dominion Construction Company for stock in the Chesapeake and Western Security Company, a concern organized to acquire the property of the Chesapeake and Western Company and the Old Dominion Construction Company. He alleges Stokes and Smith have appropriated 4,585 shares of the Security Company's stock, and have bought in the name of the Pocohontas Company 60,000 acres of land along the line of the Chesapeake & Western Railroad and hypothecated the same with the Bowling Green Trust Company of New York. He says the subsidiary companies have been run by dummies.

NEARLY BLEW HIS HAND OFF

LEWIS MILLIGAN HELD A GIANT CRACKER WITH SERIOUS RESULTS.

Lewis Milligan, of this city, had his right hand nearly blown to atoms Saturday night at 12 o'clock, in Dunellen. Milligan held on to a large cracker loaded with dynamite and when the explosion took place he had the flesh stripped from the palm of his hand and the inside of the fingers.

His friends took him to Dr. Piatt, of Dunellen, who temporarily dressed the wounded member and told them to take Milligan to Muhlenburg Hospital, as it might become necessary to amputate the hand. After passing the remainder of the night under the influence of an opiate, Milligan's hand was examined by Dr. Long on Sunday morning and it is thought it can be saved.

BLAZE IN STRAW PACKING.

Small Boys' Celebration Costs Geo. Tobin $285.

Premature celebration of the Fourth by the boys in the neighborhood of Watchung avenue and East Second street caused a blaze in the straw packing of a couple of large crates back of George Tobin's plumbing shop about 3:30 Sunday afternoon. The fire was seen by Starter John Mowen, of the Watchung avenue trolley stand, who immediately reported it to fire headquarters. The chemical engine put a quietus on the conflagration in short order, but the dozen or more water closets, contained in the crates were ruined, entailing a loss estimated by Mr. Tobin at $285. The end of a small frame shed, against which the crates rested, was charred to cinders also.

Face Disfigured for Life.

A spark from a piece of punk dropped into a bottle of powder that Fred Gray was holding Monday afternoon, and the full force of the resulting explosion struck him in the face. He was terribly burned, but his eyes escaped injury. His face will be marked for life.

Miss C. T. Hill Resigns.

Miss C. T. Hill, who, during the past four years, has had charge of the Woman's Exchange, has tendered her resignation to take effect on Saturday, July 9. She will be succeeded by Miss Shelton, who has been her assistant.

ITALIANS PLAN GAY TIME

ELABORATE ARRANGEMENTS BEING MADE FOR A BIG CELEBRATION.

Arrangements of the most elaborate kind are being made by the Italians of this city for their celebration of the Feast of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel on July 18 and 19. Marino Commison has been finally secured for the site of the observance, after several hitches had all but compelled the celebrators to seek a location in North Plainfield.

It is declared by those in charge of the celebration that the fireworks display that will bring the second day of the festival to a close will be the most extensive thing of its kind ever witnessed in this vicinity. At least $1,000, they say, will be spent for set pieces and crackers. The display is to be conducted by half a dozen trained men from the Pain works.

Park avenue, from Front street, to Martine Commson, will be decorated in festal array. Arches, draped with American and Italian colors, will be erected at intervals of 75 feet. Night torches will illuminate the arches, and beneath the flaring lights the celebrators will march, headed by a big Italian band, said to be the best in New York. The arch at Front street is to be studded with 300 lights forming the words "Maria Santissima del Mont Carmela." Permits necessary for the erection of the arches and the other features of the event have already been secured from the authorities.

The celebration will be more than a neighborhood event. The Italians of New York, who cannot hope to have a celebration of the same character in the city, have taken an active and personal interest in the observance, and great throngs of them will be here to take part. They will join with the local Italians in attendance at a full high mass in a temporary chapel to be erected on the field. An Italian priest from New York will conduct the service. The band will assist at the mass, some of its members acting as a choir.

A stand, with the capacity of 1,000 spectators, will be erected near the scene of the fireworks display. To help defray the expense of the celebration, a small fee will be charged for seats on the structure.

Sebring to Build.

Charles F. Sebring has applied to the borough Council for a permit to erect a frame house on his lot on Grove street near Prospect place, to be designed to move the old house that caused a rumpus in the borough several months ago. His plans will be inspected during the coming week. According to the design submitted the structure will be a handsome one, of frame construction. It is to cost in the neighborhood of $4,500.

Miss Flynn Hurt.

John Scott, colored, a driver employed by Hackman Henderson, in hurrying to catch the train Friday morning, struck Miss Winifred Flynn and knocked her down, inflicting slight injuries. The accident occurred in passing the trolley stand on Watchung avenue. Scott was arrested by Patrolman Overbaugh and arraigned before Judge Runyon, who fined him $5. The fine was paid.

Realty Change.

Miss Addie Weaver, of Brooklyn, and her uncle, David Weaver, of Manning avenue, have purchased of Mrs. W. H. B. Drake her property on Orchard place, adjoining that of Peter V. Weaver The property will be improved. Neither one of the owners will occupy the residence at present.

Miss O'Keefe to Wed.

The engagement of Miss Annie L. O'Keefe, of West Sixth street, to Daniel Corieau, of New York, is announced. The wedding will take place some time this month.

BOSTON DOCKS BURN

Great Railway Elevator and Many Piers Destroyed.

TWO SAILORS LOSE THEIR LIVES

Allan Line Seamen Jump Into the Water to Escape Flames—Scotch Whisky Burns—Loss of a Million Dollars.

BOSTON, July 6. — The immense grain elevator of the Boston and Maine Railroad company, one of the largest in the world, together with the company's freightsheds, Nos. 1, 2 and 3, on piers 1 and 2, Mystic wharf, Charlestown, were burned last night, entailing a loss that will exceed $1,000,000.

During the fire two lives are known to have been lost. Eleven sailors of the Allan line steamer Austrian, which was lying at pier 2, Mystic wharf, to save themselves from the flames, which had communicated to the vessel, and Fred McKenzie and James Gallagher were drowned. The other men were picked up by tugboats and removed to the Marine hospital in Chelsea. None of them suffered seriously. One of the wharf employees was reported as missing.

Before the fire on board the Austrian could be got under control by the fleet of tugboats that had hauled her out into the stream all her upper works had been burned to her decks. The steamer had discharged a part of her cargo, which included $30,000 worth of Scotch whisky, which was burned in the freighthouse.

The fire started after 5 o'clock during a heavy thunderstorm, when a bolt of lightning struck the northeast end of freighthouse No. 2, in which was stored a quantity of hay. In an instant the flames shot in either direction, quickly communicating to houses Nos. 1 and 3 on 1 from the latter to the old elevator building farther west.

The larger part of the fire apparatus of the city was summoned and efforts directed to saving adjoining property. The elevator and freight-shed were in close proximity to the bridge connecting Charles and this city, and so intense was the heat that for several hundred feet along the side nearer the burning buildings the bridge was badly burned and its piers charred. Fortunately it was a dead calm, and the great volumes of smoke and smoke arose almost perpendicularly, thus failing to reach the other freight houses of the company on the adjacent piers.

The elevator, which was built about ten years ago, was said to be the largest in existence at that time, having a capacity of 2,000,000 bushels, but as near as can be figured it held not over 100,000 bushels of grain, chiefly wheat. The buildings on the pier, with their contents, are a total loss, and the wharf itself is practically ruined. The loss on the elevator will be at least $400,000 and on the contents $100,000 more. Losses on the freight houses, their contents, their pier and to the steamer Austrian will easily swell the total to more than $1,000,000.

Among the steamship companies who will suffer losses on freight destroyed are the Allan line, Scandinavian-American line and the Wilson line, the Scandinavian-American company losing 104 bales of goat skins, valued at $20,000.

MAN HUNT IN NEW JERSEY.

Negroes Suspected of Assault May Be Lynched.

BURLINGTON, N. J., July 6.—With her one-year-old babe by her side and her husband away delivering milk, Mrs. Elsie T. Biddle, the young wife of Charles Biddle, a farmer living along the Rancocas road, near here, was the victim of criminal assault and robbery by three negroes, and a man hunt is in progress throughout the surrounding country. The outrage is one of the worst that has ever occurred in this section, and hundreds of men armed with all sorts of weapons are in pursuit of the perpetrators.

Mrs. Biddle recognized one of the men as Aaron Timbers, who was recently released from the Jamesburg Reform school. The second man is said to be a well known negro character and the third an unknown farm hand. Pursuers caught up twice to the negroes, and two of them are believed to have been wounded.

Two negro suspects have been brought to the Burlington jail. At the lockup a large crowd had assembled and threatened to lynch them. It was with much difficulty that they were got into the building safely. Both men declare they are innocent.

Confederate Veteran Dying.

WASHINGTON, July 6. — General Thomas B. Howard of the Confederate army, a hero of five wars, is dying here. He is a native of Wilmington, N. C., where he was born in 1820. He participated in the Seminole and Creek Indian wars, the war of Texan independence, the war between the United States and Mexico and the war of secession, in which latter war he rose to the rank of brigadier general and held an important command in Texas.

To Be a Greater Berlin.

BERLIN, July 6.—With a view to the creation of a Greater Berlin, with a population approaching that of Greater New York, the Prussian minister of the interior, Baron von Hammerstein, is going to London to study the administration of that city.

Mayor Jones Improving.

TOLEDO, O., July 6.—Mayor Jones is improving. He asks for food and is stronger. His physicians believe that his chances for recovery are good.

GREAT SPORT AT SHEEPSHEAD.

Ort Wells Won Realization Stakes Mincola Made New Record.

NEW YORK, July 6.—Ort Wells, winner of the Commonwealth handicap, has added another stake to his list by capturing the rich Lawrence Realization stakes of $20,945 to the winner at Sheepshead Bay. He was quoted at the prohibitive price of 8 to 10 and won handily by one length. Mercury, paying 8 to 5 for the place, finished second, with Gradiallo third. The time, 2 minutes 47 3-5 seconds, is two and two-fifth seconds slower than Africander's time made last year in this event.

Veto won the second part of the double event of $10,000 by a length and a half from the favorite, Blandy.

Mincola in winning the second race established a new world's record for six and a half furlongs by covering the distance in 1 minute 18 2-5 seconds. The best previous record was 1 minute 18 3-5 seconds, held jointly by Jane Holly and Ancestor.

BASEBALL SCORES.

Results of Yesterday's Games In National and American Leagues.

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

At Philadelphia—

New York	0	1	1	1	0	1	0	0	1	0—5
Philadelphia	0	0	0	1	1	0	0	0	0	0—2

Batteries—McGinnity and Warner; Duggleby and Roth.

At Boston—

Brooklyn	0	0	0	0	0	0	2	0	0	2—4
Boston	0	0	0	0	1	0	1	0	0	0—2

Batteries—Jones and Bergen; Willis and Needham.

TABLE OF PERCENTAGES.

Clubs.	W.	L.	P.C.
New York	41	17	.707
Cincinnati	36	25	.590
Chicago	35	28	.556
Pittsburg	35	28	.556
St. Louis	31	31	.500
Brooklyn	29	33	.468
Boston	25	41	.379
Philadelphia	24	46	.343

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

At New York—

Philadelphia	0	0	2	0	0	0	0	0	1	3
New York	0	1	0	1	0	0	1	0	0	3

Batteries—Bender and Powell; Powell and Kleinow.

TABLE OF PERCENTAGES.

Clubs.	W.	L.	P.C.
Boston	41	21	.661
New York	38	27	.585
Chicago	37	28	.569
Cleveland	36	28	.563
Philadelphia	32	30	.516
St. Louis	27	37	.422
Detroit	27	38	.415
Washington	11	50	.180

SPRINGFIELD CONVENTION.

Populists Name Watson and Tribbles as Their Candidates.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., July 6.—When the Populist convention was called to order there was a long wrangle over the report of the committee on credentials.

The report of the committee on permanent organization brought forth a storm of protest from the fusion wing of the convention, and it was showed that the Middle of the Roaders had secured all the officers of the convention.

Thomas E. Watson of Georgia was unanimously nominated for president and Thomas S. Tribbles of Nebraska for vice president on the first ballot.

Senator Allen refused to permit his name to go before the convention for president.

RAISULI ON RAMPAGE.

Bandit Has Attacked Three Villages and Is Near Tangier.

LONDON, July 6.—A Tangier report says:

"French officials here admit that the crisis was never more critical. Fighting occurs daily in this vicinity.

"Raisuli is only two hours from Tangier and is collecting men. He has attacked three villages and looted cattle.

"The foreign guards are helpless. When the outbreak comes there will be an appalling sacrifice of European life to the fanaticism of the Moors.

"The sultan has cut down the soldiers' pay by one-half, and the disaffected soldiers are deserting and joining the freebooting bands."

Swallow Has Not Declined.

CHICAGO, July 6.—Oliver W. Stewart, chairman of the Prohibition national committee, has made a statement positively denying that Dr. Silas C. Swallow had declined the Prohibition nomination for president. Mr. Stewart said: "Dr. Swallow has not declined and will not decline. It is absolutely certain at this time that he will accept our nomination. Since there is no vacancy on our ticket there is no room for the nomination of General Miles."

Instructing Porto Rican Teachers.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., July 6.—Lessons for the Porto Rican teachers at Harvard began with the opening of the summer school. Practically all the visitors gathered in the Fogg lecture room for the first daily lecture on historical and scientific subjects. The lecture was given in Spanish by Professor Frederick M. Noa, who reviewed the geography and history of Cuba and who will then go over the same ground in Cuba and the countries of South America.

Moyer Free at Last.

DENVER, July 6.—Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, has been released from custody by Sheriff Bell of Teller county in this city after furnishing bonds for $10,000 on the charges of murder and inciting riot. Moyer has been a prisoner 400 days and during the greater portion of that time was confined in the bull pen at Telluride on the plea of "military necessity."

Train Was Blown From Plea of

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 6.—A Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis passenger train, due here at 7:30 last night, was blown from a bridge at Petersburg by a tornado. Baggageman Thomas Wiley was killed, and fifteen or twenty persons were injured. A relief train has been sent from here with doctors.

Weather Probabilities.

Occasional showers; light winds.

WANT MOTIEN PASS

Russians Attacked Kuroki's Forces and Were Repulsed.

COMMANDER WOUNDED, 200 DEAD

Czar's Troops Charged the Position Three Times With the Bayonet. When Beaten, Japs Pursued Them Three Miles.

LONDON, July 6.—General Kuroki has reported to Tokyo that two battalions of Russians attacked the Japanese outposts in Motien pass at dawn under cover of a dense fog and were repulsed.

They returned to the assault and charged three times with the bayonet before they were finally driven off. The Japanese pursued them for three miles to the westward of Motien pass.

The Russians retired before overwhelming numbers after ascertaining the strength of the Japanese forces. The Russian losses are officially stated to be 200.

The general staff at St. Petersburg has received the following dispatch from Lieutenant General Sacharoff, the chief of staff of General Kuropatkin:

"The advance guard of the Russian force operating east of Liaoyang occupied a position at Langtse pass. Toward evening the same day our scouts ascertained that a detachment of the enemy's advance guard, 1,500 strong, had occupied the villages of Ekhavan and Tchakumenza, on our front, the main force having remained in Fenshui and Motien passes.

"At this moment we discovered the movement of a Japanese detachment, consisting of a battalion of infantry, to turn our left flank position in the Langtse pass in the direction of Liandiansian.

"In order to learn the strength of the enemy's position in front of Langtse pass the commander of the detachment ordered out was re-enforced, and a reconnoitering party of ten companies was sent in the direction of Ekhavan under the command of Colonel Letschitsky. With the view of making a demonstration insuring the return of Letschitsky's detachment three companies under Lieutenant Colonel Garnitsky marched to Mahoumissa, about a mile and a half south of Ekhavuan, to the crossing of the roads leading to Sinkhi and the Lok river passes.

"Garnitsky's column reached the crossroads and dislodged a company of the enemy's advance guard, which was almost annihilated. Simultaneously Letschitsky's column dislodged the enemy's advance posts without firing a shot and approached the foot of the heights, surmounted by a temple. The temple is less than a mile east of Ekhavuan, where, although exposed to a heavy frontal and flank fire, our troops dashed forward and dislodged the Japanese from their intrenchments and occupied the pass. As the enemy was preparing to deliver a frontal and flank attack our column then retired, as previously instructed. Three companies of Garnitsky's force occupied the position which they had been ordered to secure.

"When Letschitsky's force began to withdraw the enemy opened a heavy fire from the heights. In spite of this the column retired in perfect order. Brushing the enemy aside it continuously on the fighting line and directed the column with remarkable ability and coolness. He was the last to retire, with his chief of staff and adjutant.

"Our casualties were Letschitsky wounded, Colonel Popplelow, Lieutenant Colonel Trakhenovsky, Captain Soloieff, Lieutenants Markoff, Latkine, Bobroslavesky and Kozine, Second Captain Paily and several other officers wounded and 200 soldiers killed or wounded.

"I observed the fighting with my staff from the Tkhacoan tower, and I can personally testify to the conduct of the troops. Our re-enforcements have occupied Liandiansian.

"The enemy's principal forces are at present concentrated at Yandiapudze, in the direction of Haicheng, and at Schiakouyo, about ten miles west of Siuyen, on the road to Kaichou."

The fact that Lieutenant General Sacharoff witnessed the fighting near Motien pass is taken here to indicate that he is in command of the forces east of Liaoyang, which include the army corps under Lieutenant General Count Keller.

The desperate character of the fighting is shown by the repeated bayonet charges, the Russians dusting the Japanese from the trenches.

The fighting around Senuchen shows that the Japanese are determined to hold the position as well as they can. Dalin pass until a favorable opportunity presents itself for an advance on Yinkow, the port of Newchwang.

Russian Ships Pass Bosporus.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 6.—The Russian volunteer fleet steamers St. Petersburg and Sevastopol passed through the Bosporus from the Black sea yesterday. The Sevastopol was flying the Red Cross flag, and her hull was painted white.

Lord Is Acting Collector.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—John S. Lord, first deputy collector of internal revenue for the Springfield (Ill.) district, has been designated to act as collector pending the permanent appointment of a successor to Isaac R. Mills, who was killed in a railroad accident at Litchfield, Ill., Thursday.

Ambassador McCormick at Kiev.

KIEV, Russia, July 6.—Ambassador McCormick and Mrs. [illegible] accompanied by Consul-[illegible] Mott, American [illegible] at Odessa, [illegible] here [illegible]

FIFTY-ROOM ADDITION AT THE TRUELL INN

Extensive Improvements Are Planned by Mrs. Truell, Including a Big Dining Room.

NOW A POPULAR RESORT

FIRE ESCAPES ARE TO BE PLACED ON THE BUILDING.

When Proprietress Returns From St. Louis Further Arrangements Will be Made—Formerly Known As Park Avenue Hotel.

Extensive improvements to Truell Inn, formerly the Park Avenue Hotel, are being considered by the new owner, Mrs. J. R. Truell. The plans include the material enlargement of the structure and the remodelling of the dining room.

At the hotel this morning the representatives of the management said that they had no positive knowledge that Mrs. Truell intended to enlarge or remodel, but said that she had talked of such action. Mrs. Truell is in St. Louis at present.

According to a statement given out at the hotel, the plans considered by the owner include the erection of a big addition on the Park avenue side of the house. This addition will give the house fifty more rooms.

Under the tentative plans proposed, the dining room would be enlarged by thirty or thirty five feet. It will be remodelled, with a circular front as the special feature. So enlarged, the room will be by far the most spacious of its kind in the city. It is to be refurnished in striking style.

In addition to these improvements the exterior of the hotel is to be completely equipped with fire escapes. Before any of this work is done, the present structure is to be put in perfect condition, inside and out, so that none of the guests will be inconvenienced in the slightest degree when the contract is started.

Mrs. Truell is credited with the desire to make her Inn the peer or even the superior of the palatial hostelries at the select resorts. Under her brief management the hotel has forged perceptibly ahead of its record under the old regime. There are fifty guests there at present, and during the few weeks of summer that have passed the house has been so crowded as to make the use of two parlors as bedrooms necessary.

SHE GRADUATED "CUM LAUDE"

MISS OPDYKE AWARDED THE DEGREE OF BACHELOR OF ARTS AT RADCLIFFE.

Among the this year's graduates of Radcliffe College, Harvard University, was Agnes Opdyke, of this city. The graduating exercises were held in Sanders Theatre, Harvard, where the men's college graduation also is held, the class consisting of 94 young women, all of whom received the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

Miss Opdyke's diploma was awarded "cum laude," and also bore the signature of President Eliot, showing that the college is under the same general laws and has the same course of instruction and many of the instructors as Harvard College.

Married at Grace Rectory.

Miss Pauline Marie Jensen, of this city, and Peter Johansen, Hoeg, of East Sixth street, were married Thursday night by the Rev. R. M. Hodges, rector emeritus of Grace Episcopal church. The couple, attended by Miss Jennie Jensen, sister of the bride, and Christen Hove went to the home of Dr. Redman, where the ceremony was performed. The couple will reside on East Sixth street. They are natives of Denmark.

Miss Maxson's Composition.

"Sylvia," a very attractive march and two-step, the composition of Miss Mabel A. Maxson, of West Fifth street, which has just been published by a New York music firm, has already become very popular among music lovers. The composition will be placed on sale in all the principal cities of this country and Canada, and it is now on sale at one of the local music stores.

Plains Battery Signs.

Jimmie Montpas and George Allen, the Scotch Plains battery, and Rutherford Daily, of the Dunellen team, have signed to play with Cox's New Brunswick team. They made their first appearance on Monday at New Brunswick.

Lucky Sportsmen.

J. A. Staats, Fred Sandford, Dr. F. J. Zeglio together with several other sportsmen, spent Thursday in the vicinity of Dead River, on the mountains. Besides catching a number of fish, the party bagged thirty-five woodcock.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, JULY 14, 1904. NO. 28.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Center of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

MR. CLARK RECEIVES PRESENT FROM EXEMPTS

Borough's Volunteer Firemen Honor Former Councilman in a Fitting Way.

GOLD HEADED CANE

DR. BUCHANAN TELLS OF FIRE LADDIES' APPRECIATION.

Stag Affair in Exempts' Rooms on Somerset Street—Programme of Vocal and Instrumental Selections.

Members of the borough Exempt Firemen's Association and a large number of their friends gathered in the rooms of the organization Tuesday night and enjoyed one of the most delightful affairs in which either have yet participated. It was intended to mark the first of a series of "stags" which the social committee has in mind and for an initial effort it will be hard to excel.

The rooms were tastefully decorated with the national colors and fire fighting trophies secured when the companies disbanded. Frank Kesselring presided as chairman and before the arranged programme was commenced sprang a surprise on many of those present by calling upon Former Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., to present himself before the gathering. The latter was then presented with a gold-headed cane suitably engraved, Dr. Buchanan making the presentation speech. By it he acquainted Mr. Clark with the fact that the exempts held deep appreciation toward him for his efforts in their behalf while he was a member of the councilmanic body and that the gift was a slight token to express it formally. Although taken entirely by surprise Mr. Clark soon regained his composure and warmly thanked the donors. He remained with the gathering and was keenly interested in the further proceedings of the evening.

While cigars were being smoked, banjo and guitar selections were given by Joseph Longhead and Fred Finnigan; fancy dancing and jig steps by William Campbell, Sr., and vocal selections by Asa D. Pope, William Dood, H. C. Firstbrook, Thomas M. Keir and George S. Coss. A phonograph was operated by John Shroop. There was ice cream, cake and other refreshments in abundance and with all these features it was nearly midnight before the affair ended.

The committee which arranged and had charge of the "stag" consisted of Frank Kesselring, chairman; D. J. Begley, Frank Keller and J. J. Stahl, and they were warmly complimented upon its success.

BATHING EMBARGO.

The Small Boy is No Longer Allowed to Take a Dip at "Oesle's."

There is woe among the small boys in the West End who have been in the habit of seeking refuge from the sun's warm rays in Green brook. The favorite swimming pool is on Halsted Compton's property and because of their propensity to wander out of the water and roam around his place in their birthday suits he has forbidden them their accustomed privileges. For years "Oesle's" has been a favorite spot for youngsters in the summer and the embargo is taken very much to heart.

Plainfielder on Examining Board.

Dr. William H. Murray, of this city, was one of the examining board appointed by the State Board of Health to pass on the examination papers of the candidates for appointment as city health inspectors. The examination was brought about through act of the Legislature, approved April 8, 1903, to provide for improvement of local sanitary inspection service, which put places the licensing of health officers under the State Board of Health.

Colored Giants Next.

It is quite probable that Alls will play the New York Colored Giants on Crescent Oval, on Saturday. Manager Johnston was endeavoring to arrange a game with Roselle, but it is reported that this team has another date and cannot come here. The Giants recently played Westfield four contests and the series broke even, each team winning two.

Dr. Chamblitas Improving.

Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerxes, pastor emeritus of the First Baptist church, has received a letter from Rev. Dr. J. A. Chamblitas. The latter states that he is improving rapidly and that his throat is a great deal better.

WILL PLACE A SAFEGUARD

SOMERSET FREEHOLDERS TO EXAMINE ROAD NEAR HOLLINGSWORTH'S MILL.

At the regular meeting of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders, yesterday afternoon, Messrs. Demler, Emmens and Codington were appointed a committee to consider a petition from the North Plainfield Township Committee for the erection of a guard rail on the brook side of the road near Hollingsworth's mill. The matter is one that has been under consideration for some time and the Board's action will no doubt result in the guard being placed. A resolution was passed authorizing the payment of a bill from the W. T. Kirk Company, for furnishing and erecting the bridge on Union avenue, Bound Brook, amounting to $241, after it has been properly audited by the committee.

The Board will meet next Friday at the Three-Mile Run bridge in the morning and in the afternoon with the Middlesex county board at New Brunswick for the purpose of discussing bridge matters. The county collector was authorized to borrow $30,000 in anticipation of taxes.

TRAIN RUNS INTO A BRIDGE

ENGINEER IS INJURED AND TRAFFIC BLOCKED AT SOMERVILLE.

An eastbound freight train on the Central Railroad of New Jersey, running at the rate of thirty miles an hour, was wrecked by a misplaced switch at Centre street, Somerville, at 9:30 last night. The engine dashed into the stone abutment of the Centre street bridge and was badly wrecked. Abram Stout, of Elizabethport, the engineer, was hurled through the cab window and knocked against a stone wall. He was seriously injured about the head and was removed to the Somerset Hospital. William Fennally, the fireman, jumped before the collision and escaped with slight injuries. A number of freight cars were piled up behind the engine, blocking traffic on the east bound track.

INSPECTED PLAINFIELD ROADS

NEW YORK COMMISSION PASSED THROUGH THIS CITY YESTERDAY.

State Supervisor of Roads E. A. Meeker, of West Front street, together with State Commissioner Henry I. Budd, accompanied members of the New York Legislature, road commissioners of that State, on a tour of inspection of the New Jersey roads this week. The party made the trip in three automobiles and passed through here yesterday. There were also in the party members of the Automobile Club of America. The trip was solely an object lesson in the art of good road-making.

From here the party went to Paterson and after inspecting the roads in the northern part of the State the members will proceed through New York State and into Massachusetts, toward Boston. It is expected that the party will reach the capital of the Bay State by Saturday.

SOLDIERS' MEMORIAL.

A Design for the Monument Which is to be Erected at Elizabeth.

The monument to be erected at Elizabeth in memory of the soldiers and sailors who died in the Civil War will be a granite shaft about thirty-five feet high, and three feet, nine inches in diameter. The top block of the base will be seven feet high.

The shaft will be surmounted by the figure of a color bearer ten feet tall. The committee has not decided whether this shall be bronze or granite. The flag will be raised about four feet above the soldier's head. On the base will be inscribed infantry, cavalry, artillery and navy, also the dates 1861-61. The committee now has under consideration several sentences, one of which is "Erected in memory of those who fought to maintain the union of the States." The monument will cost $10,000.

Took Part in Welmar Musicale.

In a recent musicale given at the Royal School of Music, in Welmar, Germany, George Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, of Craig place, a student at the school, appeared on the programme, playing the baroness in a quintette selection, Faquot, op 16, Beethoven. Mr. Smith has been at the Royal School of Music for some time completing his musical education.

CO. K BOYS READY FOR GOVERNOR'S DAY

Principal Annual Event at Sea Girt Camp is Scheduled For Tomorrow.

REGIMENTAL BANQUET

FRANKLIN MURPHY IS EXPECTED AT FEAST TO BE GIVEN BY COL. COLLINS.

Plainfield Soldier Boys on the Sick List—Trial of Private Sampson —Co. K Members Are Honored.

Camp Franklin Murphy,
Sea Girt, N. J.,
July 13, 1904.

The members of Co. K are looking forward to Governor's day, which is observed tomorrow. The regiment will be received by Governor Murphy. In the evening Col. Collins will entertain the officers of the regiment at an elaborate banquet. It is said that Governor Murphy will attend.

For the first time since the regiment is in camp they will use blank cartridges in the extended order drill. The men look forward to this with a great deal of pleasure as the use of blank cartridges gives them the nearest insight to actual warfare.

At sick report this morning the following men went to the hospital tent for treatment: Privates McGeick, Judson, Frasee, Scribner, Smith, Dorgan, Richards and Townley. They are mostly troubled with the usual camp ailment (Sea Girt water). Captain Martin this afternoon started a precedent by taking his men bathing as a company. This was a most amusing thing to the observers. The company was marched into the ocean in a column of fours. The men went through company evolutions in the ocean. The laughable part of this came when the breakers would throw the men over, then there would be a general scramble to get back in line. A very pleasant hour was in this way passed.

The feature of the week will be the trial of Private Sampson, who is charged with stealing a kitten from Co. I, of Elizabeth. He will be tried before Judge Richards and a jury of six men composed of Co. I and K men. Sampson will be defended by Private Milne, of Elizabeth, and the prosecutor will be Corporal Apgar, assisted by the court crier, Corporal Transhend. All this fun of course comes before taps.

Co. K being this year the best disciplined company in the regiment, Captain Martin has been highly complimented for it. A. T.

Camp Franklin Murphy,
Sea Girt, July 13, 1904.

Not only are the men of Co. K thoroughly enjoying their work in drill and guard duty, but they are being appreciated by their superiors, as the selection of sentries for the posts at the quarters of Gen. Gillmore, the colonel of the regiment and also at the Governor's cottage, has shown. Each day since the company arrived at camp, has seen Capt. Martin's men represented at one or more of these important posts. Sunday, when Lieutenant Kitchell was officer of the guard, Privates Bond and Weaver were on sentry-go at Gen. Gillmore's and the Governor's cottage, respectively.

On Monday, Sammons was posted at the General's and Ford at the Governor's, while today, DeCamp is at the General's and Sampson is waiting post at the abode of the State Executive. As these selections are the direct result of personal appearance and company excellence, no little jubilation is expressed by the boys from Plainfield, who are bound to make a mark in some way even though they will have no opportunity to show their ability on the range this year. The only shooting done by the Second will be with blank cartridges, in the course of skirmish drill, which is gone through in battalion formation. This drill was practiced on Monday and was gone through again yesterday afternoon.

An hour after dinner Tuesday, the company fell in and marched to the beach in a body for a plunge in the surf. While waiting for the word to form for the march to the beach, the men amused themselves by ducking each other under the hydrant. Owing to the fact that all were in their bathing suits, or less, the ducking resulted in more fun than misery, for the one subjected to it. Hospital Corpsman Nathan Titsworth, who was unable to come down with the company on Saturday, arrived Monday morning and is eating overtime to make up for his lost opportunities. Tuesday's dinner included fried oysters and was heartily commended by all hands from the officers down. The day of all the week will be Thursday, of course, as Governor Murphy is to be here and will review all the troops in camp. It is expected that many Plainfielders will be here from Asbury Park as the largest excursion of the season is down for that date.

Every day the Plainfield boys figure to obtain The Daily Press when the bundle of fifty copies arrives in camp. The members of Company K are eager to hear the news from home and they waste no time in getting hold of the favorite paper.

BRASS THIEF RELEASED

JUDGE VAIL SUSPENDED SENTENCE ON FRED SNYDER.

On an allegation brought by his counsel, William G. DeMeza, Esq., Fred Snyder, accused of stealing brass from the Pond shop, was arraigned before Judge Vail at Milltown today. The man pleaded guilty to the charge but made a strong plea for clemency on the ground of having a large family and having recently recovered from a severe illness. His condition bore out his statements and taking the facts into consideration the court suspended sentence with a warning.

But for the action of his counsel, Snyder would have had to remain in jail until the next session of the Grand Jury, having been unable to secure bail.

TAUGHT BIBLE STUDENTS

WILLIAM D. MURRAY CONDUCTED A COURSE AT NORTHFIELD CONFERENCE.

William D. Murray, of West Eighth street, who has been in charge of a Bible class of young men at the Northfield Y. M. C. A. conference, has returned home. Mr. Murray's students were limited to number and represented delegations from forty-four different colleges, including Yale, Princeton, Harvard and Cornell.

In his instruction of the class, Mr. Murray made use of the Gospel text book recently written by himself, entitled "The Life and Works of Jesus According to Saint Mark." This book has had a large circulation both in this country and in England.

Off for Europe.

Gustave Brandt, of 656 West Fourth street; T. P. Nielsen and daughter, of West Second street, sailed today on the steamship Baltic, of the White Star Line. Mr. Brandt goes to Gothenburg and Mr. Nielsen and daughter to Esberg, Denmark. Mrs. William Wilkie, of her niece, of this city, will sail on Friday, July 22, on the Cedric of the White Star Line, for Queenstown.

To Reside in California.

Mrs. E. A. Vermeule, who recently sold her property on Watchung avenue to D. S. Summers, left today for Three Rivers, Cal., about 400 miles from San Francisco, where she will make her home with her daughter, the wife of Lieutenant Pearson. It was Mrs. Vermule's intention to start West two weeks ago but she was prevented by the illness of her son.

Studying Art in Paris.

Miss Edith VanBoskerck, of West Seventh street, formerly associated with the Randolph-Cooley Collegiate School, as an art teacher, has gone to Paris, where she will remain for some time, continuing her studies in art. Miss VanBoskerck is talented as an artist and it is considered that she has a promising future in her chosen profession.

Buys West Front Street Property.

Clayton M. Nagle, the West Front street druggist, has purchased from Cormack Canfield the property at 457 West Front street and will occupy it as soon as the title is passed. Mr. Nagle has built up a large business since coming here and his purchasing a home shows that he has become a permanent fixture in the community.

Thistle Club Reception.

The Thistle Club held its quarterly meeting and reception at the home of Robert Kenney on West Third street, Monday evening. The members enjoyed themselves with songs and recitations until a late hour, when refreshments were served.

John Dilin' Condition Unchanged.

John Dilin, the trolley lineman, who sustained a fractured skull and scalp wounds in a fall on East Front street yesterday, is still at the hospital and Miss Vanner, the assistant matron, reports today that his condition remains critical.

PRICES OF MEAT TAKE A BIG JUMP

General Advance in This City From Two to Five Cents a Pound is Announced.

DUE TO THE STRIKE

SUPPLY HERE WILL NOT LAST OVER A WEEK.

Wholesale Houses Powerless—No Fresh Supplies in Sight—The Cause of the Raise.

Within twenty-four hours after the great beef strike began in the middle West, announcement was made by the local butchers today that the price on all grades of meat would be advanced. In some instances it will be as high as five cents while in others it will be but two, the difference marking the high and low grades.

One of the leading butchers declared the strike has been looked forward to for several weeks and that today's advance may only be a commencement of the effect that it will have locally. There is every indication he said, of further increase within the next ten days as there is barely any supplies in the East.

Two weeks ago before strike rumors had become threatening it was thought prices would be raised owing to a shortage of cattle and now that the butchers have gone out the meat prices may become the highest ever known.

So far 40,000 men have quit work in the big packing houses in Chicago, Omaha, Kansas City, East St. Louis and other cities, and in New York 5,500 butchers went out today. The strike was caused by a dispute over the wages of unskilled laborers employed in the packing houses. The trust wished to reduce their rate of wage one cent an hour but they objected and said they have only a small percentage of the employes, they were sustained by the others.

It is asserted the trust made no effort to avert trouble and within an hour after the unions ordered the men out the price of beef was advanced. Although the managers of the Beef Trust declare they have been caught with a supply sufficient to last only a few days, it was reported yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade that a large secret supply is being held in reserve and will be let go when it can be sold at double the present rate. As the East derives its supply almost entirely from the West all this section faces a most famine that will be more severe than the coal famine of two years ago. One of the local beef houses received a car from the West this morning and when the butchers began purchasing they found the cost five cents beyond yesterday's prices. There is no likelihood of the strike trouble itself reaching Plainfield as already all of the butchers employed by the packers are in no way affiliated with the western unions.

At the offices of the Union Beef Company it was said this morning that the local supply would suffice only for this week. After that Plainfielders will have to subsist on a vegetable diet as there is no prospect of buying enough cattle locally or getting any from Jersey City.

FORMER RESIDENT DEAD.

Mrs. Voorhees VanFleet Passes Away at Her Home in New York.

Mrs. Voorhees VanFleet, at one time a prominent resident of the city and also the borough, died Monday at her home in New York, aged ninety-three years. She resided for many years at the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street, and also Dear street and Lincoln place, which property she owned at the time of her death. Surviving her are three sons, two of whom live in New York and the other in Newark.

The body was brought to this city yesterday and interment was made in Hillside cemetery.

Tennis Doubles at Y. M. C. A.

After the presentation of the tennis awards to the winners of the Y. M. C. A. tennis tournament last evening, plans for a midsummer doubles tournament were discussed. It was finally decided that such a tournament be held and that play begin Monday if sufficient entries be received. Chairmen Koons, Walker Jones and Paul R. Collier were appointed as the committee to take charge of the affair.

Mrs. Whitney Fraser, of South avenue, is quite ill at her home.

HE SUES TO RECOVER $1.80

SQUIRE HAND IS DETERMINED TO COLLECT THE COSTS OF A JUDGMENT.

For the sum of $1.80 which he declares is due him on account in an action brought in his court recently, Justice Hezekiah Hand has commenced suit against George J. Tobin. Papers have been filed in the matter and it will be heard before Justice Clark at Scotch Plains this afternoon. The complainant will be represented by counsel and he has taken every precaution to guard against an adverse decision.

The Justice declares that some time ago Frank Hand sued Tobin in his court and judgment was rendered in favor of the plaintiff. Tobin forwarded the amount of the claim to Hand but the fact that $1.80 was due the court must have slipped his mind as His Honor never received it. Knowing by experience what methods are pursued in bringing debtors to terms he decided upon suit on contract but believing that the local courts might recognize the profession and be prejudiced he generously had the summons issued from Scotch Plains even though it costs car fare to get there.

FEW FAVORED THE REGISTRY

ONLY FORTY ANSWERS RECEIVED TO 500 POSTAL CARD INQUIRIES.

Out of five hundred postal cards sent out by Miss Miller and Miss Wells, who are interesting themselves in the establishment of a municipal registry for this city, forty persons have responded, thereby signifying their desire to have their names placed in the book.

In view of the limited number of names received, it seems hardly probable that the register will be published. Miss Wells was instrumental in compiling the one at Orange which was a success and she believed that such a book would meet with approval here.

CITY VALUATION $9,600,000

INCREASE IN LOCAL ASSESSMENTS AGGREGATE $600,000.

Judging solely from the statistics now at hand it is roughly estimated that Plainfield's assessed valuation for the coming year will be not less than $9,600,000. This shows a great increase over the present valuation, which is $9,000,000. To bring about this increase of $600,000 no apparent effort was made on the part of the assessors, who, it is reported, exercised much care in not overvaluing local property.

The Board of Assessors has completed its work, at least so far as making the usual canvass. The various assessors in the several wards have the new figures all at hand and have already held several meetings collectively. They are nearly through their work and will have their books ready for inspection at the next meeting of the Common Council. Subsequently the books will be taken by the local assessors to the regular meeting of the Union County Board of Assessors and there the rate for the county will be made known. Later the city rate will be fixed.

MEDALS PRESENTED.

Trophies in the Y. M. C. A. Tennis Tournament Are Awarded.

Paul R. Collier and Monroe H. Long received last night their trophies as winners of the recent tennis championship tennis tournament held at the Y. M. C. A. These prizes, black silk watch fobs, with a heavy silver reproduction of the Y. M. C. A. seal surrounded by a wreath attached, were presented to the young men by Physical Director C. E. A. Haywood in the name of the Association.

The tennis which contested in the tournament caused much fervor and after the presentation a social evening was enjoyed, during which refreshments were served.

Plainfield's Corps Visit.

The local branch of the Women's Relief Corps, Winfield Scott Post, No. 10, visited the Elizabeth corps last evening at the latter's lodge rooms. There a reception was tendered to the visiting delegation of officers from the Grand Lodge and the Plainfield corps gave a flag drill. At the conclusion of the regular programme refreshments were served by the Elizabeth corps. Jersey City and Newark were represented by visiting delegations.

Y. M. C. A. ATTRACTIONS FOR COMING SEASON

Star Course Programme for the Fall and Winter is Selected by the Committee.

GOOD TALENT BOOKED

FIRST ENTERTAINMENT TO TAKE PLACE ON NOVEMBER 8.

Dr. Henry M. Matson Chairman of Committee Having Charge of the Course—Complete List Announced.

Announcement is made of the programme for the star course entertainments at the Y. M. C. A., which is a popular attraction here annually. The committee on selection consisted of Dr. Henry M. Matson, Dr. B. vanD. Hodges and Curtis M. Thorpe, and they have chosen only the best of Metropolitan talent.

J. W. Many, a humorist and buffoon, will appear on Tuesday, Nov. 8, which is Election Day. The event for Thanksgiving Day night, Thursday, Nov. 24, will be a show to be given by the DeBarrie-Gill combination. It will include a programme of songs, readings and impersonations of the finest order. On Thursday night, December 1, the Thespian Dramatic Company will present sketches, recitations, and scenes from well-known plays. Following this attraction will be the John Thomas Concert Company. This combination includes a quartette of vocalists and a humorist.

For Monday night, January 2, the committee has booked four popular artists. Miss Edith Cline Ford and Miss Emily Narrow Gregory will entertain with songs and sketches and Miss Katharine Lane will appear as a soprano and ballad singer. The fourth number of the troupe is Miss Edith Palmer, who will artiste. The last entertainment will be given by a company of New York artists on Monday night, January 23. Their specialities include a violin trio, harp and piano numbers and some readings.

In all probability a special attraction will be arranged for February 22, Washington's Birthday, and it is possible that there will be another event in March.

To Test Pigeon Law.

Test of the New Jersey law prohibiting live-bird shooting will be made by the fashionable Riverton Gun Club this week, but not in the defiant manner that was at first suggested. It is planned that one member of the club, which includes in the membership rosters many Philadelphia sportsmen, will go to the club house and, in the presence of an officer of the law, use his gun upon a solitary bird. That, it was said, would be sufficient "defiance" to take the case into court and determine if the Legislature had acted within its rights.

England Retains Palma Cup.

The Council of the National Rifle Association met at Bisley, Eng., yesterday and decided that last year's contest for the Palma trophy should be considered abortive, and that the trophy shall be retained by England, as custodian, until another match is arranged. The Palma trophy was returned to England by the winning American team after the claim was made that the rifles used by the team in shooting for the trophy were not in accordance with the rules governing the contest.

Thompson Dismissed.

Walter Thompson, the expressman arrested Monday on the complaint of Baggagemaster Jerry Garretson, was dismissed by City Judge Runyon at the city court this morning. Charged with disorderly conduct and fighting on the station platform, the Judge declared that no proof against him sufficient for punishment had been produced.

Shriners at Atlantic City.

Although there are about forty Plainfielders who are members of Salaam Temple, Order of the Mystic Shrine, of Newark, there are no representatives from here attending the convention of the order at Atlantic City. Several planned to go, but business engagements interfered with the trip.

Surprised Miss Martin.

An enjoyable surprise party was tendered Miss Hazel Martin at her home on Marion avenue last evening. Seven of Miss Martin's friends were present and a lively evening was spent with games and dancing. Miss Jessie Cartwright and Miss Marie Wyckoff arranged the surprise, which was most complete.

FIGHT AT BULL RUN

FALL ARMY MANEUVERS TO OCCUR ON OLD BATTLE GROUND.

OLD SOLDIERS TO ATTEND

Hundreds of Them Will Be Present as Critics for the Regular and National Guard Forces—Other Washington Gossip.

Washington.—Washington, and for that matter the soldiers of the entire country, are taking more than a passing interest in the coming battle maneuvers scheduled to take place on the historic Bull Run battlefield this coming autumn.

For this series of maneuvers troops will be drawn not only from the regular army at the eastern posts, but from the national guard of the eastern and New England states to the number of about 25,000 men, and they will be under the direct command of Maj. Gen. Henry C. Corbin, commanding the department of the east with headquarters at New York. Of this force some 18,000 will be militiamen, and regular army officers, especially those assigned to general staff duty, are anticipating a golden opportunity of studying the soldiers of the guard of the various states. But not only will the officers of the regular service be present in considerable numbers, but the young soldiers will have as critics many hundreds of civil war veterans, many of whom fought over this same ground during that conflict.

One reason for the great interest shown in the maneuvers by the old soldiers is that the problem to be solved by the troops will follow very the movements of Gens. Lee and Pope 40 years ago, with the exceptions that are made necessary by the change in arms and battle formation. The ground never ground will cover an area of some 50 square miles, and the maneuvers will be the largest ever held in this country.

STONE BRIDGE OVER BULL RUN.

There has been little change in the physical aspect of the old battleground which is now being surveyed and the chief points marked out for the coming conflict.

A sparsely settled community is embraced in the territory covered by the battleground, which is a succession of beautiful valleys, intersected by small streams of water, irrigating farm land. Many crossroads are encountered over the old battlefield, which lead to hills running up the sides of the Blue Ridge mountains.

Bull Run gets its name from a small river in eastern Virginia, which joins the Occoquan, a tributary of the Potomac river, 25 miles southwest of Washington, D. C.

Near it occurred two important battles in the American civil war. The confederates, under the immediate command of Beauregard, about 21,000 in number, defeated the federals, under McDowell, about 28,000 strong, July 21, 1861. The loss of the federals was nearly 3,000; of confederates, 1,752. This battle of Bull Run was called by the confederates the first battle of Manassas.

The confederates under Gen. Lee, about 40,000 all told, defeated about 55,000 federals under Pope, August 29, 1862. The loss of the federals was about 13,000; that of the confederates, 8,400 soldiers. This was called by the confederates the second battle of Manassas. The battle of August 29 is sometimes called the battle of Gravetoe.

During the first battle of Bull Run Gen. Barton Bee, of the confederate forces, selected a position on a large hill south of the turnpike, known as the Henry House hill. This house received its name from its original owners, and to-day still stands as a monument of two great conflicts.

This hill, on which the old Henry house stands, lies south of the Warrenton turnpike. On the east it slopes down to an affluent of Bull Run and east far from it, known as Young's branch, and on the west it is bounded by the road which runs south from Sudley Springs to Manassa.

In the western corner of this field, a third of a mile from the turnpike, but very close to the Sudley road, stood the Henry house. The confederate officers endeavored to establish a connected line, in a general way, but this was a difficult matter to effect.

It was during this battle of Bull Run that Jackson received the epithet "Stonewall." Probably no chance word was ever uttered on a field of battle which became more famous than when Gen. Bee, referring to Gen. Jackson, used the expression "standfast. If e which suits his tastes and inclinations, and there is very little prospect that he will remain in England as long as Mr. Roosevelt is president.

SECRETARY MOODY.

Gov. George H. Carter, of Hawaii, who visited Washington a few days ago, traveled in greater style than is usual with executives of American states. His journey from San Francisco was made in a private car, with all the luxurious appurtenances that goes with such a mode of traveling.

Gov. Carter's luxuries, however, are not charged to the government. He draws a comparatively modest salary of $5,000 a year, which is, however, larger than that paid half the governors of the states in the union. The honor and influence attached to the position is of far more value to him than the salary, as he is a wealthy man, with many financial interests both in the islands and in the states.

The outlying territories have added greatly to the work of the administrative department of the government. From the departments of war and justice especially they take a vast amount of attention. Every day brings with it some problem for solution. On the same day of Gov. Carter's visit, which among other things had to do with discussions with the president the availability of men for territorial judges, of which seven new appointments must be made in the near future to fill existing vacancies, Beckman Winthrop, the new governor of Porto Rico, talked with the president about affairs in that island. Winthrop goes to Porto Rico early in July, where he will succeed William H. Hunt, who is to return to

FAMILY KEPT PET SNAKE.

Domesticated Reptile Crawled Out of Fireplace Every Night to Drink His Milk.

"Ever wake up in the morning and find a snake crawling down through the cracks of an old-fashioned country brick fireplace toward your bed?" asked the man who is fond of telling yarns, of a New Orleans Times-Democrat reporter. "Ever have the jim-jams? It's about the same thing. Once, a number of years ago, when I was living in Arkansas, I had just exactly this experience. I was stopping with a friend of mine over night, and as he had but two rooms to the house, we had to sleep on the floor in the room set aside for the men folks of the family. It was a dilapidated old place, and the house was rapidly crumbling away. There was a double fireplace between the two rooms. When I roused from the night's sleep I had my face turned to the fireplace. I did not pay much attention to the thing at first, and, in fact, was dozingly looking about the old brick mantle, not being thoroughly awake at the time. But very soon I was wide awake. A striped snake about 18 inches long was slowly making his way down through a crack in the old brick fireplace, and the crack reached the floor about six inches from my headrest. I was afraid of embarrassing my friend by calling out to him, but you know there are times when we cannot afford to be as considerate as we would like, and this was clearly one of the times. I poked my friend in the ribs, and told him there was a snake in the house. He merely grunted something at me, and was evidently not much disturbed by the idea. In the meantime the snake kept on coming down toward the floor. 'Hey, there!' I yelled at my friend, again 'this darn snake is right here on us, and will be in bed with us in a minute.' My friend yawned. "'S all right,' he said. 'Jus' comin' down to git his milk, an' he'll go back d'rectly, so you needn't min' him.' The snake crawled on down, and I crawled on out. It was a little too close in there for me, anyhow. Besides, outdoors' had a kind of fascination for me, anyway. The snake crawled into the other room, drank some milk from a saucer, and then crawled back up the chimney. He was in the habit of doing this, being a sort of family pet, but I did not remain to see a second performance."

CAME DOWN TO GET HIS MILK.

POMMELS SON BY MISTAKE.

Long-Absent Father Finds Boy Kissing His Wife and Resents Supposed Familiarity.

According to the Kalamazoo (Mich.) correspondent of the Chicago Inter Ocean, William Fiske, an employe of the Pacific Coast Borax company, returned home the other day from a nine years' sojourn in California. His return was marked by a most unusual occurrence. As he was approaching his old home he glanced in one of the windows and saw a young man in the act of kissing his wife. He rushed into the house and began pommeling the supposed intruder.

THE OLD MAN WAS HOT.

Mrs. Fiske interfered, but not before the young man had severely beaten did the husband discover that his victim was James Fiske, his own son, whom he had not seen for nine years. James was a little chap when Fiske left for the west to seek his fortune, and, although he has kept in constant correspondence with his wife, he did not realize how his son had grown during his absence.

James is now nearly six feet tall and a member of the Kalamazoo college ball team.

Japs in the United States.

In 1892 there were only about 2,000 Japanese in the United States. Now

GETTING ACQUAINTED

BUT VERY FEW PEOPLE REALLY KNOW BIG CHICAGO.

NOT ALL DIRT AND ODORS

Many Pretty Residence Districts with a Flavor of Village Simplicity—Where Business Cares and Hustle Are Forgotten.

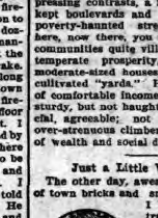
Chicago.—You can live for years in Chicago, and at the end have scarce a speaking acquaintance with her, so difficult it is really to know the giantess who reigns here on the south end of Lake Michigan. But it being true that as you progress in acquaintance the more you grow to desire intimacy with her, eventually you may announce that you know Chicago fairly well. I am just starting on to pursue the acquaintance with any sort of zeal, and must confess I also am just beginning to grant any sort of justice to the big, rushing town in which I dwell. I so hated her dirt, her odors, her unkempt bigness, I failed to pay her the homage due her many wonderful successes; heretofore had not realized the solid, quiet worth that existed in good measure within her wide domain. But recently I was given opportunity to see her better, saner self, and am tardily becoming enthusiastic about her.

I find she is not all made up of depressing contrasts, a few beautifully-kept boulevards and many squalid, poverty-haunted streets; but, now here, now there, you may come upon communities quite village-like in their temperate prosperity, their pretty, moderate-sized houses, their carefully cultivated "yards." Here dwell folk of comfortable incomes and leisure; sturdy, but not haughty; domestic, social, agreeable; not over-ambitious, over-strenuous climbers after the gods of wealth and social distinction.

Typical Chicago.

Just a Little Way Out.

The other day, aweary to the death of town bricks and smells and bang,

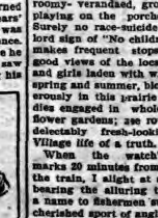


A Block from the Station.

I boarded a local train to go somewhere, anywhere, away from the town's oppression. I knew not where I would alight, cared not, only felt the impulse to get away from the stifle of many jostling people. The train started, and the farther it got from the city the deeper I got into close-huddled houses, massed humanity. Dreadful, horrible seemed Chicago, naught but factory and railroads and freight trains and grudging men and women. It were better to abide at home and bury oneself in a book, read of green fields and running brooks. But, stay, after a bit I find the aspect of things changing; dense flat-areas are giving place to blocks of small cottages, each with ground space about it; there is not such oppression of industry now noticeable.

Far back from the track, in among the trees, are glimpses of houses, roomy- verandaed, groups of children playing on the porches and lawns. Surely no race-suicide here, no landlord sign of "No children." The train makes frequent stops, and we get glimpses in one of the local M. E. and girls laden with wild flowers from spring and summer, blossom most generously in this prairie region; see ladies engaged in wholesome work in flower gardens; see rows and rows of delectable looking vegetables. Village life of a truth.

When the watch's minute-hand marks 20 minutes from time of taking the train, I alight at a tiny station bearing the alluring title of Walton; a name so fisherman suggestive of the cherished sport angling, to me hinting of the running brook. Everything about Walton wears the varnished green of June. You step from the tracks into high grass; a block away, on either side the steel highway, the most verdant of woods invite. Is this stopping-piace then a pure wilderness, the only inhabitants the birds I hear, the squirrels and rabbits I see running about with such freedom and trust? No, over there are three fine roofs of houses. I will investigate.



A City Village.

A City Village.

I walk the block to the woods, and find this side the rows of trees a long village street, extending as far as the eye can reach. The houses are all on one side, face the woodland, and every house stands in spacious, shady grounds. At the first place I see a comely middle-aged woman setting out pansies so intent on her work she pays no heed to her fellow townsman from 50 blocks away. For fellow townsman I am, this charming little village in which the gardener lives being well within the city limits. This is no suburb, this is still Chicago proper. And whoever dreamed of such a blessed spot within the confines of the town! There is nothing to suggest city life here, the one railway being concealed behind the screen of trees. The gutter blossoms with wild geranium and meadow-rue, some more squirrels scamper across the road, another rabbit appears. Birds carol, robins hawk and call, all the air is full of unhampered youth, of care-free gayety. I notice the children have on as few clothes as possible, that the women wear simple wash-dresses. I observe a pretty girl mount a step-ladder, flying up vines, a foxy, charming country miss, with a trim, charming city frock to show she has not given up style simply because she is a little "out." I come upon a family having their supper in the side-yard, and it seems to me this is the crowning touch to the city-village.

That I may get to the station in time and see what manner of men dwell in this Arcadia, I soon retrace my steps. Yes, they are coming, hurrying over each other to get to the particular small arms stretched their particular way, sniffing the posy brought as a bit of welcome to "Papa;" then, with their companions, leisurely walk up the streets to their pleasant abodes that, after the day's combat of business, must seem a very heaven of refreshment. Typical Americans I judge them, alert, intelligent, kindly. They saunter down the street, me eavesdropping after them, and as the front gate swings to behind each vanishing figure and each group of rejoicing children, I smile at the glimpses of the old-fashioned family life offered here, and think we need not be so pessimistic in regard to the tendency of married folk to escape household cares. Five people seem to have the capacity; and not only accept them, but consider them the road to happiness.

Pleasant Social Life.

I decide to stay awhile and study the folk of Walton from various view-points. I must find a roof, and this I do at the abode of a washerwoman, a friendly soul, at first view with the world; good friends with her employers, having a house and fraction of land of her own to engage her attention and give her independence. The next day, being Sunday, my Irish landlady walks a mile away that she may receive the blessings of attendance at mass, and I stroll out to "the street" to go to church with the crowd. The crowd all pass one way, and presently we come upon a pretty little churchly structure, fine-adorned, two-storied—the union church. Yes, in this Utopia no creed nor sect dissent; there are funds for only one church, so one church is built, and a pastor installed that will be careful to avoid dogma and other cause for dissent, so that where the catholicity does not make a universal appeal; there is my washerwoman, for instance; and the Episcopalians gather in that handsome barn over the way, the interior of which they have converted into a place of ecclesiastical form. In the social gatherings, which I learn about later in the week, the lines are drawn even less firmly than in church matters, and the fact that you are settled in Walton is introduction in itself. Calls are made and returned promptly, invitations are given and accepted, and very soon the stranger is on easy terms with his neighbors. What matter if he is 99 blocks from down town; he has a congenial set right about him. I am good-by to Walton with regret. I, too, would like to settle in the city-village.

The Union Church.

Children and Society—Girl Work.

It is not optimism that accounts for my growing fondness for Chicago, for surely the town is fast improving under the awakened civic pride of the townspeople. All classes are being stirred to take a share in the work of transformation, and it is of much interest *to observe the di-*versified sorts and conditions of folk that are showing enthusiasm over the cleaning and beautifying of different localities. One of the post office employes has converted a rubbish heap back of the down-town post office building into a garden, which reclaimed spot is called by his friends a park and named in his honor. A certain society girl on the West side, instead of spending her youthful energies in the commonplace way of entire devotion to amusement, is zealously leading a movement to keep clean and make pretty a certain portion of her neighborhood. And other of the power will be she is wield! Surely indifferent aldermen will bow to beauty's call, lazy Dagoes jump to obey her command, white-gloved policemen step lively when she bids. And a certain district's crusade is another feature of the present movement in Chicago, children of the wealthy and children of the slums all taking an interest in this effort to make the "Lady of the Lake" fair and seemly.

Childish "White Wings."

KATHERINE POPE.

To Be Hoped So.

Wife (looking up from paper)—What was Hobson's choice?

Husband—Mrs. Hobson, I suppose.—New Yorker.

COW NURSES ORPHAN COLT

Another Catches Catfish and Eats Them with a Relish, Thereby Causing Big Sensation.

John Hefferan has a small farm a mile away from Danbury, Conn., on which he keeps live stock, including a small herd of cows and several horses. Several days ago Hefferan's brood mare fell and broke its leg. There was no chance of mending the break and the horse was shot. A colt only a few days old was left when the mare died. The colt was too young to shift for itself, so it was fed with milk from a bottle.

Although it drank enough milk to keep it alive, it did not take well to the diet. The other day when Hefferan went out to look at the cows in the pasture he was surprised to see the colt following close at the heels of one of the cows, while a small calf about the same age as the colt followed too. The motherly animal fed the two with the greatest impartiality. The colt will be allowed to grow up with its adoptive mother until it gets large enough to eat grass.

COW CATCHES CATFISH.

Three miles south of Danbury, Alexander Geary has a farm. Geary's cows graze in a pasture through which runs a good-sized brook. Recently Geary's small son saw a cow acting peculiarly as it stood at the edge of the brook and he ran to the house to tell his father that the cow was catching fish and eating them.

The skeptical Mr. Geary laughed, but went to the pasture and watched the cow. It was still standing with its front legs in the water. The cow thrust its nose into the water and brought something out. This something proved to be a large catfish, and the cow munched it with evident relish. The cow caught several more fish while its owner watched it. Mr. Geary told some friends in Danbury about the occurrence and, as they appeared skeptical, he drove them to his farm to prove the truth of the story. They saw the farm and the brook and the cow.

MAGNETIC GIRL A WONDER.

Stones Leap in Air, Dishes Dance and Bottles Jump from Table at Her Approach.

An account of a phenomenon observed in a girl of 12 residing at Vladikavkas, in the Caucasus, has been communicated to the St. Petersburg Novoe Vremya.

The girl is the daughter of a workman named Lubs. It is stated that every object which she approaches begins to move. If she goes near a dresser with plates upon it they begin to dance, washing hung on a line flies off it, a bottle lying on a table is raised in the air, and, falling down, is broken in pieces, and stones lying on the ground leap in the air and fall again.

PLATES BEGIN TO DANCE.

The girl is perfectly healthy and laughs at the occurrences called forth on her appearance. No one can explain them, although many doctors and professors of physical science have been consulted.

The child's parents are poor and wish to send her out to domestic service, but she always loses her places owing to the sensation it ignorant people that she is possessed of a devil and that she should be sent to Father John, of Cronstadt, in St. Petersburg, to have the demon exorcised.

At present the means are being collected to send the child to St. Petersburg for her marvelous magnetic powers to be examined by medical authorities.

Sealskin Shoes for Dogs.

Sealskin shoes, for dogs, are made in Labrador. The dogs attached to sledges travel at great speed over the rough ice, and some protection for the feet is necessary.

Weight of an Adult Whale.

The weight of a full-grown whale is about 100 tons; that is, about as much as 30 elephants.

THIBETAN CAMPAIGN

STRUGGLE WITH NATURE THE FOES ARE HAVING.

Campaigning in an Unknown Land, Far Removed from Supplies, with All Obstacles Against Them—Reinforcements Needed.

None of the many small wars in which Britain's troops have been engaged during the past century have offered so many physical difficulties as the present expedition to Thibet. The advance to the Sikhim border before the mission entered Thibetan territory was a weary march of 50 miles in single file over a rough hill-path rising and falling sometimes as much as 1,000 feet in a mile and ending in a snow-pass nearly as high as Mont Blanc. Thence the road dipped steeply down to the Chumbi valley, at the head of which stands Phari Fort, where a long halt was made to bring up supplies. Life at Phari is described by one of the mission as a period of unutterable discomfort. The fort was filthy in the extreme, and the only fuel to be had was the droppings of cattle. The thermometer fell to zero at night; the bitter wind which swept the frozen valley caused the death of several men; and the intense cold and clouds of dust, with the choking smoke of the manure-fires, brought on hacking coughs and sore throats. Early in January a further advance was made over the Tangla, a pass 15,700 feet high, to Tuna, where the country opens out into a desolate tract of barren rolling hills and flat sandy valleys, very trying to men and animals. Here the mission had to remain for nearly three months to collect supplies.

Transport difficulties at this period were enormous. Fifty per cent of the yaks which had been collected died from anthrax and rinderpest; all the camels died; and of 200 bullocks not one survived the first two months. Aconite and rhododendron poisoning, overwork, underfeeding and accidents made havoc among the ponies and bullocks, and the latter were also attacked by foot-and-mouth disease, while frostbite, sunstroke and pneumonia proved fatal to a number of the native followers and coolies, and even to some of the soldiers. Tuna, though not so windy, is colder than Phari, 50 degrees of frost having been registered there at night; and the village is, if possible, dirtier than Phari—so much so that in spite of the intense cold the officers preferred tents to the filth of the houses.

BRITISH OBSERVATION POST NEAR GYANTSE.

The advance from Tuna to Gyantse, and the various fights which have taken place, are fresh in the mind of everyone, and the present situation of the mission is serious enough to cause some little anxiety. The attack on the camp has been repulsed, but the advance is checked; the camp is still partially invested, and the assailants are reported to be using rifles of "superior European make" and a number of guns which throw a one-pound solid shot, while their fire at 1,200 to 1,400 yards is said to be fairly accurate. A large army is believed to be massing in the Rong valley, beyond the Karo pass, and evidently they intend to offer a strenuous resistance to our further advance towards Lassa. Twenty thousand men are rumored to be under arms, and no doubt reinforcements are coming in daily. Already the Indian government has ordered some 800 more men and four mountain guns to proceed to Thibet, and it is possible that the expedition will have to be largely increased before it is strong enough to force a passage to Lassa, a distance of 114 miles across several mountain ranges and a large river. But in any expedition of this sort, every addition to the force means an immense increase in the difficulties of transport. Those whose experience of war has been gained in level countries, where broad roads and railways play their part, troops can march on a wide front, and wheeled vehicles can be used, have no idea of the difficulties attending the march of a column with its baggage and supplies on a front of 18 inches, and a road 18 inches wide. Is a good one in the higher Himalayas.

Where food must be carried, not alone for the men, but for the animals; where extra blankets and tents are a necessary of life; where the road in places is nothing but a succession of broken rock steps; where the rare air gives no foothold to the weary and stumbling pack animals; where the slow progress of the straggling column is rendered slower by the strain on heart and lungs caused by the rarefied air, and is often quite may block the road for ten minutes; while the bitter cold numbs the limbs, and the glare of the sun blinds the eyes, the task of moving any considerable force assumes gigantic proportions

The New Woman

What the Congress of Mothers Is Doing

If this world is ever to be lifted out of darkness into light it will be accomplished only by such work as that done and attempted by the noble organization calling itself the Congress of Mothers. These women are not much talked of; they do not care to be. They wish to labor quietly, earnestly and wisely and let their deeds speak for them. Their aim is to reform mankind by making reform unnecessary. Of all the women working for the public good these are the ones whose task is sacred. They advocate, to begin, the scientific preparation of girls for family and motherly duties. How can a frivolous girl, ignorant of everything that goes to the proper rearing of a family, bring up her children to be healthy, honest, clean, wise and gentle, able to take care of themselves? It is time to stop the bringing up of the human race by the crazy rule of chance and ignorance. Then, too, this blessed body of women takes the ground that all children have the right to comfort, health, happiness and beauty in their young lives, the poorest equally with the richest. With this conviction the mothers have under their especial care the question of child labor; also the public schools of this country. That the public streets of American cities should be free from degrading and debasing spectacles, that abundant park and playground room under the supervision of responsible grounds be provided, that the poorest children should be rescued from becoming street thieves, hoodlums and desperadoes, are some of the demands these mothers ask law and public sentiment to help them enforce. Mothers know that children would not grow to be thieves and thugs if they were taught better; mothers know, too, that many a boy snatches an apple or a pear from a street stand because he is hungry. They are seeking to bring it about that children shall have nourishing school lunches.

* * *

Some women's idea of air and exercise is dressing up and leading a dog out on a string.

* * *

The other day I was coming downtown in an elevated train and sat near two pretty girls, who were talking about one of their friends who was always "nice." And one of them said, "It's always nice to be nice, isn't it?" Just so. It's always nice all round to be nice.

* * *

Cycling will never go out of fashion with those girls and women who like exhilaration with their exercise.

* * *

Here is something to make a note of: Any outburst of anger or even irritability is disgraceful and lowering to the one indulging in it. Besides that, it is ruinous to health and beauty.

* * *

In our time it is nothing short of a crime to bring girls up untrained to protect themselves either by muscular strength and skill or with a shotgun. Masculine chivalry does not exist in the burglar and the tramp or yet in the trousered creature who knocks a woman out of the way to get ahead of her and obtain a car seat while she is left to stand. Unfortunately in the present transitional stage of society's development all these classes are numerous and apparently increasing, particularly the car hog.

* * *

Whatever happens, let woman be loyal to her own sex. The good of all of us is for the good of each.

* * *

It is not enough to denounce public evils. We must suggest something better to take their place. The "don't" reformatory policy is a dead failure.

* * *

One of the wisest moves of the ladies who wield the destinies of the International council is their holding each quinquennial meeting in a different country, by preference the capital of the country. Thus the people of every land see how refined, intelligent and capable these strongminded women are, and favorable impression toward their cause will be made accordingly. So the war is carried into the enemy's camps one after another.

* * *

The final decision on the Venezuelan claims controversy has an important bearing on the status of women who marry men of other nations than their own. Heretofore when an American girl married, say, a European nobleman, by the law and usage of European nations she became as much a subject of her husband's country as he himself was. She lost absolutely all rights as an American citizen, even the meager citizen's rights an American woman enjoys. She, her property and her children were utterly at the mercy of laws made mostly in the dark ages. The suffering, the humiliation, the actual reduction to beggary, of many women who sold their lives for a title have been deplorable. That no country could do nothing for them because they had passed beyond its jurisdiction. Now, however, the Venezuelan decision, to which eleven nations bound themselves to agree, takes the stand that a woman does not lose her own nationality when she marries a citizen of any of the eleven countries.

ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

FASHION NOTES.

Printed Net Gowns Are Both Simple and Pretty—Yachting Costumes.

There is a great future for the printed net blouse in soft pompadour patterns and floral designs. No supplementary trimming is required, for the reason that the pattern supplies its own adornment, and a lustrous silk lining gives it just the right richness.

Most of the so called wash dresses this summer are not intended ever to see the tub. There is no denying that none of the elaborate waists can with impunity pass through the hands of the laundress, and it is well to recognize this from the first and give them to the dry cleaner.

PICTURE HAT.

Modes for yachting are very conservative, and last year's costumes are by no means out of style. Yachting costumes can always be produced at a comparatively small cost, as they are simple, consisting of coat and skirt of linen or flannel and a sailor made blouse. The coat is cut long enough to afford some protection from the winds, and perhaps the smartest thing this summer is the full length linen ulster, semitight fitting and cut strictly on tailor made lines.

An evening gown seen recently had a trimming composed of a couple of choux, one green and the other pink, holding a cluster of lilies and completing a smart color scheme in which these two delicate shades were mingled.

A yachting costume seen recently was of scarlet linen trimmed with white embroidery relieved with touches of black. The coat reached to the knees and was quite plain. The skirt, it is needless to say, cleared the ground. With this was worn a small sailor of stitched red straw, from which hung a red and white veil.

The picture shows a wide picture hat of ecru straw trimmed with a long white feather drooping on the hair in the back.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

DAINTY TRIFLES.

Rosettes and Frillings For Summer Gowns—Pale Sunset Revived.

The polo bonnet is being revived for smart occasions. It goes well with the 1830 styles. One of the prettiest seen recently was of white horsehair braid trimmed with bunches of sweet peas, while strings of soft white ribbon were brought around from the back of the hat and tied directly under the left ear.

A SEQUIN BLOUSE.

The pongee dress, beautifully embroidered and inlet with heavy lace and embroidery, will be perhaps the most popular gown this summer.

The button rosette is becoming a power in the land, and it is the almost invariable accompaniment of the taffeta gown. It usually appears with little ruffles and pinked out frills. In Paris these rosettes are introduced in contrast to the gown, a method which gives them importance in the color scheme. A gray taffeta being made by a leading house on the Rue de la Paix has tiny cerise rosettes, each with a tiny paste button in the center. The bodice was designed bolero fashion, with turned back revers edged with ruchings, but so short that it terminated just under the bust line, where it was replaced by a deep belt of the velvet to match the rosettes. All around the hip were little plaits, and it is worthy of notice that the skirt only lay on the ground a quarter of an inch instead of having a long train.

Automobile coats are made of gold cloth, a material somewhat on the order of ponpon, but much heavier. This is cut semitailor fashion, with a belted in effect at the back, and the trimming consists of collar and cuff applications of pale blue, red or black and white, the buttons being gold.

The picture shows a sequin dinner blouse. The waist portion is made of two wide ruffles falling over a wide belt.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

WARM WEATHER DRESS.

Plain and Elaborate Linen Dresses. Many Shirtings on Gowns.

Serges and linens this year require a certain amount of strapping embroidery or trimming of some kind to look their best. The muslins for smarter occasions are also very elaborate, boasting insertions and frills of valenciennes, with many ruchings.

Shirrings are more in vogue than ever, and no gown is complete without a touch of some of this. Skirts are shirred in tiers, and even the edges of boleros are laid in fine shirrings.

Fashion dictates that we shall wear airy and beautiful fabrics this summer, such as satin messaline, chiffon voile, chiffon cloth, mousseline de soie and painted silk muslins and gauzes, as well as the real old fashioned muslins trimmed with valenciennes of the finest quality.

MUSLIN DRESS.

The combination of muslin and Irish lace is a favorite one this year, and among smart people the lace is real, and the muslin is embroidered in big dots.

Many ultra smart people are wearing gowns of white taffeta. It is said to wear well. Very many frills and tassels are a feature of this rather plain and stiff sort of a gown.

The picture shows a muslin dress trimmed with shirrings and Irish lace applique.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

SMART MODES.

The Season's Coats of Lace Are Elaborate—Gray in Fashionable.

The season's coats are ultra smart, particularly those of all over Russian and Cluny lace. Of course the prettiest are in black, white, champagne or lavender. But these linen laces are also dyed in pale colors, such as blue and lavender, and when they are set over a lining of deeper silk they present a most dainty appearance. One dainty model was in tinted gray lace inlet with medallions of violet silk and made up over a lining of violet chiffon. It was worn with a costume of lavender crepe de chine, trimmed with heavy lace to match.

The loose coat of heavy black lace is charming over white silk worn with a smart black and white gown. Accordion plaited slips are especially fetching worn with bolero or fichu arrangements.

All the paler shades of gray are very fashionable; also reseda, dull green and lavender. The latter shade is the old fashioned tint which goes equally well with pink or pale blue.

GRAY VOILE GOWN.

Silver braid and tissue is largely used both on gowns and millinery, and it plays an important part in those costumes designed especially for evening wear. Indeed gowns of expensive silver tissue are veiled with chiffon or lace, and silver embroideries appear on black and colors. Ruchings of silver or gold gauze ribbon are much used in Paris on white mull gowns.

Speaking of gowns of mull, they will be among the smartest summer costumes, particularly in white and in pale blue.

The picture shows a gray voile dress trimmed with bands of shirred taffeta. It has a skirt made in the prevailing mode with three ruffles, and it is worn with a black chip hat trimmed with a white plume.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

MIDSUMMER MODES.

Taffeta Gowns, Trimmings, Hats, Parasols and Sleeves.

Some of the very smartest and prettiest of summer gowns are made of taffeta, mostly in the tiniest possible checks. The foundation of all these is white, with lilac, blue, red or brown, sometimes a mixture of all together, but done so very cleverly that one must unravel a bit of the silk to find just how many colors there are. But this mixture of colors gives the material some new quality which is very pleasing even if elusive. The ways of developing these pretty silks are various, but in keeping with the material and design. One really delightful dress was of grayish blue and white check. The skirt had the front breadth bound down its entire length each side with blue satin ribbon, and this was laid across the next breadth and stitched down. The rest of the skirt fitted snugly all around to the back, where it was laid in two deep reverse folds. There was a shaped flounce about fifteen inches deep. Around the bottom of this were five rows of blue satin ribbon sewed on flat, and above the joining were three more.

The blouse waist was cut down around the neck to show a white chemisette and a small arrangement of dark blue velvet edged with Persian braid to represent a bolero under the blouse. The collar was of white linen and stood high, with a tiny bow at the front like a man's batwing tie. Across the shoulders were short straps of the ribbon, and two long ones went from belt line in front to the middle of the back. The sleeves were bishop shape, with the cuffs bound and trimmed with the ribbon. This made an exceedingly pretty gown.

Another taffeta check gown, in brown and fawn over white, had the skirt made with clusters of narrow plaits, four in each bunch. They were graduated in length so they formed a shaped flounce. At the ends of the plaits there were set handsome castle braid ornaments in black silk. The waist was open on the shoulders and down the front. The open space was filled with rich white brocade. The waist was made all tucks, and at the top were two milliner's folds of the same, with straps to hold them, set with clusters of three pearl buttons each. The sleeves were puffed at the elbows and had folds like the shoulders, set with a good many pearl buttons a little larger than are used on men's shirts. There were deep cuffs made of the brocade, with fancy feather stitching. This dress I show in this letter, for it is such a very useful model, all kinds of goods being made after it. The narrow plaits down the skirt are as well adapted for the rich cloth gowns as the thin wash stuffs and the silks. The difference lies in the trimming. The plaits are considered in the light of trimming. They are certainly ornamental.

Ribbon will enter so largely into the garnishing of all sorts of gowns and outdoor wear that clever managers will seize the occasion now, while the summer sales at reduced prices are on, to buy enough for later requirements. If one has a dress which was new last spring, it is safe to say that it will need a little freshening up by fall, and several rows of flat ribbon sewed around the bottom will do just that. Velvet ribbon set in clusters of lines of the same or varying widths on all kinds of garments will be a vogue within a short time. Lace is on the wane, and there is not a lot to be seen, even on the gowns now in use. Lace is pretty, light and ornamental and never will lose its vogue entirely, but some styles in dressmaking require more and others less, and the outlook is much against it and in favor of ribbon.

TAFFETA SUIT.

Parasols for this season are unusually dainty, bedecked as they are with lace and chiffon and buttons. Buttons would seem very much out of place on a parasol; but, curiously enough, they look well.

One parasol was of pink taffeta, with V shaped insets, upside down, of course, and these V's were of superposed lace, the whole V being edged with a line of small pearl buttons. There were a narrow, upstanding ruffle of lace and one deep fall below. A bow of pink ribbon on the handle finished this. Another, also of pink silk, had four bias folds of the same kind of silk, but each fold was a trifle darker than the other above, so that there were four shades of pink. This had a curved wooden handle, with a pink bow near the curve.

HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU.

WHAT IS WORN.

The Growing Fancy For Taffeta. Pretty Dresses For Debutantes.

Soft taffetas of the palest green makes a very pretty open coat lined with shot green and white chiffon. Chiffon linings are characteristic of the summer wrap and are blended with lovely laces.

A dainty gown now being made for a debutante is of white silk muslin gauged in at the waist and finished down the front with quaint little ruches of white taffeta. A thicker ruching also appears at the feet, headed by a narrow border of pearl trimming. The baby waist is trimmed with ruchings of silk, and the decolletage is edged with the pearl trimming which rests on the neck. The sleeves are dainty little puffs, and the girdle is of blue silk.

BLACK CHIFFON HAT.

There is a growing fancy for green in beautiful soft shades; consequently emeralds are growing in favor, and we also see other curious green stones.

Some beautiful toilets for debutantes are made of brussels tulle or fine chiffon sprinkled with gold or silver sequins. These are almost invariably worn with pearl ornaments, which are the only ones permissible for young girls.

Enamel work is much used on parasol handles. These tints are usually combined with a touch of silver or gold.

The wash silk glove still continues to be the only glove for warm weather tailor mades. This should be pure white in preference to black or tan, although quite a few grays are worn with costumes of this shade.

Champagne shades are all the vogue in linen, silk and woolens. The picture shows a black chiffon hat having a straw edge and trimmed with ostrich tips.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

WHITE GOWNS.

They Divide the Honors With Black This Season—Outing Frocks.

Panne cloth in ivory, mastic and all the paler leather tints is much used in summer wraps, and wee bits of oriental embroidery are used with excellent effect. Very dainty passementeries can be bought ready to put on coats and bodices, and some of these lace have no many tabs and pendants that the surface of the coat is fairly covered.

The ideal summer frock is the white one in chiffon, mousseline or such fabrics. White mousseline de soie is almost as pretty as chiffon and possesses better wearing qualities. These ethereal materials are very effective when trimmed with Irish crochet, and not only will they do duty during the summer, but they come in admirably for house wear during the winter months and even for dinner wear.

JET BOLERO.

A satin messaline seen recently was cut princess, and it showed a guimpe and undersleeves of the palest pink embroidered soft Italian muslin. A dead white linen is very smart worn with a burnt straw hat relieved with a touch of black or a wreath of scarlet poppies, the color of which is duplicated in a crimson tie and belt.

A pretty little gown seen recently was of pink linen, the skirt made with large box plaits, which were also used on the waist and combined with a square collar and deep cuffs of English embroidery.

White serge and navy blue serge are mostly trimmed with flat silk braid, except where heavy embroideries of wool are used to embellish the material. These wool embroideries are the latest thing.

A dress of scarlet linen seen recently was embroidered in white and worn with a white kid belt and a silk tie.

The picture shows a bolero of jet having long points and loose sleeves with wide edges.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

AUTOMOBILE COSTUMES.

They Are No Longer Hideous, Hats and Gowns Being Dainty.

Automobile dress for town wear has become less hideous, and one occasionally sees very, pretty costumes. One of these noticed recently was of Havana brown mohair trimmed with flat frills piped with mauve silk. The dainty bolero of the alpaca had a double cape lined with mauve. The double breasted fronts buttoned up high, but opened to disclose facings of ivory silk and lace. Two blouses went with this—one of tucked mauve batiste inlet with ivory medallions, the other of white wash silk and lace insertions embroidered in mauve and brown silk.

A SMART HAT.

A small hat of brown alpaca was worn with this costume. It had a full crown and a shallow brim covered with bias alpaca and two choux of coq feathers in the same mauve tint.

Another automobile hat seen recently was of brown panne cloth trimmed with a bunch of fruit. Fruit seems to be a favorite trimming for these automobile hats, as it is usually made of india rubber and is therefore quite durable and sheds the dust easily.

The newest thing in shirt waist suits is the foulard of a dull brown shade lightly figured with white spottings. With this is worn a sailor shape of rough straw trimmed with a white sea gull.

The parasol of the season is a work of art, the handles are of tinted wood beautifully carved. Some of these are in black wood, carved to represent grotesque heads of animals. Others are of ivory inset with imitation precious stones. The rage for checked parasols continues unabated, and next to it is the popularity of the changeable parasols made with a plain handle and a hemstitched edge. Embroidered parasols are a fad of the moment and are usually designed to match some gown. All the red and old rose shades are smart and becoming.

The picture shows a straw hat trimmed with pale blue ribbon and pale pink roses.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

IN WOMAN'S REALM.

The Art of Dressing Well on Very Little Consists in Simplicity.

Very few women really have enough to dress on, but the girl who goes around a great deal certainly has a struggle to make both ends meet. If, however, she wears well cut corsets and simple, full blouses and skirts and, above all, is simple in her headgear, she will achieve success where an overdressed woman will fail.

Simplicity is the keynote of good fashion, especially for girls, who would do well to remember that they can wear bright shades which later on would appear very trying.

WHITE CHIFFON WAIST.

Real old fashioned blue and white checked gingham is having quite a revival. A model seen recently had a bolero effect held in place by a wide rose color suede band. This bolero showed a waistcoat of rose lawn edged with narrow valenciennes lace. The skirt of this is gauged around the hips and finished with a simple hemstitched hem and rose colored stitching.

There is no compromise in the skirt of today. It must either clear the ground all around or be shorter even in the back than in the front, or it must lie on the ground all the way around and be excessively full. This last is for dressy occasions alone.

Delaine is a material which can be charmingly treated in two ways. For morning wear the short, full skirt and unlined bodice, worn with a belt of silk or leather, is delightfully cool and smart.

The picture shows a white chiffon waist. The yoke is of all over lace edged with passementerie. The body is heavily shirred.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

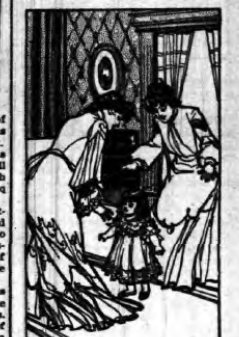
Care of The Baby

Things All Mothers Should Know

"It is perfectly wonderful, considering the ignorance of most parents, that so many children survive the vicissitudes of the first two years they spend on this earth," remarked the doctor as he administered a dose of medicine to small Tommy, who was laid up as a result of sucking a piece of steak given to him because "he looked so cunning when he begged for it."

Tommy's mother looked properly meek and humble.

"My dear child," resumed the doctor, "please remember that a small speci-



A CHILD OF TWO SHOULD BE ABLE TO WALK WELL.

men of humanity is much better without meat during the first two years of its life, and even during the second two years it needs mighty little of it."

"But he seems to want variety, doctor, and I can't keep him always on"—

"Certainly not," interrupted the doctor. "Porridge and milk is all very fine for breakfast and tea in the nursery, but it should be varied occasionally with bread and butter, or dripping, with an egg or fried bacon. Breadcrumbs and bacon fat make a capital breakfast, after a small saucer of porridge, for a child of two. They help to obviate the need of aperients. So also ripe and well stewed fruit and well cooked vegetables. Uncooked vegetables, such as radishes, lettuce and cucumbers, should never be given to young children, especially in the hot weather. Remember that diarrhea is more dangerous for young children than for adults. When the former suffer from it, it is usually the fault of those who have charge of them. And, by the way, the flannel petticoat should not be left off until all the teeth are set, and even then not until the really warm days have begun."

"I was so worried, doctor, because Tommy didn't walk until he was nearly two years old."

"Well, children do develop differently, some more rapidly than others, but nevertheless when the second year is ended there are certain things every child ought to be able to do. For instance, a child of two should be able to walk well. If it cannot do this there is undoubtedly something wrong, very probably rickets, and a doctor should be consulted. By walking well it is not meant that the child should be allowed to stand on its feet much. At two it still toddles and it should on no account be taken walking by its nurse. The spine in childhood is different from what it is in later years. In the child the spine is composed of separate bones. In the adult some of these have become united so that the spine is stronger and less readily injured by jolts or jars. Curvature is always started in early youth when the bones are not properly hardened. The position of a young child propped up in an erect sit is very injurious to its spinal column."

"How about teething, doctor?"

"At two teething should be almost if not quite completed. All the first set of twenty teeth should be cut by then, but sometimes there is a delay of two or three months in the coming of the four back teeth at the extreme end of the jaw. This need cause no uneasiness, but if the child has only cut half a dozen teeth at the end of two years then something is the trouble. At the end of the second year also the fontanelle should be closed. This is the space between the two sections of the skull. It remains open after birth to allow of the growth of the brain. The fontanelle is a good index of the baby's condition in illness. If it becomes depressed—that is to say, falls in—it is a serious symptom."

"And when should a baby be able to talk?"

"At two it should have mastered the first difficulties of speech, for every normal child should be able to pronounce some words when it has completed its twenty-fourth month. Many indeed by that time can chatter pretty freely."

"Is crying always harmful?"

"Not a bit of it, my dear madam! A good healthy cry with plenty of tears is actually good for the child."

MAUD ROBINSON.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, July 14, 1904.

THE PLATFORMS.

In order that our readers may become familiar with the positions taken by the two great political organizations on the questions at stake in the present campaign, we present today brief extracts from the platforms of the Republican and Democratic parties. Only the leading planks are mentioned here and they are given in such a way that the reader will find no difficulty in ascertaining how the parties stand on any particular question now at issue.

Tariff.

Republican—We insist upon the maintenance of the principles of protection, and therefore rates of duty should be readjusted only when conditions have so changed that the public interest demands their alteration, but this work cannot safely be committed to any other hands than those of the Republican party.

Democratic—We favor a revision and a gradual reduction of the tariff by the needs of the masses and for the commonwealth, and not by the friends of its abuses, its extortions and its discriminations, keeping in view the ultimate ends of "equality of burdens and equality of opportunities" and the constitutional purpose of raising a revenue by taxation—to wit, the support of the federal government in all its integrity and virility, but in simplicity.

Money.

Republican—We believe it to be the duty of the Republican party to uphold the gold standard and the integrity and value of our National currency.

Democratic—(The platform is silent on the question but Mr. Parker says he will stand only as a gold man.)

Trusts.

Republican—Laws enacted by the Republican party which were intended for the protection of the public against the unjust discrimination and the illegal encroachment of vast aggregations of capital, have been fearlessly enforced by a Republican President, and new laws insuring reasonable publicity as to the operations of great corporations and providing additional remedies for the prevention of discrimination in freight rates have been passed by a Republican Congress.

Democratic—We recognize that the gigantic trusts and combinations designed to enable capital to secure more than its just share of the joint products of capital and labor, and which have been fostered and promoted under Republican rule, are a menace to beneficial competition and an obstacle to permanent business prosperity. Any trust or unlawful combination engaged in interstate commerce which is monopolizing any branch of business or production should not be permitted to transact business outside of the State of its origin. Whenever it shall be established in any court of competent jurisdiction that such monopolistic system exists, such prohibition should be enforced through comprehensive laws to be enacted on the subject.

The Philippines.

Republican—In the Philippines we have suppressed insurrection, established order and given to life and property a security never known there before. We have organized civil government, made it effective and strong in administration and have conferred upon the people of those islands the largest civil liberty they have ever enjoyed.

Democratic—We insist that we ought to do for the Filipinos what we have done already for the Cubans, and it is our duty to make that promise now, and upon suitable guarantees of protection to citizens of our own and other countries resident there at the time of our withdrawal set the Filipino people upon their feet, free and independent to work out their own destiny.

Isthmian Canal.

Republican—The possession of a route for an isthmian canal, so long the dream of American statesmanship, is now an accomplished fact. The great work of connecting the Pacific and Atlantic by a canal is at last begun, and it is due to the Republican party.

Democratic—The Democracy, when intrusted with power, will construct the Panama Canal speedily, honestly and economically, thereby giving to our people what Democrats have always contended for, a great interoceanic canal furnishing shorter and cheaper lines of transportation and broader and less trammelled trade relations with the other peoples of the world.

Merchant Marine.

Republican—We denounce the Ship Subsidy bill recently passed by the United States Senate as an indefensible appropriation of public funds for private purposes, and a wasteful, illogical and useless attempt to overcome by subsidy the obstructions raised by Republican legislation to the growth and development of American commerce on the sea. We favor the up-building of a merchant marine without new or additional burdens upon the people and without bounties from the public treasury.

Democratic—While every other industry has prospered under the fostering aid of Republican legislation, American shipping, engaged in foreign trade, ready in competition with the low cost of construction, low wages and heavy subsidies of foreign governments, has not for many years received from the government of the United States adequate encouragement of any kind. We, therefore, favor legislation which will encourage and building up the American merchant marine, and we cordially approve the legislation of the last Congress which created the Merchant Marine Commission to investigate and report upon this subject.

Capital and Labor.

Republican—Combinations of capital and of labor are the results of the economic movement of the age, but neither must be permitted to infringe upon the rights and interests of the people. Such combinations, when lawfully formed for lawful purposes, are alike entitled to the protection of the laws, but both are subject to the laws, and neither can be permitted to break them.

Democratic—We favor the enactment and administration of laws giving labor its full protection and their just rights. Capital and labor ought not to be enemies. Each is necessary to the other. Each has its rights, but the rights of labor are certainly no less "vested," no less "sacred" and no less "inalienable" than the rights of capital. Constitutional guarantees are violated whenever any citizens is denied the right to labor, acquire and enjoy property or reside where interests or inclination may determine. Any denial thereof by individuals, organizations or government should be summarily rebuked and punished.

Negro Problem.

Republican—We favor such Congressional action as shall determine whether by special discriminations the elective franchise in any State has been unconstitutionally limited, and if such is the case we demand that representation in Congress and in the Electoral College shall be proportionally reduced, as directed by the constitution of the United States.

Democratic—The race question has brought countless woes to this country. To revive the dead and hateful race and sectional animosities in any part of our common country means confusion, distraction of business and the reopening of wounds now happily healed. We therefore deprecate and condemn the bourbonistic, selfish and narrow spirit of the recent Republican Convention at Chicago, which sought to kindle anew the embers of racial and sectional strife, and we appeal from it to the sober common sense and patriotic spirit of the American people.

Pensions.

Republican—We are always mindful of the country's debt to the soldiers and sailors of the United States, and we believe in making ample provision for them and in the liberal administration of the pension laws.

Democratic—(The platform does not mention the subject.)

Executive Usurpation.

Republican—(The platform does not mention this subject.)

Democratic—We favor the nomination and election of a President imbued with the principles of the constitution, who will set his face sternly against executive usurpation of legislative and judicial functions, whether that usurpation be veiled under the guise of executive construction of existing laws, or whether it take refuge in the tyrant's plea of necessity or superior wisdom.

Now, can the Democratic party work the "benevolent assimilation" question to the extent of bringing the Bryan people into the fold?

When the Sphinx of Esopus did speak, he placed himself on record in a courageous and unequivocal manner. There's nothing of the trickster about Judge Parker.

William R. Hearst's little play for the Democratic nomination cost him $1,400,000. This is the greatest sum ever spent in advertising a syndicate of newspapers.

At this late day comes the report that some few years ago former United States Senator James Smith proposed Parker for President. Additions to the list of "I told you so" are now in order.

I am convinced that the country is on the verge of a great catastrophe and calamity.—Senator Daniel.

Considering the fact that the distinguished West Virginian is a Democrat of the most pronounced type, it might not be unfair to assume that he looks for Republican victory at the polls in November.

COMMISSION REFUSED JUSTICE JACOB KRINEY

Failure of Election Officers to File Returns Properly Fatal in His Case.

ACTION TO BE TAKEN

SECRETARY OF STATE POWERLESS TO ISSUE CERTIFICATE.

"Squire Threatens to Get After the Election Board — Liability for Failure to Send Returns to Secretary Dickinson.

Because the members of the election board of the First district, Fourth ward, failed to file the returns at the last election with S. D. Dickinson, Secretary of State, Jacob Kriney, of West Front street, has not received his commission as a Justice of the Peace, to which office he was re-elected, and he proposes to take steps to secure the certificate. After the election, Mr. Kriney could not understand why he did not receive his commission and finally he communicated with Secretary Dickinson.

This morning he received a reply stating that inasmuch as the officers in the First district of the Fourth ward had failed to make proper returns to the State, the record was incomplete and therefore no commission could be given.

When seen by a reporter for this paper Monday morning, Mr. Kriney said: "Yes, I have received a letter giving me the reason why my commission was not sent. The election officers will have to do something very quick or I'll get after them. I won't stand for this sort of thing one minute."

Failure to file the returns with the Secretary of State, makes the election officers liable to a fine of $100 each. A similar commission occurred some time ago, and it was with difficulty that the matter was straightened out.

NEGRO ROBS A WOMAN

MRS. EDWARD FRENCH LOSES PURSE CONTAINING MONEY AND TRINKLETS.

While Mrs. Edward French, of First place, was on her way home shortly before 9 o'clock, Saturday evening, a negro sprang from behind a tree on that thoroughfare and snatched her purse from her hand. Before she could recover from her surprise and fright the fellow was half a block away. The police were hurriedly notified but as Mrs. French did not get a good view of his features and was unable to furnish much of a description, the chances of his being captured are considered very slim. The purse contained $2 and a few trinkets.

It is the opinion of Chief Kiely that the fellow was a stranger in the city and that he immediately left town.

ITALIAN CELEBRATION.

Fireworks at Concert Park on Feast of a Saint.

The fireworks display being planned for in connection with the celebration of the feast of "Our Lady of Mt. Carmel," will not be given on Marshall's Mountain, Concert Park having been leased for the purpose. It will take place July 19.

Our Lady of Mt. Carmel is one of the favorite saints of Italy. Years ago, when there were but few Italians in New York and they had no church, an artist of the race carved this statute of the Blessed Virgin and Her Divine Son, and it has been an object of veneration ever since.

Westfield-Camden Turnpike.

Chancellor Magie signed a rule at Trenton requiring all the bondholders, judgment creditors and stockholders of the Westfield and Camden Turnpike Company to show cause, July 19, why an offer of Camden County to purchase the assets of the company for $22,302 should not be accepted. The freeholders of the county have already authorized the purchase and are only awaiting the sanction of the court to complete the deal. Application to have the sale allowed was made by Heulings Lippincott and Clayton Conrow, receivers for the Turnpike company.

Will Address Farmers.

Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, of the borough, will be the principal speaker at the picnic of farmers of Morris, Hunterdon and Somerset counties to be held at Black River Falls, Pottersville, August 17.

Passed Title to School Lot.

Title to the lot on Somerset street, recently purchased by the borough Board of Education, was passed by Collector Brown, this morning. The balance of $5,000 remaining was then paid over by District Clerk R. M. Fountain.

CLUB CHAMPIONSHIP PLAY AT HILLSIDE

W. L. Glenney and Leighton Calkins Winners in the Semi-Finals.

CONSOLATION HONORS

G. W. FABER WINS DOUBLE EVENT AT PARK CLUB.

Willard Wadsworth Secures First Honors for Golf Committee Cup—The Scores Returned in Competitions.

Aside from the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, on Saturday, the event of most interest was the semi-final play for the club championship. W. L. Glenney beat Walter Peterson, 5 up and 4 to play, and Leighton Calkins beat H. D. Hibbard, 2 up.

For the consolation cup George Cathcart beat H. R. Stockton, 2 up and 1 to play, and Roger F. Murray beat Howard Huntington, 4 up and 3 to play.

This was the result of the play among the survivors of the third eight: E. E. Ironmonger beat H. L. Hall, 4 up and 2 to play, and E. B. Shoemaker beat Evarts Tracy, 2 up and 1 to play.

In the play for the Golf Committee cup, Willard Wadsworth won first honors with a net score of 76, while Robert Abbott and W. L. Glenney divided the remaining points, each making a 77 net.

These scores were returned for the cup:

Willard Wadsworth, 78, 2—76; Robert Abbott, 76, plus 1—77; W. L. Glenney, 77, 0—77; Walter Peterson, 84, 4—80; C. B. Morgan, 89, 9—80; Howard Huntington, 93, 13—80; J. E. Erickson, 89, 8—81; George Cathcart, 93, 11—81; M. J. Dumont, 88, 6—82; G. H. Condict, 109, 27—82; C. E. Halsted, 87, 4—83; A. E. Barclay, 104, 20—84; J. H. Carman, 108, 15—88; H. Robert, 115, 20—95.

The only event at the Park Golf Club on Saturday was the weekly competition for the President's and club cups. G. W. Faber won first honors for the President's cup; T. U. Dudley finished second, while Charles B. Morse and Morgan T. Townsend divided the one remaining point. For the club cup, medals, G. W. Faber won the first three points, Morgan Townsend two points and T. U. Dudley the one point.

These scores were returned for the two cups:

G. W. Faber, 81, 0—81; T. U. Dudley, 101, 17—84; Charles B. Morse, 102, 17—85; M. T. Townsend, 85, 0—85; L. R. Thurlow, 109, 17—92; J. L. Watson, 123, 30—93; Nelson A. Miller, 110, 17—36; W. C. McNaughton, 134, 35—99; C. A. Reed, 107, 8—103; Rev. C. L. Goodrich, 116, 14—102; Samuel Townsend, 123, 14—108.

This is the standing for the President's cup:

George T. Rogers	6
Arthur Peck	5½
Henry C. Wells	5
Dr. H. K. Carroll	4
Herbert S. Rogers	4
Morgan T. Townsend	3½
Raymond S. Carroll	3
E. Maxwell Honeyman	3
Nelson A. Miller	3
Gus W. Faber	3
T. U. Dudley, Jr.	3
Charles A. Reed	3
J. H. Howell	1½
Charles B. Morse	1½
J. O. McKelvey	1½
C. O. Faber	1
T. W. Morris	1
Charles L. Nichols	1
Samuel Townsend	1
Frank Rogers	½

This is the standing for the Park Golf Club cup:

Morgan T. Townsend	11
Arthur Peck	8½
Charles A. Reed	5
J. O. McKelvey	4
Charles B. Morse	3
T. W. Morris	3
Raymond S. Carroll	3
Gus W. Faber	3
C. O. Faber	3½
Herbert S. Rogers	3
J. H. Howell	3
H. K. Carroll	2
Samuel Townsend	1½
Charles L. Goodrich	1
George T. Rogers	½

Somerville Wants Conference.

The Somerville Methodist Episcopal church has extended a unanimous invitation to the Newark Conference to meet in Somerville next spring. The pastor, Rev. H. N. Ornato, had laid the matter before Presiding Elder Daniel Halleron, of the Elizabeth District. He approved the plan.

Relative of Judge Parker.

Captain James Parker, of Forth Amboy, formerly of this city, is a relative of Judge Alton Brooks Parker and has wired his congratulations to the Democratic candidate.

AMUSEMENTS.

Fourth of July at Dreamland, Coney Island, was marked by the opening to the public, of the submarine Boat "Mermaid." Vice president of Dreamland, Eddard G. Boyce, the inventor, has at last completed the construction of the boat which has taken six months. The machinists and ship carpenters worked night and day to finish it. The "Mermaid" is an exact model of the boat of the same name built by the Holland Boat Company for the United States Navy and cost $60,000. Below decks everything is finished in burnished copper and as the boat speeds beneath the waves, visitors can observe, through the port-holes, the awful denizens of the deep. This week Dreamland will have a peculiar feature in the exhibition of catalepsy given by M. Papess, professor of therapeutics and auto-suggestion. Papess, in full view of the public will mummify himself in four hundred yards of flannel; will throw himself into a trance; will be placed in a glass coffin, submerged in water, where he will remain 175 hours without eating or drinking. The feat which astonished physicians in the principal cities of Europe, is most sensational and has few parallels.

The Johnstown Flood at Coney Island—Have you seen the most popular, most successful and greatest scenic production the world ever knew? If not, why not? The show is really a revelation of electrical effects of modern times. You have a delightful visit in store for you. At the Pan American over one million saw it, and at Coney Island over two million people have already witnessed this grand spectacle, and all were unanimous in pronouncing it to be a gigantic success. The now famed flood terrified many thousands of people all over the world, and cast a gloom wherever English speaking people were found. As the slow measured tones of the lecturer rise and fall, the calm city is to be seen; then the horrible roar of the dam, his voice crescendo, and in an outburst the calamity has befallen. One listens fascinated by the recital of the horrible events ensuing, when man and beast met death alike. The music pulsates through the brain, enthusiasm sways the individual, and alas! when the city of Johnstown is once more to be seen, it is as nothing—the streets are deserted; the houses empty, and an air of solitude prevails, for the cruel waters have swallowed the peaceful people of a peaceful town.

F. Hopkinson Smith, author of Col. Carter of Cartersville, visited Beautiful Venice in Madison Square Garden the other evening and between the acts talked with Conductor Dunn in the green room. The creator of Col Carter and Caleb West in the authority on Venetian art in this country and in speaking with Mr. Dunn, Mr. Smith said: "As I got in one of your gondolas while it drifted lazily down towards the home of Desdemona, with St. Mark's Cathedral and the Campanile in the distance, I was back in Venice by the Adriatic for it all seemed so real. In the most minute detail you have preserved the very atmosphere of Venice, Mr. Dunn, and such an achievement were it done in Paris, would simply pack the largest building there every night for a year." That Venice has "caught on" with the public is shown by the great crowds that fill the Garden each evening. The eighth big week is on and not a sign yet of the ebb tide of favor.

"Paris by Night," the new and elaborate musical production of Messrs. Weber & Rush, had its initial performance in New York atop the famous Madison Square Garden Saturday night, July 2, and scored one of the most emphatic successes in the records of metropolitan amusements. The roof was crowded with a critical audience which included all the well known first-nighters of the metropolis, and during the evening such prominent players as Lew M. Fields, Kolima Bennett, Vye Templeton, William Collier, Alice Fisher, Marie Cahill, Nella Bergen, DeWolf Hopper, Isadore Rush, Cerlane, Eddie Foy, Peter F. Dailey, Raymond Hitchcock, Joseph Miron and scores of others dropped in to witness the new spectacle. Although the performance lasted until midnight, not a handful of the two thousand persons comprising the audience, left until the entertainment was concluded—the best test, it is generally admitted, as to the merits of a production.

At Bostock's, Coney Island, is now to be seen the famous show which for seven months packed the Paris Hippodrome and broke all records for wild animal exhibits. Mme. Morelli, who is soon to wed a member of the French nobility, and her famous performing leopards, have been furnishing sensations all the week. Prince, the largest animal in the group, has repeatedly attempted to attack his mistress and on Sunday evening rent her dress in an effort to pull her to the floor of the arena. This is the same animal which nearly killed her at Sea Beach Palace last season and which twice attacked her in Paris and caused her to spend weeks at the hospital.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The Standard Railroad of America.

EQUIPPED THROUGHOUT BY THE ELECTRIC AUTOMATIC BLOCK SIGNAL SYSTEM.

On and After June 27, 1904.

Trains will leave Rinehuff as follows:

For Somerville—8.06, 7.15, 8.21, 9.38, 11.20 a. m., 12.50, 2.40, 4.10, 5.30, 6.40, 7.50, 9.30, 11.17 p. m. Sundays—8.45 a. m., 5.06, 6.40 p. m.

For Bound Brook—8.06, 7.15, 8.21, 9.38 a. m., 12.50, 2.40, 4.10, 5.30, 6.40, 7.50, 9.30, 11.17 p. m. Sundays—8.45 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Long Branch and Ocean Grove, etc.—8.06, 7.15, 8.21, 9.38 a. m., 12.50, 2.40, 4.10, 5.30, 6.40, 7.50, 9.30, 11.17 p. m. Sundays—8.45 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Asbury Park and Ocean Grove, etc.—8.06, 7.15, 8.21, 9.38 a. m., 12.50, 2.40, 4.10, 5.30, 6.40, 7.50, 9.30, 11.17 p. m. Sundays—8.45 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Toms River and Barnegat—9.38 a. m., 5.30 p. m. Sundays—8.45 a. m.

For Bethlehem, Allentown and Mauch Chunk—8.21, 9.38 a. m., 2.40, 5.30 p. m. Sundays—8.45 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Easton, Belvidere, Delaware Branch—8.21, 9.38 a. m., 2.40, 5.30 p. m. Sundays—8.45 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Flemington—7.15, 11.05 a. m., 5.30 p. m. Sundays—8.45 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Lambertville and New Hope—7.15, 11.05 a. m., 5.30 p. m. Sundays—8.45 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Trenton—7.15, 7.45, 8.21, 9.38, 10.44, 11.05 a. m., 12.50, 2.40, 4.10, 5.30, 6.40, 7.50, 9.30, 11.17 p. m. Sundays—8.45, 10.05 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Princeton—7.15, 7.45, 8.21, 9.38, 10.44, 11.05 a. m., 12.50, 2.40, 4.10, 5.30, 6.40, 7.50, 9.30, 11.17 p. m. Sundays—8.45, 10.05 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Kingston—7.15, 7.45, 8.21, 9.38, 10.44, 11.05 a. m., 12.50, 2.40, 4.10, 5.30, 6.40, 7.50, 9.30, 11.17 p. m. Sundays—8.45, 10.05 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Princeton Junction—7.15, 7.45, 8.21, 9.38, 10.44, 11.05 a. m., 12.50, 2.40, 4.10, 5.30, 6.40, 7.50, 9.30, 11.17 p. m. Sundays—8.45, 10.05 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Hightstown—7.15, 7.45, 8.21, 9.38, 10.44, 11.05 a. m., 12.50, 2.40, 4.10, 5.30, 6.40, 7.50, 9.30, 11.17 p. m. Sundays—8.45, 10.05 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Jamesburg—7.15, 7.45, 8.21, 9.38, 10.44, 11.05 a. m., 12.50, 2.40, 4.10, 5.30, 6.40, 7.50, 9.30, 11.17 p. m. Sundays—8.45, 10.05 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Freehold—7.15, 7.45, 8.21, 9.38, 10.44, 11.05 a. m., 12.50, 2.40, 4.10, 5.30, 6.40, 7.50, 9.30, 11.17 p. m. Sundays—8.45, 10.05 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Matawan—7.15, 7.45, 8.21, 9.38, 10.44, 11.05 a. m., 12.50, 2.40, 4.10, 5.30, 6.40, 7.50, 9.30, 11.17 p. m. Sundays—8.45, 10.05 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Red Bank—7.15, 7.45, 8.21, 9.38, 10.44, 11.05 a. m., 12.50, 2.40, 4.10, 5.30, 6.40, 7.50, 9.30, 11.17 p. m. Sundays—8.45, 10.05 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Long Branch—7.15, 7.45, 8.21, 9.38, 10.44, 11.05 a. m., 12.50, 2.40, 4.10, 5.30, 6.40, 7.50, 9.30, 11.17 p. m. Sundays—8.45, 10.05 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Asbury Park—7.15, 7.45, 8.21, 9.38, 10.44, 11.05 a. m., 12.50, 2.40, 4.10, 5.30, 6.40, 7.50, 9.30, 11.17 p. m. Sundays—8.45, 10.05 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Ocean Grove—7.15, 7.45, 8.21, 9.38, 10.44, 11.05 a. m., 12.50, 2.40, 4.10, 5.30, 6.40, 7.50, 9.30, 11.17 p. m. Sundays—8.45, 10.05 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Toms River—7.15, 7.45, 8.21, 9.38, 10.44, 11.05 a. m., 12.50, 2.40, 4.10, 5.30, 6.40, 7.50, 9.30, 11.17 p. m. Sundays—8.45, 10.05 a. m., 5.06 p. m.

For Barnegat—7.15, 7.45, 8.21, 9.38, 10.44, 11.05 a. m., 12.50, 2.40, 4.10, 5.30, 6.40, 7.50, 9.30, 11.17 p. m. Sundays—8.45, 10.05 a. m., 5.06 p

COLLECTOR SMITH TO ENFORCE PAYMENTS

Instructed by Corporation Counsel Marsh to Proceed Against 1903 Delinquents.

CALLED FOR BY LAW

PROPERTIES WILL BE SOLD AFTER BEING ADVERTISED.

Legislative Amendment to Last Year's Tax Act Makes Action Compulsory—Lists Ready August 1.

Acting on instructions furnished him by Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh prior to his departure for Europe, Tax Collector Frank H. Smith has taken steps to enforce the payment of overdue taxes for 1903. He is now preparing a list of the delinquents and it will be advertised once a week for four weeks, after which property on which the taxes have not been paid will be sold in a similar manner as was property which fell under the ban of the Martin Act.

In his notification, Mr. Marsh informed Collector Smith that the legislative amendment to last year's act made it apply to all taxing districts. Formerly it did not apply to cities. This act states: "When taxes on real property are unpaid on July 1, the collector MUST enforce the lien by advertising and selling the lands." Mr. Marsh called attention to the fact that the clause says "must" and that it is not a case of discrimination.

Heretofore property put up for sale for non-payment of taxes was disposed of for a term of years, that is the purchaser held it for a certain length of time securing the revenue the while and it then reverted to the original owner. By the new act the property will be sold outright, the cost of the sale being about $4. Under the Martin Act it is $3. If everything is paid prior to the advertising the expense will be saved.

The list which Collector Smith is preparing will be completed about August 1 and the provisions of the act will then be carried out. While it must be borne in mind that this only applies to 1903 taxes and nothing prior to that time, the number of delinquents is quite large and the action will result in a large revenue to the city which would otherwise remain outstanding for perhaps several years.

SMALL BOY'S ADVENTURE.

Little Andy Nolan Runs Away and Is Located at Somerville.

With the inherent boyish desire for adventure, fourteen-year-old Andrew Nolan, of Arlington avenue, took a solitary excursion from this city on Sunday. On that lad's failure to return to his home last night, his father became alarmed and reported his departure to the police department.

Monday night, it was learned that he had left town by way of a passing east bound freight and Chief Kiely's efforts to trace him by wiring to the various neighboring stations resulted in his being found at Somerville. He returned to this city early next morning.

Camp Cahoone News.

Herbert Brokaw, one of the leaders at Camp Cahoone, the Y. M. C. A. boys' camp at Lake Hopatcong, returned to town Monday for a few days. He reports things going finely at the camp and thinks that there hasn't been all the rain at Lake Hopatcong that there has in Plainfield. The boys are getting into the swing of the camp life and are beginning to tan up in true summer style. All are well and having a good time. Brokaw will return to the camp again the last part of the week.

Inspecting Fire Escapes.

Chief T. O. Doane has commenced a tour of the city inspecting fire escapes on buildings. It has come to his notice that tenants are in the habit of using them for conservatories and for storage purposes, which is strictly against the law. Where violations are found the offenders are warned to remove all obstructions under penalty of confiscation and arrest.

Mr. DeMott's Purchase.

Henry DeMott, the undertaker, has purchased of the Union Building and Loan Association, the property on the south side of New street, adjoining the railroad. He intends raising up the present building and putting a store under the dwelling, which he will use as a place of business for himself.

Borough School Plans Ready.

Plans for the proposed alterations and additions to the Somerset street school have been completed by Architect Marsh and may now be seen at his office or at Collector Brown's. Sealed proposals for the work will be received from now until July 25, when the Board of Education will award the contract

THE FIREMEN'S GAME TODAY

PLAINFIELD MEN TO MEET BROOKLYN LADDIES ON DIAMOND.

The baseball team from the local fire department, which is to meet that of the Brooklyn department on Alia field today, has been doing some faithful practising in preparation for the game, and the line up was announced today. Keffer has been signed to do the twirling and his assistant behind the bat will be Will Jenner. Daly will be at the initial bag, Will Townley at second, and McCabe at third. Young has done good work at short in practice and will probably go in at that position. LaRue and Kesselring will be at centre and left field, but the other position is open yet.

The Brooklyn team holds the championship in the municipal departments, having defeated teams from the police and fire departments of Brooklyn. The local team is anxious to prove their stumbling block and a good game may be expected.

At the conclusion of the contest, the visitors will be treated to a banquet at Henry Windham's and a social evening will follow at headquarters.

S. AND L. CHANGES.

Union Association Conforms to the State Laws.

Amendments to the bylaws and constitution conforming the State laws, were adopted at a meeting of the Union Building and Loan Association, held Monday at the offices of Liefke & Laing on Park avenue. These amendments provide for a more uniform rate of interest, that is those who withdraw their money prior to five years will receive a proportionate rate, while those who allow their money to remain five years will receive the usual six per cent.

Another amendment provides for a cheaper rate for borrowers, the rate being reduced 1½ per cent. The amendments were introduced, and laid on the table for one month, or until the next meeting, for final adoption.

FORMER PLAINFIELDER DEAD.

Samuel R. Proud Succumbs to Bright's Disease.

Those who knew Samuel R. Proud during the period of his residence in this city will learn with regret of his death on Saturday at his home in Newark. Death came after a long illness from Bright's disease. When a resident of this city, Mr. Proud had his residence on Somerset street, but the family removed to Newark about three years ago.

At Newark, Mr. Proud was employed as conductor by the Public Service Corporation of that city and there too he acquired the admiration of a large number of friends. The funeral was held from his Newark residence at 2:30 yesterday afternoon.

Dougherty Rounds Up Two More.

Chief of Police Dougherty is continuing his good work in the capturing of thieves. In addition to the two arrested at Hampton Junction on Saturday, two more were captured Monday. They are believed to belong to the same gang. One of those caught yesterday, a man named McCarty, was shot in the leg while trying to get away. The four men are now in the jail at Flemington. George Blume, who was arrested on Saturday, has since turned State's evidence, although he is believed to be the leader of the gang.

Ocean Grove Speakeasies.

Rev. E. A. Boom, of Trenton, made a remarkable statement in the New Brunswick preachers' meeting at Ocean Grove Monday to the effect that 900 government licenses to sell liquor were taken out annually in Ocean Grove and 240 in Asbury Park. The statement was contradicted, and a heated argument ensued, the claim being made that the government was not responsible for the conditions if such existed. The incident is causing much comment.

Desperate Plans Foiled.

One of the most daring plans of plunder are arranged when the house is vacated. No harm can result if your valuables are safely stored. The City National Bank vaults are just the place to send all articles for safety, being spacious and secure. A private box is a convenience to many.

Clock Golf at Hillside.

There will be clock golf play for women at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, for a prize cup, offered by Mrs. Freeman, a non-resident member.

Rev. Mr. Appleton a Ph. D..

Rev. Floyd Appleton, of Christ church, Brooklyn, formerly curate of Grace church, has received the degree of doctor of philosophy from Columbia University.

Plainfielders as Guests.

Several Plainfielders will attend a beefsteak dinner to be given on Sunday at Bartell's Grove, between Picton and Rahway, by Nat Astfalk.

PLAINFIELD TEAM IS TO BE REORGANIZED

Mr. Johnston's Announcement Shows a General Shakeup in the Alia Aggregation.

FOUR NEW PLAYERS

MATERIAL IS DRAWN FROM THE MURRAY HILLS.

Smith to be Captain—Cusick, Courtney and Dietrich to Wear Alia Uniforms—The Games With Westfield.

A re-organization of the Plainfield team has been effected by Manager Johnston and the newly-constructed aggregation will play its first contest on Saturday. In the shake-up four of the best Murray Hill players will be seen wearing an Alia uniform. They are Smith, first base and captain; Cusick, second base; Courtney, third base and Dietrich, right field. They take the places of Gauven, Patience and Hickman. Dietrich will be the permanent right fielder.

Smith is a good coach and captain, being engaged as such by college teams. His work here with the Murray Hills was of the best. As for the other new men, they are well-known as fast fielders and heavy hitters. It is quite likely that Gauven may be retained as a utility man. —

This will be the new lineup: Farmer, c; Davis, p; Smith, 1b; Cusick, 2b; Walton, ss; Courtney, 3b; Oregan, lf; McGoey, cf; Dietrich, rf.

There will be another pitcher to assist in the Alia-Westfield series of contests. The first contest with Westfield will be on Crescent Oval on Saturday, July 23 and the second one at Westfield on Saturday, July 30. Other probable dates are Saturday, August 13, September 5 and 24 here; August 27, September 10 and October 1 at Westfield.

In taking Gauven off first base, Manager Johnston has no fault to find with him, except that he wants to replace him with a stronger man and one able to captain and coach the team.

COLES MUST LOSE FINGER

ACCIDENT TO SCOTCH PLAINS MAN NOT SO SERIOUS AS ANTICIPATED.

Physicians at Muhlenberg Hospital Monday found the injuries of Victor Coles, of Scotch Plains, shot in the hand by the accidental discharge of a gun, to be less serious than at first thought. The member was badly torn but it can be saved with only the loss of one finger. This was amputated and unless complications ensue the young man will be all right in a few days.

The accident was caused by Coles' careless handling of a gun which he had taken into a field with him to scare off crows. He held one hand over the muzzle and with the other began fingering the trigger until it discharged the load.

SEARCH LIGHT NUISANCE.

Wheelmen and Drivers Are Annoyed by Trolley Lights.

Wheelmen and drivers who have occasion to use the streets on which the through line cars are operated, at night, complain of the search lights used on the cars. They send a dazzling glare along the road for a great distance and those who are in front are partially blinded. In several known instances it has all resulted in serious collisions and those affected believe the matter should be remedied. In many cities the railway officials have been instructed not to use this form of headlight.

To Exchange Pulpits.

Rev. Dr. L. E Livermore, of the New Market Seventh-Day Baptist church, will exchange pulpits with Rev. George E. Shaw, of the local Seventh-Day Baptist church, on Saturday. Dr. Livermore will sever his pastoral relations with his present charge September 1, when he and his family will go to Lebanon, Conn., to live.

Cruising on Raritan.

Hudson Burr, of West Fifth street, and Weston Gravets, of Third place, left Monday for several days' cruising on the Raritan river. The young men will be on the water a great part of the time, making the trip in a small sailing canoes, their joint property.

Funeral of James Brennan.

Funeral services were held over the remains of the late James Brennan, son of Mrs. James Brennan, of Rose street, Tuesday a. m. High mass was conducted by Father Egan at St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock and after this the body was interred in St. Mary's cemetery.

DEMOCRATS ELATED OVER PARTY'S WORK

Favorable Expressions From Prominent Members in Plainfield.

ALL LIKE MR. PARKER

SOME BELIEVE THAT HE WILL CARRY NEW JERSEY.

Opinions of Swackhamer, Timpson, Carney, Martine, Marshall, Linbarger and Other Prominent Local Democrats.

Plainfield Democrats appear to be much pleased over the nomination of Judge Alton Brooks Parker according to expressions obtained at random by a reporter for this paper. Generally speaking, Grover Cleveland seems to be the favorite, but notwithstanding that fact members of the party are elated over Parker's success.

Following are some of the opinions:

James E. Martine—The platform is all right. The silver question is not an issue as the quantitative theory of money has settled it. I say Parker will be elected without a doubt.

David J. Carney—It's all right. Parker is a good man and the platform is O. K.

Andrew J. Nolan—Parker will carry New Jersey and will sweep the country. There's nothing wrong with the platform.

Gen. Wm. H. Stirling—The ticket is strong and is very satisfactory with gold as the party's position on the money question.

Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer—It seems to me that the platform is a very strong document and is certainly statesmanlike. Mr. Parker is an honest and fearless man and I think his position he took was very commendable. I think he will carry New Jersey.

Walter Linbarger—Parker will carry New Jersey by a fair majority. I think he will be elected. Parker is stronger than Cleveland.

H. W. Marshall—I think Parker a very strong candidate. People seem to think he will carry New Jersey. I don't see any reason why he should not be elected. His declaration on the money question was very timely. Of course I preferred Cleveland, but am happy that Parker is the candidate.

Lewis G. Timpson—Cleveland is the strongest man with the Democrats in this section of the country. Too bad he wasn't nominated. I don't know whether Parker will be elected but he is a good man.

Assemblyman Charles L. Moffett—I think the convention made a mistake in not inserting the gold plank, but the party is on sound ground now that it has gotten back to its old position. Parker is the best sort of a man and should be elected.

Samuel Townsend—I think Parker is all right and I admire the way in which he declared himself regarding the money question. That he had the courage to state his opinions on this question will win many votes for him. I voted for McKinley twice because I could not support Bryan and I am very glad to be able to return to a reunited Democratic party.

Michael Flynn—There is no question in my mind but what Parker will be elected. He made thousands of votes by his declaration on the money question. I do not think that there are enough Republicans or Democratic votes to elect Roosevelt.

MILITIA KICKS AT PAY

SOLDIER BOYS AT SEA GIRT GETTING FORTY-THREE CENTS A DAY.

Camp Franklin Murphy, Sea Girt, July 13—There were indications of trouble in camp today when the men were called to sign the pay roll for the week and found it called for pay only at the rate of 43 cents a day instead of $1.50 per day, the rate at former camps. It was explained to the men that the change was caused by the Dick law, which has brought the State military under United States army regulations, and the smaller pay is the government rate. This amount will be paid by the National government under the Dick law.

Nearly all the men refused to sign until it was given out on the authority of the camp commandants that the State would undoubtedly make up the difference. On the strength of this promise the matter was adjusted and the signatures were secured.

Westphal & Son Sell Out.

F. Westphal & Son, the latter being Freeholder Wm. A. Westphal, have sold their grocery business to a New York firm. Their place has been located on Liberty street for the past sixteen years and is one of the best known stands in the West End.

IN DANGEROUS STATE FROM A SNAKE'S BITE

Mrs. James Hurley's Death Prevented by Timely Act of Her Husband.

ARM BADLY SWOLLEN

COPPERHEAD PLANTS ITS FANGS IN WOMAN'S FINGER.

Mr. Hurley Binds Up Wife's Arm in a Tourniquet—Dr. A. H. Dundon Administers Powerful Antidotes.

Prompt action on the part of James Hurley, of Belmont avenue, Monday morning, is probably all that saved the right arm if not the life of his wife. Bitten by a copperhead snake she was in a fair way to succumb to the deadly poison injected in her system when her husband adopted measures to prevent its spread and then hurried her in a wagon to the office of Dr. Dundon. The physician found her in a precarious state but by using the strongest antidotes placed her out of danger without amputating the affected member. Today it is still in bad shape but it is thought all danger has passed.

Mrs. Hurley had occasion to use a nail while doing some work about her home and went to the woodshed to get one. They are kept in a box in a corner and without looking into it she put her hand down to take one out. As she did she felt a stinging pain in the index finger and hastily withdrew it believing she had struck the sharp point of a wire nail. She was about to reach back a second time when the finger began to turn black and commence swelling. At the same time she experienced the most excruciating pain and becoming alarmed called Mr. Hurley. He at once declared trouble to be a snake bite and hastily placing a tourniquet about her arm, which had also began to swell, ran to the barn to harness his horse. He placed the sufferer in the carriage and drove at top speed to the physician's office. By that time the arm was twice its normal size and black its entire length, but the greater part was soon reduced.

On returning home Mr. Hurley immediately proceeded to the woodshed and looking in the nailbox discovered a full grown copperhead coiled up in a peaceful sleep. The reptile was despatched and was found to be of the variety which infests the Watchung range, where it evidently came from as the Hurley home is at the foot of the mountain. Persons bitten by a snake of this kind have slight chance of surviving and the fact that Mrs. Hurley did is due to the celerity with which she was given medical attention.

GOLF.

This is the standing to date for the Golf Committee Cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club:

W. Wadsworth	8½
C. B. Morgan	8
R. Abbott	5½
G. F. Earl	5
L. Talkins	4½
E. B. Schoonmaker	4
S. D. Lounsbury	3½
D. H. Rowland	3
J. E. Erickson	3
C. M. Halsted	3
H. F. Fox	3
Geo. Cabbeart	2½
J. A. Tompkins	2 1-2
R. S. Rowland	2
W. L. Glenney	1 5-6
C. A. Stover	1½
H. Huntington	1
H. L. Hall	1
E. K. Iszenger	1
C. VanBeekorom	½
E. A. Cruikshank	½
H. D. Hibbard	½
G. M. Furman	1-3

In Justice Hand's Court.

In Justice Hand's court yesterday a settlement was made in full in the landlord and tenant case of Daniel F. Dugan against John D. McAlear, and also in the contract case of Griffin against Burr. Judgment was taken in the case of A. M. Griffin against August H. Laggren on contract, and in the contract case of A. M. Griffin against Walter F. Pratt.

Gives Handsome Bible.

Samuel Dreier, of West Front street, first trustee of the Hebrew synagogue on New street, has presented an expensive Hebrew Bible to the church for use in the services. The presentation was made yesterday.

—E. P. Turner, who, for the past five years has been connected with P. Ballentine & Sons and local manager of the Eastern Bottling Works, has left the firm in order to enter another line of business.

Mrs. Edward Keegan and children, of Westfield, spent Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Searing, of Park avenue.

FRACTURED SKULL BY FALL

JOHN DILTS, A LINEMAN SERIOUSLY INJURED, NOW IN CRITICAL CONDITON.

John Dilts, aged thirty-four years, a lineman employed by the Public Service Corporation, fell off a repair car in front of Dr. J. B. Probasco's residence on East Front street, Tuesday morning, sustaining a fractured skull and a serious scalp wound. He was removed to the hospital, where he lies in a critical condition.

Dilts was doing some repair work on the line and it was while arranging a block and tackle he was thrown off the car, landing in the street on his head. At first he was removed to Dr. Probasco's office, where Dr. Norman H. Probasco gave temporary treatment and arranged for his removal to the hospital in the police patrol by Patrolman McCarty. Dilts is a single man and lives at Westfield Junction. His chances for recovery are slight.

AMONG MEN IN THE SHOPS

SEEN AND HEARD IN PLAINFIELD'S INDUSTRIAL PLANTS.

Thomas Hammil has resigned his position at the Pond Machine Tool Company's plant.

Daniel Regan has resigned his position at the Pond Machine Tool Company's plant.

Joseph Bird, of South Second street, is in New York on business for the Potter Press Company.

Tony Gurella has taken a position in the erecting department at the Pond Machine Tool Company's plant.

Robert Seden, of the Manganese Steel Safe Company's plant, is in New York on business for the firm.

Harry Gardner and John Noertb, of the Manganese Steel Safe Company, is in New York on business for the firm.

Charles Ryder, of the Cadmus Mills, of South Second street, will spend his two weeks' vacation at Atlantic City.

Gus Thomas has resigned his position at the machine shop at the Pond plant to take a position with a local plumber.

Joseph Tobin, of South Second street, has taken a position in the core room at the Pond Machine Tool Company's plant.

The "Jolly Six," composed of machinists in the West End, will conduct an excursion to Midland Beach the latter part of this week.

Alexander Fitzpatrick, formerly of Werner's clothing store, has taken a position in the foundry of the Pond Machine Tool Company's shop.

Harry Kean, of the Manganese Steel Safe Company's works, is working on a large vault in the Harvey Fisk banking house in New York.

Delegates representing 78,000 miners in the anthracite district had a busy session at the first day of the convention at Pittston, Pa., yesterday.

John Fritts, of the Pond Machine Tool Company's plant, has taken a position in a grocery store on West Third street. The position will be for Saturdays only.

William Edmundson has resigned his position at the machine shop of the Fedrick-Ayer Company's plant to take one in the core room of the Pond Machine Tool Company's works.

George Linser, of West Second street, has resigned his position at the foundry of the Pond Machine Tool Company's plant to take one at his trade with Charles Dutcher, a contracting steamfitter.

The Standard Surgical Instrument Company's plant on East Fourth street is being thoroughly lined with steam pipes. A well has also been drilled to pump water into the engine, which will do away with the city water.

Failing to get their new contracts signed by their employers, about 150 members of the International Association of Steamfitters, Local No. 40, at Newark, went on strike yesterday. The old agreement expired July 1, and the new one calls for four working hours less a week, and complete recognition of the union, to neither one of which will the bosses agree.

Miss Mabel VanDeventer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus VanDeventer, of Washington avenue, is visiting friends at East Hampton, L. I.

DIED.

RANDOLPH—Suddenly, at Plainfield, N. J., July 2, 1904, Jennie A., wife of Verdine C. Randolph, aged 37 years.

MEHLENBECK—At Somerville, N. J., Friday morning, July 8, 1904, Charles Mehlenbeck.

BRENNAN—In this city, July 10, 1904, James Arthur, son of James and Margaret Brennan, age 21 years, 10 months and 10 days.

BODINE—In North Plainfield, N. J., Saturday, July 9, John Bodine, in the 73d year of his age.

Sanitary Plumbing

Brick and Portable Furnace Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing, Etc., Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Members Association of New York City, I employ none but first class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business, at all times and in cases.

D. W. LITTELL,

No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Handbook on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

NEW IN EVERY DETAIL!

My new barber shop at

143 NORTH AVE.

is now open ready for business. All the latest appointments in the tonsorial line.

EDWIN B. MAYNARD.

CARNEY BROS.,

MADISON AVENUE,

Between Front and Second streets.

Tinners, Plumbers Gas Fitters,

Grates and bricks for all kinds of stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your tinware mending to us. The best tinners, the best plumbers, and the best gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction. Keys of all kinds are made here. Tinware made to order. Ranges, brick and portable furnaces. Sanitary plumbing.

DIME

Savings Institution,

Of Plainfield, N. J.,

Is now receiving deposits with interest, allowed on all sums from $5 to $3,000.

J. Frank Hubbard, President.
Wm. F. Arnold, Secretary.
Jeremiah Manning, Vice-Pres
J. C. Pope, Sec'y and Treas.

Money deposited on or before January tenth will draw interest from the first.

Guaranteed Salary $900 YEARLY.

Men and women of good address to represent us, some to travel, others operating agents. others for local work looking after our interests. $900 salary guaranteed per year, extra commissions and expenses, paid each week, and additional bonus. Steady employment, old established house. Grand opportunity for man or woman to secure pleasant, permanent position. Liberal inducements. Write for terms. Mention this paper. Write at once,

STAFFORD PRESS,
23 Church St., New Haven, Conn

W. R. CODINGTON,

Counsellor-at-Law

Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-chancery; Notary Public. Offices Corner of Park avenue and Second street.

ALBERT HEDDEN

Livery & Boarding Stables

FOURTH ST.,

between Watchung and Park avenues, Plainfield Livery. Horses boarded by week or month. Telephone call No. 114.

Wm. A. Woodruff

Fire and Life

INSURANCE AGENT,

OFFICE,

corner Front St. and Park Avenue, Plainfield, N. J.

THE ALIS PLAYERS MAKE A FINE RECORD

Out of Thirteen Contests the Team Has Won Six, and One Was a Tie.

MANY CLOSE SCORES

FARNER LEADS AS THE BEST ALL-AROUND PLAYER.

He Makes But One Error—Corrigan's Fine Work in the Field—Individual Averages and Scores.

The baseball fans will be interested in the individual batting and fielding averages and record of games of the Alis team to July 4. It will be seen that the record is an excellent one, despite the fact that some of the contests have been lost. In this case the scores have been close, the victorious team winning by a run or two. In all the team has played thirteen games, winning six, losing six, and one contest a tie. Now that the "hoodoo" thirteen is passed a string of victories may be looked for.

This is the complete record:

BATTING AVERAGES.

GAMES.	AB.	R.	1B	SB	SH	PC
Farmer.....13	44	23	20	9	2	.500
Quinby.....5	19	5	7	4	0	.368
Mehler.....3	13	3	7	4	0	.538
Hockman.....3	10	1	3	1	1	.300
Lauder.....7	27	5	7	4	0	.259
Creegan.....13	46	13	12	6	0	.261
Davis.....10	36	7	9	8	1	.250
Gauvin.....7	26	1	6	1	0	.230
Badgley.....4	9	1	2	1	0	.222
Hollywood.....5	19	3	3	3	0	.160
Bradley.....8	11	2	2	0	1	.182
Dawson.....5	11	4	3	4	0	.182
Griffon.....4	12	2	2	2	0	.154
Walton.....6	26	3	3	0	2	.115
Patience.....3	13	2	1	0	0	.084

FIELDING AVERAGES.

GAMES.	P. O.	A.	E.	P. C.
Griffin.....5	1	0	0	1,000
Patience.....3	4	3	0	1,000
Farmer.....13	90	16	1	.991
Gauvin.....7	11	4	2	.957
Creegan.....13	102	7	7	.941
Badgley.....4	5	0	1	.833
Quimby.....5	15	9	2	.923
Walton.....6	11	19	3	.909
Davis.....10	2	20	5	.817
McGeogy.....13	27	1	4	.875
Mehler.....5	40	6	0	1.000
Hockman.....3	2	9	1	.917
Dawson.....5	3	0	1	.750
Bradley.....3	2	8	4	.714
Lauder.....7	11	12	1	.957
Roberts.....7	10	11	2	.905
Hollywood.....4	0	9	1	.857

May 7.	R	H	M	Pitchers
Acolians.....	0	5	4	Maurey
Alis.....	8	9	2	Davis
May 14.
Xavier.....	3	7	6	Stolbock
Alis.....	17	17	8	Davis
May 21.
Everett College...	3	6	6	Clinton
Alis.....	8	8	2	Davis
May 28.
Westfield.....	7	9	0	Thatcher
Alis.....	5	9	6	Davis
May 30, a. m.
Rahway.....	4	6	2	Martens
Alis.....	8	11	4	Griffen
May 30, p. m., 5 in.
Seventh Kegt.....	3	5	3	Edwards
Alis.....	2	2	5	Davis
June 4.
Acolian.....	5	4	3	Landis
Alis.....	11	11	11	Davis
June 11. Forfeited to Westfield.
Westfield.....	1	5	3	McLane
Alis.....	2	6	1	Davis
June 18.
Alis.....	5	10	1	Badgley Davis
Hoboken.....	9	13	3	McKenna
June 25. 10 Inning
Murray Hills.....	10	13	1	Conroy
Alis.....	8	13	4	Davis
July 2. 13 Inning
Acolians.....	0	5	3	Doescher
Alis.....	1	5	4	Badgley
July 4. a. m. 7 in.
Murray Hills.....	9	7	3	Tyler
Alis.....	7	10	5	Badgley
July 4. p. m. 10 in.
Hoboken.....	6	13	7	Lindeman
Alis.....	5	5	2	Davis

CITY PROTECTED FROM SUIT

SEPTIC TANK PATENT EXPIRES BEFORE GUARANTEE FROM IMMUNITY ENDS.

In effecting the compromise with the Cameron Septic Tank Company of Chicago, the city has protected itself from any other suit for infringement of the company's patent forever. By the time the license granted to the city for $4,000 shall have expired the patent under which the Cameron people were enabled to bring their claim will have run its full term.

Under the agreement entered into, the Cameron Company guarantees the city immunity from any more suits or payments for seven years. The faithful performance of its agreement is made certain by insurance in a surety company, which protects the city absolutely. The Cameron patent was taken out in 1894, so that by the time the compromise agreement runs out the patent will be dead.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Occasionally the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their contents, which should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

Public Library Notes.

Books recommended by the Public Library to the young people of Plainfield.

For children under 11 years of age.

Aesop, Fables; Anderson, Hans Christian, Fairy tales; Andrews, Jane, Stories mother Nature told her children; Arabian nights, fairy tales, arranged by E. Dixon; Baldwin, J., Fifty famous stories retold, historical stories; Baldecott, R., Picture books; Craik, Mrs. D. M., Little lame prince, a fairy tale; Dickens, Charles Child pictures from Dickens; Dodge, Mrs. Mary Mapes, Hans Brinker, or the silver skates; Dodgson, C. L., ("Lewis Carroll"), Alice in Wonderland; Dodgson, C. L., Alice through the looking glass, and what she saw there; Ewing, J. H. G., Mary's meadow, etc., short stories; Field, Eugene, Love songs of childhood, poems; Grimm, J. L. G., and W. K., Fairy tales; Harris, Joel Chandler, Uncle Remus books; Hawthorne, Nathaniel, Tanglewood tales, fairy tales; Hawthorne, Nathaniel, Wonder book, fairy tales; Howells, William Dean, Christmas every day, etc., short stories; Kingsley, Charles, Heroes, stories of the ancient Greeks; Kingsley, Charles, The water babies, a fairy tale for a landbaby; Kipling, Rudyard, Jungle books; Lang, Andrew, Blue poetry book; Macdonald, George, At the back of the north wind, a fairy tale; Macdonald, George, Light princess, a fairy tale; Miller, Oliver Thorpe, Little people of Asia; Molesworth, Mrs. M. L., Carrots; Morrison, M. M., Songs and rhymes for the little ones; Ruskin, John, King of the Golden river, a fairy tale; Scudder, Horace E., Children's book; Stevenson, Robert Louis, Child's garden of verse; Stockton, Frank R., Floating prince, a fairy tale; Thaxter, Celia, Stories and poems for children; Whittier, John G., Child life, in prose and poetry; Wright, Mrs. Mabel Osgood, Tommy Anne and the three bears, a nature story.

CORPORATION TAXES.

List of Amounts Assessed Against Domestic Concerns.

The State Board of Assessors has filed with the State Comptroller schedules showing the amount of tax levied against miscellaneous domestic corporations for the year 1904.

These companies are taxed on the basis of their issued capital stock and the lists admitted up to this date include only such companies as have made voluntary returns showing the amount of their outstanding capital stock. The preliminary schedules include 5,755 companies, the total tax levy upon which amounts to $3,436,-919.14. Among the 5,755 companies which have made their report there are 125 that are taxed on an issued capital stock of $10,000,000 or upward.

Scene in Speer's Vineyards, AT PASSAIC, N. J.

Gathering the Oporto Grape for Speer's Port and Burgundy Wine.

Weekly persons, invalids and the aged, find this is just what they want, a genuine old-fashioned, rich

Blood-making Wine.

Speer's Port & Burgundy Wine.

The Finest Wine in the world from his 56 Acres of Vineyards, where the soil is rich in iron, imparting it to the Oporto grape and the grape to the Wine—causes the dark, deep rich color, and blood-making property of this life-giving Wine. That Iron in it. This is the Wine that beats the world in its valuable medicinal qualities, for family use and evening parties; it is especially beneficial for females, invalids and aged persons.

The Port Wine is nine years old and the Burgundy, a rich dry wine eight years old.

The Planet equals the finest French product.

Druggists and Grocers Sell It.

CHICAGO CAT GETS DRUNK.

Disappearing Feline Likewise Risks Roasting in the Oven of the Family Gas Stove.

C. H. Fullerton, a clerk in the railway mail service at Chicago, owns what he calls a "disappearing" cat. At least, the feline has an unusual habit of shutting herself up, of going into a hole and pulling the hole after her. The result of these tricks was that on one occasion she came out of her hiding place in a beastly state of intoxication, and on another she narrowly escaped being roasted alive.

The Chicago Tribune says that on the sideboard of the Fullerton home is a spring door. The cat found out that all she had to do was pull this door open, step inside, and she'd be in delightful seclusion. When she desired to appear on the world again, all she need do was to push the door with her delicately tinted nose and then step out.

OUT CAME THE CAT.

Now, it happened that this was the prince pie season, and when Mrs. Fullerton had a tablespoonful or more of brandy left she put it into a saucer and set it in the sideboard.

One Sunday evening Tab was missed and the house was ransacked for the pet. Suddenly during the hunt the little sideboard door opened and out came the cat, with the worst jag that has ever been seen on the square. Mr. Fullerton claims that it required a whole day to sober the animal up.

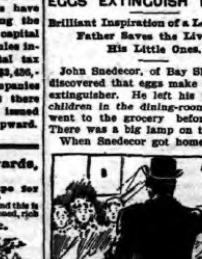
That Tab was not cooked to a crisp on a recent occasion was owing entirely to the kindly instinct of Mrs. Fullerton. On all of the gas ranges in use in Chicago the doors are lowered and a spring closes them. When one of the doors on the Fullerton range was left open one afternoon the cat took it into her head to hide herself in the oven. Of course, the door went up with a bang. When it came time to light the gas for preparation of dinner, Tab's mistress was about to touch the match when instinctively she was led to open the door. The good lady says that if she should live to be fourscore and ten the black streak that came out of the oven will always remain indelibly impressed on her mind, and, as much as the family love their pet, they have made up their minds to give her away, if any one will have her.

EGGS EXTINGUISH FLAMES.

Brilliant Inspiration of a Long Island Father Saves the Lives of His Little Ones.

John Snedecor, of Bay Shore, L. I., discovered that eggs make a fine fire-extinguisher. He left his three little children in the dining-room while he went to the grocery before supper. There was a big lamp on the table.

When Snedecor got home the lamp



EGGS RETARDED THE FIRE.

lay on the floor in the midst of a pool of blazing oil. It was near the door. Huddled against the wall at the back of the room, unable to get past the blaze, were the three children.

In a paper bag Snedecor was carrying a dozen and a half of eggs he had just bought. Three at a time he hurled them on the floor along the edge of the flame, meantime yelling for other members of the family to rouse a blanket in a pail of water and bring it to him quickly.

The albumen, phosphates, nitrates and water in the bursting eggs seemed to retard the flames. They were almost egged out when the wet blanket arrived, and Snedecor soon quenched the last of the blaze.

Social Equality in Japan.

Servants in Japanese families are deemed to be on the same social level as their employers. Visitors bow as low to servants as to their mistress; and if the mistress is away, the servants serve tea and entertain the visitors.

HUNTING OCEAN VAMPIRES.

Largest of All Monsters of the Deep Sometimes Reverses the Role and Becomes Hunter.

With the possible exception of the basking shark, the "Sea Devil" or "Ocean Vampire" is the largest of all the monsters of the deep. An unborn ocean vampire, taken from the mother, preserved at the British museum, is five feet broad, and before mounting weighed 30 pounds. The mother measured some 35 feet in length and quite as much in breadth.

It is at all times a dangerous undertaking to attempt to capture one of these monsters, says the Sunday Magazine, but particularly so in the case of a mother accompanied by her offspring. She is quite capable of reversing the role of hunter and hunted, attacking and capsizing the boat containing her would-be captors, and of seeing that none of them escapes alive.

"Tenagon," writes Hon. William Elliot, in describing the exciting sport he had in hunting ocean vampires, "a monster from 16 to 20 feet across the back, full three feet in depth, possessed of powerful yet flexible flaps or wings with which he drives himself furiously in the water or vaults high in the air, through which he skims like some enormous bird; his feelers (commonly called horns) projecting several feet beyond his mouth, and paddling all the small fry that come within his food into that capacious receptacle—and you will have an idea, though an imperfect one, of this extraordinary fish."

The so-called "horns" to which allusion is made are a singular feature in this animal. The pectoral fins, each much elongated, pointed, arched in front, concave behind, stop short at the head, to reappear as frontal appendages projected on each side of the head. These appendages take the form and character of limbs, being flexible and capable of being extended and carrying it to the mouth. The "feelers," as they are called, are sometimes three feet or more in length, and are curiously articulated at the ends so as to resemble the fingers of the human hand when clenched.

In this way fishing boats and vessels of a much larger size have been dragged from their moorings, and in some cases capsized by the ocean vampire having laid hold of the anchor. An instance of this kind occurred in the harbor of Tenagon, where a fisher lurking at anchor, suddenly and seemingly of its own volition, to the amazement and alarm of those on board, started at a furious rate across the harbor. Upon nearing the opposite shore its course changed almost at right angles, and before the vessel, and it recrossed the harbor to its former moorings.

These mysterious flights across the harbor were repeated a number of times in the presence of hundreds of astonished spectators, who were utterly at a loss to account for the phenomenon. The migrations ceased as suddenly as they began. Not till then did the back and undulating fukes of an immense second vampire, appearing above the water of the harbor, disclose the motive power that caused it all.

One of the curious habits of the fish is to throw somersaults, sometimes at a considerable distance beneath the surface, sometimes at the surface, and sometimes in the air above the surface. The reason for this peculiar practice, which is kept up for hours, has, so far as the writer knows, never been conjectured. At times the great fish will throw himself bodily perhaps as much as ten or twelve feet into the air. A young man student of Columbia university, writing from Port of Spain, describes the flight of one of these enormous sea monsters, which passed completely over him and the light boat he was rowing.

Powerful New Poisonous Drug.

Lauchlin Scott, of England, has recently published some startling facts about cyanide of cacodyl. It is a white powder, melting at 33 degrees and boiling at 140 degrees, which, when exposed to air, gives off the slightest vapor, to inhale which is death. Its effect is so powerful that Mr. Scott states he has seen the one-millionth part of a grain of the drug instantly kill four dogs when they were introduced into an air-tight cage with it. While but little known, it was made many years ago by a noted French chemist, Cadet. He combined potassium acetate with white arsenic, producing a fuming liquid, oxide of cacodyl. This, combined with cyanogen, a radical of prussic acid, produces cyanid of cacodyl, thousands of times more poisonous than the pure prussic acid.—Albany Medical Annals.

The Perfect Waiter.

The complete waiter, like the angler and the poet, is born, not made. Forty years' training in the comforts of the world a great waiter is born a good deal more frequently than a great poet. Both must have a remarkable combination of faculties; the perfect waiter must handle the knife like a skilled surgeon; plates, dishes, forks and spoons like a conjurer, know as much of the dishes he serves as any epicure, be as quick on his feet as a ballet girl and as sweet in his temper as an angel. As a tribute to the possibilities of human nature to say that such admirable Crichtons can be found.—London Telegraph.

No Fond Recollections.

"What! You will not marry me!" "Impossible!"

"But you seemed to love me once. Your eyes brightened at my approach; and often when I sat silently gazing at you I can sure you were greatly agitated."

"Yes, I know; but since you have cut off your side-whiskers you don't look in much like poor, dear, dead Fido."—Brer Stories.

CITY AND BOROUGH OFFICIALS TO BATTLE

Talk of Baseball Game Between Teams Representing the Officeholders.

MACMURRAY READY

MAYOR SMALLEY ISSUES A DEFI TO PLAINFIELD.

No Line on Makeup of the Teams—Sure to Attract a Big Crowd—Will Relieve Duliness.

Delirious excitement on the diamond is being prepared by Fate for the fanatics of the two Plainfields. A defi has been tossed across the line by Mayor Smalley, and City Clerk J. T. MacMurray has snatched it up. The heavens are trembling in anticipation of further developments, and the fans are holding their breaths in fear that something will block the lovely time looming up.

Mayor Smalley loosed his baseball war song Wednesday afternoon. "I am ready to hold my end up against anything the city officials may do," he said. While interspersed by later and technical remarks, means that he is ready to put a championship nine of borough officials in the diamond against a combination made up of the lithe and sinewy athletes that hold down city jobs.

The challenge was carefully borne to City Clerk MacMurray Wednesday night. He took it up so swiftly that the chasing of the silver platter in which it was delivered was destroyed by friction.

"We are ready for them," said Mr. MacMurray. "We have a lot of fine baseball material over here. The borough will bump into a new kind of gamesmen if it plays ball with us."

Neither side has given out any line on the make-up of its team, except that the flinger of the challenge and the flingee will surely be all there when the sanguinary struggle commences. If the matter gets any further—and 25,000 people, more or less will do their level best to see that it goes the limit—line-ups, batting orders, and the discovery of veteran stars and unexpected phenoms will flood the columns of the newspapers, in accordance with tradition and baseball lore, soon enough to knock all the dulness out of the dog days.

HER DEATH CAME SUDDENLY

MRS. JENNIE RANDOLPH SUCCUMBS AFTER A VERY BRIEF ILLNESS.

Mrs. Jennie Randolph, wife of Vermont F. Randolph, of 503 West Front street, died very suddenly at her home about 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Randolph had been at Westfield on business and on the way home she stopped at the home of Charles Randolph, 442 West Front street. She talked for some minutes with Mrs. Charles Randolph and seemed in good spirits, but just as she left the home, complained of the heat. She was urged to sit on the porch and rest, but left saying that she had something to attend to at home. Shortly after reaching her house she was taken ill and a physician was summoned. He found that Mrs. Randolph was suffering from an acute attack of kidney trouble. In spite of all that could be done for her she expired in about an hour after the attack.

Mrs. Randolph is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Grace D. Harris, whose husband died recently, and Mrs. Nancy D. Brown, of Brooklyn. Mrs. John Stevens, with whom she lived, and Harry F. Randolph, of this city, were her children. Mrs. Stevens has been suffering from hysteria since the death of her mother. Mrs. Randolph was a daughter of the late Barzilla J. Randolph, of this city. She is survived by her husband, Vermont F. Randolph.

REALTY CONVEYANCES.

Transfers of Plainfield Real Estate as Recorded in the County Clerk's Office at Elizabeth.

These transfers were recorded in the county clerk's office at Elizabeth on July 5:

Samuel H. Craig, Plainfield, to Investor's Realty Co., 171.89 feet from easterly side Marion avenue, 180 feet along southerly line of lot 22, $1; William Birren, North Plainfield, to Investor's Realty Co., lot 5, block 1, map of C. Elmer Gulick, $1; Minnie Stryker, et al, Plainfield, to Samuel B. Beekman, Plainfield, 184.48 feet southeasterly of Mariner's avenue, 110.85 northeasterly and at right angles to Mariner's avenue, $2,000; Emma Weigmann, et als, Plainfield, to Alexander Kane, Plainfield, 120 Ells, were also in the party and report a delightful time at the same place. Miss Langer, of Sunnyside, is a sister of Mrs. A. V. Langer, of Watchung avenue.

BAND GRANDSTAND WITH THE "LID" OFF

Roof of Stand at Concert Park is Removed by Bandmaster LaVere.

GREAT CROWD THERE

MOVING PICTURES NOT THE SUCCESS ANTICIPATED.

Seven Hundred and Fifty in the Grandstand—Picture Feature to be Removed—The Concert a Good One.

There was no top on the musicians' stand at Concert Park Friday. As a direct result one of the chief causes of complaint against the concerts was removed, and the crowd came as near to perfect enjoyment of the music as at any time since the concerts have been heard here.

Until Bandmaster LaVere awoke to the cause of the trouble and remedied it, the volume of sound from the bandstand was very much muffled. The musical effect was sadly marred, and many complaints of the faintness and dull character of the music were heard. The trouble lay in the fact that the sound rose to the roof of the stand and was beaten straight down again, destroying the orchestral effect and giving only the people very near to the stand anything like the proper volume of music.

Last night, with the lid off, the musicians played a splendid programme with splendid effect. The largest crowd of the series was in attendance, all band concert records being broken. There were fully 750 in the grand stand, and the receipts were so large as practically to guarantee an additional concert.

As announced, there was a special feature after the concert in the form of stereopticon and moving picture views. The less said of them the better for the feelings of the man who originated the "feature." A lot of advertisements were interspersed among the views, and these, and the views themselves, found no admirers in the audience. Bandmaster LaVere, after the concert, hastened to disavow any connection with the pictures, and said he would chase the man with the machine away if he came back again.

LITERARY.

The last issue of The Outlook contains a special article on the National Republican Convention at Chicago, written by Francis E. Leupp, perhaps the best known and certainly one of the ablest—if not the ablest—of the Washington correspondents for New York papers. The article is accompanied by portraits of the Republican candidates for the Presidency and Vice Presidency, and in the same issue an elaborate editorial discusses the policy and platform of the Republican party. Among other features of special note in this number may be mentioned a singular collection of pictures by Japanese artists, relating to the war, sent to The Outlook by its correspondent in the Far East, George Kennan, whose letters are now almost weekly appearing in The Outlook, and an interesting instalment of Stewart Edward White's "The Mountains," illustrated by Fernand Lungren.

APPOINTED A PROFESSOR.

Dr. A. B. Crane to Become Member of Georgetown University Faculty.

Arthur Barton Crane, formerly of this city, but now of Washington, D. C., has accepted a call to a professorship at the Georgetown University. He is to occupy the chair of extracting and anesthetics, a new subject of the four years' course.

Dr. Crane is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and is a specialist in pathology and oral surgery. He is the son of U. B. Crane, of this city.

Volunteer Firemen Resign.

Because of the new law which deprives them of the customary $500 exemption from taxes, several members of the Dunellen fire department have resigned. They contend that it is foolish for them to pay dues and fines and receive no benefit for their service. If the exodus continues it will be necessary for the borough to establish a paid department, even though it be a small one.

Among the Plainfielders who enjoyed the Fourth in Hunterdon county were Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Marsh and daughter, Edith, of Plainfield avenue, who were the guests of Mrs. Marsh's aunt, Miss M. A. Langer, of Sunnyside. Harry and Raymond Langer and Mrs. A. V. Langer and daughter, Ella, were also in the party and report a delightful time at the same place. Miss Langer, of Sunnyside, is a sister of Mrs. A. V. Langer, of Watchung avenue.

TRIENNIAL CONCLAVE OF KNIGHTS' TEMPLAR

Dr. D. C. Adams, Chairman of Committee, Arranges for the Special Train to 'Frisco.

SEPTEMBER 5 TO 10

SEVERAL DAYS TO BE SPENT AT ST. LOUIS.

J. Kirkner, of This City, a Member of the New Jersey Committee on Arrangements—Great Ovation to be Given Jerseymen.

When San Francisco was decided upon as the next Knights Templars' Triennial city at the conclave held in Louisville in 1901, preparation was immediately begun by the Templar hosts of California to make the coming event the most successful in the history of the order. The conclave will be held from September 5 to 10, and several members of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, will attend the sessions.

A committee consisting of Dr. D. C. Adams, grand commander, of this city; John J. Henry, deputy grand commander; J. Kirkner, grand generalissimo, of this city; William Carman, grand captain-general, and Warren Dobbs, P. G. C., have just completed arrangements for a special train of high grade Pullman cars, leaving Newark over the Pennsylvania Railroad system, that will make this pilgrimage to the Pacific coast and return in twenty-eight days and include on the way many sight-seeing features of a most attractive character, such as the Grand Canyon of Arizona, the Yosemite Valley, Del Monte, Los Angeles, Great Salt Lake, Denver and many other places.

Several days will be spent at St. Louis, giving the pilgrims an opportunity to attend the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. The train will be made up of the highest type of Pullman cars, with a sumptuous dining car equipment, all to be kept together from start to finish and to be under the supervision of the Pennsylvania Railroad's personally conducted tourist system.

California enterprise, generosity and hospitality are surpassed nowhere on the globe, and the glow of welcome enjoyed are never to be forgotten. During the Templar week on the Pacific coast there will be representatives from every State and Territory in the Union, from Hawaii and the Philippines, as well as from Canada, Cuba and Porto Rico. Pilgrimages are being arranged for in greater numbers and on a more extensive scale than ever before and it will not be surprising if the numbers attending should aggregate 50,000 members of the order, and to them must be added fully twice as many accompanying friends. To entertain so large a number of guests will be no small task, but the big-souled Sir Knights of San Francisco will be equal to the emergency.

STATE INSPECTION OF FOOD

COMMODITIES PURCHASED IN THE MARKET WILL BE SENT TO TRENTON.

The State Board of Health has sent out a special order to its food inspectors, directing them to purchase certain commodities during July and the purchased articles will be sent to the State laboratory, in Trenton, for a rigid analysis to determine which are adulterated, if any.

The work will form part of the pure food crusade being conducted by the Board and the purchases will be made by the inspectors while on their regular milk-inspecting tours throughout the State.

The articles to be purchased are cider, vinegar, cocoa, ground coffee, lard, honey, molasses, borax, olive oil, cream of tartar, tincture of opium, tincture of iodine, and ether. They will be purchased in the open market in the various communities in order to insure that the samples will fairly represent the commodities as sold to the customers.

Pike Family Reunion.

The Pike family, of which Noah W. Pike, of East Front street, is a scion, will hold its annual reunion in Boston, Mass., on September 27-28. The affair is to be held under the auspices of The Pike Family Association, which was formed in 1900. It numbers 500 members, and possesses the cost-of-arms brought to this country by John Pike, and a genealogy showing that the Pikes run back to 1100 A. D.

If you are foot-sore and weary, try Tberp's foot relief. You will be surprised after using a few applications to see how easily you can walk and what little trouble you will have.

ROBT. A. MEEKER ON STATE'S FINE ROADS

Plainfielder Discusses the Influence of Good Roads in New Jersey.

INCREASES POPULATION

ANSWERS TO QUERY AS TO HOW TO KEEP BOY ON THE FARM.

First Agitation Began by Bicyclist—Though Forty-second in Area, the State Has Twice the Miles of Good Roads as Any Other State.

The July number of The Suburbanite, the Central Jersey Railroad's monthly magazine, which is issued today, contains an article by Robert A. Meeker, of this city, State supervisor of roads. It is entitled "The Influence of Good Roads in New Jersey." Incidentally Mr. Meeker says:

"The growth of New Jersey is due in a great measure to her good roads. These induced occasional visitors from New York, Pennsylvania, New England and other sections of our country to become permanent residents among us. These first comers persuaded their friends and relatives to follow them; thus New Jersey drew the brains, energy and capital of other States within her borders to such an extent that in some towns we find the largest taxpayers are natives of some other State.

"It is true our train service is good and our railroads have done much to build up and improve our suburban towns, but how far either has benefited more and how small the local business was until the era of goods roads came. Towns that now have forty trains a day each way were thankful for ten, and the railroad officials often discussed the advisability of reducing the number still lower. No one who commuted dared to live more than a mile from the station. Now some enjoy country life five miles away from the railroad, and, barring an occasional blizzard, feel perfectly sure of reaching the station every day in time for their trains.

"Good air, good water, good churches, good schools and good roads, to bring the people to these blessings, will develop any neighborhood. The first two you may have without good roads; the others cannot attain their full degree of usefulness without improved highways.

"The statistics compiled by our State Board of Education bear most striking evidence to the benefits conferred upon the schools of our State by the good roads which traverse the districts in which they are located. The increase in regularity of attendance is followed by the awakened interest on the part of both parents and pupils in all educational subjects. New topics for discussion arouse and quicken the minds of the people, and, from a state of almost mental stagnation, they are raised to one of lively interest in the subjects that tend to mental and moral advancement.

"How to keep the boy on the farm is a subject that has caused many a parent anxious thought, but with good roads anxiety is changed to complacency, because they have learned and if the boy does go away to the city and is successful, he will come back to the farm to live, at first for the summer, and at last for all the year. If, on the other hand, he is not successful, he is only too happy to return to the parental roof and take up the burden of farm life where he laid it down, finding in driving a good horse over a good road a keener pleasure than he ever experienced in all his city life.

"The influence of good roads is like the ripples made by casting a pebble into a lake of still water—it goes on increasing and spreading, awakening all the dormant life into action, until it reaches the uttermost bound, quickening in its course everything animate and inanimate.

"Every new mode of locomotion designed for use on our highways arouses public interest in the condition of our roads. The first great general agitation of recent times for good roads was begun by the bicyclist.

"When a man had to furnish his own motive power he quickly learned how much greater an expenditure of power was required to propel his wheel over rough, soft and uneven roads and up hills than over smooth, hard and even ones, with moderate grades. That patient, long-suffering servant of man, the horse, had tugged and wallowed through mud and panted and pulled up long, steep hills, never protesting until his strength was exhausted. But as man has never been endowed with the patience of the horse, he protested as soon as he was called upon to display the same accomplishing endurance. Protest after protest was made through the public prints and in the halls of our Legislature, until the matter was taken up by our lawmakers, with the result that New Jersey, though forty-second in area, has today twice as many miles of good roads as any State in the Union.

"For years it was charged that New Jersey was out of the Union. If it is the bad road union that pervades the United States that is meant, we are only to glad of the opportunity to plead guilty to the charge, for we are not only out of the bad road union, but mean to keep out as long as we can."

SUIT OVER AUTO ACCIDENT

WM. H. ADDIS BRINGS ACTION AGAINST SAMUEL W. RUSHMORE.

William H. Addis, of East Second street, has sued Samuel W. Rushmore in the Supreme Court for $1,000 damages, in compensation for injuries received in an automobile accident.

Addis was knocked down by the Rushmore auto on Richmond street, near South avenue, on May 28. He was injured about the head and arms and back, and was picked up for dead. It took Dr. Endicott a long time to bring him around, and it is claimed that he is still in a serious condition. It is alleged that Rushmore's machine was running at a high rate of speed when the accident occurred.

It is claimed that Rushmore acknowledged his liability, and offered to settle for the injuries inflicted on the victim, but that he has failed to follow his offer with action. The case will probably be tried in the October term of court.

W. A. Coddington, Esq., of the law firm of Reed & Coddington, is conducting the plaintiff's case. Craig A. Marsh, Esq., is the defendant's representative.

LIBERTY CORNER CELEBRATION.

People of the Village Have a Rousing Fourth.

The Fourth was observed at Liberty Corner by the raising of a flag pole and flag in the morning under the auspices of the Improvement Society and by a festival on the church grounds in the evening. The flag pole, which was the gift of E. H. Sobley, proprietor of the Somerset Inn, was erected at the intersection of the roads from which the village derives part of its name and probably on the very spot where a liberty pole stood during the War of the Revolution. After the pole had been put in place patriotic exercises were held in the open air. The exercises consisted of the singing of National airs and an address by Rev. C. B. Condit, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Liberty Corner.

During the course of his remarks, Mr. Condit said that in his opinion as every village had a church with its spire pointing men to the world above, so every village should have a flag floating over it to remind the people of their duties to their fellow citizens, and especially should Liberty Corner have a pole and a flag because her name and her historic connection. Not far from the village Washington passed with a part of his army and through it General Lee was taken after his capture by the British.

The speaker then went on to say that the flag represents the Nation and stands for the Nation. We think of the flag of Russia as standing for tyranny and oppression, but the American flag stands for something better. It stands for Independence, which our fathers won during the Revolutionary war; it stands for liberty, both civil and religious, which was purchased with our independence; it stands for progress, for the life of the Nation has ever been one of development and growth; it stands for righteousness for whatever may have been the Nation's mistakes and wrongs she has ever stood for honest and fair play. The speaker closed with an appeal for greater devotion to the flag and our country.

